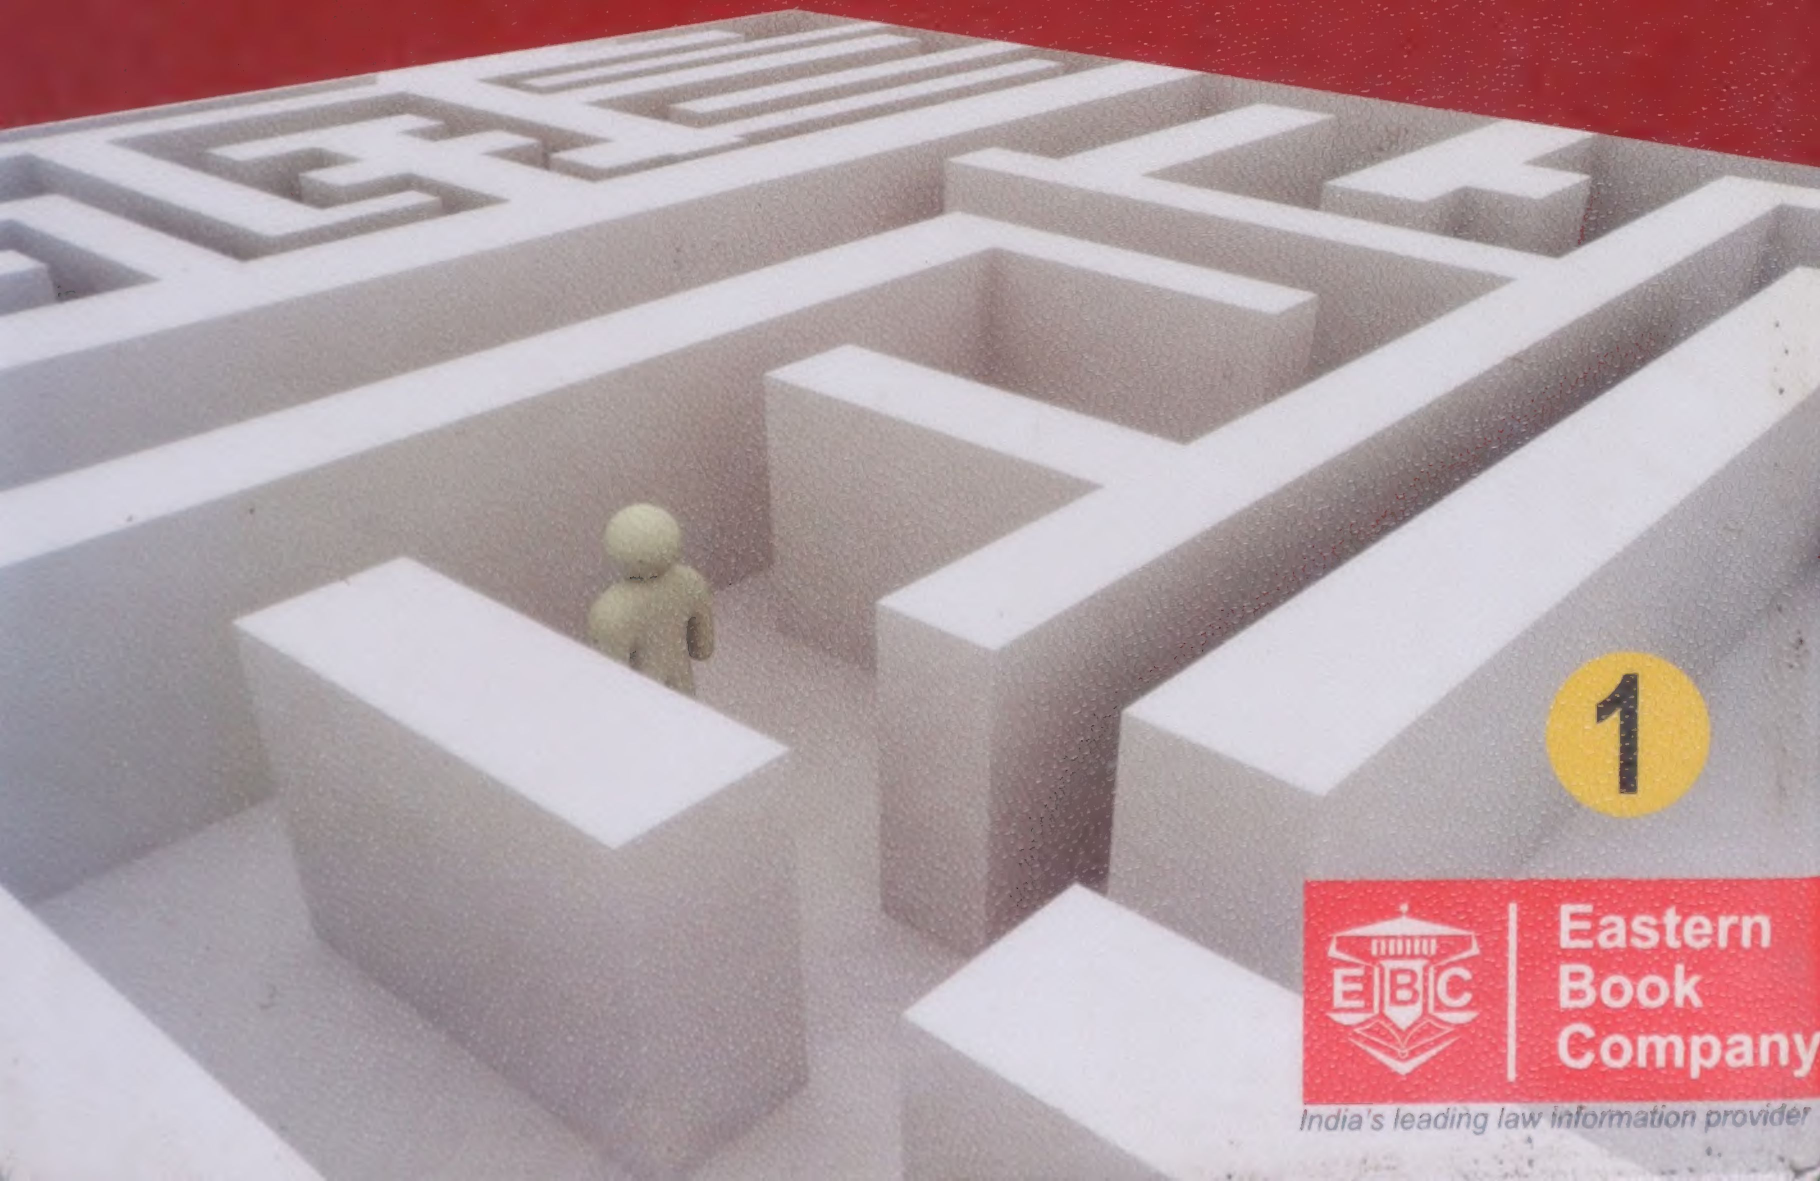
Supreme Court on Criminal Procedure Code & Criminal Trial

Surendra Malik • Sudeep Malik



1

Eastern Book
Company
India's leading law information provider

About the Book

The present three volume Digest covers the law laid down on Criminal Procedure Code and Criminal Trial by the Supreme Court from its inception in1950 till date. It has been conceived and planned to enable the discovery of all the rulings, easily and quickly. It is based on the time-tested SCC index system that is now widely accepted and used.

Special Features

- The rulings are placed under both topic and statutory headings, interconnected by a well-planned cross-reference system supported by synopses wherever necessary.
- Rulings that could not be placed under the provisions of any particular statute have been placed under the non-statutory topic heading Criminal Trial.
- To enable strict section-wise research, an exhaustive section-wise list of docket numbers i.e. the unique case note number allotted to each ruling, has been provided at the beginning of sections treated collectively.
- Table of Cases Digested facilitate finding citations and cross-citations of any decision.
- The Digest also contains annotations, editorial notes and comments and coram details.

The Digest will prove to be an indispensable tool to a wide range of legal professionals as well as the Bench.

यतो धर्मस्ततो जयः

SUPREME COURT ON CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE & CRIMINAL TRIAL

Case law since 1950 till date

VOLUME 1

§§ [1] to [4123]

"The law is the last interpretation of the law given by the last Judge." —Anon.

"Precedents keep the law predictable and so more or less ascertainable." —Lord Devlin

"There is no such thing as a judicial precedent on facts though counsel, and even judges, are sometimes prone to argue and to act as if they were." —Bose, J., (1955) 2 SCR 1140, 1169

"The law declared by the Supreme Court is the law of the land; it is precedent for itself and for all the courts/tribunals and authorities in India." —Syed Shah Mohammed Quadri, J., (2002) 4 SCC 388

"The better wisdom of the Court below must yield to the higher wisdom of the Court above." —O. Chinnappa Reddy, J., (1985) 1 SCC 260, 268

"... the judicial system only works if someone is allowed to have the last word and if that last word, once spoken, is loyally accepted." —Lord Diplock, (1972) 1 All ER 801, 874

"Most of the decisions of the Supreme Court are of significance not merely because they constitute an adjudication on the rights of the parties and resolve the disputes between them but also because in doing so they embody a declaration of law operating as a binding principle in future cases."

—N. Santosh Hegde, J., (2002) 4 SCC 234, para 22

"... a decision is not an authority for a proposition which did not fall for its consideration."

—S.B. Sinha, J., (2005) 4 SCC 649, para 256

"The only thing binding as an authority upon a subsequent Judge is the principle upon which the case was decided." —Arijit Pasayat, J., (2003) 7 SCC 197

"The trend of judicial opinion is that stare decisis is not a dogmatic rule allergic to logic and reason; it is a flexible principle of law operating in the province of precedents providing room to collaborate with the demands of changing times dictated by social needs, State policy and judicial conscience."

— R.C. Lahoti, C.J., (2005) 8 SCC 534, para 112

"The doctrine of stare decisis has no statutory sanction but it is a rule of convenience, expediency, prudence and above all public policy." —Pattanaik, J., (2001) 1 SCC 91

"The doctrine of binding precedent has the merit of promoting a certainty and consistency in judicial decisions, and enables an organic development of the law, besides providing assurance to the individual as to the consequence of transactions forming part of his daily affairs." —Pathak, C.J., (1989) 2 SCC 754, 766

"A decision is available as a precedent only if it decides a question of law."

—L.M. Sharma, J., (1992) 1 SCC 489, 491

"... the law is, what the judges say it is since the power to interpret the law vests in the judges."

—S. Ratnavel Pandian, J., (1994) 3 SCC 569, 625

"Precedent law must be followed by all concerned; deviation from the same should be only on a procedure known to law. A subordinate court is bound by the enunciation of law made by the superior courts." —N. Santosh Hegde, J., (2000) 1 SCC 644, para 12

"The doctrine of binding precedent is of utmost importance in the administration of our judicial system. It promotes certainty and consistency in judicial decisions. Judicial consistency promotes confidence in the system, therefore, there is this need for consistency in the enunciation of legal principles in the decisions of the Supreme Court." —N. Santosh Hegde, J., (2002) 4 SCC 234, para 22

"... a judgment should be understood in the light of facts of that case and no more should be read into it than what it actually says." —B.P. Jeevan Reddy, J., (1993) 2 SCC 368, 393

"Judicial propriety, dignity and decorum demand that being the highest judicial tribunal even obiter dictum of the Supreme Court should be accepted as binding. ... But statements on matters other than law have no binding force." —Krishna Iyer, J., (1975) 1 SCC 794

"Taking recourse to the doctrine of stare decisis would be an imperative necessity to avoid uncertainty and confusion." —U.C. Banerjee, J., (1999) 4 SCC 11, para 16

"It is not everything said by a Judge while giving judgment that constitutes a precedent. ... The enunciation of the reason or principle on which a question before a court has been decided is alone binding as a precedent" —K. Ramaswamy, J., (1996) 6 SCC 44, 51, 52

Supreme Court on Criminal Procedure Code & Criminal Trial

containing

case law since 1950 till date
in THREE VOLUMES

SURENDRA MALIK
B.Sc.(Hons.), LL.B.(Del.), LL.M.(Columbia)
Gold Medalist
Advocate, Supreme Court
Chief Editor : 'Supreme Court Cases™'

SUDEEP MALIK
B.A.(Hons.), M.A.(Cantab.)
Advocate
Associate Editor : 'Supreme Court Cases™'

Vol. 1

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, 1973

[From Section 1 to Section 377]

EASTERN BOOK COMPANY

Available from

EASTERN BOOK COMPANY™

Website: www.ebc.co.in, E-mail: sales@ebc-india.com

- Lucknow: 34, Lalbagh, Lucknow - 226 001
  Phones: +91-522-4033600 (30 lines)
  Fax: +91-522-4033633
- Delhi: 1267, Kashmere Gate
  Old Hindu College Building, Delhi - 110 006
  Phones: +91-11-2391-7616, Fax: +91-11-2392-1656
- New Delhi: 5-B, Atma Ram House, 5th Floor
  1, Tolstoy Marg, Connaught Place, New Delhi - 110 001
  Phones: +91-11-4575-2323 (4 lines), Fax: +91-11-4150-4440
- Bangalore: 25/1, Anand Nivas, 3rd Cross
  6th Main, Gandhinagar, Bangalore - 560 009
  Phones: +91-80-41225368, +91-9008603703
- Allahabad: Manav Law House, 8/10 M.G. Marg
  Opp. Bishop Johnson School, Allahabad - 211 011
  Phones: +91-532-2560710, 2422023, Fax: +91-532-2623584

Find us on facebook Follow us on twitter

Shop online at: www.ebcwebstore.com

Reprinted from Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn., Vols. 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20, with additional case-law covered up to (2011) 2 SCC

345.05
MAL-I

Purchased:
Approval:
Gratis:
Acc No.: 027191
Price:
"Narayan Rao Melgi
National Law Libra

2011

Full Set in 3 Vols.

₹4500.00

ISBN : 93-5028-168-6

All rights reserved. No part of this work may be copied, reproduced, adapted, abridged or translated, stored in any computer or other retrieval system or transmitted in any form by any means without prior written permission of the publishers. Any breach will entail legal action without further notice.

While every effort has been made to avoid any mistake or omission, this publication is being sold on the condition and understanding that neither the authors nor the publishers or printers would be liable in any manner to any person by reason of any mistake or omission in this publication or for any action taken or omitted to be taken or advice rendered or accepted on the basis of this work.

All disputes subject to exclusive jurisdiction of courts/tribunals/forums at Lucknow only.

Copyright © 2011—EBC Publishing Pvt. Ltd., Lucknow

PUBLISHERS : EBC PUBLISHING (P) LTD., 34-A, LALBAGH, LUCKNOW—226 001
PRINTERS : ARMY PRINTING PRESS, LUCKNOW

PREFACE

Amongst the abiding principles of our Constitution is the one stated in Article 141 that the law declared by the Hon'ble Supreme Court is binding on all courts. It is therefore imperative for everyone concerned with law within the legal system to know and understand what this binding law is. For this the rulings lying embedded in the learned judgments and orders of the Hon'ble Judges are to be culled out and made accessible, with proper citations to locate them in authentic law reports. Since one may discover many rulings on the same point, bench strength and the date of decision are also relevant under the doctrine of precedents.

Coverage and Method

The present volumes, covering the law laid down on CrPC and Criminal Trial by the Supreme Court from its inception in 1950 till date, has been designed particularly to meet the above need. It has been conceived and planned to enable the discovery of all the rulings, easily and quickly. It is based on the time-tested SCC index system that is now widely accepted and used.

Systematic arrangement

But the search for the relevant rulings would still be tedious if they were not systematically arranged. Much effort has therefore been directed towards the proper placement of the rulings under both topic and statutory headings, interconnected by a well-planned cross-reference system supported by synopses wherever necessary. Also no effort has been spared in making this digest most comprehensive and detailed.

Criminal Trial

Since many rulings and principles cannot be docketed under the provisions of any particular statute they have been placed under the non-statutory topic heading Criminal Trial.

Synopsisation under sections of CrPC

Where the number of rulings under any section or set of sections is large, for convenient research they have been placed under topic headings and a synopsis added for quick reference.

A few sections have been treated collectively as such collective treatment seemed more conducive to enabling systematic and convenient research on the provisions of law contained therein. Sections 125 to 128 which deal with a Magistrate's power to award maintenance have been dealt with collectively. So also Sections 155 to 159, which deal with the power and conduct of investigation by police. So also Sections 161 and 162.

However, to enable strict section-wise research, an exhaustive section-wise list of docket numbers i.e. the unique case note number allotted to each ruling, has been provided at the beginning of each such collective treatment of sections.

Table of Cases Digested: Looking at dockets nearby

It is also possible to conduct a search through the Table of Cases Digested. Since digest notes on the same or similar points are naturally placed close to each other, by locating the digest notes on any known case from the Table of Cases Digested, other relevant rulings on that point can easily be located nearby. For convenience the docket numbers are indicated at the top corners of pages. The Table of Cases Digested is also a convenient source for finding the citation and cross-citations of any decision.

Annotations, notes and comments

This Digest also contains annotations under some digest notes with respect to earlier connected cases of the Supreme Court and the High Courts, especially those appealed against, and some editorial notes and comments.

Coram details: Names of Hon'ble Judges and author(s) of the opinion(s)

Another feature of interest added is that below each ruling are given the names of the Hon'ble Judges who constituted the Bench which heard the matter, with the name of the Hon'ble Judge(s) who has/have given the opinion(s) indicated in bold. In case of several opinions in a case, the superscript numbers after the names of Judges indicate the sequence of the opinions as well as which other Judges signed each of those opinions.

Acknowledgement

An analytical, systematic and comprehensive work such as this necessarily involves the combined effort of several persons. Each one of them has contributed in his own way. The merit and accuracy of this work therefore is the result of their dedication, commitment, sustained effort and team work. We warmly appreciate their efforts and contribution and they can justly feel proud of this publication.

Appreciation and our commitment

We equally appreciate and value the goodwill and continued support received from our subscribers and readers. We are trying our best to publish the volumes as quickly as is expected of us but we prefer not to be hasty and instead make this Digest as comprehensive and neatly arranged as is possible, and also cover the case law up to the date of publication. We are beholden to our readers for their patience and understanding. Besides, in trying to provide through Supreme Court Cases™ (SCC) and various digests all the rulings of the Supreme Court we seek to fulfil our own commitment to serve the legal profession as well as the cause of justice.

— Authors and Publishers

CONTENTS OF VOL. 1

Pages

- Preface I-5
- Detailed Contents . . . I-9
- Table of Cases Digested . . . I-23 (See Vol. 2)

OVER VIEW

Digest of Case Law

1. Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 Pp. 1 to 1454 (Vol. 1)
   Pp. 1 to 956 (Vol. 2)
2. Criminal Procedure Code, 1898 Pp. 957 to 1310 (Vol. 2)
3. Criminal Trial Pp. 1 to 1630 (Vol. 3)

Detailed Contents*

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, 1973 & 1898

In Vol. 1

Page

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, 1973

Sections 1 to 14 . . . . 3 to 40
Sections 17 and 18 40
Sections 20 and 21 . . . . 40 to 42
Section 24 . . . . 43
Section 24-A 54
Section 25 . . . . 54
Section 25-A 58
Chapter III 59
Sections 26 to 32 . . . . 59 to 73
Chapter IV-A 73
Section 36 . . . . 73
Chapter IV-B 75
Section 37 . . . . 75
Sections 39 and 40 . . . . 76 and 77
Chapter V 78
Sections 41 to 44 . . . . 81 to 87
Section 46 . . . . 87
Sections 49 to 53 . . . . 91 to 95
Section 53-A 100
Section 54 . . . . 101
Sections 56 and 57 . . . . 101 and 102
Chapter VI 103
Section 61 . . . . 103
Section 67 103
Section 70 . . . . 103
Sections 72 and 73 . . . . 104
Section 76 . . . . 104
Sections 78 and 79 104
Sections 81 to 85 . . . . 104 to 105
Section 87 105

---

* Sub-headings and corresponding synopses have been created only for Sections with voluminous case law.

 Page number in bold type indicates that the subject has been dealt with on that page in this work. Normal type, therefore, indicates that only cross-references are given on that page. This is not applicable to the Bird's eye view.

Page

CrPC, 1973 (contd.)

Chapter VII 106
Section 91 106
Sections 93 to 105 . . . . . 110 to 131
Chapter VII-A 131
Section 105-B. 132
Sections 106 and 107. 132
Section 110 133
Section 117 133

Sections 125 to 128 — Maintenance 133

Synopsis

(1) Generally 134
(2) Relevance of personal law 139
(3) Applicability to Muslim women 142
(4) Matters to be established for entitlement to maintenance under 142
(5) Second marriage, desertion, previous wife, refusal to live with husband 148
(6) Second wife. 156
(7) Maintenance in case of live-in relationship/Presumed marriage/De facto marriage/Cohabitation. 159
(8) Maintenance in case of divorce (including divorced Muslim women). 160
(9) Maintenance of children. 170
(10) Maintenance of parents. 175
(11) Territorial jurisdiction 178
(12) Quantum of maintenance. 180
(13) Interim maintenance 184
(14) Date of entitlement to maintenance. 186
(15) Cancellation or modification of maintenance order 187
(16) Practice and Procedure. 188
(17) Enforcement of maintenance order/Payment in instalments 189
(18) Interference by High Court/Supreme Court 190
Chapter X. 191
Sections 129 to 146. . . . . . 191 to 226
Section 148 226
Chapter XI 226
Sections 149 to 152. . . . . . 226 to 228
Chapter XII 230

Section 154 — FIR . . . . .

Bird's eye view

(1) Generally 234
(2) Value, evidentiary value and use of FIR 248
(3) Reliability and Validity of FIR 257
(4) Powers, Role and Duty of police in respect of FIR 376
(5) Interference by court 383
(6) Non-initiation of proceedings after FIR lodged 388
(7) Miscellaneous 388

Page

CrPC, 1973 (contd.)

Section 154 — FIR (contd.)

Synopsis

(1) Generally . . . 234
- (i) Nature, Object and effect of FIR . . . 234
- (ii) What amounts to and requirements of FIR . . . 235
  - 1. Generally . . . 235
  - 2. When, where and how FIR to be recorded . . . 238
  - 3. Who can lodge FIR . . . 239
  - 4. FIRs in Cross-cases . . . 240
  - 5. Dying declaration when can be treated as FIR . . . 241
  - 6. Telephone message if FIR . . . 241
  - 7. Daily Diary/General Diary entry . . . 244
  - 8. Information if first information or statement of witness under S. 161, etc. . . 245
  - 9. Other. . . . 247
- (iii) FIR Book . . . 248

(2) Value, evidentiary value and use of FIR . . . 248

(3) Reliability and Validity of FIR . . . 258
- (i) Anonymous complaint . . . 258
- (ii) Contents of FIR . . . 259
  - 1. Generally. . . . 259
  - 2. Form and language of FIR . . . 259
  - 3. Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR . . . 261
  - 4. Discrepancies/Inconsistencies/Contradictions in or vis-à-vis FIR . . . 283
  - 5. Corrections/Overwriting/Interpolation in FIR . . . 287
  - 6. Embellishments/Improvements in FIR . . . 289
  - 7. Inculpative statement in FIR. . . . 289
- (iii) FIR and other evidence . . . 290
- (iv) Doubt regarding lodging of FIR . . . 292
- (v) Falsity of/Fabricated FIR . . . 293
- (vi) FIR and Time. . . . 295
  - 1. Generally . . . 295
  - 2. Ante-timed FIR . . . 296
  - 3. Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate (i.e. the report as required to be sent to Magistrate under S. 157 r/w S. 158) . . . 303
  - 4. Delay in lodging/filing FIR . . . 317
  - 5. Non-mention of time of dispatch in FIR . . . 364
  - 6. Promptness/Haste in filing FIR . . . 365
- (vii) FIR not filed/lodged . . . 367
- (viii) Mala fides . . . 367
- (ix) Multiple FIRs/Cases . . . 369

(4) Powers, Role and Duty of police in respect of FIR . . . 376
- (i) Generally . . . 376
- (ii) Jurisdiction to lodge FIR . . . 379
- (iii) Preliminary enquiry. . . . 380
- (iv) Refusal to register FIR . . . 380

(5) Interference by court . . . 383
- (i) Transfer of FIR . . . 383
- (ii) Refusal to file FIR by police/Direction to file FIR. . . . 384

Page

CrPC, 1973 (contd.)
Section 154 — FIR (contd.)
(5) Interference by court (contd.) 385
(iii) Quashing of FIR 388
(iv) Practice and Procedure 388
(6) Non-initiation of proceedings after FIR lodged 388
(7) Miscellaneous 388
Sections 155 to 159 — Power and Conduct of Investigation by Police 390
Synopsis
(1) Generally 392
(2) Authority that may investigate and Role of court 397
(i) Generally 397
(ii) Police 401
(iii) Other Agencies (including CBI) 403
(iv) Ss. 156 and 202 — Relative scope 408
(v) Transfer of investigation 410
(3) Investigation when may be initiated by Police Officer 412
(4) Section 155(4) 416
(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court 416
(6) Power under Section 156(3) — Nature and Scope 428
(7) Section 157(1) proviso (b) — Sufficient grounds for non-investigation 435
(8) Procedure and Duty and Powers of investigating officer 436
(9) Hearing to accused during investigation 444
(10) Defective investigation 445
(11) Illegal/Partisan/Mala fide investigation — Effect and Quashment 453
(12) Delay in investigation and Quashment 455
(13) Result of investigation — When evidence 457
(14) Forwarding and receipt of Section 157 report (Ss. 158-159) 457
(15) Other 458
Section 160 458
Sections 161 and 162 — Examination of witnesses by police 459
Synopsis
(1) Nature of statement recorded under Ss. 161/162 — Use to which it may be put . 461
(2) Use of statement under Ss. 161/162 as basis for detention 474
(3) Right against self-incrimination — S. 161(2)/Confessions made in police custody 475
(4) Confession made in police custody under special statute 478
(5) Effect of taking signatures of witnesses 488
(6) Omissions/Exaggerations/Embellishments/Contradictions/Inconsistencies of S. 161 statement with evidence/FIR 489
(7) Delay in questioning examining witness/recording of statement under 504
(8) Other issues/infirmities 512
(9) Dying declaration 513
(10) Test Identification Parade 518
(11) Hearsay evidence/Extra-judicial confession 521
Section 163 521

Page

CrPC, 1973 (contd.)

Section 164 — Confessions and Statements before Magistrate 524

Synopsis

(1) Generally 524
(2) Manner of recording confession — Compliance with precautions under S. 164 . 526
(3) Who can record confession under S. 164. 538
(4) Person who may get statement recorded under S. 164. 540
(5) Admissibility of confession/statement recorded under S. 164 — Voluntariness. . 541
(6) Reliability of judicial confession: basing of conviction thereon 546
(7) Retracted judicial confession 551
(8) Confession/Statement of co-accused/approver. 558
(9) Extra-judicial confession/Hearsay evidence. 560
(10) Dying declaration 562
(11) Dying declarant surviving 564
(12) Statements of witnesses recorded under S. 164 564
(13) Confession recorded under S. 164 at instance of police 566

Section 164-A. 567
Sections 165 and 166. . . . . 568 to 571
Section 166-A. 571
Section 166-B. 572

Section 167 — Detention without charge pending investigation 573

Synopsis

(1) Generally 573
(2) Expeditious investigation and duty and powers of police under S. 167 577
(3) Remand to custody up to and beyond 15 days — S. 167(2) and proviso thereto and S. 167(2-A) 579
(4) Duties of remanding Magistrate. 584
(5) Rights of undertrials/Right to bail under S. 167(2) proviso and Expln. I thereto. . 584
(6) Remand to custody before and after charge-sheet/cognizance — Ss. 167 and 309. 600
(7) S. 167(5) as amended in State of West Bengal. 603
(8) Applicability in cases of special statutes 606

Sections 168 to 176. . . . . 619 to 666
Chapter XIII 668
Sections 177 to 188. . . . . 668 to 686
Sections 190 to 196. . . . . 689 to 751

Section 197 — Sanction for prosecution of public servants 755

Synopsis

(1) Object and purpose — Nature of bar under. 755
(2) "Public servants" protected under. 758
(3) Retirement/Change in post of public servant, etc. — Effect on protection under S. 197 764
(4) "Discharge of official duty"/"Colour of duty" — What is and Determination of. . . 766
(5) Sanction when necessary. 783
  (i) Need for acts to fall under/have reasonable connection with " discharge of official duty" 783
  (ii) Need for prima facie case against accused 791

Page

CrPC, 1973 (contd.)

Section 197 — Sanction for prosecution of public servants (contd.)

(6) Stage at which question of sanction to be considered/raised — Preliminary enquiry by court as to whether sanction required at all 791
(7) Effect of unavailability of protection under S. 197. . . . . 804
(8) Sanctioning authority 804
(9) Sanction/Sanction order if proper — Matters to be considered 813
(10) Review of Sanction order 816
(11) Hearing/Disclosure of inculpatory material to accused before sanction. 817
(12) Relative scope vis-à-vis S. 6, PC Act, 1947. . . . . 818
(13) Relative scope vis-à-vis S. 19, PC Act, 1988 . . . . 819
(14) Relative scope vis-à-vis other provisions/statutes 822
(15) Quashment of proceedings for want of sanction 826
(16) Invalid/void/improper sanction — When material to overturn conviction 829
(17) Judicial review of/Interference with sanction 829
(18) Discharge of official duty by members of Armed Forces — Ss. 197(2), (3) or (3-A) . 832

Section 198 . . . . 834
Section 198-A. 835
Section 199 . . . . 835
Chapter XV 836
Sections 200 to 203. . . . . 836 to 855
Chapter XVI. 857
Sections 204 to 210. . . . . 857 to 880
Chapter XVII 882
Sections 211 to 224. . . . . 882 to 916
Chapter XVIII 916
Sections 225 to 250. . . . . 916 to 1011
Chapter XX 1011
Sections 251 to 258. . . . . 1012 to 1016
Section 262 . . . . 1018
Section 264 . . . . 1018
Sections 273 to 276. . . . . 1020 to 1024
Section 278 . . . . 1025
Section 281 1025
Sections 283 to 286. . . . . 1025 to 1027
Sections 293 and 294. . . . . 1027 to 1031
Section 296 . . . . 1032
Sections 299 to 304. . . . . 1035 to 1062
Sections 306 to 311. . . . . 1065 to 1099
Section 311-A. 1113
Sections 312 to 315. . . . . 1113 to 1157
Section 317 . . . . 1158
Sections 319 to 321. . . . . 1160 to 1208
Section 323 . . . . 1242
Sections 325 to 327. . . . . 1242 to 1244
Chapter XXV 1250

Page

CrPC, 1973 (contd.)

Section 330 1251
Section 335 1251
Sections 339 to 346. . . . . 1251 to 1272
Section 348 1272
Sections 353 to 355. . . . . 1272 to 1351
Sections 357 to 363. . . . . 1351 to 1392
Sections 366 to 371. . . . . 1393 to 1406
Chapter XXIX 1406
Sections 372 to 377. . . . . 1406 to 1449

In Vol. 2

Section 378 — Appeal against acquittal . . . .

Synopsis

(1) Generally 2
(2) Appeal against acquittal vis-à-vis appeal against conviction 4
(3) Nature and scope of power under — Interference when called for/Reversal of acquittal when permissible/warranted. 7
(4) Comparison with S. 417 CrPC, 1898 66
(5) Approach of appellate court in disposal of appeal against acquittal: considerations involved 68
(6) Authority that may file/direct filing/Standing to file appeal against acquittal. . . . 81
(7) Procedure re filing of appeals/Delay/Laches 85
(8) Leave to appeal — S. 378(3) 88
(9) Special leave to appeal in complaint cases — S. 378(4) 98
(10) Practice and procedure re disposal of appeals 100
(11) Acquittal justified 101
(12) Reversal of acquittal justified/Acquittal not justified 117
(13) Interference by Supreme Court 135
(14) Other Instances 143
(15) Effective date of conviction on reversal of acquittal on appeal 144

Sections 379 to 385. . . . . 144 to 150

Section 386 — Powers of Appellate Court. 155

Synopsis

(1) Generally 156
(2) Nature and scope of powers of appellate court 156
(3) Appeal against acquittal — S. 386(a) 158
(4) Appeal against conviction — S. 386(b) 167
(5) Enhancement/Reduction of sentence — S. 386(c) 171
(6) Appeal against reduction of sentence filed by complainant 174
(7) Appeal from any other order — S. 386(d). 174
(8) Amendment, consequential or incidental orders — S. 386(e). 175
(9) Proper mode of disposal of appeal 176
(10) Procedure re filing of appeal/Delay/laches 187
(11) Practice and procedure re disposal of appeal. 188
(12) Acquittal/Reversal of conviction justified 191

Page

CrPC, 1973 (contd.)

Section 386 — Powers of Appellate Court (contd.)

(13) Conviction/Reversal of acquittal justified 200
(14) Conviction altered 209
(15) Remand/Final disposal by High Court 209
(16) Rehearing/retrial 210
(17) Interference by Supreme Court 212
(18) Remand/Final disposal by Supreme Court 216

Sections 387 to 403. . . . . 219 to 314
Chapter XXXI 316

Section 406 — Powers of transfer of Supreme Court 316

Synopsis

(1) Nature and Scope of power under 316
(2) Section 406 and Article 139-A 319
(3) Maintainability — Standing/Delay/Laches. 319
(4) Stage of proceedings, for exercise of power under 322
(5) Considerations/Grounds for transfer 322
(6) Directions/orders that may be issued under S. 406. 342
(7) Transfer of cases under Negotiable Instruments Act 345
(8) Review of transfer order/Subsequent orders/directions. 347
(9) Practice and Procedure re disposal of transfer petition 348

Sections 407 to 410. . . . . 348 to 357
Section 412 357
Chapter XXXII 357
Sections 413 to 415. . . . . 357 to 365
Section 418 365
Sections 420 and 421. 366
Section 424 367
Sections 427 and 428. . . . . 367 to 371
Sections 431 to 433. . . . . 380 to 401
Section 433-A. 411
Sections 434 and 435. 423
Chapter XXXIII 423
Section 436 423
Section 436-A. 429

Section 437 — Bail in non-bailable offences 430

Synopsis

(1) Generally 431
(2) Ss. 437 and 439 — Relative scope 433
(3) Matters at large/Orders/Directions that may be passed. 433
(4) Grounds for bail — Generally 434
(5) Grounds for bail in murder cases 445
(6) Grounds for bail — Particular offences 451
(7) Proper exercise of discretionary jurisdiction/disposal of bail application 454
(8) Temporary/Interim bail 459
(9) Successive/repeated bail applications 460

Page

CrPC, 1973 (contd.)

Section 437 — Bail in non-bailable offences (contd.)

(10) Conditions for bail 466
(11) Cancellation of bail 467
(12) Cancellation of bail after charge-sheet filed: Ss. 437(5), 439(2) and S. 167(2) . . 469
(13) Cancellation of bail and appeal against order granting bail 473
(14) Appeal 474
(15) Interference by Supreme Court 474
(16) Duties of accused after release on bail 476
(17) Bail application by juvenile 476
(18) CrPC provisions for bail and Special Statutes 476
(19) Other issues 486

Section 438 — Anticipatory Bail 488

Synopsis

(1) Generally 488
(2) Regular bail vis-à-vis anticipatory bail 496
(3) Maintainability of application 498
(4) Grounds for bail — Generally 501
(5) Grounds for bail in dowry/cruelty cases 509
(6) Grounds for bail — Particular offences 512
(7) Proper exercise of discretionary jurisdiction/disposal of bail application 516
(8) Duration and extent of anticipatory bail 519
(9) Direction under S. 438, when becomes operative 524
(10) Matters at large/Orders/Directions that may be passed 524
(11) Practice and Procedure re disposal 526
(12) Successive/repeated bail applications 526
(13) Conditions for bail under 527
(14) Cancellation of bail 530
(15) Interference by Supreme Court 532
(16) Rejection of anticipatory bail — Effect 533
(17) S. 438 and Special Statutes 533

Section 439 — Special powers of Sessions Court and High Court re Bail . 539

Synopsis

(1) Generally 539
(2) Maintainability of application 541
(3) Grounds for bail — Generally 544
(4) Grounds for bail in murder cases 548
(5) Grounds for bail — Particular offences 552
(6) Proper exercise of discretionary jurisdiction/disposal of bail application 554
(7) Temporary/Interim bail 561
(8) Successive/repeated bail applications 562
(9) Conditions for bail 564
(10) Matters at large/Orders/Directions that may be passed 565
(11) Cancellation of bail 566
(12) Cancellation of bail after charge-sheet filed: Ss. 439(2), 437(5) and S. 167(2) . . 580
(13) Appeal/Remedy 581
(14) Interference by Supreme Court 581

Page

CrPC, 1973 (contd.)

Section 439 — Special powers of Sessions Court and High Court re Bail (contd.)

(15) Fresh consideration of application on remand 584
(16) CrPC provisions for bail and Special Statutes 585
(17) Other issues 594

Sections 440 to 446. . . . . 594 to 596
Section 446-A. 596
Sections 447 to 450. . . . . 596 to 597
Chapter XXXIV 597
Sections 451 to 457. . . . . 597 to 607
Sections 460 to 465. . . . . 608 to 621
Chapter XXXVI 628
Sections 467 to 473. . . . . 628 to 645
Section 475 649
Section 477 653
Section 479 653

Section 482 — Inherent Powers of High Court 654

Synopsis

(1) Generally 656
(2) Nature and scope of inherent power 658
  (i) Generally 658
  (ii) S. 482 and other provisions of CrPC. 663
  (iii) Suo motu exercise of inherent power 676
(3) Maintainability. 677
(4) Alternative remedy/Exhaustion of remedies/Jurisdictional bar 679
(5) Procedure re filing of application under/Delay/laches. 682
(6) Proper mode of disposal/Exercise of power under/Matters to be considered. . . 682
(7) Exercise of power/Directions in matters other than quashment of proceedings. . 682
(8) Interference with investigation/FIR 689
(9) Adverse remarks and their expunction 717
(10) Practice and Procedure. 722
(11) Quashment of proceedings 723
  (i) Power of quashment under — Nature and scope 724
  (ii) Anticipatory quashment — Power if any. 731
  (iii) Maintainability 731
  (iv) Admission of quashment petition — Effect 739
  (v) Matters at large/Orders/Directions that may be passed 739
  (vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered . . . 742
  (vii) Non-quashment — Issue of other directions. 772
  (viii) Effect of rejection of quashment application 775
  (ix) General grounds for quashment 775
  (x) Delay/Limitation as a ground for quashment. 788
  (xi) Lack of jurisdiction of court/forum below. 798
  (xii) Mala fides or animus of complainant. 800
  (xiii) Quashment re private complaints 807
  (xiv) Errors of procedure by courts/authorities below 809
  (xv) Other specific grounds for quashment 812

CrPC, 1973 (contd.)

Section 482 — Inherent Powers of High Court (contd.)

Quashment of proceedings (contd.)

(xvi) Defence case when to be considered/Accused heard at stage of quashment . . 818
(xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending 821
(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc.. 837
(xix) Quashment re offences involving companies 865
(xx) Quashment in cheque dishonour cases 875
(xxi) Quashment re defamation allegations 890
(xxii) Quashment re taxation offences 896
(xxiii) Quashment/stay re ecological offences/environmental matters 902
(xxiv) Quashment in food/liquor/drugs/chemicals offences 907
(xxv) Quashment re NDPS Act offences. 916
(xxvi) Quashment re caste related offences 917
(xxvii) Quashment re family/marital/dowry, etc. disputes 919
(xxviii) Quashment re sexual offences. 931
(xxix) Quashment/Interference re corruption offences 932
(xxx) Quashment re other offences 944
(xxxi) Multiple/Successive petitions under/Restoration/Review, etc.. 951
(xxxii) Practice and procedure re disposal of quashment application 952

Sections 483 and 484. . . . . 954 and 955
Schedules I and II. 956

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, 1898 957
Section 1 958
Sections 4 to 6 . . . . 959 to 962
Sections 8 to 12. . . . . 962 to 964
Section 14 964
Section 18 965
Sections 28 to 30 . . . . 965 and 966
Section 33 966
Sections 35 to 37 967
Section 39 967
Section 46 967
Sections 51 and 52 968
Section 56 968
Section 61 968
Sections 75 and 76 . . . . 968 and 969
Sections 87 and 88 969
Section 94 969
Section 96 972
Section 98 973
Section 99-A 973
Section 99-D 973
Sections 101 to 103. 973
Section 105 975
Chapter VIII 975

Page

CrPC, 1898 (contd.)

Sections 106 to 108. . . . . 976 and 977
Section 112 977
Sections 116 to 119. 977
Section 125 977
Section 126-A. 977
Chapter IX 977
Sections 127 to 129. 978
Sections 131 to 133. . . . . 978 and 979
Section 138 980
Sections 144 to 146. . . . . 980 to 989
Sections 148 and 149. . . . . 990 and 991
Section 151 991
Chapter XIV. 991
Sections 154 to 177. . . . . 991 to 1041
Sections 179 to 182. . . . . 1042 to 1044
Sections 185 and 186. 1044
Section 188 1044
Section 190 1045
Sections 192 and 193. 1051
Sections 195 and 196. . . . . 1052 to 1062
Section 196-A. 1062
Sections 197 and 198. . . . . 1065 to 1075
Section 198-B. 1076
Sections 199 and 200. 1078
Sections 202 to 206. . . . . 1080 to 1084
Chapter XVIII 1084
Section 207 1084
Section 207-A. 1084
Sections 208 to 223. . . . . 1090 to 1099
Sections 225 to 227. . . . . 1099 to 1102
Sections 232 to 251. . . . . 1102 to 1117
Section 251-A. 1118
Sections 252 to 254. . . . . 1119 and 1120
Section 254-A. 1121
Sections 255 to 259. . . . . 1121 to 1123
Sections 267 to 269. 1123
Section 270-A. 1124
Section 271 1124
Section 278 1124
Sections 284 to 290. . . . . 1124 to 1132
Sections 297 to 299. . . . . 1132 to 1134
Section 302 1134
Sections 305 to 307. 1135
Sections 309 and 310. . . . . 1138 and 1139

Page

CrPC, 1898 (contd.)

Section 326 1139
Sections 336 to 339. . . . . 1139 to 1145
Section 339-A. 1145
Sections 340 to 342. . . . . 1145 to 1147
Section 342-A. 1162
Sections 343 to 345. . . . . 1163 to 1166
Section 347 1167
Section 350 1168
Sections 352 and 353. 1168
Section 356 1169
Sections 360 to 369. . . . . 1169 to 1173
Section 371 1174
Sections 374 to 378. . . . . 1174 to 1178
Section 380 1178
Section 383 1178
Section 386 1178
Section 388 1179
Section 396 1179
Sections 401 and 402. . . . . 1179 and 1180
Section 402-A. 1181
Sections 403 and 404. . . . . 1181 to 1189
Sections 410 and 411. . . . . 1189 and 1190
Section 411-A. 1190
Sections 417 to 424. . . . . 1190 to 1227
Sections 426 to 432. . . . . 1227 to 1234
Sections 435 to 439. . . . . 1234 to 1238
Section 441 1250
Section 452 1250
Sections 464 and 465. 1251
Section 476 1252
Section 476-A. 1256
Section 476-B. 1256
Sections 477 to 479. 1256
Section 479-A. 1257
Section 480 1260
Section 482 1260
Section 484 1260
Sections 488 to 504. . . . . 1260 to 1277
Section 506 1278
Section 508-A 1278
Section 510 1278
Section 510-A. 1278
Section 514 1279
Section 516-A. 1280

Page

CrPC, 1898 (contd.)
Section 517 . . . . 1280
Section 520 . . . . 1282
Sections 522 and 523. . . . . 1282
Sections 526 to 531. . . . . 1283 to 1289
Section 533 . . . . 1290
Sections 535 to 537. . . . . 1290 to 1291
Section 539-B. 1297
Section 540 . . . . 1297
Section 540-A. 1300
Section 545 . . . . 1300
Sections 548 and 549. . . . . 1301
Section 551 . . . . 1302
Section 556 . . . . 1303
Section 559 . . . . 1303
Section 561-A. 1304
Sections 562 to 564. . . . . 1309 and 1310
Schedules II and III 1310
Schedule V 1310

Table of Cases Digested in Vols. 1 & 2

See Volume 2

Supreme Court on CrPC & Criminal Trial

Volume 1

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, 1973

[1] — Nature — An exhaustive code — Provides complete and corrective machinery

The Code of Criminal Procedure is an exhaustive code providing a complete machinery to investigate and try cases, appeals against the judgments. It has provisions at each stage to correct errors, failures of justice and abuse of process under the supervision and superintendence of the High Court as would be evident from the following:

(i) The Court has the power to direct investigation in cognizable cases under Section 156(3) read with Section 190 CrPC.

(ii) A Magistrate can postpone the issue of process and inquire into the case himself under Section 202(1) CrPC.

(iii) When a charge-sheet is filed, the court can refuse to accept the same and proceed to take cognizance of the offence on the basis of the materials on record. The court can direct further investigation into the matter.

(iv) The Magistrate may treat a protest petition as a complaint and proceed to deal therewith in terms of Chapter XV CrPC.

(v) Once the case is committed, the Sessions Judge may refer the matter to the High Court.

(vi) In the event, without taking any further evidence, it is found that while passing the order of commitment, the Magistrate has committed an error in not referring the case of an accused or left out an accused after evidence is adduced, the court may proceed against a person who was not an accused provided it appears from the evidence that he should be tried with the accused.

(vii) The Revisional Court during pendency of the trial may exercise its revisional jurisdiction under Section 397 in which case, it may direct further inquiry in terms of Section 398 CrPC.

(viii) The revisional powers of the High Court and the Sessions Court are pointed out in the Code separately; from a perusal whereof it would appear that the High Court exercises larger power.

(ix) In the event of any conviction by a Court of Session, an appeal thereagainst would lie to the High Court. The appellate court exercises the power laid down under Section 386 CrPC in which event it may also take further evidence or direct it to be taken in terms of Section 391 thereof.

(x) The High Court has inherent power under Section 482 CrPC to correct errors of the courts below and pass such orders as may be necessary to do justice to the parties and/or to prevent the abuse of process of court. (Para 21). Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-7-2006]

[2] — Generally

Code is complete and that makes it different from a statute. Joseph Peter v. State of Goa, Daman and Diu, (1977) 3 SCC 280: 1977 SCC (Cri) 486: AIR 1977 SC 1812: 1977 Cri LJ 1449.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and Jaswant Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1977]

[3] — Generally — Inherent jurisdiction of Magistrates, if any — Code does not permit a magistrate to exercise an inherent jurisdiction which he otherwise does not have. A.S. Gauraya v. S.N. Thakur, (1986) 2 SCC 709: 1986 SCC (Cri) 249: AIR 1986 SC 1440: 1986 Cri LJ 1074.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Khalid and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-1986]

[4] — Generally — Interpretation of a provision of an ongoing statute — Doctrine "contemporanea expositio est optima et fortissima in lege" — Applicability of — Held, the said doctrine has no application when interpreting a provision of an ongoing statute/Act like CrPC (Para 18). State of Maharashtra v. Praful B. Desai (Dr.), (2003) 4 SCC 601: 2003 SCC (Cri) 815: AIR 2003 SC 2053: 2003 Cri LJ 2033: (2003) 2 Mah LJ 868: (2003) 2 MPLJ 434.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-4-2003]

Francis Bennion: Statutory Interpretation, 2nd Edn., p. 617, relied on National Textile Workers' Union v. P.R. Ramakrishnan, (1983) 1 SCC 228: 1983 SCC (Tax) 2: 1983 SCC (L&S) 72; CIT v. Podar Cement (P) Ltd., (1997) 5 SCC 482; State v. S.J. Choudhary, (1996) 2 SCC 428: 1996 SCC (Cri) 336; SIL Import, USA v. Exim Aides Silk Exporters, (1999) 4 SCC 567: 1999 SCC (Cri) 600; Basavaraj R. Patil v. State of Karnataka, (2000) 8 SCC 740: 2001 SCC (Cri) 87, followed

[5] — Generally — Interpretation of (mandatory) provisions of — Effect of non-compliance — Need for prejudice — Held, CrPC is a compendium of law relating to criminal procedure — Provisions contained therein are required to be interpreted keeping in view that procedural prescriptions are meant for doing substantial justice — If violation of procedural provision does not result in denial of fair hearing or does not cause prejudice to parties, such provision has to be treated as directory notwithstanding use of the word "shall" (Para 7). Shivjee Singh v. Nagendra Tiwary, (2010) 7 SCC 578.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : G.S. Singhvi and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision : 6-7-2010]

[6] — Generally — Practice of any High Court under the old Code cannot be relied upon

It is difficult to appreciate the reference to practice, by the High Court, so far as appeals by State are concerned when the new Code of Criminal Procedure, for the first time, provided for obtaining leave to appeal by the State only from April 1, 1974. It is admitted that there are no rules laid down by the High Court in the matter of application for leave to appeal by the State. It is, therefore, not possible to decide the matter relying upon the so-called practice soon after the provision has been introduced. State of Rajasthan v. Ramdeen, (1977) 2 SCC 630: 1977 SCC (Cri) 393: AIR 1977 SC 1328: 1977 Cri LJ 997.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, P.K. Goswami and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-1977]

[7] — Generally — Procedural law — Nature of — Interpretation of procedural law — CPC, 1908

All the rules of procedure are the handmaid of justice. The language employed by the draftsman of processual law may be liberal or stringent, but the fact remains that the object of prescribing procedure is to advance the cause of justice. In an adversarial system, no party should ordinarily be denied the opportunity of participating in the process of justice dispensation. Unless compelled by the express and specific language of the statute, the provisions of CPC or any other procedural enactment ought not to be construed in a manner which would leave the court helpless to meet extraordinary situations in the ends of justice. The mortality of justice at the hands of law troubles a judge's conscience and points an angry interrogation at the law reformer. Processual law is not to be a tyrant but a servant, not an obstruction but an aid to justice. Procedural prescriptions are the handmaid and not the mistress, a lubricant, not a resistant in the administration of justice. (Paras 10, 11 and 14). Rani Kusum v. Kanchan Devi, (2005) 6 SCC 705: AIR 2005 SC 3304.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-2005]

Kailash v. Nanhku, (2005) 4 SCC 480; Salem Advocate Bar Assn. v. Union of India (II), (2005) 6 SCC 344, followed

Sk. Salim Haji Abdul Khayumsab v. Kumar, (2006) 1 SCC 46: AIR 2006 SC 396: (2006) 1 KLJ 223: (2006) 37 AIC 937 (SC): (2006) 1 Mah LJ 178: (2006) 1 MPLJ 11.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-11-2005]

Sushil Kumar Sen v. State of Bihar, (1975) 1 SCC 774; Blyth v. Blyth, (1966) 1 All ER 524: 1966 AC 643: (1966) 2 WLR 634; Shreenath v. Rajesh, (1998) 4 SCC 543; Sangram Singh v. Election Tribunal, Kotah, (1955) 2 SCR 1: AIR 1955 SC 425, relied on

[8] — Preamble — Maintains a distinction between powers conferred by and powers conferrable under the Code

There is a broad divide between the powers conferred and powers conferrable by or under the Code on the Executive Magistrate. The powers conferred by the Code on the Executive Magistrates are the powers which are attached to the post of Executive Magistrate. Any person appointed as Executive Magistrate is entitled to exercise such powers. The powers located under Ss. 107, 108, 109, 110, 129, 145 and 147 etc. are the instances of such powers. These are not the powers conferrable on the Executive Magistrate though they may be conferred on others like the Commissioner of Police under S. 20 sub-section (5). There are other provisions in the Code such as Ss. 133, 143 and 144, which may be said to be conferrable powers under the Code. The Executive Magistrates cannot exercise such powers unless they are empowered in that behalf. (Para 15). State of Maharashtra v. Mohd. Salim Khan, (1991) 1 SCC 550: 1991 SCC (Cri) 253: (1991) 1 Crimes 120.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.N. Singh, K. Jagannatha Shetty and Kuldip Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-1990]

[9] — No inconsistency or repugnancy between the provisions of Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 and Haryana Children Act, 1974 in terms of Art. 254(1) — Constitution of India, Art. 254(1). Raghbir v. State of Haryana, (1981) 4 SCC 210: 1981 SCC (Cri) 818: AIR 1981 SC 2037: 1981 Cri LJ 1497.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-1981]

[10] — Procedure under Special Courts Act, 1979, held, not harsher and less advantageous than that prescribed under Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 — Arts. 14 and 21 not violated — Special Courts Act, 1979. V.C. Shukla v. State (Delhi Admn.), 1980 Supp SCC 249: 1980 SCC (Cri) 849: AIR 1980 SC 1382 (Judgmen: 1980 Cri LJ 965.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, P.S. Kailasam and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-4-1980]

[11] — S. 1(2) proviso and Ss. 93-105 — Seized property and material must be handed over to the officer-in-charge of the nearest police station at the earliest in accordance with the provisions of CrPC — Even where the provisions of CrPC are not applicable substance of the rules of CrPC will apply — Armed Forces (Special Powers) Act, 1958 — S. 4(d)

Though there is no provision similar to Section 5 requiring the handing over of the property or arms, ammunition, etc. that are seized during the course of search under Section 4(c) but since such seized property or material will be required in the proceedings to be initiated against the culprits from whose possession the same was recovered, it is implicit in the power that has been conferred under Section 4(d) that it should be exercised in accordance with the provisions relating to search and seizure contained in the Criminal Procedure Code and the property or the arms, ammunition, etc. that is seized during the course of search under Section 4(d) must be handed over to the officer-in-charge of the nearest police station with the least possible delay together with a report of the circumstances occasioning the search and seizure.

In view of the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 1 CrPC the provisions of CrPC, other than those relating to Chapters VIII, X and XI thereof, are not applicable to the State of Nagaland and tribal areas in the States of Assam, Meghalaya, Tripura and Mizoram. The inapplicability of the provisions of CrPC in those areas is of little consequence because in the context of Nagaland it has been held that even though the provisions of CrPC are not applicable in certain districts of the State of Nagaland, it only means that the rules of the CrPC would not apply but the authorities would be governed by the substance of these rules. In the circumstances, it must be held that the provisions of CrPC governing search and seizure have to be followed during the course of search and seizure under Section 4(d) and the property or arms, ammunition, etc. seized during the course of such search has to be produced by the officer of the armed forces before the officer-in-charge of the nearest police station with the least possible delay along with a report of the circumstances occasioning such search and seizure. Naga People's Movement of Human Rights v. Union of India, (1998) 2 SCC 109: 1998 SCC (Cri) 514: AIR 1998 SC 431.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.S. Verma, C.J. and M.M. Punchhi and S.C. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-1997]

— S. 2 See also Ss. 436, 2, 81 and Sch. I

[12] — S. 2(b) and Ch. XVII (Ss. 211 to 224) — "Charge" — Meaning — Explained

The Code of Criminal Procedure does not define what a charge is. It is the precise formulation of the specific accusation made against a person who is entitled to know its nature at the earliest stage. A charge is not an accusation made or information given in the abstract, but an accusation made against a person in respect of an act committed or omitted in violation of penal law forbidding or commanding it. In other words, it is an accusation made against a person in respect of an offence alleged to have been committed by him. A charge is formulated after inquiry as distinguished from the popular meaning of the word as implying inculpation of a person for an alleged offence as used in Section 224 IPC. (Para 20). Esher Singh v. State of A.P., (2004) 11 SCC 585: AIR 2004 SC 3030.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-3-2004]

— S. 2(c) See Ss. 41, 151, 2(c), 156 and 157(1)

See also Ss. 482 and 2(c) & (d), 154

[13] — Ss. 2(c) and 436 — Cognizable offence — Offences under State Prevention of Gambling Act — Specific class of officers mentioned in S. 6(1) of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act, being competent also to personally arrest without warrant for offences under Ss. 4 and 5 of that Act, held, are 'police officers' and those offences are 'cognizable' within the meaning of S. 4(1)(f) of the Code — Such offences being bailable, held, persons arrested must be enlarged on bail by virtue of S. 496 of the Code and any administrative instruction having a contrary direction would be bad — CrPC, 1898 — Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act, 1887 (4 of 1887) — Ss. 4, 5 and 6 — CrPC, 1898 — Ss. 4(1)(f) and 496

The expression 'police officer' in S. 4(1)(f) CrPC, 1898 does not necessarily mean 'any and every' police officer, and an offence will still be a 'cognizable offence' within this definition even if the power to arrest without warrant, for that offence is given by the statute to police officers of a particular rank or class only. Section 6 confers the power of arrest thereunder only on a specific class of police officers and not on any or ever police officer. A Commissioner of Police who is competent to direct, by issuing special warrant of general order under S. 6(1)(i) of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act, another police officer of the requisite rank to arrest persons found gambling or present in a gaming house, can also arrest personally the offender concerned. Therefore, by applying the principle laid in I.C. Lala case offences under Ss. 4 and 5 of the Act are cognizable. Such offences are admittedly bailable. Hence the commissioner of Police or the police officer who is authorised by him to search, arrest and investigate such offence, is under a legal obligation to release the accused on bail under the provisions of S. 496 CrPC, 1898. The authority to grant bail to the person arrested in execution of such a warrant is derived by the officer arresting from the statute and consequently, no executive instructions or administrative rules can abridge, or run counter to the statutory provisions of the Code. Therefore, the circular order issued by the District Superintendent of Police, Rajkot, directing all the Police sub-Inspectors not to release persons arrested in respect of offences under Ss. 4 and 5 of the Act on bail is contrary to or inconsistent with the provisions of the Code and on a true construction, there is nothing in S. 6 or any other provision of the Act, which takes away the right and power conferred by the Code on the police officer to grant bail to the person arrested by him for offences under Ss. 4 and 5 of the Act. Hence the impugned order was ultra vires and bad in law. State of Gujarat v. Lal Singh Kishan Singh, (1981) 2 SCC 75: 1981 SCC (Cri) 330: AIR 1981 SC 368: (1981) 22 GLR 450.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and R.S. Pathak, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-1980]

Union of India v. I.C. Lala, (1973) 2 SCC 72: 1973 SCC (Cri) 738, applied

[14] — Ss. 2(c) & (d), 154, 155(2) & 190(1)(a) and (b) — Investigation into, and taking cognizance of, offence under S. 31, RP Act, 1950 (making fake declarations) — Legality — Being a non-cognizable offence, investigation into offence under S. 31, RP Act, 1950 (making fake declarations) without an order of a competent Magistrate under S. 155(2), CrPC, held, illegal — Hence, the Magistrate could not take cognizance thereof upon the report submitted on completion of such investigation — Representation of the People Act, 1950 — S. 31

On the own showing of the police, the offence under Section 31 of the Representation of the People Act, 1950 is non-cognizable and therefore the police could not have registered a case for such an offence under Section 154 CrPC when there was no order of a competent Magistrate under Section 155(2), CrPC. Therefore, neither the police could investigate into the offence in question nor submit a report on which the question of taking cognizance could have arisen.

The Explanation to Section 2(d), CrPC does say that the police is entitled to submit, after investigation, a report relating to a non-cognizable offence in which case such a report is to be treated as a 'complaint' of the police officer concerned, but that explanation will not be available to the prosecution in the instant case as that relates to a case where the police initiates investigation into a cognizable offence — unlike the present one — but ultimately finds that only a non-cognizable offence has been made out. Keshav Lal Thakur v. State of Bihar, (1996) 11 SCC 557.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-1996]

— S. 2(d) See Ss. 2(c) & (d), 154, 155(2) & 190(1)(a) and (b)

See also Ss. 173, 190 and 2(d)

See also Ss. 341, 340, 2(d) and 482

See also Ss. 482 and 2(c) & (d), 154

See also Ss. 482 and 2(d), 154, 155 and 190, 200

[15] — S. 2(d) — "Complaint" — Form and Contents — Not essential that it should verbatim contain all the ingredients of the offence alleged so long as the factual foundation for the offence has been laid. Rajesh Bajaj v. State (NCT of Delhi), (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401: AIR 1999 SC 1216: 1999 Cri LJ 1833.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1999]

[16] — S. 2(d) — Complaint — Format for — Held, there is no particular format for a complaint — Nomenclature is also inconsequential — A petition addressed to the Magistrate containing an allegation that an offence has been committed, and ending with a prayer that the culprits be suitably dealt with, as in the instant case, is a complaint (Paras 15 and 16). Mohd. Yousuf v. Afaq Jahan, (2006) 1 SCC 627: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 460: AIR 2006 SC 705: (2006) 1 KLT 939: (2006) 2 Guj LR 1742: (2006) 38 AIC 70 (SC): 2006 Cri LJ 788.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-1-2006]

[17] — Ss. 2(d), 203 and 204 — Technical, curable defect in complaint — Effect — Prosecution and trial against accused cannot be allowed to be defeated merely because of a technical and curable defect in the complaint. U.P. Pollution Control Board v. Modi Distillery, (1987) 3 SCC 684: 1987 SCC (Cri) 632: AIR 1988 SC 1128.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-1987]

— S. 2(d) Expln. See also Ss. 173, 200 and 2(d) Expln.

[18] — S. 2(d) Expln. — Scope — Held, covers only those cases where the police initiates investigation into a cognizable offence but the offence made out turns to be non-cognizable one. Keshav Lal Thakur v. State of Bihar, (1996) 11 SCC 557.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-1996]

— S. 2(e) See Ss. 369 and 2(e)

— S. 2(g) See Ss. 193, 4, 5 and 2(g)

See also Ss. 193, 4(2), 5, 2(g) and 6(i)

See also Ss. 207, 209, 309, 170, 190 and 2(g)

See also Ss. 209, 319, 2(g), 227 and 228

See also Ss. 228, 167, 173, 2(g) & (h), 190 and 309

See also Ss. 262 (Ch. XXI), 251, 254(1)(Ch. XX), 319 and 2(g)

See also Ss. 428, 2(g) & (h)

See also Ss. 428, 5 and 475, 2(h), (g)

[19] — S. 2(g) — Trial distinct from "inquiry"

Though the word "trial" is not defined either in the Code or in the Act, it is clearly distinguishable from inquiry and inquiry must always be a forerunner to the trial. (Para 16). Vidyadharan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 1 SCC 215: 2004 SCC (Cri) 260: AIR 2004 SC 536: (2004) 1 KLT 105: 2004 Cri LJ 605: (2004) 2 MPLJ 251.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-2003]

[20] — Ss. 2(g), 157 and 161 — Enquiry — Meaning — Held, the term "enquiry" is not defined under the Act — Hence, meaning assigned in S. 2(g) CrPC and meaning in etymological sense is to be applied — Empowered officer under the Act is entitled to examine any person for contravention of the Act — Such enquiry, therefore, shall be made in terms of enquiry as held under CrPC — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, Ss. 67 and 42 (Para 19). Raju Premji v. Customs, NER, Shillong Unit, (2009) 16 SCC 496.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Kanhaiyalal v. Union of India, (2008) 4 SCC 668: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 474, followed

[21] — S. 2(g) — "Trial", held, is distinct from "inquiry"

It is clear from Section 14 of the SC & ST Atrocities Act, 1989 that it is for trial of the offences under the Act that a particular Court of Session in each district is sought to be specified as a Special Court. Though the word "trial" is not defined either in the Code (Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973) or in the Act, it is clearly distinguishable from inquiry. The word "inquiry" is defined in Section 2(g) of the Code as "every inquiry, other than a trial, conducted under this Code by a Magistrate or court". So trial is distinct from inquiry and inquiry must always be a forerunner to the trial. Thus the Court of Session is specified to conduct a trial and no other court can conduct the trial of offences under the Act. Evidently, the legislature wanted the Special Court to be a Court of Session. Hence the particular Court of Session, even after being specified as a Special Court, would continue to be essentially a Court of Session and designation of it as a Special Court would not denude it of its character or even powers as a Court of Session. The trial in such a court can be conducted only in the manner provided in Chapter XVIII of the Code which contains a fasciculus of provisions for "trial before a Court of Session". (Paras 9 and 10). Moly v. State of Kerala, (2004) 4 SCC 584: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1348: AIR 2004 SC 1890: 2004 Cri LJ 1812.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-2004]

— S. 2(h) See Ss. 41 to 44 & 46 and 155 and 157, 2(h)

See also Ss. 150, 154 and 155 and S. 2(h)

See also Ss. 156(1) & 157 and 2(h)

See also Ss. 157, 154 and 162 & 2(h)

See also Ss. 162, 154, 157 and 2(h)

See also Ss. 167, 2(h), 4(2), 26(b) and Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176)

See also Ss. 167(1) and 2(h)

See also Ss. 170, 169, 173, 2(h), 24 and 482

See also Ss. 228, 167, 173, 2(g) & (h), 190 and 309

See also Ss. 428, 2(g) & (h)

See also Ss. 428, 5 and 475, 2(h) & (g)

See also Ss. 438, 437 & 438 and 2(h), 155 to 157 and 41 to 44 & 46

[22] — S. 2(h) — "Investigation" — Meaning and scope

Section 2(h) CrPC defines "investigation" and it includes all the proceedings under the Code for the collection of evidence conducted by a police officer or by any person (other than a Magistrate) who is authorised by a Magistrate in this behalf. It ends with the formation of the opinion as to whether on the material collected, there is a case to place the accused before a Magistrate for trial and if so, taking the necessary steps for the same by filing of a charge-sheet under Section 173. (Para 11). Union of India v. Prakash P. Hinduja, (2003) 6 SCC 195: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1314: AIR 2003 SC 2612: 2003 Cri LJ 3117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2003]

State of U.P. v. Bhagwant Kishore Joshi, AIR 1964 SC 221: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 140; H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: (1955) 1 SCR 1150: 1955 Cri LJ 526, relied on

[23] — Ss. 2(h), 2(g) & 156(3) and 157 — Investigation and enquiry — Distinguished — Held, investigation in terms of S. 156(3) cannot be equated with enquiry as both are defined differently in terms of Ss. 2(h) and 2(g) (Para 11)

The appellants were depositors in a cooperative bank. Some of the borrowers had mortgaged their properties with the Bank. Alleging commission of offences under Ss. 406, 420, 423, 465, 477, 468, 471, 120-B, 124 and 34 IPC, Bank filed complaint petition before Judicial Magistrate against respondent-accused seeking direction against the police to register and investigate the case under S. 156(3) CrPC. The Magistrate upon considering the allegations granted the prayer. However, the complainant thereafter filed an application before Magistrate informing him that a compromise had been entered into by and between the accused and the Bank. Pursuant thereto, order directing enquiry was recalled by the Magistrate. A writ petition was filed by appellants challenging the same. The High Court by impugned judgment declined to interfere with the said order. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeals, the Supreme Court held as above. Dharmeshbhai Vasudevbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 576.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; Devarapalli Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380; Adalat Prasad v. Rooplal Jindal, (2004) 7 SCC 338: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1927; K.M. Mathew v. State of Kerala, (1992) 1 SCC 217: 1992 SCC (Cri) 88; Everest Advertising (P) Ltd. v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2007) 5 SCC 54: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 444; Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 36; S. Suresh v. Annappa Reddy, (2004) 13 SCC 424, followed

— S. 2(g) See Ss. 2(h), 2(g) & 156(3) and 157

[24] — Ss. 2(h) and 162 — "Investigation" — Steps taken for trapping of bribe-taker by Inspector after recording of complaint, held, investigation — Statement made by accused to Inspector at the time of raid to be excluded — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — Conduct of accused however relevant under S. 8, Evidence Act, 1872 — CrPC, 1898 — Ss. 4(1) and 162

On a complaint made to the Inspector he recorded the same and arranged the raid by noting each step taken thereafter in a regular manner. What has been done by the Inspector in order to detect the accused while taking the bribe comes within the term 'investigation' under S. 4(1) of CrPC, 1898. The moment the Inspector had recorded the complaint with a view to take action to track the offender, whose name was not even known at the stage, and proceeded to achieve the object, visited the locality, questioned the accused, searched his person, seized the note and other documents, turns the entire process into an investigation under the Code.

Here the Inspector himself stated that he examined the witnesses under S. 161, CrPC and completed the investigation. The fact that he had also later on forwarded the complaint for formal registration of the case at the police station concerned does not do away with the character of the investigation already commenced by the Inspector or recording the complainant's statement disclosing a cognizable offence.

Therefore, any statement made by the accused in answer to questions put by the Inspector is inadmissible under S. 162, CrPC and neither the prosecution nor can the accused take advantage of these answers. Maha Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1976) 1 SCC 644: 1976 SCC (Cri) 135: AIR 1976 SC 449: (1976) 3 SCR 119: 1976 Cri LJ 346.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.K. Goswami and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-1976]

— S. 2(j) See Ss. 181(2), 178 and 179 & 2(j)

— S. 2(n) See Ss. 162 and 2(n)

See also Ss. 188 proviso, 179 and 2(n)

[25] — S. 2(n) — Adults willingly engaging in sexual relations outside the marital setting, held, is not an offence, with exception of adultery as defined under S. 497 IPC — General Clauses Act, 1897, S. 3(38) — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 40 to 42 and 497

"Offence" means "an act or instance of offending"; "commit an illegal act" and "illegal" means, "contrary to or forbidden by law". "Offence" has to be read and understood in the context as it has been prescribed under the provisions of Sections 40, 41 and 42 IPC which cover the offences punishable under IPC or under special or local law or as defined under Section 2(n) CrPC or Section 3(38) of the General Clauses Act, 1897. (Para 30)

There is no statutory offence that takes place when adults willingly engage in sexual relations outside the marital setting, with the exception of "adultery" as defined under Section 497 IPC. (Para 31). S. Khushboo v. Kanniammal, (2010) 5 SCC 600.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and Deepak Verma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision : 28-4-2010]

[26] — S. 2(n) — Bar against taking cognizance of offence under S. 64(3), Kerala Police Act, 1960 — Held, not restricted to the offences specified in the Act alone but can encompass offences under other enactments including the Penal Code — Kerala Police Act, 1960 (5 of 1961) — S. 64(3) (Paras 11 and 15). P.P. Unnikrishnan v. Puttiyottil Alikutty, (2000) 8 SCC 131: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1460: AIR 2000 SC 2952.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-2000]

Maulud Ahmad v. State of U.P., 1963 Supp (2) SCR 38: (1964) 2 Cri LJ 71, distinguished [27] — S. 2(n) — 'Criminal offence', 'offence' and 'blameworthy conduct' — Distinction — General Clauses Act, 1897 — S. 3(38) — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 40. Director of Enforcement v. M.C.T.M. Corpn. (P) Ltd., (1996) 2 SCC 471: 1996 SCC (Cri) 344: AIR 1996 SC 1100.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-1996]

[28] — S. 2(n) — Ex post facto laws — Protection against — Necessary conditions — Conviction for an "offence" and subjection to a "penalty" — Order passed under SEBI Act, 1992, Ss. 11(4)(b) and 11-B(iii), restraining respondent for five years "from associating with any corporate body in accessing the securities market and also ... prohibiting from buying, selling or dealing in securities ..." — Held, such restraint order was passed for carrying out purpose of the 1992 Act, namely, protection of interests of investors, and not for any "offence" — Nor was the respondent subjected to any "penalty" as contemplated under Art. 20(1) — Bar against ex post facto applicability of laws not applicable in such case — General Clauses Act, 1897, S. 3(38) — SEBI Act, 1992, Ss. 11(4)(b) and 11-B(iii) — Constitution of India, Art. 20(1)

The respondent was the Joint Managing Director of a company. A complaint was lodged with SEBI that the company made misstatements in the prospectus at the time of public issue in 1993. Show-cause notice was issued on 22-12-1999. The respondent gave his reply on 1-3-2000 and 10-7-2002. Thereafter, an opportunity of personal hearing was given to the respondent and ultimately an order dated 31-3-2004 was passed restraining the respondent from associating with any corporate body in accessing securities market and also prohibiting him from buying, selling or dealing in securities for a period of five years.

The respondent challenged this order before the Appellate Tribunal which accepted his plea that Section 11-B which came into existence in 1995 could not the applied to allegations relating to the year 1993. This plea found favour with the Tribunal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Article 20(1) applies where an accused has committed an "offence" and has been subjected to a "penalty". The respondent has not been held guilty of any offence, nor has been subjected to any penalty. He has merely been restrained from associating with any corporate body in accessing the securities market and has also been prohibited from buying, selling or dealing in securities for a specified period. "Offence" is an act of omission or commission which is punishable by any law for the time being in force. Protection under Article 20(1) of the Constitution is not available to the respondent. (Paras 24, 25, 29 and 32). SEBI v. Ajay Agarwal, (2010) 3 SCC 765.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : G.S. Singhvi and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision : 25-2-2010]

Rao Shiv Bahadur Singh v. State of Vindhya Pradesh, AIR 1953 SC 394: 1953 Cri LJ 1480; State of W.B. v. S.K. Ghosh, AIR 1963 SC 255: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 252; Director of Enforcement v. MCTM Corpn. (P) Ltd., (1996) 2 SCC 471: 1996 SCC (Cri) 344, relied on

Govind Das v. ITO, (1976) 1 SCC 906: 1976 SCC (Tax) 133, distinguished on facts

[29] — S. 2(o) — "Police officer" — Taking of fingerprints by Head Constables never questioned before the trial court nor the Head Constables cross-examined — Accused persons admitting their fingerprints — Held, High Court erred in holding that fingerprints of accused persons on disputed documents not established on ground that such fingerprints had not been taken by 'police officer' as defined in S. 2(b) of the 1920 Act — Taking of fingerprints is a ministerial act for establishing identity of accused persons — Identification of Prisoners Act, 1920 — S. 2(b). State of T.N. v. T. Thulasingam, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 405: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1504: AIR 1995 SC 1314.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-1994]

— S. 2(p) See Ss. 9(6), 194, 327 and 2(p)

— S. 2(q) See Ss. 302, 205 and 2(q)

See also Ss. 303 and 2(q)

See also Ss. 303 and 2(q), 205, 273

[30] — S. 2(q) — Pleader — A private person cannot of right seek to represent any party — He can do so only on obtaining prior permission of the court on motion by the party he seeks to represent — The court may grant or withhold permission — Considerations before the court pointed out — Permission may be cancelled if the private person is found unworthy or reprehensible. Harishankar Rastogi v. Girdhari Sharma, (1978) 2 SCC 165: 1978 SCC (Cri) 168: AIR 1978 SC 1019: 1978 Cri LJ 778: (1978) 4 ALR 353.

Bench Strength 1. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, J. [Date of decision: 13-3-1978]

— S. 2(u) See S. 24 and S. 2(u)

See also Ss. 24(1), 2(u) and 378

See also Ss. 406, 24, 2(u) and 7, 8 & 9

See also Ss. 406, 432(7), 385(1), 225, 2(u), 24 and 378

— S. 2(w) See Ss. 167(5), 173(2), 2(x) and (w)

See also Ss. 313(1)(b) proviso and 2(w) & (x), 205(1) and 317

— S. 2(x) See Ss. 167(5), 173(2), 2(x) and (w)

See also Ss. 313(1)(b) proviso and 2(w) & (x), 205(1) and 317

— S. 2(y) See Ss. 197 and 2(y)

See also Ss. 256, 249, 2(y) and Ch. XV

[31] — S. 2(y) — Words defined in IPC — Abetment — Validity of S. 3(3) POTA, 2002 — Mens rea — Provision in S. 3(3) POTA, 2002 for punishment of a person who "abets", held, does not exclude the element of mens rea for constituting an offence thereunder — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 107 — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — Ss. 3(3) and 2(1)(i) & (a)

In the instant petitions filed under Article 32, the petitioners challenged the constitutionality of various provisions of the Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 (for short "POTA"). They contended that:

* * *

Section 3(3) of POTA did not include the requirement of mens rea in the offence of "abetment" and was therefore prone to misuse,

* * *

Dismissing the petitions,

Held :

Under POTA the word "abets" is not defined at all. In view of Sections 2(1)(i) and 2(1)(a) thereof, and Section 2(y) CrPC, the definition of "abets" as appears in IPC will apply in a case under POTA. "Mens rea" element is a sine qua non for offences under IPC. Therefore, contention (iii) of the petitioners stands rejected. (Para 25). People's Union for Civil Liberties v. Union of India, (2004) 9 SCC 580: AIR 2004 SC 456.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2003]

[32] — S. 2(y) — "Harbours" — Meaning of — Definition given in IPC cannot be adopted — It must be understood in its ordinary meaning as for penal provisions — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 52-A, 136, 312 and 157 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — Ss. 3(4) and 2(1)(i)

There are two hurdles in the way to adopt the IPC definition of the word "harbour" for TADA. First is that TADA permits reliance to be made only on the definitions included in the Procedure Code and not on the definitions in the IPC. Second is, the word "harbour" as such has not been used in the Procedure Code and hence the question of side-stepping to Penal Code definitions does not arise.

The word "harbours" used in TADA must be understood in its ordinary meaning as for penal provisions. In Black's Law Dictionary its meaning is shown as "to afford lodging to, to shelter, or to give a refuge to". The celebrated lexicographer has given the meaning of the word harbour as "receiving clandestinely and without lawful authority a person for the purpose of so concealing him that another having a right to the lawful custody of such person shall be deprived of the same". It is, therefore, reasonable to attribute a mental element (such as knowledge that the harboured person was involved in a terrorist act) as indispensable to make it a penal act. That apart, there is nothing in the Act, either expressly or even by implication, to indicate that mens rea has been excluded from the offence under Section 3(4) of TADA.

It is a settled legal position that unless the statute clearly excludes mens rea in the commission of an offence the same must be treated as essential ingredient of the criminal act to become punishable.

If Section 3(4) is understood as imposing harsh punishment on a person who gives shelter to a terrorist without knowing that he was a terrorist, such an understanding would lead to calamitous consequences. Many an innocent person, habituated to offer hospitality to friends and relatives or disposed to zeal of charity, giving accommodation and shelter to others without knowing that their guests were involved in terrorist acts, would then be exposed to incarceration for a long period. Kalpnath Rai v. State, (1997) 8 SCC 732: AIR 1998 SC 201.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-1997]

[33] — S. 2(y) — Definition — "Public servant" — Government company whether public servant — Held, the term "public servant" is not defined in CrPC — S. 2(y) CrPC provides that words and expressions used but not defined in CrPC will have the meaning assigned to them under the Penal Code, 1860 — A government company is not a "public servant", but every employee of the company is a "public servant"

The term "public servant" is not defined in the Code of Criminal Procedure. However, Section 2(y) CrPC provides that words and expressions used but not defined in the Code will have the meaning assigned to them under the Penal Code, 1860. Having regard to the aforesaid definition, it is clear that the appellant which is a government company is not a "public servant", but every employee of the appellant is a "public servant". (Para 11). National Small Industries Corpn. Ltd. v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2009) 1 SCC 407.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2008]

— S. 3 See Ss. 164(1), 167, 3, 6, 20(1) and (4)
See also Ss. 167 and 3

— S. 3(4)(a) See Ss. 11(1) proviso, 4(1) & (2), 3(4)(a), 26 and 245

— S. 4 See also S. 5, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 961 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 4 See Ss. 5 and 4
See also Ss. 156(3), 190(1), 200 and 4
See also Ss. 167(2) proviso, 437 and 4
See also Ss. 193, 4, 5 and 2(g)
See also Ss. 320 and 4
See also Ss. 321, 4 and 5
See also Ss. 468(2), 470(3) and 4

[34] — Ss. 4, 6 and 7 — "Jurisdiction" — Meaning of — CPC, 1908 — S. 9

Jurisdiction means the authority or power to entertain, hear and decide a case and to do justice in the case and determine the controversy. In absence of jurisdiction the court has no power to hear and decide the matter and the order passed by it would be a nullity. (Para 10). Harpal Singh v. State of Punjab, (2007) 13 SCC 387: AIR 2008 SC 743.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2007]

Black's Law Dictionary; Words and Phrases — Legally defined, 3rd Edn.; P. Ramanatha Aiyar: Law Lexicon, 2nd Edn., relied on

[35] — S. 4 — 'Otherwise dealt with' — Means all aspects such as investigation, inquiry, trial and other dealing with the offence

Under S. 4 CrPC the provisions of the CrPC are applicable where an offence under the Indian Penal Code or under any other law is being inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with. From the words "otherwise dealt with" it does not necessarily mean something which is not included in the investigation, inquiry or trial and the word "otherwise" points to the fact that the expression "dealt with" is all comprehensive and that investigation, inquiry and trial are some of the aspects dealing with the offence. State of Punjab v. Balbir Singh, (1994) 3 SCC 299: 1994 SCC (Cri) 634: AIR 1994 SC 1872: (1994) 1 Crimes 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1994]

[36] — S. 4 — Civil suit — Pendency of criminal proceedings relating to the same matter is no bar to — So also criminal matters are rarely stayed and only under compelling circumstances — Criminal Procedure Code, 1908 — S. 9. State of Rajasthan v. Kalyan Sundaram Cement Industries Ltd., (1996) 3 SCC 87.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-1996]

[37] — S. 4 — Applicability of Criminal Procedure Code

In the absence of a specific provision made in the statute indicating that offences will have to be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to that statute, the same will have to be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the Code of Criminal Procedure. In other words, Code of Criminal Procedure is the parent statute which provides for investigation, inquiring into and trial of cases by criminal courts of various designations. A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277: AIR 1984 SC 718: 1984 Cri LJ 647: 1984 Bom LR 228.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: D.A. Desai, R.S. Pathak, O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-1984]

[38] — S. 4 — Criminal Court's jurisdiction in matrimonial offences — Offence committed in the capacity of husband or wife, if made punishable under Penal Code, would be liable to criminal prosecution — Existence of alternate civil remedy would not bar criminal jurisdiction — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 40

The mere factum of the husband and wife living together does not entitle either of them to commit a breach of criminal law and if one does then he/she will be liable for all the consequences of such breach. In the case of stridhan property also, the title of which always remains with the wife, if the husband or any other member of his family who are in possession of such property, dishonestly misappropriate or refuse to return the same, they will be liable to punishment for the offence of criminal breach of trust under Ss. 405 and 406, IPC. Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180: AIR 1985 SC 628: 1985 Cri LJ 817.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali[1], A. Varadarajan[2] and Sabyasachi Mukharji, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1985]

[39] — S. 4 — Criminal court's jurisdiction when ousted

Normally under the Criminal Procedure Code, the criminal courts of the country have the jurisdiction and the ouster of the ordinary criminal court in respect of a crime can only be inferred if that is the irresistible conclusion flowing from necessary implication of the new Act. State of M.P. v. Rameshwar Rathod, (1990) 4 SCC 21: 1990 SCC (Cri) 522: AIR 1990 SC 1849: 1990 Cri LJ 1756.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Sabyasachi Mukharji, C.J. and K.N. Saikia, J. [Date of decision: 10-7-1990]

[40] — S. 4 — Trial of non-IPC offences — Jurisdiction of a court of general jurisdiction in respect of — Held, can be excluded by setting up of a court of limited jurisdiction in respect of the limited field

The jurisdiction of the criminal courts under Section 4 CrPC is comprehensive and exhaustive. To the extent that no valid machinery is set up under any other law for trial of any particular case, the jurisdiction of the ordinary criminal court cannot be said to have been excluded. Exclusion of jurisdiction of a court of general jurisdiction can be brought about only by setting up of a court of limited jurisdiction in respect of the limited field provided that the vesting and the exercise of that limited jurisdiction is clear and operative. Thus, where there is no valid machinery for the exercise of jurisdiction in a specific case, the exercise of jurisdiction by the Judicial Magistrates or the Metropolitan Magistrates, as the case may be, is not excluded. The law and procedure for trial of cases under the Indian Penal Code and those under other statutes, according to Section 4 CrPC, is not different except that in the cases of offences under other laws, the procedure laid down by the CrPC is subject to the provisions of the relevant enactment for the time being in force for regulating the manner of trial of offences under that enactment. Attiq-Ur-Rehman v. MCD, (1996) 3 SCC 37: 1996 SCC (Cri) 457: AIR 1996 SC 956.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-2-1996]

[41] — S. 4 — Trial under PC Act, 1988 — Provisions of CrPC — Applicability of — Held, applicable subject to certain modifications as provided in S. 22 PC Act, 1988 unless the application of any provision of the Code is excluded either expressly or by necessary implication — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — S. 22 (Para 12). Vivek Gupta v. CBI, (2003) 8 SCC 628.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-2003]

[42] — S. 4 — Procedure to be followed under — Procedure for inquiry, investigation and trial prescribed under CrPC to be followed — Chartered Accountants Act, 1949 — Ss. 24, 24-A and 26

Except the provision contained in Section 28 against the prosecution of a person, who is alleged to have acted in contravention of sub-section (1) of Sections 24, 24-A, 25 or 26 otherwise than on a complaint made by or under the order of the Council or the Central Government, the Act does not specify the procedure to be followed for punishing such person. In the absence of any such provision, the procedure prescribed in CrPC has to be followed for inquiry, investigation and trial of the complaint which may be filed for contravention of any of the provisions contained in Chapter VII of the Act, Section 4 CrPC. (Para 41). Institute of Chartered Accountants of India v. Vimal Kumar Surana, (2011) 1 SCC 534.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2010]

[43] — Ss. 4, 5 and 14 — Jurisdiction of ordinary criminal court to take cognizance and try offences under Delhi Municipal Corporation Act where no court of Municipal Magistrate is constituted and there is no notification conferring powers of Municipal Magistrate on such criminal court — Held, not barred — But once such Municipal Magistrates are appointed they alone would have jurisdiction to try offences under the Delhi Municipal Corporation Act — Delhi Municipal Corporation Act, 1957 (66 of 1957) — Ss. 469, 470, 466(a), 467 and 332/461

In the absence of establishment of the Courts of Municipal Magistrate under Section 469 of the Act, the Magistrates of the First Class including Metropolitan Magistrates are competent to try offences punishable under the Act, rules, regulations or bye-laws made thereunder.

The Government has an obligation under Section 469 of the Act to appoint Municipal Magistrates for trial of offences under the Act, rules, regulations or bye-laws made thereunder. The use of the word 'may' in Section 469 of the Act only indicates that the Government has the discretion to appoint one or more Municipal Magistrates but it certainly does not relieve the Government of its obligation to appoint Municipal Magistrates and once such Municipal Magistrates are appointed, they alone would have the jurisdiction to try offences under the Act as per the mandate of Section 470 of the Act. The bar under Section 470 of the Act becomes operative only when a Municipal Magistrate has been appointed for trial of offences under the Act. The jurisdiction of the criminal courts under Section 4 CrPC is comprehensive and exhaustive. To the extent that no valid machinery is set up under any other law for trial of any particular case, the jurisdiction of the ordinary criminal court cannot be said to have been excluded. Exclusion of jurisdiction of a court of general jurisdiction can be brought about only by setting up of a court of limited jurisdiction in respect of the limited field provided that the vesting and the exercise of that limited jurisdiction is clear and operative. Thus, where there is no valid machinery for the exercise of jurisdiction in a specific case, the exercise of jurisdiction by the Judicial Magistrates or the Metropolitan Magistrates, as the case may be, is not excluded. The law and procedure for trial of cases under the Indian Penal Code and those under other statutes, according to Section 4 CrPC, is not different except that in the cases of offences under other laws, the procedure laid down by the CrPC is subject to the provisions of the relevant enactment for the time being in force for regulating the manner of trial of offences under that enactment.

In the absence of courts of special jurisdiction i.e. Municipal Magistrates to be appointed under Section 469 of the Act, a Judicial Magistrate of the First Class or a Metropolitan Magistrate, as the case may be, shall have the jurisdiction and powers to try the offences under the Municipal Act in accordance with the procedure envisaged by Section 467 of the Act and in accordance with the limitation and the time prescribed for initiation of the criminal proceedings under Section 471 of the Act. This interpretation is in accord with the position that every offence committed under the Indian Penal Code or under any other law for the time being in force must be tried and an accused cannot be permitted to raise any objection with regard to the forum for trial of the offence, where the specific forum has not been constituted under the Act because the law does not contemplate an offence, to go untried. Where, no court of a Municipal Magistrate has been constituted under Section 469 of the Act and no notification has also been issued conferring the powers of a Municipal Magistrate on a particular Judicial Magistrate of the First Class or a Metropolitan Magistrate, as the case may be, the jurisdiction of an ordinary criminal court to take cognizance of the offences committed under the Act, rules, regulations or bye-laws made thereunder is exercisable by the courts of general jurisdiction established to try offences under the Indian Penal Code as well as the offences under any other law. Attiq-Ur-Rehman v. MCD, (1996) 3 SCC 37: 1996 SCC (Cri) 457: AIR 1996 SC 956.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-2-1996]

[Ed.: See also State of M.P. v. Rameshwar Rathod, (1990) 4 SCC 21: 1990 SCC (Cri) 522 and Municipal Corpn. v. Commr. of Patiala Division, (1995) 1 SCC 304.]

[44] — Ss. 4 and 5 — Scope of R. 16.38, Punjab Police Rules, 1934 — Held, mandatorily applicable to departmental proceedings alone — Does not override provisions of CrPC — Criminal prosecutions under CrPC for offences under Penal Code or Prevention of Corruption Act, therefore, not vitiated for non-compliance with R. 16.38 — Police Act, 1861 — Ss. 7 and 12 — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 161 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — S. 5 — Punjab Police Rules, 1934, R. 16.38

Rule 16.38 only mandates the investigation of cases pertaining to departmental enquiries and the holding of departmental enquiries in accordance with the procedure prescribed thereunder. The rule does not override the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code in terms of Ss. 4 and 5 of the Code. The rule read in conjunction with the Police Act does not prescribe a different procedure for the investigation and prosecution of offences committed by police officers under the IPC or other Acts in connection with their relations with the public. Purpose underlying the rule is to enable the District Magistrate and the District Superintendent of Police to exercise personal control and supervision over the complaints received against members of the police force in the performance of their duties and enable the District Magistrate to ensure that the complaint is not a baseless or mala fide one and secondly to determine whether the complaint requires investigation by a police officer or by a selected magistrate. The procedure envisaged by the rule is for effective check being exercised against victimisation of efficient and honest police officers on the one hand and favouritism being shown to the delinquent police officers on the other. These rules were not intended to replace and certainly cannot override the provisions of the CrPC. State of Punjab v. Raj Kumar, (1988) 1 SCC 701: 1988 SCC (L&S) 441: 1988 SCC (Cri) 243: AIR 1988 SC 805.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1988]

Raj Kumar, A.S.I. v. State of Punjab, (1976) 4 CLR (P&H) 39, reversed

State of Punjab v. Charan Singh, (1981) 2 SCC 197: 1981 SCC (Cri) 407, followed

Hoshiar Singh v. State, 1965 PLR 438 (Pun), approved

Raj Kumar v. State of Punjab, 1976 Lab IC 1519 (P&H), overruled

[45] — Ss. 4 and 181(4) — S. 4(2), PC Act, 1988, held, not subject to provisions of CrPC — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — S. 4(2)

Absence of a non obstante clause linked with Section 4(2) of the PC Act does not lead to a conclusion that the sub-section is subject to the provisions CrPC. A reading of Section 4(2) of the Code (not the PC Act) gives the definite indication that the legal position is the other way round. If the PC Act has stipulated any place for trial of the offence under that Act the provisions of the Code would stand displaced to that extent in regard to the place of trial. Therefore, when the offence is under Section 13(1)(c) or Section 13(1)(d) of the PC Act the sole determinative factor regarding the court having jurisdiction is the place where the offence was committed. (Paras 41 and 42). CBI v. Braj Bhushan Prasad, (2001) 9 SCC 432: AIR 2001 SC 4014.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, S.S.M. Quadri and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-2001]

Banwarilal Jhunjhunwalla v. Union of India, AIR 1959 Ker 311, explained and approved

Dhaneshwar Narain Saxena v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 195: (1962) 3 SCR 259: (1962) 1 Cri LJ 203; M. Narayanan Nambiar v. State of Kerala, AIR 1963 SC 1116: 1963 Supp (2) SCR 724: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 186; State of Gujarat v. Manshankar Prabhashankar Dwivedi, (1972) 2 SCC 392: 1972 SCC (Cri) 728; Major S.K. Kale v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 2 SCC 394: 1977 SCC (Cri) 356; Union of India v. Maj. I.C. Lala, (1973) 2 SCC 72: 1973 SCC (Cri) 738; K. Bhaskaran v. Sankaran Vaidhyan Balan, (1999) 7 SCC 510: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1284; Purushottamdas Dalmia v. State of W.B., AIR 1961 SC 1589: (1962) 2 SCR 101: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 728; L.N. Mukherjee v. State of Madras, AIR 1961 SC 1601: (1962) 2 SCR 116: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 736; Banwarilal Jhunjhunwala v. Union of India, AIR 1963 SC 1620: 1963 Supp (2) SCR 338: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 529, distinguished [46] — Ss. 4 and 188 — Even if offence is committed by a citizen of India outside the country the same is subject to the jurisdiction of courts of India (Para 23). A.V. Mohan Rao v. M. Kishan Rao, (2002) 6 SCC 174: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1281: AIR 2002 SC 2653: (2002) 111 Comp Cas 390.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-7-2002]

[47] — Ss. 4 and 439 — S. 37 of Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 being a special enactment, general provisions of S. 439 CrPC have to be read subject to S. 37 in view of S. 4 CrPC. Narcotics Control Bureau v. Kishan Lal, (1991) 1 SCC 705: 1991 SCC (Cri) 265: AIR 1991 SC 558: (1991) 1 KLT 547: (1991) 52 ELT 328: 1991 Cri LJ 654.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-1-1991]

[48] — Ss. 4 and 482 — Quashing of FIR — Complaint regarding offences under W.B. Sales Tax Act as well as under IPC — FIR registered in accordance with the Code — Quashed by High Court on ground that investigation on the basis of complaint had to be conducted under the Sales Tax Act — Applicability of S. 4(2) of the Code — Quashing of FIR whether justified — Abuse of process of court — All offences under IPC as well as under any other law have to be investigated, inquired into, tried or otherwise dealt with in accordance with the provisions of the Code — But in case of offence under the other law, the investigation, inquiry etc. shall be subject to any specific or contrary provisions contained in the enactment under which the offence is investigated, inquired into, tried or otherwise dealt with — S. 7 of the Act does not enjoin that the investigation has to be conducted only by the Bureau of Investigation constituted thereunder in respect of alleged tax evasion or connected malpractices — Offence under S. 88(6) of the Act is supplemental to any other penalty provided by law for the time being in force — Where during the course of a discreet investigation Bureau of Investigation finding that apart from offences under S. 88(1), (6), (7) of the Act those under IPC were also involved against the respondent, held, Bureau was justified in passing over the investigation to regular police — When pursuant thereto police registered FIR, High Court was not justified in quashing the FIR on the ground that under the Act only the Bureau could conduct the investigation and police had no such power — W.B. Sales Tax Act, 1994 — Ss. 88(1), (6) & (7) and 7 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 468, 471 and 420

When the Bureau of Investigation formed by the Government of West Bengal under the Sales Tax Act, got secret information about the fraud played by the respondent they conducted some discreet investigation and then it was revealed to them that the respondent had committed forgery and impersonation to defraud the Government of a huge sales tax amount. A complaint was presented by the Assistant Commissioner of Commercial Taxes to the Deputy Superintendent of Police who was then attached to the Bureau of Investigation. The said Deputy Superintendent, in turn, forwarded the complaint to the officer in charge of the police station, with a request to "start a case under Sections 403, 409, 465, 468, 471, 419, 420 read with Section 120-B of the Indian Penal Code and Sections 88(1)(b), (6) and (7) of the Sales Tax Act, 1994 treating the complaint as FIR". Pursuant thereto the Station House Officer of the police station registered the FIR. The respondent, getting scent of the same moved the City Civil Court, Calcutta for anticipatory bail but that was rejected. He then moved the High Court invoking its revisional and inherent jurisdiction for quashing the FIR and on such motion being made further investigation was stayed by the High Court. Finally the FIR was quashed. The High Court expressed the opinion that under the Sales Tax Act only a Bureau of Investigation constituted by the State Government can conduct the investigation or hold inquiry into any case of alleged or suspected evasion of tax as well as malpractices connected therewith, and hence no police officer can investigate into the offences under the Indian Penal Code or any other Act read with offences committed under Section 88 of the Sales Tax Act. Allowing the State's appeal,

Held :

So far as the offences under the Indian Penal Code are concerned sub-section (1) of Section 4 CrPC mandates that they can be investigated into and tried according to the provisions of the Code. As regards sub-section (2) of Section 4 which concern offences "under any other law", it is again the rule that such offences shall also be investigated and tried according to the provisions of the Code itself, but with a rider that such investigation or trial shall be subject to the regulation regarding "the manner or place of" such investigation or trial prescribed in any enactment for the time being in force. (Para 11)

The offence under sub-section (6) of Section 88 of the W.B. Sales Tax Act is specifically created as supplemental to any other penalty provided by any law for the time being in force. This means, offences falling under the Indian Penal Code and committed by a person while committing the offence contemplated in sub-section (6) cannot get displaced for the sole reason that the accused has committed the offence falling under sub-section (6) of Section 88. Section 7 of the Act makes it clear that creation of a Bureau of Investigation is for the purpose of discharging the function envisaged in sub-section (3) which, of course, includes investigation also. But there is nothing in Section 7 that such investigation can be carried on "only" by the Bureau and not any other investigating agency. It is open to the Bureau to get the assistance of any other legally-constituted investigating agency for effectively inquiring into all the ramifications of the offence. As in this case if offences falling under the Indian Penal Code or any other enactment are also detected during the course of investigation conducted by the Bureau there is no inhibition to pass over the investigation to the regular police. (Paras 16 and 17)

That apart, how could the FIR be quashed if the investigating agency should have been different? By lodging FIR alone no investigation is conducted by the police. It is the first step towards starting investigation by the police. If the High Court was of the opinion that investigation had to be conducted by the Bureau then also there was no need to quash the FIR. As offences under the Indian Penal Code are also involved, efficacious investigation can be conducted by entrusting it to the police investigating agency. The inherent powers of the High Court as recognised in Section 482 of the Code are reserved to be used "to give effect to any orders under the Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice". The High Court overlooked the reality that by quashing the FIR it did not achieve any one of the above factors. On the contrary, the result of quashing the FIR had rendered the allegations of offences made against a person to remain consigned in stupor perennially. Hence, instead of achieving the ends of criminal justice, the impugned order would achieve the reverse of it. (Para 19). State of W.B. v. Narayan K. Patodia, (2000) 4 SCC 447: 2000 SCC (Cri) 812: AIR 2000 SC 1405: 2000 Cri LJ 1811: (2000) 120 STC 370.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-2000]

Mirza Iqbal Hussain v. State of U.P., (1982) 3 SCC 516: 1983 SCC (Cri) 111; A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277; Gangula Ashok v. State of A.P., (2000) 2 SCC 504, relied on

[49] — S. 4 and Chapters VII, XIII & XXXIV — Validity of S. 129-A, MV Act, 1939 — Held, valid being intra vires Art. 19(1)(g) — S. 129-A must be read subject to Ss. 123(1), 127-B, 130 and 132, MV Act as also in conjunction with the relevant provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code — Procedural steps to be taken by police or appropriate person while acting under S. 129-A and power of criminal court when a complaint is laid before it indicated — Motor Vehicles Act, 1939 — S. 129-A — Constitution of India — Art. 19(1)(g)

Section 129-A, MV Act does not infringe Art. 19(1)(g).

Whenever an offence is committed under a law other than the Penal Code which does not itself regulate the procedure to be followed, the provisions of CrPC have to be applied for further action by weaving into a single texture the provisions of CrPC and the special law. In view of S. 4(2) CrPC, therefore, S. 129-A, MV Act has to be read in conjunction with the provisions of the Code, especially Chapters VII, XIII and XXXIV, and so read there is no lacuna in regard to the proper custody and disposal of the motor vehicles seized under S. 129-A.

A pre-condition for exercise of power of seizure and detention of the vehicle under S. 129-A is that the police officer or the authorised person must have reason to believe that one or the other of the offences punishable under S. 123, MV Act has been or is being committed. Whenever property involved in the commission of an offence is seized, the seizure is generally expected to serve a manifold purpose such as to prevent repetition of the offence, to use the thing seized as material evidence in the prosecution to preserve the property so as to enable the court to pass appropriate orders for its disposal by way of destruction, confiscation, or delivery to any person claiming to be entitled to possession thereof or otherwise. There is no reason to assume that the seizure under S. 129-A is any different and is not to serve any of these purposes or any purpose at all.

The next step would be to consider the question whether the offence should be compounded as provided by S. 127-B, MV Act and any notification issued by the Government in that behalf. Thereafter, the police officer or the appropriate person would lay a complaint before the competent court, subject to the overriding provision of S. 132, MV Act. The court before which the complaint may be laid has to be determined in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XIII of the Code, and the case has to be tried in accordance with the provisions of the Code, subject to the special provision under S. 130 of the Act. The provisions of Chapter XXXIV of the Code are also attracted in dealing with offences under the Act.

The court thus has the power at the conclusion of the case to make appropriate orders regarding the disposal of the motor vehicle regarding which an offence appears to have been committed. A motor vehicle regarding whose temporary custody arrangements have been made under S. 129-A must be considered to have been produced before the criminal court as soon as a complaint is filed. In any case, the court has ample power under Chapter VII of the Code, S. 91 in particular, to compel the production of the vehicle before the court. The custody of the vehicle in the hands of the police officer or the authorised person is but temporary and he is therefore, obliged to act and take all further steps in the matter with all expedition. If, instead of releasing the vehicle on the offence being compounded, he lays a complaint before the court, the court acquires instant jurisdiction over the vehicle to pass suitable orders. In the remote event of the police officer or the authorised person not taking any further action after seizing and detaining the vehicle, the owner of the vehicle has remedy under Art. 226, but one does not have to presume that the police officer or the authorised person may not act according to law.

In the very nature of things when property is seized and not recovered during a search, it is not possible to comply with the provisions of sub-sections (4) and (5) of S. 100 of the Code. In the case of a seizure under the Act, there is no provision for preparing a list of the things seized in the course of the seizure for, all those things are seized not separately but as part of the vehicle itself. But it is in the interests of the very officer or person seizing the vehicle, so that they may not be open to any charge being laid against them later, that such officer or person takes care to prepare a list of detachable things which are ordinarily not part of the vehicle and give a copy of the list to the person incharge of the vehicle at the time of the seizure. Transport Commr. v. S. Sardar Ali, Bus Owner, (1983) 4 SCC 245: 1983 SCC (Cri) 827: AIR 1983 SC 1225: 1983 Cri LJ 1506.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-1983]

[50] — S. 4 and Ch. XV (Ss. 200 to 203) — Scope and applicability — Offences under both IPC and TOHO — Appropriate investigating agency and procedure, held, would be those under TOHO — Transplantation of Human Organs Act, 1994, Ss. 13 and 22

In a situation of this nature, CBI could carry out investigations in exercise of its authorisation under Section 13(3)(iv) TOHO. Nobody else could do it. The officer in charge of the police station was not authorised by the appropriate Government to deal with the matter in relation to TOHO; but, CBI was authorised. The FIR disclosed not only commission of an offence under TOHO but also under IPC. In that view of the matter, the investigation of the said complaint was handed over to CBI. If a special statute lays down procedures, the ones laid down under the general statutes shall not be followed. TOHO being a special Act the same would prevail over the provisions of CrPC. (Paras 20 to 23, 17, 26 and 27)

TOHO being a special statute, Section 4 CrPC, which ordinarily would be applicable for investigation into a cognizable offence or the other provisions, may not be applicable. Section 4 provides for investigation, inquiry, trial, etc. Section 4(2), however, specifically provides that offences under any other law shall be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the same provisions, but subject to any enactment for the time being in force regulating the manner or place of investigating, inquiring into, tried or otherwise dealing with such offences. (Para 22)

If a complaint petition is filed, the procedure laid down under Chapter XV (Sections 200 to 204) CrPC can be taken recourse to despite the fact that the same has been filed after full investigation and upon obtaining the remand of the accused from time to time by reason of orders passed by a competent Magistrate. (Para 35)

TOHO was enacted to provide for the regulation of removal, storage and transplantation of human organs for therapeutic purposes and for the prevention of commercial dealings in human organs and for matters connected therewith or incidental thereto. TOHO is a special Act. It deals with the subjects mentioned therein viz. offences relating to removal of human organs, etc. Having regard to the importance of the subject only, enactment of the said regulatory statute was imperative. Ordinarily, any person can set the criminal law in motion. Parliament and the State Legislatures, however, keeping in view the sensitivity and/or importance of the subject, have carved out specific areas where violations of any of the provisions of a special statute like TOHO can be dealt with only by the authorities specified therein. (Paras 17, 19 and 21). Jeewan Kumar Raut v. CBI, (2009) 7 SCC 526: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 475: (2009) 80 AIC 243 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

[51] — Ss. 4 to 6 — Hierarchy of courts provided under the Act to prevail excluding those provided under S. 6, CrPC — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — Ss. 9(1), 19(1) and 20(6)

There is a total departure from different classes of criminal courts enumerated in S. 6 of the Code and a new hierarchy of courts is sought to be established by providing for a direct appeal to the Supreme Court from any judgment or order of a Designated Court, not being an interlocutory order, and substituting the Supreme Court for the High Court by S. 20(6) in the matter of confirmation of a death sentence passed by a Designated Court. Usmanbhai Dawoodbhai Memon v. State of Gujarat, (1988) 2 SCC 271: 1988 SCC (Cri) 318: AIR 1988 SC 922.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-1988]

— S. 4(1) See Ss. 11(1) proviso, 4(1) & (2), 3(4)(a), 26 and 245

— S. 4(2) See Ss. 11(1) proviso, 4(1) & (2), 3(4)(a), 26 and 245

See also Ss. 29(2), 5, 4(2), 325(1) and 357

See also Ss. 167, 2(h), 4(2), 26(b) and Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176)

See also Ss. 167(1), 4(2), 5 and 26(b)

See also Ss. 193, 4(2), 5, 2(g) and 6(i)

[52] — S. 4(2) — Offences punishable under the Wild Life (Protection) Act, 1972 can be investigated by CBI on being empowered by Central Govt. by issuing notification under Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 — S. 50 of the 1972 does not exclude a police officer from investigating the offences under the Act — Special procedure provided under the Act is contrary to the provisions contained in CrPC and as such the same would prevail in view of S. 4(2) CrPC — But that does not mean that rest of the provisions of CrPC are excluded — Wild Life (Protection) Act, 1972 — Ss. 50, 55, 54 and 51

The appellant, a resident of Delhi, was arrested in connection with the offence punishable under Sections 9, 39(3), 44, 49, 50, 51, 57 and 58 of the Wild Life (Protection) Act. In exercise of the powers conferred by Section 3 of the Act, notification dated 24-1-1996 was issued by the Central Government specifying that offences punishable under Section 51 of the Act which could be investigated by Delhi Special Police Establishment. Thereafter, the State of U.P. issued a notification as required under Section 6 of the Delhi Police Establishment Act according consent to the extension of powers and jurisdiction of the members of Delhi Special Police Establishment to investigate the offences. The Central Government issued a notification dated 21-3-2000 under Section 5 read with Section 6 of the Act empowering CBI to investigate the case against the appellants under the Wild Life Act and the Indian Penal Code. The order passed by the Central Government transferring the investigation to Delhi Special Police Establishment was challenged by filing writ petition before the Allahabad High Court with the prayer that the appellant be released forthwith. The High Court rejected the petition. Before the Supreme Court it was contended that the Wild Life Act is a special law as understood under Section 5 CrPC and it contains comprehensive provisions for investigation, inquiry, search, seizure, compounding of offences, trial and punishment and, therefore, the Police Force under the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act was not empowered to investigate the case. The short question involved in this appeal was whether Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) was authorised to investigate an offence, which is punishable under the Wild Life (Protection) Act, 1972 in view of the contention that the said Act is a self-contained code.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

There is no substance in the contention that Section 50 of the Wild Life Act is a complete code and, therefore, CBI would have no jurisdiction to investigate the offences under the said Act. The scheme of Section 50 of the Wild Life Act makes it abundantly clear that a police officer is also empowered to investigate the offences and search and seize the offending articles. For trial of offences, the Code of Criminal Procedure is required to be followed and for that there is no other specific provision to the contrary. The special procedure prescribed is limited to taking cognizance of the offence as well as powers are given to other officers mentioned in Section 50 for inspection, arrest, search and seizure as well as of recording statement. The power to compound offences is also conferred under Section 54. Section 51 provides for penalties which would indicate that certain offences are cognizable offences meaning thereby a police officer can arrest without warrant. The aforesaid specific provisions are contrary to the provisions contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure and that would prevail during the trial as provided under Section 4(2) CrPC. However, from this it cannot be said that operation of rest of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure is excluded. (Paras 15 and 14). Moti Lal v. Central Bureau of Investigation, (2002) 4 SCC 713: 2002 SCC (Cri) 889: AIR 2002 SC 1691: 2002 All LJ 1158.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-4-2002]

Central Bureau of Investigation v. State of Rajasthan, (1996) 9 SCC 735: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1090, distinguished

Moti Lal v. Central Bureau of Investigation, 2001 Cri LJ 2086 (All), affirmed

[53] — S. 4(2) — R. 16.38 of Punjab Police Rules, 1934 cannot override provisions of Criminal Procedure Code. State of Punjab v. Charan Singh, (1981) 2 SCC 197: 1981 SCC (Cri) 407: AIR 1981 SC 1007: 1981 Cri LJ 712: (1981) 1 SLR 355.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-2-1981]

[54] — Ss. 4(2) and 5 — Expression "subject to any enactment ... otherwise dealing with such offences" in S. 4(2) — Means in the absence of any contrary provision in any other law, provisions of the Code will apply — S. 5 does not nullify this effect of S. 4(2). Gangula Ashok v. State of A.P., (2000) 2 SCC 504: 2000 SCC (Cri) 488: AIR 2000 SC 740: 2000 Cri LJ 819: (2000) 1 KLT 609.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2000]

[55] — Ss. 4(2) and 5 — Procedure for trial under the Navy Act and not that under CrPC applies to the personnel serving in the Navy — Scope of review by High Court — High Court's power of judicial review under Art. 226, held, is not in the nature of power of appellate authority enabling reappreciation of evidence and, on the ground of insufficiency of evidence, to alter the conclusion reached by competent authorities in court-martial proceedings — Hence, in reappreciating the evidence and reaching the contrary conclusion that the complainant's evidence was not credible enough to hold the respondent guilty under S. 354 IPC, held, High Court overstepped its jurisdiction — More so when the statement of the complainant led to the inescapable conclusion of the guilt of the respondent — Navy Act, 1957 — Ss. 77(2), 93 and 163 — Army Act, 1950 — Air Force Act, 1950 — Constitution of India — Art. 226

The respondent was a Petty Officer (Telegraphist) in the Navy. Consequent to a complaint made by a lady N that her modesty had been outraged by the respondent, court-martial proceedings were initiated and in the said proceedings the respondent was found guilty of the charge under Section 354 of IPC and Section 77(2) of the Navy Act, 1957 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act") and was directed to be kept under imprisonment for the term of 24 calendar months and to be dismissed from the naval services. In a petition by the respondent under Section 163(1) of the Navy Act, the Chief of the Naval Staff reduced the term of imprisonment to 9 months but upheld the punishment of dismissal. This decision was confirmed by the Central Government. However, in a writ petition filed by the respondent, the Bombay High Court quashed the conviction and sentence on the ground of insufficiency of evidence. Allowing the appeal of the Union of India,

Held :

The defence personnel serving in the Army, Navy or Air Force when commit any offence are dealt with by the special provisions contained in the Army Act, 1950 or the Navy Act, 1957 or the Air Force Act, 1950 and not by the normal Criminal Procedure Code. The said Navy Act is a complete code by itself and prescribes the procedure to be followed in case it is decided that an officer should be tried by a court-martial. The Act also provides sufficient safeguard by way of further appeal to the Chief of the Staff and then ultimately to the Union Government. Therefore, ordinarily there should be a finality to the findings arrived at by the competent authority in the court-martial proceedings. The High Court's power under Article 226 to judicially review such findings is for a limited purpose of finding out whether there has been infraction of any mandatory provisions of the Act prescribing the procedure which has caused gross miscarriage of justice or for finding out that whether there has been violation of the principles of natural justice which vitiated the entire proceedings or that the authority exercising the jurisdiction had not been vested with jurisdiction under the Act. The said power of judicial review cannot be a power of an appellate authority permitting the High Court to reappreciate the evidence and in coming to a conclusion that the evidence is insufficient for the conclusion arrived at by the competent authorities in court-martial proceedings. At any rate it cannot be higher than the jurisdiction of the High Court exercised under Article 227 against an order of an inferior tribunal. Therefore, it has to be held that the High Court overstepped its jurisdiction in trying to reappreciate the evidence of N and in coming to the conclusion that her evidence was not credible enough to give a finding of guilt against the respondent of a charge under Section 354. Moreover, on facts it has to be held that the statement of N leads to an inescapable conclusion that the respondent has been rightly found by the authorities in the court-martial proceedings to have committed offence under Section 354. (Para 4). Union of India v. Himmat Singh Chahar, (1999) 4 SCC 521: 1999 SCC (Cri) 596: AIR 1999 SC 1980: 1999 Cri LJ 2894: (1999) 3 LLN 421.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-1999]

[56] — Ss. 4(2) and 452(1) — Court can order confiscation of the property seized from accused's possession, while convicting the accused under S. 5, Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947

Since the Prevention of Corruption Act does not provide for confiscation or prescribe any mode by which an order of confiscation may be made, power under S. 452(1), CrPC would be available to a court trying an offence under the Act by virtue of S. 4(2), CrPC. Such a court therefore, will have jurisdiction and power to make an order of confiscation of the property seized from the accused.

Since the appellant had been convicted under S. 5(1)(e) precisely for the reason that he was in possession of the fixed deposit receipts and cash sums, the order of confiscation in regard to those amounts cannot be said to have not been properly passed or passed without any application of mind. Mirza Iqbal Hussain v. State of U.P., (1982) 3 SCC 516: 1983 SCC (Cri) 111: AIR 1983 SC 60.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and O. Chinnappa Reddy, J. [Date of decision: 10-11-1982]

[57] — Ss. 4(2) r/w 190, 203 and 204 — Trade and Merchandise Marks Act, 1958 (43 of 1958) — Ss. 89, 78, 79 — Person competent to lodge complaint — Complaint alleging commission of offences under Ss. 78 and 79 of the Act and S. 420, Penal Code lodged by dealer and attorney of registered trade marks owner, held, competent — Magistrate cannot refuse to take cognizance of the offences and to issue process on the sole ground of incompetency of the dealer to file the complaint

On a combined reading of Ss. 4(2) and 190, CrPC it is clear that anyone can set the criminal law in motion by filing a complaint of facts constituting an offence before a Magistrate entitled to take cognizance under S. 190 and no court can decline to take cognizance on the sole ground that the complainant was not competent to file the complaint. But where any special statute prescribes offences and makes any special provision for taking cognizance of such offences under the statute, the complainant requesting the Magistrate to take cognizance of the offence must satisfy the eligibility criterion prescribed by the statute.

Section 89 does not prescribe any particular eligibility criterion on qualification for filing a complaint for contravention of Ss. 78 and 79 of the Act. Therefore, the Magistrate was in error in rejecting the complaint on the sole ground that the complainant was not entitled to file the complaint.

Even otherwise in the absence of a specific qualification, if the person complaining has a subsisting interest in the protection of the registered trade mark, his complaint cannot be rejected on the ground that he had no cause of action nor sufficient subsisting interest to file the complaint. In the present case the dealer and the constituted attorney of the owners of the registered trade marks had cause of action to file the complaint and therefore, the Magistrate erred in dismissing the complaint at the threshold. Vishwa Mitter v. O.P. Poddar, (1983) 4 SCC 701: 1984 SCC (Cri) 29: AIR 1984 SC 5.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and A.N. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-9-1983]

— S. 5 See also S. 1(2), Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 959 in Vol. 2

— S. 5 See Ss. 4 and 5

See also Ss. 4 to 6

See also Ss. 4, 5 and 14

See also Ss. 4(2) and 5

See also Ss. 27 and 5

See also Ss. 29(2), 5, 4(2), 325(1) and 357

See also Ss. 145, 144 and 5 & 482

See also Ss. 167(1), 4(2), 5, 26(b)

See also Ss. 193, 4, 5 and 2(g)

See also Ss. 193, 4(2), 5, 2(g) and 6(i)

See also Ss. 321, 4 and 5

See also Ss. 428 and 5

See also Ss. 428, 5 and 475, 2(h), (g)

See also Ss. 433-A and 5

See also Ss. 433-A, 433(a) and 5

[58] — Ss. 5 and 4 — Continuance of special or local law already in force — Held, Haryana Children Act, 1974 is protected by S. 5 — Hence an offence covered by the Act, even if committed after coming into force of the Code, would be tried under the Act and not the Code. Rohtas v. State of Haryana, (1979) 4 SCC 229: 1979 SCC (Cri) 963: AIR 1979 SC 1839: 1979 Cri LJ 1365.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-7-1979]

[59] — Ss. 5 and 41(1)(g) — Applicability of CrPC and S. 41(1)(g) in extradition cases — Primacy of Extradition Act, 1962, discussed — Extradition Act, 1962, S. 3 — Primacy of Extradition Act, 1962 over CrPC, 1973

The power is exercised by CBI or a police officer to arrest a person, although no warrant is issued in terms of Section 41(1)(g) CrPC. However, CBI website states that in case an action is taken under Section 41(1)(g), the matter must be immediately referred to the Interpol wing for onward transmission to the Government of India to take a decision or otherwise. In terms of the aforementioned provisions, sanction of the Central Government is contemplated. (Para 87)

Strictly construed in a case involving extradition, Section 41(1)(g) CrPC may not have any application. Section 41(1)(g) CrPC clearly contemplates the power of the police to arrest under "any law relating to extradition" thereby contemplating the exercise of powers subject to the provisions of the Extradition Act. Thus, the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure are subject to those in the Act. (Paras 88 and 89). Bhavesh Jayanti Lakhani v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 9 SCC 551.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[60] — S. 5 — Power of Assistant Commandant of CRPF to exercise powers of JM, First Class — Respondent Constable staying beyond the sanctioned period of leave — No intimation or request for extension of leave — Trial of respondent by Assistant Commandant exercising powers of Judicial Magistrate, First Class under notification issued by the Central Govt., held, proper — Sessions Court and the High Court erred in holding that Assistant Commandant had no jurisdiction to try the matter — Central Reserve Police Force Act, 1949 — Ss. 10(m) and 16(2)

The respondent, who was a Constable (sweeper) in the IIIrd Battalion, ITBP, Nahan, did not join duty after expiry of the leave granted to him. There was no intimation to the competent authority or request for extension of leave. Therefore, a complaint was lodged against him by the authorities concerned. The Assistant Commandant exercising powers of Judicial Magistrate, First Class in terms of Section 10(m) of the CRPF Act, 1949 (in short "the Act"), issued a notice to the respondent under Section 251 CrPC and after trial found him guilty and sentenced him to undergo imprisonment for three months. The respondent filed an appeal before the Sessions Judge against the said order. The Sessions Judge held that the Assistant Commandant had no jurisdiction to record conviction and impose sentence. The said judgment was questioned before the High Court by a revision petition filed by the Union of India. The High Court dismissed the said revision by holding that combined reading of Sections 11, 12 and 13 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 clearly ruled out the appointment of any person exercising powers of Judicial Magistrate, First Class in the absence of conferment of powers by the High Court. Thus, it held that the Central Government or the State Government had no power to invest any person with powers of Judicial Magistrate of any class.

The appellant State submitted that certain aspects were not considered in their proper perspective by the Sessions Judge and the High Court. These aspects were: (i) that Section 16(2) of the Act clearly indicates that notwithstanding anything contained in the Code, the provisions of the Act could be applied, (ii) that Section 4(2) CrPC permits action under any law other than IPC, (iii) that Section 5 CrPC refers to absence of a specific provision to the contrary in any special or local law, and (iv) that the Act in question was a special law which operated in a specified field.

Restoring the conviction recorded by the Assistant Commandant but reducing the sentence,

Held :

The fallacy in the reasoning of the courts below lies in their superficial and cursory nature of consideration undertaken therein, without reference to the competence and powers of Parliament to specifically and specially provide for trial and punishment of offences separately created under a special enactment of Parliament, in a manner distinct and separate from the method of trying other ordinary criminal offences under the general criminal law of the country. (Para 5)

Under Section 3(1) of the Act, CRPF is constituted to be an "armed force" maintained by the Central Government, and consequently, it would be "any other armed force of the Union" as envisaged in Entry 2 of List I of the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution of India. Entry 93 of List I enables Parliament also to provide for offences against laws with respect to any of the matters enumerated in List I. Sections 9 and 10 of the Act create by enumerating what are stated to be "more heinous offences" and "less heinous offences" respectively and many of such specially created offences for the purposes of this Act cannot constitute or amount to be offences under the ordinary criminal law of the land. To that extent they are new classes of offences created with punishments therefor, which are unknown to the ordinary criminal law in force. Section 16 of the Act provides for empowering competent authorities in the hierarchy of the force itself with powers or duties conferred or imposed on a police officer of any class or grade by any law for the time being in force and by further enacting a provision with a specific "non obstante" clause stipulating that notwithstanding anything contained in the Code, the Central Government may invest the Commandant or Assistant Commandant with the powers of a Magistrate of any class for the purpose of inquiring into or trying any offence committed by a member of the force and punishable "under this Act" or any offence committed by a member of the force against the person or property of another member. Section 5 of the Code sufficiently protects the authorities empowered to function and exercise powers under the Act from any such challenge as are directed against them in this case. (Para 5)

Unauthorised absence of an employee staying beyond the sanctioned period of leave is not an offence in the normal course under the ordinary criminal law of the land. But, disciplined forces with the intention of enforcing discipline have made it punishable considering it as offence and have prescribed various sentences. For such particular purposes the designated officials have been conferred with magisterial powers. The Assistant

Commandant who passed the order undisputedly acted as a Judicial Magistrate in view of the powers conferred on him under the Act. The conferment of such power has not been distinctly questioned and could not have been questioned in a proceeding, appeal or a revision under the Code. (Para 6)

The inevitable conclusion is that the Assistant Commandant was clothed with necessary jurisdiction for trial of the matter. (Para 11). State (Union of India) v. Ram Saran, (2003) 12 SCC 578: AIR 2004 SC 481: (2004) 101 FLR 447.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2003]

Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785; Nilratan Sircar v. Lakshmi Narayan Ram Niwas, AIR 1965 SC 1: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 100; Maru Ram v. Union of India, (1981) 1 SCC 107: 1981 SCC (Cri) 112; Kaushalya Rani v. Gopal Singh, AIR 1964 SC 260: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 152, relied on

— S. 6 See also S. 6, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 962 in Vol. 2

— S. 6 See Ss. 4 to 6
See also Ss. 4, 6 and 7
See also Ss. 164(1), 167, 3, 6, 20(1) and (4)

[61] — S. 6 and Chap. XII — Chief Judicial Magistrate — Position of — Coordination, cooperation and role of police indicated

The Chief Judicial Magistrate is head of the Magistracy in the district. Under the provisions of Chapter XII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, he exercises control and supervision over the investigating officer. He is an immediate officer on the spot at the lower rung of the administration of justice of the country to ensure that the police which is the law enforcing machinery acts according to law in investigation of crimes without indulging in excesses and causing harassment to citizens. The main objective of police is to apprehend offenders, to investigate crimes and to prosecute them before the courts and also to prevent commission of crime and above all to ensure law and order to protect the citizens' life and property. The law enjoins the police to be scrupulously fair to the offender and the Magistracy is to ensure fair investigation and fair trial to an offender. The purpose and object of Magistracy and police are complementary to each other. It is unfortunate that these objectives have remained unfulfilled even after 40 years of our Constitution. (Para 39). Delhi Judicial Service Assn. v. State of Gujarat, (1991) 4 SCC 406: AIR 1991 SC 2176.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.N. Singh, Kuldip Singh and N.M. Kasliwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1991]

[62] — S. 6 — Purpose and role of courts in criminal trial — Judicial process — Raison d'être for existence of courts of justice — Held, discovery, vindication and establishment of truth are main purposes for holding a fair trial which are underlying objects for existence of courts of justice (Para 5). NHRC v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 767.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2009]

[63] — S. 6 — Courts and tribunals — Essential features, functions and differences — Meaning of and difference between, stated — CPC, 1908, Ss. 2(8) and 9 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 3 — Constitution of India — Sch. VII List I Entries 77 to 79 & 95, List II Entry 65 & List III Entries 11-A, 46 and Sch. X Para 6(1) and Arts. 246, 50, 323-A and 323-B — Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, Ss. 2(d) and 11 — Motor Vehicles Act, 1988, S. 165 — Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993, Ss. 3 and 8 — Consumer Protection Act, 1986, Ss. 9, 10, 16 and 20

The term "courts" refers to places where justice is administered or refers to Judges who exercise judicial functions. Courts are established by the State for administration of justice that is for exercise of the judicial power of the State to maintain and uphold the rights, to punish wrongs and to adjudicate upon disputes. Tribunals on the other hand are special alternative institutional mechanisms, usually brought into existence by or under a statute to decide disputes arising with reference to that particular statute, or to determine controversies arising out of any administrative law. Courts refer to civil courts, criminal courts and the High Courts. Tribunals can be either private tribunals (Arbitral Tribunals), or tribunals constituted under the Constitution [Speaker or the Chairman acting under Para 6(1) of the Tenth Schedule] or tribunals authorised by the Constitution (Administrative Tribunals under Article 323-A and tribunals for other matters under Article 323-B) or statutory tribunals which are created under a statute (Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal, Debt Recovery Tribunals and Consumer Fora). Some tribunals are manned exclusively by Judicial Officers (Rent Tribunals, Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal, Labour Courts and Industrial Tribunals). Other statutory tribunals have judicial and technical members (Administrative Tribunals, TDSAT, Competition Appellate Tribunal, Consumer Fora, Cyber Appellate Tribunal, etc.). (Para 38)

Though both courts and tribunals exercise judicial power and discharge similar functions, there are certain well-recognised differences between courts and tribunals. They are:

(i) Courts are established by the State and are entrusted with the State's inherent judicial power for administration of justice in general. Tribunals are established under a statute to adjudicate upon disputes arising under the said statute, or disputes of a specified nature. Therefore, all courts are tribunals. But all tribunals are not courts.

(ii) Courts are exclusively manned by Judges. Tribunals can have a Judge as the sole member, or can have a combination of a judicial member and a technical member who is an "expert" in the field to which the tribunal relates. Some highly specialised fact-finding tribunals may have only technical members, but they are rare and are exceptions.

(iii) While courts are governed by detailed statutory procedural rules, in particular the Code of Civil Procedure and the Evidence Act, requiring an elaborate procedure in decision making, tribunals generally regulate their own procedure applying the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure only where it is required, and without being restricted by the strict rules of the Evidence Act. (Para 45). Union of India v. Madras Bar Assn., (2010) 11 SCC 1: (2010) 156 Comp Cas 392: (2010) 3 CTC 517 (SC).

Bench Strength 5. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran, D.K. Jain, P. Sathasivam and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-5-2010]

S.P. Sampath Kumar v. Union of India, (1987) 1 SCC 124: (1987) 2 ATC 82; Associated Cement Companies Ltd. v. P.N. Sharma, AIR 1965 SC 1595: (1965) 2 SCR 366; Kihoto Hollohan v. Zachillhu, 1992 Supp (2) SCC 651; Harinagar Sugar Mills Ltd. v. Shyam Sundar Jhunjhunwala, AIR 1961 SC 1669: (1962) 2 SCR 339; Jaswant Sugar Mills Ltd. v. Lakshmi Chand, AIR 1963 SC 677: 1963 Supp (1) SCR 242, relied on

Royal Aquarium and Summer and Winter Garden Society Ltd. v. Parkinson, (1892) 1 QB 431 (CA); Durga Shankar Mehta v. Raghuraj Singh, AIR 1954 SC 520: (1955) 1 SCR 267, cited

[64] — S. 6 — Jurisdiction of Special Court under 1992 Act — Transactions in securities and for matters connected therewith or incidental thereto — Discounting of bills of exchange with the ultimate purpose of transacting in shares, held, fell within the jurisdiction of Special Court — S. 7 of 1992 Act also held, has to be interpreted widely, particularly when it commences with non obstante clause — Special Court (Trial of Offences Relating to Transactions in Securities) Act, 1992, S. 7

The jurisdiction of Special Court is not confined to scams relating to securities alone but utilisation of any amount relating to transactions in securities and for matters connected therewith or incidental thereto. The jurisdiction of Special Court is an exclusive one. It exercises original jurisdiction to try offences relating to security scams. The said Act having regard to the peculiar nature of offence sought to be dealt with, should receive liberal construction. Jurisdiction of Special Court is required to be determined with regard to provisions of Section 6 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. The Act is a special Act. It contains a non obstante clause. It prevails over any other Act. (Paras 44 and 46)

Harshad Mehta was dealing in the money market and securities market. Growmore although being a public limited company, was controlled by Harshad Mehta. Both Mazda as also Growmore were dealing in the business of selling and buying of shares. M/s J.H. Mehta, was the proprietary concern of wife of Harshad Mehta. She used to execute business through her constituted attorney. General power of attorney had also been issued by the aforementioned companies in favour of the accused persons. The Harshad Mehta Group of Companies were therefore dealing in securities. The method of siphoning off of funds of UCO Bank through discounting of two bills of exchange was unlawful. Both the bills of exchange were shown to have been issued in relation to transaction in shares between M/s J.H. Mehta, Growmore and Mazda. For the purpose of arranging repayment of the amount, shares were purchased by UCO Bank through M/s V.B. Desai and Co. The offence of conspiracy to commit the offence of breach of trust, thus, related to transaction in securities. It is therefore not a case where it can be said that Special Court lacked inherent jurisdiction in trying the offence said to have been committed by the accused. (Paras 48 and 49). Sudhir Shantilal Mehta v. CBI, (2009) 8 SCC 1: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 646.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

Harshad S. Mehta v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 8 SCC 257: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1447; L.S. Synthetics Ltd. v. Fairgrowth Financial Services Ltd., (2004) 11 SCC 456; Solidaire India Ltd. v. Fairgrowth Financial Services Ltd., (2001) 3 SCC 71, relied on [65] — Ss. 6 and 11 — Judicial Magistrates, held, do not have any inherent power — Criminal Trial — Inherent power (Para 8). Dharmeshbhai Vasudevbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 576.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

— S. 6(i) See Ss. 193, 4(2), 5, 2(g) and 6(i)

— S. 7 See Ss. 4, 6 and 7

See also Ss. 406, 24, 2(u) and 7, 8 & 9

[66] — Ss. 7, 14 and 406, 410 — Complaint filed before court lacking territorial jurisdiction — Pragmatic approach — Respondent wife filing complaint before CJM of Bankura, where she was living and mentioning own and brother's pitiable financial condition — Clear from complaint that beatings and other cruelty meted out in matrimonial home in Calcutta — Appellants filing criminal revision application before High Court challenging jurisdiction of CJM, Bankura to entertain complaint — High Court dismissing the same — Held, on facts, to meet the ends of justice, the complaint under S. 498-A, IPC should be treated as if it had been presented before appropriate court in Calcutta and had been transferred to Court of CJM, Bankura — Clarified that no opinion was being expressed on merits — CPC, 1908 — S. 24 — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 498-A

Even if the complaint had been lodged in the appropriate court in Calcutta, the respondent could have made application for transfer of the said case to Bankura which is her usual place of residence so that she can effectively pursue the case on the basis of the complaint lodged by her. In the facts of the case, it appears that such application for transfer, if made, deserves to be allowed. Taking a pragmatic view of the matter, it is felt that the complaint should not be dismissed on the score of jurisdictional impropriety. In the special facts of the case, it is directed that the complaint under Section 498-A would be treated as if the complaint was presented to the appropriate court in Calcutta and the same has been transferred to the Court of Chief Judicial Magistrate, Bankura. Such direction is given for ends of justice and to avoid dismissal of the complaint filed in Bankura for want of jurisdiction and filing another complaint in Calcutta and then to get the same transferred to Bankura. (Para 2). Bhudeb Chandra Karmakar v. State of W.B., (2001) 9 SCC 226: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-7-1996]

[67] — Ss. 7 and 9 — Allocation of cases to Special Judge — If requires consultation with High Court — Allegation that certain Special Judge was chosen to try the present case based on political vendetta — Sustainability — Held, Arts. 233 and 234 of the Constitution are not attracted as this is not a case where appointment of persons to be Special Judges or their postings to a particular Special Court is involved — However, expression "notwithstanding the jurisdiction of other Special Judges in the State of Punjab" in notification dated 17-11-2003 allocating cases to Special Judges was not necessary — Once a group of cases is allocated to a Special Court, consequentially other Special Courts cannot deal with them — Said expression directed to be severed — Further, Special Judges are transferred by the High Court — Hence allegation of choosing any Special Judge with oblique motive is clearly without any substance — Constitution of India — Arts. 233 and 234 — Appointment or posting of Special Judges under PC Act, 1988 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — S. 4

Articles 233 and 234 of the Constitution are not attracted because this is not a case where appointment of persons to be Special Judges or their postings to a particular Special Court is involved. It is, however, factually conceded that the expression "notwithstanding the jurisdiction of other Special Judges in the State of Punjab" in notification dated 17-11-2003 is not necessary. Once a group of cases are allocated to a Special Court, consequentially other Special Courts cannot deal with them. Use of the aforesaid expression was really unnecessary. The said expression is considered to be severable and it is so directed. (Paras 81 and 82)

The State submitted that to avoid any fear of forum-shopping, the State is even willing to abide by the decision of the Supreme Court if the trial takes place in Chandigarh or wherever the Supreme Court directs, and to show that the State has no intention to the trial being conducted at a particular place and to prove its transparency the stand is taken. It is not considered necessary to so direct because the expression "notwithstanding the jurisdiction of other Special Judges in the State of Punjab" has already been stated to be unnecessary and would be of no consequence. That being so, the plea in that regard as raised by the appellants also fails. (Para 83). Parkash Singh Badal v. State of Punjab, (2007) 1 SCC 1: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 193: AIR 2007 SC 1274: (2007) 51 AIC 623 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2006]

— S. 8 See Ss. 406, 24, 2(u) and 7, 8 & 9

— S. 9 See also S. 9, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 962 in Vol. 2

— S. 9 See Ss. 7 and 9

See also Ss. 12, 17 and 9

See also Ss. 406, 24, 2(u) and 7, 8 & 9

[68] — S. 9 — De facto doctrine — Judgments, decrees etc. made by a de facto judge under colour of lawful authority has the same effect as that made by a de jure judge — So even if the appointment of a judge is found to be invalid, held, the judgments, decrees or orders made by him

would continue to be valid and effective — Besides, his actions cannot be impugned collaterally — Constitution of India — Arts. 233, 233-A, 226 and 21

While criminal revision and appeals were pending before the High Court, the Supreme Court quashed the appointment of the Sessions Judges, who had heard those cases, on the ground that their appointment was in violation of Art. 233 of the Constitution. Thereupon, it was urged before the High Court that the judgments rendered by those judges were void and required to be set aside. The High Court rejected the contention.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

A judge, de facto, is one who is not a mere intruder or usurper but one who holds office, under colour of lawful authority, even though his appointment is defective and may later be found to be so. Whatever be the defect of his title to the office, judgments pronounced by him and acts done by him when he was clothed with the powers and functions of the office, albeit unlawfully, have the same efficacy as judgments pronounced and acts done by a judge de jure. Such is the de facto doctrine, born of necessity and public policy to prevent needless confusion and endless mischief.

There is yet another rule also based on public policy. The defective appointment of a de facto judge may be questioned directly in a proceeding to which he be a party but it cannot be permitted to be questioned in a litigation between two private litigants, a litigation which is of no concern or consequence to the judge except as a judge. Hence, the rule against collateral attack on validity of judicial appointments. To question a judge's appointment in an appeal against his judgment is such a collateral attack.

The de facto doctrine cannot be said to be subject to the limitation that the effect in the title of the judge to the office should not be traceable to the violation of a constitutional provision. The contravention of a constitutional provision may invalidate an appointment but the doctrine is not concerned with that. The doctrine is not a stranger to the Constitution or to the Parliament and the State Legislatures.

The 20th amendment of the Constitution is an instance where the de facto doctrine was applied by the constituent body to remove any suspicion or taint of illegality or invalidity that may be argued to have attached itself to judgments, decrees, sentences or orders passed or made by certain District Judges appointed before 1966, otherwise than in accordance with the provision of Arts. 233 and 235 of the Constitution. From the 20th amendment it cannot be necessarily inferred that, but for the amendment, the judgments, decrees etc. of the District Judges appointed otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of Art. 233 would have been void. When judicial pronouncements have already declared the law on the subject, the statutory reiteration of the law with reference to particular cases does not lead to the necessary inference that the law declared by the judicial pronouncements was not thought to apply to the particular cases but may also lead to the inference that the statute-making body was mindful of the real state of the law but was acting under the influence of excessive caution and so to silence the voices of doubting Thomases by declaring the law declared by judicial pronouncements to be applicable also to the particular cases. As a general rule the Parliament may be presumed not to make superfluous legislation. But the presumption is not a strong presumption and statutes are full of provisions introduced because abundant cautela non nocet (there is no harm in being cautious).

Therefore it is not possible to accept the contentions that a trial by a Sessions Judge who was appointed in violation of Art. 233 was not a trial by a Sessions Judge duly appointed to exercise jurisdiction under S. 9, Criminal Procedure Code and that the fundamental right of the appellants under Art. 21 was violated as their liberty was being taken away otherwise than in accordance with the procedure established by law. It would be a different matter if the constitution of the court itself is under challenge, but that is not the case here. Gokaraju Rangaraju v. State of A.P., (1981) 3 SCC 132: 1981 SCC (Cri) 652: AIR 1981 SC 1473: (1981) 3 SCR 474: 1981 MLJ (Cri) 528.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-1981]

[69] — Ss. 9 and 11 — Communal riots — Appointment of Presiding Judges — Post-Godhra riot cases in State of Gujarat — Matters to be considered — Directions issued for Chief Justice of Gujarat High Court to select senior judicial officers to be appointed [Para 40(iv)]. NHRC v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 767.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2009]

[70] — Ss. 9, 13 and 18 — Fodder Scam cases — PIL — Scope of interference — Appointment of Special Judge in — Interference by Supreme Court, if warranted — Availability and scrutiny of up-to-date Annual Confidential Reports (ACRs) of judicial officer(s) concerned — Held (per majority), Supreme Court cannot go into question of appointment of a Special Judge which is exclusively within the domain of the High Court under Arts. 233 and 235 — It is not for Supreme Court to scrutinise correctness of the decision taken by High Court, that too at the instance of third parties — If at all the petitioners had any grievance regarding appointment of any particular judicial officer, proper remedy was to approach the High Court and to bring this fact to notice of the Chief Justice — In the present case, there is no material on record to show that there was any illegality or serious infraction of any procedure or that Respondent 4 (former Chief Minister of Bihar) had any hand in appointment of the CBI (Special Judge) in question — About the conduct and integrity of the Judge concerned, nothing adverse is reported against him, though of course in some years, he has been graded as "category B" with regard to his judicial performance — These are all matters considered by the appointing Standing Committee of High Court — Hence prayer of petitioners that said Judge be replaced by another judicial officer cannot be granted — Per Kapadia, J. (dissenting), it is wrong in law for the Court to judge applicant's interest in PIL without looking at the subject-matter of his complaint — In matter of economic scams, be it security transactions or Fodder Scams or Taj Corridor, economic interest of the country is at stake — These cases involve highly complicated questions and therefore posting of the Judge plays a vital role — Choice of candidate by High Court under Arts. 233 and 235 is an administrative function and falls in the domain of public law and, therefore, that choice has to be exercised on some standard, failing which judicial review steps in — If different standards or no standards are applied, it breaks the integrity of the process and brings in discrimination and arbitrariness which violates Art. 14 and therefore attracts judicial review — The concern in present case is hence strictly with the decision-making process by which Special Judge in question was appointed and not with the merits of the allegations — The facts in the present case show that different standards were applied for the appointment of the said Special Judge as compared to two other Judges appointed at the same meeting of the Standing Committee of the High Court — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — S. 3 — Constitution of India — Arts. 32, 233 and 235

These writ petitions were filed as public interest litigation by the two petitioners who were Members of Parliament at the time of filing of the petitions. Respondents 4 and 5 were formerly Chief Ministers of the State of Bihar. It was alleged by the petitioners that they had filed writ petitions before the High Court alleging large-scale defalcation of public funds and falsification of accounts involving hundreds of crores of rupees in the Department of Animal Husbandry in the State of Bihar and pursuant to these allegations, several cases were registered by the police and investigation of these cases was later handed over to CBI. The petitioners alleged that consequent upon change of the Government at the Centre, attempts had been made to delay and interfere with the judicial process. It was alleged that the Public Prosecutors who were handling the cases were removed, and to protect the interests of Respondents 4 and 5, Rabri Devi and Lalu Prasad Yadav, respectively, a convenient prosecutor was appointed.

Respondent 5 was an accused in a case registered under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. The allegation in that case was that Respondent 5 as Chief Minister of Bihar between 1990 to 1996 had acquired assets disproportionate to his known sources of income. Charge-sheet was filed in the Court of the Special Judge, CBI, Patna on 4-4-2000 under Section 13(1)(e) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. Respondent 4 was also charge-sheeted in the same case for abetment under Section 109 IPC read with Section 13(2) and Section 13(1)(e) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. This case was renumbered as Special Case No. 5 of 1998 and was pending trial in the Court of the Special Judge, CBI, Patna. The petitioners alleged that certain income tax cases of Respondents 4 and 5 were also pending before the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal (ITAT) and one D.K. Tyagi who was a member of ITAT had been hearing those cases and that Respondents 4 and 5 found it difficult to pursue the hearings before the said ITAT member and hence under their influence Mr Tyagi was sent on deputation and he was replaced by one Mr Mohanarajan who was on the verge of retirement. It was further alleged that the new member along with another member heard these cases within two weeks and orders were pronounced in favour of Respondents 4 and 5. It was also alleged that Respondent 3, namely, the Central Board of Direct Taxes did not prefer an appeal in these cases though the decision went against the Revenue. This, according to the petitioners, was to help Respondents 4 and 5 in the cases filed against them.

The petitioners also alleged that Special Case No. 5 of 1998 pending before the Special Judge, CBI was at the final stage of hearing and that the Director, CBI, presumably under pressure from the accused changed the prosecutor and appointed one Oma Shankar Singh who was only a retired Deputy Superintendent of Delhi Police and had no experience of conducting the prosecution. According to the petitioners, this was done at the fag end of the prosecution case to help the accused. The petitioners also made allegations against Respondents 1 to 3 that they were acting arbitrarily and interfering in the judicial process to benefit Respondents 4 and 5. The petitioners alleged that Respondents 4 and 5 obtained stay of proceedings of the case pending before the Special Judge from the Supreme Court, suppressing some material facts. It was alleged that Respondents 4 and 5 still wielded influence and power and, therefore, the Supreme Court should monitor the trial of the case pending before the Special Judge, CBI, at Patna.

In these writ petitions, the petitioners prayed mainly for four reliefs. The first relief prayed for was to issue an appropriate writ, order or direction monitoring the conduct of the trials relating to Fodder Scam cases' proceedings against Respondents 4 and 5 in the State of Bihar and the State of Jharkhand. The second prayer was to appoint the very same prosecutor who had been conducting the prosecution earlier and to direct the High Court to see that no prosecutor or CBI officer attached with the investigation and trial of the case was removed, harassed or victimised for discharging their duties. The petitioners also prayed that at least one inspector be provided for each Fodder case. The petitioners also prayed for cancellation of bail granted to Respondents 4 and 5. The petitioners further prayed for a direction to Respondents 1 to 3 to file an appeal against the orders passed by ITAT.

During the pendency of these writ petitions, the petitioners further alleged that the Special Judge who was trying Special Case No. 5 of 1998 involving Respondents 4 and 5, had been replaced by another Special Judge. The allegation was that one Yogender Prasad was the CBI Special Judge and he had been replaced by one Munni Lal Paswan and this according to the petitioners was deliberately done to help Respondents 4 and 5. Therefore, it was prayed that the said Special Judge be replaced by another judicial officer.

Dismissing the writ petitions and vacating all interim orders,

Held :

Per majority:

Per Balakrishnan, J.

Special Case No. 5 of 1998 has been filed against Respondents 4 and 5 alleging that they had amassed wealth disproportionate to their known sources of income while holding the post of Chief Minister of the State of Bihar. Both the petitioners are not in any way connected with this case. They are not de facto complainants in this case. They are absolutely strangers as regards the criminal cases against Respondents 4 and 5 which were pending before the Special Judge. It is for the prosecution to prove its case and Respondents 4 and 5 to deny that the allegations are not true and they did not have the disproportionate income as alleged by the prosecution. It is a criminal litigation exclusively between Respondents 4 and 5 and the State. It is also important to note that in a case of this nature nobody else has got any right to interfere especially by way of public interest litigation or else such public interest litigation would only hamper the course of justice and may cause prejudice to the accused by denying them a fair trial. This unnecessary interference in the criminal case may cause, sometimes, damage to the prosecution case also. In any view of the matter, this sort of interference in the criminal prosecution would only deny a fair trial to the accused. In this case, as early as 2004, 132 witnesses were examined on the side of the prosecution and 93 witnesses were examined on the defence side. Arguments of the prosecution were over as early as on 14-7-2004 and the defence arguments continued up to 19-7-2004. Because of the present public interest litigation, the trial could not be conducted. It is equally important to note that though the petitioners have alleged a series of irregularities, they are not supported by basic facts having solid foundation. (Paras 21 and 25)

The appointment of Shri Munni Lal Paswan as Special Judge is not challenged by the petitioners and no pleadings also made in the main writ petition. By filing a criminal miscellaneous application, and on the basis of oral arguments at the Bar the petitioners have made a series of allegations which are not borne out by any records. (Para 17)

There is no material on record to show that there was any illegality or serious infraction of any procedure in the appointment of the present CBI (Special Judge), Patna and the appointment as such cannot be challenged in a collateral proceedings and the Supreme Court cannot go into the question of appointment of a Special Judge which is exclusively within the domain of the High Court under Article 235 of the Constitution; the appointment in question having been validly made by High Court in this case. Therefore, the oral appeal of the petitioners that the present Special Judge is to be replaced by another judicial officer also cannot therefore be granted. If at all the petitioners had any grievance regarding the appointment of any particular officer, the proper remedy was to approach the High Court and to bring this fact to the notice of the Chief Justice. (Paras 17 and 26)

The entire records relating to the appointment of Shri Munni Lal Paswan as a Special Judge, CBI, Patna have been produced in this case including the confidential registers of the various officers. On perusal of these records it is found that the Standing Committee of the High Court took a decision to post Shri Munni Lal Paswan as the CBI Special Judge, Patna. Six seniormost Judges of the High Court of Patna constituted the Standing Committee of the High Court and the decision was taken in the meeting of the Committee held on 22-6-2005. (Paras 15 and 16)

The confidential reports of Shri Munni Lal Paswan from 1981 to 2003 have been produced in the Supreme Court. Of course, the confidential register of Shri Munni Lal Paswan was available only up to 2003. For some period, he was working on deputation and the inspecting Judge had not recorded the confidential registers for that period, though the confidential registers of other officers were available to the Standing Committee. The confidential register of this officer shows that it has been repeatedly recorded that this officer has maintained honesty and integrity during the period under report. About his conduct and integrity, nothing adverse is reported against him. Of course, in some of the years, this officer has been graded as "category B" with regard to his judicial performance. These are all matters considered by the Standing Committee which consists of senior Judges of the High Court. (Para 17)

Per Lakshmanan, J.

Public interest litigation is meant for the benefit of the lost and lonely and it is meant for the benefit of those whose social backwardness is the reason for no access to the court. PILs are not meant to advance the political gain and also settle scores under the guise of a public interest litigation and to fight a legal battle. PIL is totally foreign to pending criminal proceedings. (Para 58)

The petitioners are waging a political battle against Respondents 4 and 5 through the medium of public interest litigation. The venue for political battle can never be the Supreme Court by filing a writ petition under Article 32 of the Constitution. (Para 60)

In the above case, the Standing Committee has taken a decision to appoint Munni Lal Paswan and other officers after scrutinising the records, ACRs, etc. in accordance with Articles 233 and 235 of the Constitution which is the prerogative right of the Standing Committee and the High Court, and when a decision is taken it is not for the Supreme Court to scrutinise the correctness of the decision, that too at the instance of third parties. (Para 52)

The records submitted by the High Court in regard to the officers including Munni Lal Paswan have been perused. There is absolutely no adverse entry against Munni Lal Paswan and that poor record if any is not the record of integrity and no gradation has been given to officers after 1997 onwards including Paswan. The resolution of the Standing Committee of the High Court was also placed before the Full Court which also approved the same. The records would only go to show that Respondent 4 had no hand in the appointment of judges. (Paras 47, 48 and 58)

Per Kapadia, J. (dissenting)

The test which one has to apply to decide the maintainability of the PIL concerns sufficiency of the petitioner's interest. Under this test it is necessary to consider the subject-matter to which the PIL relates. It is wrong in law for the court to judge the applicant's interest without looking at the subject-matter of his complaint. If the petitioner shows failure of public duty, the court would be in error in dismissing his PIL. The question of sufficient interest of the petitioner cannot be considered in the abstract. It must be taken together with the legal and factual context. (Paras 77 and 78)

True value of a decision lies in its propriety and not in the decision being right or wrong. In this case the concern is not with the merits of the allegations but strictly with the decision-making process in the posting of Mr Munni Lal Paswan, Special Judge, CBI, Patna. The allegations made in the petitions are not only against the accused, they are also directed against a number of functionaries. It is, therefore, made clear that this decision is only to rectify the procedure of decision-making at the High Court level so that in future such anomalies do not arise. (Paras 76, 100 and 102)

It is important to bear in mind that in the matter of economic scams, be it security transactions or Fodder Scams or Taj Corridor it is the economic interest of the country which is at stake. These cases are highly complicated in which complicated questions are involved and, therefore, posting of the Judge plays a vital role. (Para 98)

Institutional autonomy of the High Court on its administrative side under Article 233 and Article 235 is a well-known concept. It is based on public trust and confidence. Existence of the power, as a concept, is different from exercise of power. Promotions and posting of judicial officers fall within the domain of the High Court on its administrative side. At the same time it is important to note that choice of the candidate falls in the domain of public law and, therefore, that choice has to be exercised on some standard, failing which judicial review steps in. Standards of evaluation in matters of promotion and posting have to be uniformly applied otherwise arbitrariness comes in. Integrity of the evaluation process has to be maintained. If different standards or no standards are applied it breaks the integrity of the process which brings in discrimination and arbitrariness which violates Article 14 and therefore attracts judicial review. (Para 87)

In the present case it needs to be ascertained whether the standards applied to evaluate Mr J. P. Ratnesh and Mr Ram Niwas Prasad, trial Judges, appointed as Special Judges vide minutes of the meeting of the Standing Committee dated 22-6-2005, were equally applied while posting Mr Munni Lal Paswan as Special Judge, CBI, Patna (Fodder Scam cases). (Para 88)

Ishwar Chand Jain case, (1999) 4 SCC 579, emphasises the importance of the remarks given by the Inspecting Judge. The object of inspection is to assess the work performed, capability, competency besides integrity of the candidate. These gradations/categorisations given by the Inspecting Judges are required to be placed before the Full Court. There is a prescribed form in which the Confidential Reports (CRs) are recorded. That form indicates various parameters, namely, knowledge of law, whether the officer is hardworking, the rating to be given in respect of the judgments, namely, A (outstanding), A (very good), B (good) and B (satisfactory). The point to be noted is that apart from honesty and integrity there are other parameters to be fulfilled by the judicial officers and that is where the disposals, ability and all other relevant factors come in. (Paras 97 and 92)

In the present case, gradation/categorisation was done for two out of three judicial officers when they were posted and no gradation/categorisation has been done after 1990 by the Inspecting Judge vis-à-vis the judgments of Mr Munni Lal Paswan. When Mr Paswan was promoted as ADJ there was no categorisation available. While the remarks of the Inspecting Judge, in the case of Mr J.P. Ratnesh and Mr Ram Niwas Prasad were duly updated when they were placed before the Standing Committee of the High Court. (Paras 97, 90 and 95)

The consolidated statement showing the out-turn of the work done by Mr Paswan during the period 1998-2004 and 2005 refers to various parameters like disposal, remarks of PO, remark of DJ, etc. as approved by the court. These remarks have been approved by the District Judge and by the courts. These remarks are heavily weighed against Mr Paswan. It is not clear whether these remarks were ever noticed by the Committee and if not they need to be relooked at by the High Court. (Para 91)

In the circumstances, it seems that the procedure followed by the High Court in the meeting on 22-6-2005 wherein Shri Munni Lal Paswan was appointed as Special Judge did not meet the above criteria. (Para 99)

In the circumstances, a request is being made to the Chief Justice of the Patna High Court to convene an urgent meeting of Administrative Judges and complete the exercise of giving appropriate gradation/categorisation after looking at the judgments and orders delivered by the Judge concerned, Mr Paswan. It is clarified that this is just a request to the High Court and not a direction so that the evaluation standards are commonly applied to all the three candidates. (Paras 99 and 107). Rajiv Ranjan Singh 'Lalan' (VIII) v. Union of India, (2006) 6 SCC 613: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 125.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan[1], Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan[2] and S.H. Kapadia[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 21-8-2006]

Union of India v. Sushil Kumar Modi, (1998) 8 SCC 661: 1999 SCC (Cri) 84; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Ashok Kumar Pandey v. State of W.B., (2004) 3 SCC 349; T.N. Godavarman Thirumulpad (98) v. Union of India, (2006) 5 SCC 28; Dattaraj Nathuji Thaware v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 1 SCC 590; S.P. Gupta v. Union of India, 1981 Supp SCC 87; High Court of Punjab & Haryana v. Ishwar Chand Jain, (1999) 4 SCC 579: 1999 SCC (L&S) 881, relied on [71] — Ss. 9, 13 and 18 — Appointment of Special Judges — Proper mode and procedure for — Nature of power exercised by High Court in such appointment — Susceptibility to judicial review (per Kapadia, J.) — Need for integrity of process, uniform application of standards and non-arbitrariness in selection of candidates — Importance of remarks made by inspecting Judge in Annual Confidential Reports (ACRs) of candidates concerned — Choice of candidate by High Court under Arts. 233 and 235 is an administrative function and falls in domain of public law and, therefore, that choice has to be exercised on some standard, failing which judicial review steps in — If different standards or no standards are applied it breaks the integrity of the process and brings in discrimination and arbitrariness which violates Art. 14 and therefore attracts judicial review — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — S. 3 — Constitution of India — Arts. 233, 235 and 14. Rajiv Ranjan Singh 'Lalan' (VIII) v. Union of India, (2006) 6 SCC 613: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 125.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan[1], Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan[2] and S.H. Kapadia[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 21-8-2006]

High Court of Punjab & Haryana v. Ishwar Chand Jain, (1999) 4 SCC 579: 1999 SCC (L&S) 881, relied on [72] — Ss. 9(1) and (3) — Sessions Judge — Includes Additional Sessions Judge — He has all the power and jurisdiction of the Sessions Judge to try offences enumerated under the Code. Abdul Mannan v. State of W.B., (1996) 1 SCC 665: 1996 SCC (Cri) 197: AIR 1996 SC 905.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, Faizan Uddin and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-1995]

— S. 9(3) See Ss. 9(1) and (3)

[73] — S. 9(6) — High Court's power to fix venue of trial inside jail premises — Circumstances warranting such course of action — Law and order problem — Expeditious trial of cases — Held (per curiam), are valid considerations. Mohd. Shahabuddin v. State of Bihar, (2010) 4 SCC 653.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dalveer Bhandari[1] and Dr. M.K. Sharma[2], JJ. [Date of decision : 25-3-2010]

[74] — S. 9(6) — High Court's power to fix venue of trial inside jail premises — Held (per curiam), power can be exercised in respect of pending cases. Mohd. Shahabuddin v. State of Bihar, (2010) 4 SCC 653.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dalveer Bhandari[1] and Dr. M.K. Sharma[2], JJ. [Date of decision : 25-3-2010]

[75] — S. 9(6) — Interpretation of — Precision in language used in statute — Held (per Sharma, J.), the legislature is especially precise and careful in its choice of language — If a statutory provision is enacted by legislature, which prescribes a condition at one place but not at some other place in the same provision, the only reasonable interpretation possible is that such was the intention of the legislature — S. 9(6) CrPC interpreted applying this principle

It is a well-settled principle in law that the court cannot read anything into a statutory provision which is plain and unambiguous. The language employed in a statute is a determinative factor of the legislative intent. If the language of the enactment is clear and unambiguous, it would not be proper for the courts to add any words thereto and evolve some legislative intent, not found in the statute. (Para 179)

Further, it is a well-established principle of statutory interpretation that the legislature is specially precise and careful in its choice of language. Thus, if a statutory provision is enacted by the legislature, which prescribes a condition at one place but not at some other place in the same provision, the only reasonable interpretation which can be resorted to by the courts is that such was the intention of the legislature and that the provision was consciously enacted in that manner. In such cases, it will be wrong to presume that such omission was inadvertent or that by incorporating the condition at one place in the provision the legislature also intended the condition to be applied at some other place in that provision. (Para 180). Mohd. Shahabuddin v. State of Bihar, (2010) 4 SCC 653.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dalveer Bhandari[1] and Dr. M.K. Sharma[2], JJ. [Date of decision : 25-3-2010]

[76] — S. 9(6) — Nomenclature/Form — Wrong mentioning of relevant provisions — Impact if any on validity — Held (per Sharma, J.), the order remains valid provided there is some other provision to support that order — Further held, there is a statutory presumption under S. 114 Ill. (e), Evidence Act, 1872 that official acts have been performed regularly — Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act, 1887 (12 of 1887) — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill. (e)

If a notification quotes a wrong section and refers to a wrong provision, the same cannot be held to be invalid if validity of the same could be upheld on the basis of some other provision. When an authority passes an order which is within its competence, it cannot fail merely because it purports to be made under a wrong provision if it can be shown to be within its power under any other provision or rule, and validity of such impugned order must be judged on a consideration of its substance and not its form. The principle is that act of a public servant must be ascribed to an actual existing authority under which it would have validity rather than to one under which it would be void. In such cases, the court will always rely upon Section 114 Illustration (e) of the Evidence Act to draw a statutory presumption that official acts are regularly performed and if satisfied that the action in question is traceable to a statutory power, the courts will uphold such State action. (Paras 206 and 208)

Although the State Government could not have exercised powers under the provisions of Sections

13 and 14(1) of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act, 1887 for making available the jail premises for the purpose of holding the Sessions Court, the provisions of CrPC would be applicable under Section 9(6) thereof. (Para 209). Mohd. Shahabuddin v. State of Bihar, (2010) 4 SCC 653.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dalveer Bhandari[1] and Dr. M.K. Sharma[2], JJ. [Date of decision : 25-3-2010]

N. Mani v. Sangeetha Theatre, (2004) 12 SCC 278; P. Balakotaiah v. Union of India, AIR 1958 SC 232; Lekhraj Sathramdas Lalvani v. Custodian-cum-Managing Officer, AIR 1966 SC 334: (1966) 1 SCR 120; Peerless General Finance and Investment Co. Ltd. v. RBI, (1992) 2 SCC 343; BSE Brokers' Forum v. SEBI, (2001) 3 SCC 482, relied on [77] — S. 9(6) — Notification issued by State Government for making available jail premises for the purpose of holding the Sessions Court after notification was issued by High Court under S. 9(6) — Held (per curiam), valid. Mohd. Shahabuddin v. State of Bihar, (2010) 4 SCC 653.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dalveer Bhandari[1] and Dr. M.K. Sharma[2], JJ. [Date of decision : 25-3-2010]

[78] — S. 9(6) — Place of sitting of Sessions Court — Notification by High Court — Delay in publishing of notification in Official Gazette and in furnishing copy to accused — Consequences if any — Need for prejudice to accused — Held (per curiam), the said delay did not vitiate the trials against appellant, particularly when no prejudice was caused to appellant to defend himself — Moreover the said involving mixed questions of fact and law and pure questions of fact, could not be raised before the Supreme Court for the first time — Constitution of India — Article 136

Per Dalveer Bhandari, J.:

Initially the copy of the notification was not given to the appellant but on the directions of the Supreme Court the same was made available to the appellant. So there is no surviving grievance of the appellant as far as this aspect of the matter is concerned. [Paras 143(i) and 132]

Per Dr. M.K. Sharma, J.:

The High Court took all necessary steps to get the notification issued and published in the Official Gazette. If however Government Press took some time to get the notification published in the Official Gazette, the High Court cannot be blamed for it, nor could the notification be declared to be void particularly when it was so published in the Official Gazette, as it is established from the records, although after some delay. (Para 199)

The issue being raised, for the first time, at the time of hearing of the case before the Supreme Court cannot be permitted to be raised for the first time the reason that the issue being whether the Notification dated 20-5-2006 was supplied to appellant and the same was published in the gazette or not, is not a pure question of law but a mixed question of law and fact. The said facts were required to be urged evidentially before the courts below. Unless such a factual foundation is available, it is not possible to decide such a mixed question of law and fact. (Para 188)

The appellant also failed to prove and had also failed to plead before the writ court that the notification issued by the High Court is void on the ground of non-publication of the same in the Official Gazette. The appellant has not even pleaded such ground in the writ petition or in the memorandum of appeal nor placed any evidence to show that any effective order which was prejudicial to him was passed in any of the criminal cases during the aforesaid period. Instead, he took part in all the proceedings without any protest and now at the time of argument is making an effort to take up such issues, which again involve questions of fact, and therefore, cannot be allowed to be raised only at this stage. (Para 200). Mohd. Shahabuddin v. State of Bihar, (2010) 4 SCC 653.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dalveer Bhandari[1] and Dr. M.K. Sharma[2], JJ. [Date of decision : 25-3-2010]

Shakti Tubes Ltd. v. State of Bihar, (2009) 7 SCC 673, relied on

[79] — S. 9(6) — Place of sitting of Sessions Court — Place notified by High Court vis-à-vis place decided by Sessions Court itself — Nature of power exercised by High Court vis-à-vis power exercised by Sessions Court — Natural justice/audi alteram partem/hearing — Requirements of, if any — Held (per curiam), High Court exercises administrative power under first limb of S. 9(6) whereas Sessions Court exercises judicial power under second limb — Sessions Court, by virtue of very language of second limb, is required to afford opportunity of hearing to parties — Held (per Bhandari, J.), power of High Court under S. 9(6), being an administrative power, is subject to test of judicial review of administrative decisions — There is no statutory right of appellant to be heard — However, common law and principles laid down in the Constitution require that even in administrative action there must be minimum standards that are to be maintained — Thus, it has to be seen whether right to fair hearing has been denied to the appellant in exercise of power by High Court under S. 9(6) even if there is no statutory requirement for it — Principles of natural justice are essential to the framework of our laws and a protection against arbitrary actions — There is every duty of courts to judicially review administra-

tive actions — However, this is usually not to be applied blindly — High Court in view of extraordinary facts and circumstances of a particular case is empowered to change venue of a pending case/trial without hearing appellant and this would not violate appellant's fundamental rights under Arts. 14 and 21 or any other provision of the Constitution — On facts, there was no violation of principles of natural justice in shifting trials of cases of appellant from a regular court to a Special Court — Held (per Sharma, J. partly disagreeing on law but entirely concurring on facts), the legislature has consciously excluded applicability of principles of audi alteram partem in the first part of S. 9(6) and thus has omitted the requirement of hearing when High Court exercises that power — An administrative order when passed by a competent authority may not necessarily be required to be issued only after due compliance with principles of natural justice — Hence, High Court was under no requirement to follow and to comply with the rule of audi alteram partem before issuing the impugned order — Further held (per Sharma, J.), power of Sessions Court under second limb of S. 9(6) is an exception to the general rule that place of sitting should be determined by High Court — Such an interpretation flows from words "ordinarily" and "but" occurring in S. 9(6) — Sessions Court's power being an exception has to be construed strictly — Such power can be exercised only when "it will tend to the general convenience of the parties and witnesses" — Compared to this, High Court's power is much wider — On facts held (per curiam), notifications issued by High Court and State Government that all sessions trials pending against the appellant would be conducted inside jail premises, were valid

The appellant was aggrieved by Notification dated 20-5-2006 issued by Patna High Court under Section 9(6) of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973, declaring that premises of District Jail, Siwan, would be the place of sitting of the Court of Session for trial of sessions cases pending against the appellant. The reason given in the Notification for selecting the District Jail as the venue for conducting trials against the appellant was the "expeditious trial of sessions cases". Pursuant to this Notification, the State Government also issued two notifications making available the jail premises for conducting trial against the appellant.

The appellant challenged the Notification dated 20-5-2006 inter alia on the ground that no opportunity of hearing was given to him before issuing the notification. The High Court dismissed the appellant's writ petition.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held:

Per Bhandari, J.

Since exercise of power under Section 9(6) is an administrative function, the test is whether decision of the High Court stands up to the test of judicial review of administrative decisions. Wording of Section 9(6) shows that there is no need for the High Court to give a hearing while deciding venue of trial. It is only if Sessions Court is moving the place of trial that parties have a right to a hearing. There is no statutory right for the appellant to be heard. However, common law and the principles laid down in the Constitution lay down that even in administrative action there must be minimum standards that are to be maintained. Thus, it has to be seen whether right to fair hearing has been denied to the appellant even if there is no statutory provision for it. The principles of natural justice are essential to the framework of our laws and a protection against arbitrary actions. There is every duty of the courts to judicially review administrative actions. However, this is usually not to be applied blindly. (Paras 91 to 94 and 97)

There are situations where the action of the State is prima facie void and therefore has to be set aside. If the denial of a public trial was a prima facie case of vitiation of natural justice, the court would be justified in exercising judicial review. However, when there is no prima facie violation of the principles of natural justice then one must test whether there is need for a judicial review of the orders of shifting the trials. In the present case, there is no violation of the principles of natural justice in shifting the trials of the cases of the appellant from a regular court to a Special Court. (Paras 99 to 101)

The High Court in view of the extraordinary facts and circumstances of a particular case is empowered to change the venue of a pending case/trial without hearing the appellant and this would not violate the appellant's fundamental rights under Articles 14 and 21 or any other provision of the Constitution. [Para 143(iv)]

The decision to hold the trials of cases of the appellant in jail was taken in pursuance to the Notification dated 20-5-2006 issued by the High Court of Patna. The State Government issued two Notifications on 7-6-2006 in pursuance to the Notification of the High Court dated 20-5-2006. It became imperative for the State to issue the said notifications because the new venue of the trial i.e. Siwan Jail was not within the control of the High Court. These three notifications, one issued by the State Government on 7-6-2006 are valid and were issued in consonance with the provisions of law. [Paras 143(ii) and (iii)]

A large number of the appellant's supporters may create unrest in front of courtroom and much larger security would be required to protect witnesses, court officers and the appellant. The letter written by the Superintendent of Police of Siwan indicates that it is not possible to hold the appellant's trials in open court as it may affect trials of other civil and criminal cases that are going on in the same court building. There is no violation of principles of natural justice in shifting trials of cases of the appellant from a regular court to a Special Court. In the instant case apart from the appellant's 38 lawyers, the public and the press had access to the court proceedings. Siwan Jail is only one kilometre from the Siwan Court. The court proceedings were regularly reported in the press. So in the instant case no real prejudice has been caused to the appellant. [Paras 100, 109, 111, 117, 139 to 142 and 143(v)]

Per Sharma, J. (partly disagreeing on law but entirely concurring on facts)

The power conferred on the High Court under Section 9(6) is the power to determine the place or places where the Court of Session should ordinarily hold its sittings. The second part of Section 9(6) which immediately follows the first part opens with the word "but", thereby carving out an exception to the general rule that the venue of Court of Session should be the place notified by the High Court. That the power of Court of Session to fix the venue is an exception to the aforesaid general rule is also indicated by the use of the word "ordinarily" in the first part of Section 9(6) CrPC. The Court of Session is endowed with power to hold its sittings at any place in a Sessions Division other than that notified by the High Court. However, being an exception, CrPC specifically mandates in the second part of Section 9(6) for observance of a special procedure contemplating compliance with the rule of audi alteram partem and also for obtaining consent of parties before the Court of Session may hold its sittings at a place other than the place or places notified by the High Court. Being an exception to the general rule, the power of the Court of Session to change venue of a trial is circumscribed and can be exercised by the Court of Session only on fulfilment of the aforesaid conditions and only on the ground that such change in venue of trial will tend to the general convenience of parties and witnesses and cannot be exercised for any other purpose or on any other ground. (Paras 167 and 168)

The said power of the Sessions Court can be exercised only with reference to a "particular case" which connotes a single or specific case as opposed to a bunch or class of cases. Being an exception to the general rule, the conditions, subject to fulfilment of which power to shift venue of trial may be exercised by Court of Session, have to be strictly construed. Where conditions specified under the second part of Section 9(6) of the Code are not complied with, the Court of Session has no power to shift venue. In such a case, the power of shifting the venue continues to lie with the High Court. In the present case, essential conditions ingrained in second part of Section 9(6) are not applicable inasmuch as neither inconvenience to the parties or witnesses was ever perceived or recorded by the Court of the Additional Sessions Judge nor was the venue of trial shifted for a particular case. On the contrary, it was shifted for the entire class of cases that were pending against the appellant, by the High Court. (Paras 169 and 170)

It is a well-settled principle in law that the court cannot read anything into a statutory provision which is plain and unambiguous. The language employed in a statute is a determinative factor of the legislative intent. If the language of the enactment is clear and unambiguous, it would not be proper for the courts to add any words thereto and evolve some legislative intent, not found in the statute. (Para 179)

Further, it is a well-established principle of statutory interpretation that the legislature is specially precise and careful in its choice of language. Thus, if a statutory provision is enacted by the legislature, which prescribes a condition at one place but not at some other place in the same provision, the only reasonable interpretation which can be resorted to by the courts is that such was the intention of the legislature and that the provision was consciously enacted in that manner. In such cases, it will be wrong to presume that such omission was inadvertent or that by incorporating the condition at one place in the provision the legislature also intended the condition to be applied at some other place in that provision. (Para 180)

The power of the High Court under Section 9(6) to notify a particular place or places where the Court of Session should ordinarily hold its sitting is an administrative power unlike the power of the Court of Session under the second part of Section 9(6) which is judicial in nature. Being so, the High Court was under no obligation to observe rule of audi alteram partem. The second part of Section 9(6) expressly requires the Court of Session to afford opportunity of hearing but there is no such requirement in first part. The omission is to be construed as a conscious decision on the part of the legislature for it intended to exclude such a requirement when such power is to be exercised by the High Court. An administrative order when passed by a competent authority may not necessarily be required to be issued only after due compliance with the principles of natural justice. (Paras 173, 177 and 178)

The intention of the legislature for providing an opportunity of hearing in matters of transfer of criminal cases can be gathered from the language used in Section 9(6) wherein the legislature desired that there should be an opportunity of hearing that is so specifically stated in the language itself and where the legislature desired that there should be a power of the High Court to fix place or places of sittings of a Sessions Court for holding its trial, it has so mentioned explicitly by excluding the rules of natural justice from its ambit thereby excluding the principles of audi alteram partem. (Para 174)

On a detailed and proper interpretation of Section 9(6) CrPC there can be only one opinion that it was not necessary for the High Court to observe or comply with the rule of audi alteram partem before notifying a shift in the venue of the trial. Consequently, the High Court was under no requirement to follow and to comply with the rule of audi alteram partem before issuing the impugned Notification dated 20-5-2006. (Para 181)

Power under Section 9(6) is vested in the High Court and in exercise of the said power the High Court had issued a Notification on 20-5-2006 which was also published in the Official Gazette. The subsequent notification issued by the State of Bihar appears to be a surplusage, which was issued for making available the jail premises for the purpose of holding the Sessions Court. The competent authority as envisaged under law having issued a notification for constituting and establishing a Sessions Court within District Jail, Siwan, any further notification issued by the State Government making the jail premises available for the said purposes cannot be said to be illegal and void. (Para 203)

By issuing one of the two impugned notifications the State of Bihar, in exercise of its powers conferred under Section 11 CrPC and in consultation with the Patna High Court, was pleased to establish a Court of Judicial Magistrate, First Class inside District Jail, Siwan to hold its sitting inside the jail premises for the trial of cases pending against the appellant in the Court of the Judicial Magistrate, First Class. The impugned notification satisfies all the requirements and all the four corners as envisaged under Section 11 CrPC and, therefore, the said notification is legal and valid inasmuch as the same was issued by the competent authority and also in full compliance with the requirements and the safeguards provided in the said provisions. (Para 201)

There is no infirmity in establishing both the Special Courts i.e. the Court of the Additional District and Sessions Judge to try sessions cases pending against the appellant and the Court of the Judicial Magistrate, First Class to try the cases pending against the appellant in the Court of the Judicial Magistrate, First Class, inside the premises of District Jail, Siwan as the notification under Section 9(6) was issued in accordance with the provisions of law by the High Court of Patna and subsequent notification was also issued by the Government of Bihar in consultation with the Patna High Court. (Para 204)

Expeditious disposal of cases is also a factor and a necessary concomitant to administration of justice and hallmark of fair administration of justice. Since venue of trial of a group or a class of cases was shifted by establishing and constituting a court within District Jail, Siwan, the same cannot be said to be void or invalid in any manner. (Para 211)

The correspondence spells out why the trial of all the appellant's cases should be held at one place. The reasons given in the aforesaid communications were sufficient to arrive at a conclusion which was rightly done by the High Court to have the trial of all the appellant's cases pending against him shifted. (Para 212)

So far as the contention as to whether or not such power as envisaged under Section 9(6) CrPC could be exercised in a pending case is concerned, there is no reason as to why the said power should not be applicable even to pending cases. (Para 212). Mohd. Shahabuddin v. State of Bihar, (2010) 4 SCC 653.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dalveer Bhandari[1] and Dr. M.K. Sharma[2], JJ. [Date of decision : 25-3-2010]

Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1988) 3 SCC 609: 1988 SCC (Cri) 711; Sahai Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1917 Lah 311; State Bank of Patiala v. S.K. Sharma, (1996) 3 SCC 364: 1996 SCC (L&S) 717; Wiseman v. Borneman, 1971 AC 297 (HL); R. v. Gaming Board for Great Britain, ex p Benaim, (1970) 2 QB 417: (1970) 2 WLR 1009: (1970) 2 All ER 528 (CA); Alfred Thangarajah Durayappah of Chundikuly v. W.J. Fernando, (1967) 2 AC 337 (CA); Sheppard v. Maxwell, 16 L Ed 2d 600: 384 US 333 (1966); Press-Enterprise Co. v. Superior Court, 92 L Ed 2d 1: 478 US 1 (1986); State of Oregon v. James Donald Jackson, 178 or App 233: 36 P 3d 500 (2001); Stephen Gary Howard v. Commonwealth of Virginia, 6 Va App 132 (1988); Adolph Dammerau v. Commonwealth of Virginia, 3 Va App 285 (1986); People v. Robert England, 83 Cal App 4th 772 (2000); Malloch v. Aberdeen Corpn., (1971) 1 WLR 1578: (1971) 2 All ER 1278 (HL); K.L. Tripathi v. SBI, (1984) 1 SCC 43: 1984 SCC (L&S) 62; George v. Secy. of State for the Environment, (1979) 77 LGR

689 (CA); R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (2000) 7 SCC 129: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1293; Jankinath Sarangi v. State of Orissa, (1969) 3 SCC 392; Ajit Kumar Nag v. Indian Oil Corpn. Ltd., (2005) 7 SCC 764: 2005 SCC (L&S) 1020; Union of India v. Col. J.N. Sinha, (1970) 2 SCC 458; Haradhan Saha v. State of W.B., (1975) 3 SCC 198: 1974 SCC (Cri) 816; Olga Tellis v. Bombay Municipal Corpn., (1985) 3 SCC 545; Carborundum Universal Ltd. v. CBDT, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 462; Ansal Properties & Industries Ltd. v. State of Haryana, (2009) 3 SCC 553, relied on

Scott v. Scott, 1913 AC 417: (1911-13) All ER Rep 1 (HL); ECIL v. B. Karunakar, (1993) 4 SCC 727: 1993 SCC (L&S) 1184: (1993) 25 ATC 704; A.K. Kraipak v. Union of India, (1969) 2 SCC 262, referred to

Naresh Shridhar Mirajkar v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1967 SC 1: (1966) 3 SCR 744; Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, (1978) 1 SCC 248; DTC v. Mazdoor Congress, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 600: 1991 SCC (L&S) 1213; D.K. Yadav v. J.M.A. Industries Ltd., (1993) 3 SCC 259: 1993 SCC (L&S) 723; Krishan Lal v. State of J&K, (1994) 4 SCC 422: 1994 SCC (L&S) 885: (1994) 27 ATC 590; State of Karnataka v. Kuppuswamy Gownder, (1987) 2 SCC 74: 1987 SCC (Cri) 280; Ranbir Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1995) 4 SCC 92: 1995 SCC (Cri) 728; Zahira Habibullah H. Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 4 SCC 158: 2004 SCC (Cri) 999; Ranjit Singh v. Hon'ble the Chief Justice, ILR 1985 Del 388; State of W.B. v. Anwar Ali Sarkar, AIR 1952 SC 75: 1952 Cri LJ 510, cited

Durga Das Basu: Administrative Law, 6th Edn. 2004, p. 288, relied on

State of W.B. v. Anwar Ali Sarkar, AIR 1952 SC 75: 1952 Cri LJ 510, distinguished [80] — S. 9(6) — Recoveries made before arrest — Whether admissible in evidence — "Person must be accused of an offence" and "in custody of a police officer" — Implication of — Held, not essential that accused must be under formal arrest — In instant case, appellants were under grave suspicion suspected to be accused in kidnapping and murder; V and J had attempted to run away, while S was in process of destroying evidence, when they were apprehended, put in police custody, whereafter they made disclosure statements — Hence, such incriminating material admissible in evidence — Consequently, submission that S. 27 would be operable only after formal arrest under S. 46(1) CrPC, rejected — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 27 (Paras 36 to 42). Vikram Singh v. State of Punjab, (2010) 3 SCC 56.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 25-1-2010]

State of U.P. v. Deoman Upadhyaya, AIR 1960 SC 1125: 1960 Cri LJ 1504, followed

Pakala Narayana Swami v. King Emperor, (1938-39) 66 IA 66: AIR 1939 PC 47, relied on [81] — S. 9(6) — Sessions Court's power to decide place of its sitting — Held (per Sharma, J.), is exercisable in a single or specific case as opposed to a bunch or class of cases [though the High Court's power is not so restricted. Mohd. Shahabuddin v. State of Bihar, (2010) 4 SCC 653.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dalveer Bhandari[1] and Dr. M.K. Sharma[2], JJ. [Date of decision : 25-3-2010]

[82] — Ss. 9(6), 194, 327 and 2(p) — High Court's order under S. 9(6) for holding sessions trial in jail premises, held, valid and legal — High Court's power to notify place or places of sitting of Sessions Court — Nature and scope of — Whether High Court competent to fix place of sitting of Sessions Court at a place other than the ordinary place of sitting for a particular case only — High Court need not afford hearing to accused before fixing place of sitting of Sessions Court — "Open Court" in S. 327 — Meaning of — Restrictions which can be imposed by Court — Sessions Court holding trial within jail premises pursuant to order of High Court under S. 9(6), having regard to the unprecedented violent situation then prevailing, held, deemed to be an open court — Scope of High Court's power to issue 'special order' under S. 194 — High Court can allot a case to a particular Judge

Per Oza, J.

Under S. 9(6), CrPC the High Court has the jurisdiction to specify the place or places where ordinarily a Court of Session may sit within the division. So far as any particular case is to be taken at a place other than the normal place of sitting it is only permissible under the second part of subclause with the consent of parties and that decision has to be taken by the trial court itself. Thus by the notification issued under S. 9(6) the High Court has authority only to fix the place of sitting of the Sessions Court generally. Therefore, by the notification under S. 9(6) in the present case, the High Court could be taken to have notified that Tihar Jail is also one of the places of sitting of the Sessions Court in the Sessions Division ordinarily. That means apart from the two places Tis Hazari and New Delhi, the High Court by notification also notified Tihar Jail as one of the places where ordinarily a Sessions Court could hold its sittings. In this view of the matter, there is no error if the sessions trial is held in Tihar Jail after such a notification has been issued by the High Court.

The last part of S. 194, CrPC authorises the High Court to allot the case to a particular Judge keeping in view the fact that in certain cases the Sessions Judge may not like to allot and may report to the High Court or either of the parties may move an application for transfer and under these circumstances it may become necessary for the High Court to allot a particular case to a particular Judge.

As soon as a court holds trial in a venue fixed for such trial, it is deemed to be an open court under S. 327, irrespective of the place of trial — whether it is a private house or a jail and everyone has a right to go and attend the trial.

Unless on facts it is established that what is provided in S. 327 was prevented or was not permitted, i.e. unless there is evidence or material on record to suggest that on the facts in the particular case public at large was not permitted to go or someone was prevented from attending the trial or that the trial was in camera, merely because trial was held at a particular place it could not be said to be a trial which was not open to public. In this case the Delhi High Court by notification made Tihar Jail also as one of the places where a Sessions Court could ordinarily sit and in this case therefore, the trial was held at this place. There is no material at all to suggest that anyone who wanted to attend the trial was prevented from so doing or one who wanted to go into the courtroom was not allowed to do so and in absence of any such material on actual facts all these legal arguments lose their significance. In Tihar Jail a person has to pass through two gates, he has to sign on the gate and has to have a pass or a clearance. But in the modern times especially in the context of the circumstances as they exist, it could not be said that trial in Tihar Jail ceased to be a public trial. Merely suggesting the difficulties in reaching the jail will not be enough. In fact without an appropriate order it could not be said that what is contemplated under S. 327 or under Art. 21 was not made available to the accused in this case and therefore it could not be contended that there was any prejudice at the trial.

The concept of right to open trial under Art. 21 is based on the American decisions where the concept of open trial has developed in due course of time whereas so far as India is concerned here even before the Constitution our criminal practice always contemplated a trial which is open to public. The procedure established by law within the meaning of Art. 21 is the procedure established by law as was on the day on which the Constitution was adopted. The procedure established by law even before the Constitution was enacted was provided under S. 352 of the old CrPC which corresponds to S. 327 of the new CrPC. It cannot be contended that by repealing the old CrPC the effect of the procedure could be taken away.

Per Ray, J. (concurring)

The High Court can fix a place other than the court where the sittings are ordinarily held if the High Court so notifies for the ends of justice. However, the use of the word "ordinarily" by itself signifies that the High Court in exercise of its powers under S. 9(6) may order the holding of court in a place other than the court where sittings are ordinarily held if the High Court thinks it expedient to do so and for other valid reasons such as security of the accused as well as of the witnesses and also of the court. The order of the High Court notifying the trial of a particular case in a place other than the court is not a judicial order but an administrative order. In this case because of the surcharged atmosphere and for reasons of security, the High Court ordered that the trial be held in Tihar Jail. Therefore, in view of S. 327, CrPC it cannot be said that the trial is not an open trial because of its having been held in Tihar Jail as there is nothing to show that the public or the friends and relations of the accused were prevented from having access to the place of trial provided the space of the court could accommodate them. Though public trial or trial in open court is the rule yet in cases where the ends of justice would be defeated if the trial is held in public, as it is in the present case, the court has got inherent jurisdiction to hold trial in camera. Therefore, the holding of trial in jail cannot be said to be illegal and bad and the entire trial cannot be questioned as vitiated if the High Court thinks it expedient to hold the trial in jail.

Per Shetty, J. (concurring)

Sub-section (6) of S. 9, CrPC can be divided into two parts. The first part provides power to the High Court to notify the place or places for the Court of Session to hold its sittings for disposal of cases. The second part deals with the power of the Court of Session in any particular case to hold its sittings at a place not notified by the High Court. The first part providing power to High Court is an administrative power, intended to further administration of justice. The second part relating to the power of the Sessions Court is a judicial power of the Court intended to avoid hardship to the parties and witnesses in a particular case. One is independent of and unconnected with the other. The judicial power of the Court of Session is of limited operation, the exercise of which is conditioned by mutual consent of the parties in the first place. Secondly, the exercise of that power has to be narrowly tailored to the convenience of all concerned. It cannot be made use of for any other purpose. This limited judicial power of the Court of Session should not be put across to curtail the vast administrative power of the High Court. Therefore, the argument that the first part of S. 9(6) should be read along with the second part thereof has, in the context, no place.

The words "place or places" used in S. 9(6) apparently indicate that there could be more than one place for the sitting of the Court of Session. The different places may be notified by different notifications. There may be a general notification as well as a special notification. The general notification may specify the place for the class of cases where Court of Session shall sit for disposal. The special notification may specify the same place or a different place in respect of a particular case.

The High Court while appointing under S. 9(4), CrPC a Sessions Judge of one division to sit at such place or places in another division for disposal of cases, need not direct him to sit only at the ordinary place of sittings of the Court of Session. There is no such constraint in S. 9(4). The High Court may also issue a separate notification under S. 9(6) specifying the place or places where that Sessions Judge should sit for disposal of cases.

Section 194 provides power to the High Court to make a special order directing an Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge of the same division to try certain specified cases or a particular case. If the High Court thinks that the Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge should hold the court at a specified place, a separate notification could be issued under S. 9(6).

It is unnecessary to hear the accused or anybody else before exercising the power under S. 9(6). Such a hearing, however, is required to be given by the Court of Session if it wants to change the normal place of sitting, in any particular case, for the general convenience of parties and witnesses.

The right of an accused to have a public trial in our country has been expressly provided in the Code. No right similar to the Sixth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution has been guaranteed to the accused under our Constitution.

The argument that jail can never be regarded as a proper place for a public trial is too general. Jail is not a prohibited place for trial of criminal cases. Nor the jail trial can be regarded as an illegitimate trial. There can be trial in jail premises for reasons of security to the parties, witnesses and for other valid reasons. The enquiry or trial, however, must be conducted in open court.

The main part of sub-section (1) of S. 327, CrPC embodies the principle of public trial. It significantly uses the words "open court". It means that all justice shall be done openly and the courts shall be open to public. It means that the accused is entitled to a public trial and the public may claim access to the trial. There should not even be an impression that it is a secret trial. The judicial process should be thrown open to the public at every stage. The Presiding Judge must have full control of the court house. The accused must have all facilities to have a fair trial and all safeguards to avoid prejudice. But the public trial does not mean that every person shall be allowed to attend the court. Nor the courtroom shall be large enough to accommodate all persons. The court may restrict the public access for valid reasons depending upon the particular case and situation. The public trial is an orderly trial. The Presiding Officer may, therefore, remove any person from the court premises if his conduct is undesirable. If exigencies of a situation require, the person desiring to attend the trial may be asked to obtain a pass from the authorised person. Such visitors may be even asked to disclose their names and sign registers. There may be also security checks. These and other like restrictions will not impair the right of the accused or that of the public. They are essential to ensure fairness of the proceedings and safety to all concerned. The assassination of Smt. Indira Gandhi had provoked widespread violence threatening the security of the State and the maintenance of law and order. In the circumstances then prevailing the decision of the High Court to direct that the trial of the case should take place in Tihar Jail is justified. Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1988) 3 SCC 609: 1988 SCC (Cri) 711: AIR 1988 SC 1883.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.L. Oza[1], B.C. Ray[2] and K. Jagannatha Shetty[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1988]

Sahai Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1971 Lah 311: 18 Cri LJ 852; Prasanta Kumar Mukherjee v. State, AIR 1952 Cal 91 and Kailash Nath Agarwal v. Emperor, AIR 1947 All 436: 1947 All LJ 253: 48 Cri LJ 868, approved

— S. 10(3) See Ss. 306, 307 and 10(3)

— S. 11 See Ss. 6 and 11

See also Ss. 9 and 11

[83] — S. 11 — Courts of Judicial Magistrates — Establishing of Court of Judicial Magistrate, First Class inside jail premises for conducting trials against appellant — Held (per curiam), notification issued by State Government in consultation with High Court, was valid. Mohd. Shahabuddin v. State of Bihar, (2010) 4 SCC 653.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dalveer Bhandari[1] and Dr. M.K. Sharma[2], JJ. [Date of decision : 25-3-2010]

[84] — Ss. 11, 12, 13, 190, 129 and 151 — Smuggling — Powers of BSF to take pre-emptive action — Proper exercise of — Adverse remarks and enquiry ordered by SDJM before whom suspected smuggler produced — Propriety — Respondent 1 arrested near Indo-Bangladesh border with 22 quintals of sugar, without any documents, by BSF personnel — He, together with the seized articles handed over to the police, who produced him before the SDJM — SDJM while directing his release immediately, inter alia, observing that on the direction of BSF personnel, the police forwarded the accused for no good reason; carrying of sugar was not a penal offence and BSF had no authority to seize sugar on the public road and the police should not have taken any person from BSF without being satisfied that any offence was committed — He, further, by the impugned order directing enquiry — Held, observations made by the SDJM were inappropriate since the trial was still pending and all these matters were to be decided therein — Hence, while barring enquiry, directions issued to complete the trial expeditiously, which was pending for seven years (Paras 3 and 7). Commandant, 68 Bn. BSF, Gakulnagar v. Arjun Das, (2006) 12 SCC 129: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 566: (2006) 47 AIC 950 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2006]

[85] — Ss. 11, 13, 14, 18, 177 to 181, 190 and Ch. XXXI — Special Courts — Transfer of a pending case to a court designated to try CID cases — Further cognizance taken by Designated Court, earlier cognizance having been taken by court trying regular police cases — Implication — Whether two separate cases involving two charge-sheets — Held, the transfer cannot be held to be a case where two charge-sheets were filed

It is also not a case where two charge-sheets were filed before two different courts. The court designated to deal with the matters wherein investigation had been carried out by CID, is located at Chittoor. It was in the aforementioned situation that the Sessions Judge transferred the case pending in the Tirupati Court to the Designated Court at Chittoor. Cognizance of further offence had also been taken by the Chittoor Court. (Para 17). State of A.P. v. A.S. Peter, (2008) 2 SCC 383: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 427: AIR 2008 SC 1052.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-2007]

[86] — S. 11(1) — Notification establishing Court of Judicial Magistrate — Necessity of consultation with High Court — Criminal cases relating to demolition of disputed structure viz. Ram Janam Bhumi/Babri Masjid — Two cases (Crime Nos. 197 and 198 of 1992) registered, first one against unnamed kar sevaks and second one against eight persons besides others — State Government in consultation with High Court established Court of Special Judicial Magistrate, First Class at Raebareilly to try cases relating to Crime No. 198 — Notification under S. 11(1) issued by Government in consultation with High Court establishing Special Court of Judicial Magistrate, First Class for the area comprising the entire State with place of sitting at Lucknow to try, inquire and commit to Court of Session cases relating to Crime No. 197 — No mention made therein as regards Crime No. 198 — Subsequently, amendment notification issued by Government without consultation with High Court transferring Crime No. 198 from Raebareilly Court to Addl. CJM, Lucknow (Special Court) — Accordingly, Magistrate at Raebareilly directed transfer of records concerned to Addl. CJM, Lucknow — Addl. CJM, Lucknow then framed charges in respect of Crime No. 197 as well as Crime No. 198 — Accused persons filed revision before High Court — Single Judge of High Court set aside the order of Addl. CJM, Lucknow insofar as it related to Crime No. 198 covered by the amendment notification on ground of want of consultation with High Court but observed that the mistake could be cured by issuing a fresh notification in consultation with High Court — Order of Single Judge of High Court challenged before Supreme Court in SLPs — Supreme Court dismissed the SLPs — Present review petition filed before Supreme Court raising limited question whether the Single Judge was justified in holding that amendment notification was invalid for want of consultation with High Court — Held, there is no error apparent on the face of the record, nor do the facts and circumstances warrant Supreme Court's interference with its earlier order — Review petition is without merit — Though Single Judge of High Court observed that the mistake in issuing the amendment notification could be rectified, it is for the State Government to take appropriate steps in the matter, if it so desires — Constitution of India — Art. 137. Mohd. Aslam v. State of U.P., (2007) 12 SCC 667: AIR 2007 SC 1901: (2007) 4 All LJ 319: 2007 Cri LJ 3200.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-2007]

[87] — Ss. 11(1) proviso, 4(1) & (2), 3(4)(a), 26 and 245 — Special Court (Economic Offences) created by a notification for trial of offences relating to twelve Acts including the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 — Jurisdiction of, to try the offences under IPC — Prosecution under Ss. 420, 467, 468, 471, 120-B IPC and S. 5, Imports and Exports (Control) Act — Having regard to the relevant provisions contained in CrPC as well as the language of the notification, held, the said Court had jurisdiction to try the offences under IPC — On facts, High Court erred in referring to the provisions of special statutes like PC Act, EC Act and TADA Act while drawing the conclusion that in absence of any specific provision conferring power upon the Special Court (Economic Offences) to try the offences under IPC, the said Court had no jurisdiction to try the said offences — Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 — S. 5

Sub-section (1) of Section 4 CrPC lays down that all offences under IPC shall be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the provisions contained in the said Code. Sub-section (2) of the same section lays down that all offences under any other law shall be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the same provisions, but subject to any enactment for the time being in force regulating the manner or place of investigating, inquiring into, trying or otherwise dealing with such offences. The Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 does not make any provision for regulating the manner of trying of offences under the said Act and, therefore, they have to be inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the provisions of CrPC. (Para 5)

Further, in view of specific provision contained in clause (a) of sub-section (4) of Section 3 CrPC, it is only a Judicial Magistrate who can try an offence under the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 and under Section 26 CrPC such a Magistrate has also the jurisdiction to try those offences under IPC, which the respondents are alleged to have committed. (Para 5)

That apart, the source of power for the State Government to issue a notification for creation of a Special Court is proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 11 CrPC and this provision nowhere says that upon issuance of such a notification the Judicial Magistrate concerned would be divested of the power and jurisdiction which he otherwise had under CrPC. The Judicial Magistrate, First Class, who by virtue of the notification became a Special Court (Economic Offences) was not divested of the jurisdiction which he otherwise possessed under Section 26 CrPC. Further, the language of the notification also does not show that powers or jurisdiction of a Judicial Magistrate, who is to perform the functions of a Special Court (Economic Offences) to try the offences under the Acts mentioned in the schedule are being affected or curtailed in any manner. (Para 6)

The High Court has referred to Section 5 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, Section 12-AA of the Essential Commodities Act and Section 9 of the Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, and on the basis of these provisions, it has held that in the absence of any specific provision conferring power upon the Special Court (Economic Offences) to try the offences under IPC the said Special Court would not have the jurisdiction to try the offences under IPC. The aforesaid reasoning of the High Court is wholly fallacious. The enactments referred to above by the High Court are special statutes which themselves created the offences, made specific provision for appointment of a Special Judge or a Designated Court for trial of offences, laid down their powers and also made specific provisions regarding procedure which was to be followed by such courts. Such is not the position here. The State Government has merely exercised power under proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 11 CrPC for creation of a Special Court. The Acts mentioned in the schedule to the notification issued by the State Government do not themselves provide for creation of any Special Court nor do they lay down the procedure for trial of the offences therein. The only effect of the notification was that instead of the trials being held in the courts of various Judicial Magistrates posted in Bangalore Metropolitan Area and in the district of Bangalore, they were all to be tried by one court. (Para 7)

Thus, the view taken by the High Court is wholly unsustainable in law and must be set aside. (Para 12). Dy. Chief Controller of Imports & Exports v. Roshanlal Agarwal, (2003) 4 SCC 139: 2003 SCC (Cri) 788: AIR 2003 SC 1900: 2003 Cri LJ 1698: (2003) 155 ELT 216.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2003]

— S. 12 See also S. 10, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 962 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 12 See also Ss. 11, 12, 13, 190, 129 and 151

[88] — S. 12 — A person covered by the definition of District Judge under Art. 236(a), Constitution of India can be classified in the category of Chief Judicial Magistrate or Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate under relevant rules — Punjab Superior Judicial Service Rules, 1963. M.L. Sharma v. Union of India, 1992 Supp (2) SCC 430: 1992 SCC (L&S) 946.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Ranganath Misra, C.J. and Kuldip Singh and S. Mohan, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-1991]

[89] — Ss. 12, 17 and 9 — Equation of posts — Chief Metropolitan Magistrate — Post of, held, has to be equated with, and placed in, the cadre of Civil Judge (Senior Division) and not in the cadre of District Judge

Justice Shetty Commission's recommendation that Chief Metropolitan Magistrates should be in the cadre of District Judges, is neither proper nor practical. The appeals from orders passed by the Chief Metropolitan Magistrates under the provisions of CrPC are required to be heard by the Additional Sessions Judge or the Sessions Judge. If both the Additional Sessions Judge and the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate belong to the same cadre, it will be paradoxical that any appeal from one officer in the cadre should go to another officer in the same cadre. If they belong to the same cadre then it would be possible that a junior officer would be acting as an Additional Sessions Judge while a senior may be holding the post of the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate. It cannot be that against the orders passed by the senior officer it is the junior officer who hears the appeal. In respect of the posts of the Chief Judicial Magistrates, Justice Shetty Commission has rightly recommended that they should be filled from amongst Civil Judges (Senior Division). Considering the nature and duties of the Chief Judicial Magistrates and the Chief Metropolitan Magistrates, the only difference being their location, the posts of Chief Judicial Magistrate and Chief Metropolitan Magistrate have to be equated and they have to be placed in the cadre of Civil Judge (Senior Division). (Para 31). All India Judges' Assn. (III) v. Union of India, (2002) 4 SCC 247: 2002 SCC (L&S) 508: AIR 2002 SC 1752: (2002) 3 SLR 271: (2002) 93 FLR 628.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.N. Kirpal, G.B. Pattanaik and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-3-2002]

Clarified in All India Judges Assn. v. Union of India, (2004) 13 SCC 572

— S. 13 See also S. 14, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 964 in Vol. 2

— S. 13 See Ss. 9, 13 and 18

See also Ss. 11, 12, 13, 190, 129 and 151

See also Ss. 11, 13, 14, 18, 177 to 181, 190 and Ch. XXXI

[90] — Ss. 13(1) and 18(1) — Appointment of Special Judicial Magistrates and Special Metropolitan Magistrates for speedy disposal of cases — Pendency of a large number of petty cases in criminal courts all over the country resulting in prolonged detention of undertrials — Rape victims detained in protective homes with a view to ensure their presence in the court without being tampered by the accused — State Governments directed to address letters of request to their High Courts for appointment of Special Judicial Magistrates/Special Metropolitan Magistrates — However, the High Court must be extremely careful in conferment of power and should do so based on the qualification and experience of each appointee — Withdrawal of petty cases with a view to reduce the burden on regular courts is improper — Category of cases under IPC which can be considered to be disposed of by Special Judicial Magistrates/Special Metropolitan Magistrates indicated

There can be little doubt that when the calendars of criminal courts (magistracy) in most of the States, barring a few geographically small States, are clogged and as a result, trial of cases is delayed, there is no justification for not setting a part of the machinery envisioned by the Code into motion. The basic idea in providing for the appointment of Judicial Magistrates, 2nd Class, is to ensure that petty cases do not occupy the time of the regular magisterial courts.

Retired judicial officers, officers of the Registry of District Courts and High Courts, as well as other government servants who have the specified experience and qualification, can be requested to accept appointments as part of social service and they may be paid a fee to meet their out-of-pocket expenses and honorarium. The High Courts will find any number of public-spirited, retired persons available to extend a helping hand to the criminal justice system in the country. The High Court must be extremely careful in the conferment of power and should do so based on the qualification and experience of each appointee.

In certain States, large numbers of such petty cases were withdrawn with a view towards reducing the burden on the regular courts. Unless a machinery is set up to ensure that such cases will not pile up once again after the system is put on an even keel by the withdrawal of such cases, such a measure will not serve any purpose but will, instead, send a wrong signal to the offenders that they can commit such infractions with impunity as nothing will happen to them, and ultimately the cases would be withdrawn. But, if an adequate machinery of the type envisioned by Sections 13 and 18 of the Code is placed in position to ensure that cases do not pile up in future and then the cases are withdrawn with a view to placing the system on an even keel, it will achieve the desired objective to bring about discipline in society and eradicate crime.

The Supreme Court issued the following directions:

(1) The notices against the States of Nagaland, Mizoram, Jammu and Kashmir and Sikkim and the Union Territories of Daman, Diu and Dadra and Nagar Haveli are hereby discharged.

(2) Out of the remaining States, those who have not addressed letters of request to their High Courts for appointment of Special Judicial Magistrates/ Special Metropolitan Magistrates, are directed to do so within a month's time so that petty cases may be dealt with by them relieving the regular Judicial Magistrates/Metropolitan Magistrates of such petty cases to enable them to deal with more serious cases.

(3) The High Courts of all such States, on receipt of the letter of request, shall determine the total number of such Special Magistrates required to deal with the pendency of petty cases and take immediate steps to appoint them.

(4) In cases where the High Court(s) has already received such a letter and has initiated action to appoint such Special Magistrates, it will, within one month, determine the total number of such Special Magistrates needed to dispose of the pendency of petty cases and ensure appointments at an early date, and

(5) The High Courts will also ensure that after the regular Magistrates are relieved of petty cases, they would dispose of a larger number of more serious cases so that the offenders are brought to book at an early date and the innocent are not unnecessarily vexed for long spells. Kadra Pahadiya v. State of Bihar, (1997) 4 SCC 287: 1997 SCC (Cri) 553: AIR 1997 SC 3750: 1997 Cri LJ 2232.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and B.N. Kirpal, J. [Date of decision: 19-3-1997]

[91] — Ss. 13(1) and 18(1) — Constitutionality of — Held, not violative of Art. 14 on ground that they confine appointment of Special Judicial Magistrate/Special Metropolitan Magistrate to persons holding any post under the Govt. — Words "who holds or has held any post under the Govt." do not exclude appointment of members of subordinate judiciary as Special Judicial Magistrate/Special Metropolitan Magistrate — Choice of appointment under these two provisions is left to the sole discretion of the High Court which shall specify the qualifications and experience of the appointees — Constitution of India — Article 14

Sections 13(1) and 18(1) confer power on the High Court to make the appointments and confer such of the powers as it deems proper from the whole bundle of powers conferrable by or under the Code on a Judicial Magistrate of the First or Second Class or conferrable on a Metropolitan Magistrate as the case may be. The choice of power to be conferred on the appointees under these two provisions is left to the sole discretion of the High Court. The proviso to each sub-section makes it clear that the appointee must possess such qualification and experience in relation to legal affairs as the High Court may by rules specify. Thirdly, the words "who holds or has held any post under the Government" do not necessarily exclude judicial officers belonging to the subordinate judiciary of a State/Union Territory. The sub-sections merely enable the High Court to appoint persons, other than judicial officers, who hold or have held any post under the Government and who possess the qualification and experience in relation to legal affairs as may be specified by the High Court. Parliament has taken care to leave the question of specifying the requirements for appointment to the High Court. There is, therefore, no warrant for placing a narrow construction on the words "who holds or has held any post under the Government" to confine them to appointments of government servants, present or past only, and to exclude members belonging to the subordinate Judicial Services. Special provision in the nature of an enabling provision had to be made because without such a provision, appointment of government servants, past or present, could not have been possible. Care has also been taken to ensure that the appointments are made of persons who have the necessary qualification and experience in relation to legal affairs which the High Court considers necessary for the exercise of power that may be conferred on the appointee. Furthermore, the duration of appointment has been restricted to one year at a time which would give the High Court an opportunity to observe the work of the appointee to enable it to decide whether or not to extend the appointment for a further period, if the workload justifies such continuance.

The idea underlying the provision for the appointment of Special Judicial Magistrates/Special Metropolitan Magistrates under Sections 13(1) and 18(1) respectively, is to relieve the regular courts of the burden of trying those cases which could be disposed of by such Magistrates. Parliament has advisedly left the decision as to the choice of power to be conferred on such Magistrates with the High Court. Once a request is received from the Central/State Government by the High Court, the ball is entirely in the High Court, and it is the High Court and the High Court alone which has to decide on the number of appointments to be made, the choice of personnel to be entrusted with such power, and the extent of power to be conferred on such persons. It is the High Court which has to specify the qualification and/or experience that would be required for the discharging of duties by such Magistrates. The period for which such appoint ments may be made must not exceed one year at a time, which shows that these are not appointments by way of regular entry into service, and are meant to be short-duration appointments to reduce the burden of pendency in regular courts. The appointees should view the call as a social obligation and not employment; indeed, as a social service to society. That is the spirit of Sections 13 and 18 and every appointee must take the call in that spirit and not expect payment as if they are in the service of the State/Union Territory concerned. That is the reason why the said two provisions expect persons who have retired or are about to retire from government service to be appointed to help clear the pendency. Kadra Pahadiya v. State of Bihar, (1997) 4 SCC 287: 1997 SCC (Cri) 553: AIR 1997 SC 3750: 1997 Cri LJ 2232.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and B.N. Kirpal, J. [Date of decision: 19-3-1997]

M. Narayanaswamy v. State of T.N., 1984 Cri LJ 1583 (Mad), overruled

— S. 14 See Ss. 4, 5 and 14

See also Ss. 7, 14 and 406, 410

See also Ss. 11, 13, 14, 18, 177 to 181, 190 and Ch. XXXI

— S. 17 See Ss. 12, 17 and 9

— S. 18 See Ss. 9, 13 and 18

See also Ss. 11, 13, 14, 18, 177 to 181, 190 and Ch. XXXI

— S. 18(1) See Ss. 13(1) and 18(1)

— S. 20 See also Ss. 21, 20 and 107

[92] — S. 20 — ADM — Object of appointment of and distinction from DM — Held, two authorities cannot be equated — Distinction also clear from fact that object of appointing ADM is to assist DM (Paras 11 and 12). State of Karnataka v. Dr. Praveen Bhai Thogadia, (2004) 4 SCC 684: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1387: AIR 2004 SC 2081: (2004) 2 KLT 342: 2004 Cri LJ 1825.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2004]

[93] — S. 20 — Term "District Magistrate" occurring in R. 4 of the 1977 U.P. Rules — Scope — Additional District Magistrate, held, not covered — Definition of the said term in S. 2(14) of the Act, held, not applicable to R. 4 — U.P. Kshettra Panchayats and Zila Panchayats Adhiniyam, 1961 (U.P. Act 32 of 1961) — Ss. 29, 237, 16 and 2(14) — Officer competent to hold enquiry against Adhyaksha or Upadhyaksha — Who is — U.P. Kshettra Panchayats and Zila Panchayats (Removal of Pramukhs, Up-Pramukhs, Adhyakshas and Upadhyakshas) Enquiry Rules, 1977, R. 4

The draftsman has clearly used in Rule 4 the term "District Magistrate" as distinct from the term "Additional District Magistrate". The definition of District Magistrate in clause (14) of Section 2 of the Act is not applicable if there be something repugnant in the subject or context. The very use of "Additional District Magistrate" and "District Magistrate" in the same Rule, consisting of one sentence, clearly suggests that the two terms are used in two different meanings. The High Court was right in holding that an inquiry against a Pramukh or Up-Pramukh could be held by an officer not below the rank of an Additional District Magistrate while as against Adhyaksha or Upadhyaksha the enquiry should be held by the District Magistrate. (Para 7). State of U.P. v. Janki Devi Pal, (2003) 3 SCC 117: AIR 2003 SC 1825: 2003 All LJ 921.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-2003]

[94] — Ss. 20 and 21 — Appointment of Magistrates under — Directions for — Solid Waste Disposal — Cleaning up Delhi — Time-bound directions issued — After expressing unhappiness over the high levels of pollution in Delhi, over the lack of accountability at all levels of the municipal authorities concerned, and over the inaction of respondent authorities in connection with the fourteen directions issued in Dr. B.L. Wadehra v. Union of India (1996) 2 SCC 594, the Supreme Court issuing time-bound orders, in addition to and not in derogation of those passed in Wadehra's case, that provisions of DMC Act, 1957, NDMC Act, 1994 and Cantonments Act, 1924 relating to sanitation, public health, and prohibition of accumulation of rubbish be scrupulously complied with; that charges and costs be levied for littering; that disposal of solid waste be ensured through scientific methods; that sites for landfills and compost plants be identified and handed over free of cost within four weeks from date of judgment; that fresh encroachments or unauthorised occupation of public land be prevented; that sanitation in existing slums be improved; that Magistrates be appointed under Ss. 20 and/or 21 CrPC to ensure compliance with DMC Act and NDMC Act and to try offences relating to littering, nuisance, sanitation and public health — Till scheme framed by authorities, Rs 50 fine directed to be imposed for littering — All authorities concerned to file compliance reports within 8 weeks — Management of Municipal Solid Waste (Management and Handling) Rules, 1991 — Delhi Municipal Corporation Act, 1957 (66 of 1957) — Ss. 42, 239-258, 350-364 and 397 — New Delhi Municipal Council Act, 1994 (44 of 1994) —

Ss. 11, 171-194, 261-280, 298-299, 308-309, 386-388 and 390 — Cantonments Act, 1924 (2 of 1924) — Ss. 118, 128-130, 130-A, 131-134 and 178 — Environment (Protection) Act, 1986 — S. 25. Almitra H. Patel v. Union of India, (2000) 2 SCC 679: AIR 2000 SC 1256.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.N. Kirpal, M.B. Shah and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-2000]

[95] — Ss. 20 and 144 — ADM passing orders under S. 144, whether on facts empowered to act in such manner — By virtue of notifications dt. 27-3-1974 and 6-7-1974, officers appointed as Executive Magistrates and to be ADMs — Held, therefore empowered to act under S. 144 CrPC — Onus of proof in case of challenge to authority of officer acting under S. 144 — Held, on person challenging authority, though administration not precluded from showing valid conferral of authority

The scheme of Section 20 leaves no manner of doubt that the District Magistrate and the ADM are two different and distinct authorities. But under Section 20(2) of the Code the latter may exercise all or any of the powers of a District Magistrate though the two authorities cannot be equated and the Additional District Magistrate cannot be called the District Magistrate. The distinction is also clear from the fact that the object of appointing ADM is to relieve the District Magistrate of some of his duties. (Para 12)

From the materials placed on record it is noted that on 27-3-1974 the Government of Karnataka had appointed w.e.f. 1-4-1974, the Special Deputy Commissioner of a district and the Headquarters Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner of a district who are appointed as Executive Magistrates in government notification dated 27-3-1974 to be Additional District Magistrates in such districts. The notification is numbered HD 10 PCR 74 dated 27-3-1974. The notification dated 27-3-1974 (Notification No. III) was issued vide SO No. 539 in exercise of powers conferred under sub-section (2) of Section 20 and was in supersession of government notification No. HD PCR 65 dated 4-5-1968 and Notification No. HD 33 PCR 73 dated 6-12-1973. The High Court was of the view that in a notification dated 9-7-1974 there was no reference to the notification dated 27-3-1974 by which the Executive Magistrates were vested with power under Section 144, who are appointed under the notification dated 27-5-1974 and which is altogether a different notification and not relatable to the notification dated 27-3-1974. (Para 14)

It was for the respondent who was questioning the authority of the ADM before the High Court to place the materials to substantiate his claim, though nothing precluded the authority also from placing the relevant proceedings, if there had been any such. Since the respondent whose duty it was, did not produce the notification, if at all, adverse inference should have been drawn against him. From the mere non-production alone, the conclusion should not have been arrived at that the ADM had no power to pass the order. The confusion arose because of certain inaccuracies in the dates. (Para 15)

The ADM who passed the order in this case was appointed under the notification dated 27-3-1974. The copies of correct notifications have been placed on record by learned counsel for the appellant State. On consideration thereof, the inevitable conclusion which follows is that the ADM had jurisdiction by virtue of his being appointed as ADM. This position is crystal clear from reading the notifications dated 27-3-1974 and 6-7-1974. The conclusions to the contrary arrived at by the High Court cannot be sustained. (Paras 14 and 15). State of Karnataka v. Praveen Bhai Thogadia (Dr.), (2004) 4 SCC 684: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1387: AIR 2004 SC 2081: (2004) 2 KLT 342: 2004 Cri LJ 1825.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2004]

— S. 20(1) See also Ss. 164(1), 167, 3, 6, 20(1) and (4)

[96] — Ss. 20(1), (2) and (5) — Executive Magistrate — State Government has first to appoint a person as Executive Magistrate and then only he can be appointed as Addl. DM or DM — Words "as many persons" in sub-s. (1) include Commissioner of Police and as such State Govt. can appoint a Commissioner of Police in a metropolitan area as an Executive Magistrate — Reading sub-ss. (1), (2) and (3) in conjunction, held, State Govt. has power to appoint the Commissioner of Police of Brihan Mumbai, which is a metropolitan area, as an Executive Magistrate and further appoint him as an Addl. DM, who shall have powers of a DM for the purposes of Ss. 18 and 20 of Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act — Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act, 1956 — Ss. 18 and 20

When an expression is capable of more than one meaning, the court would attempt to resolve the ambiguity in a manner consistent with the purpose of the provision, having regard to the great consequences of the alternative constructions. (Para 23). A.N. Roy v. Suresh Sham Singh, (2006) 5 SCC 745: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 75: AIR 2006 SC 2677.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-7-2006]

Anwar Hasan Khan v. Mohd. Shafi, (2001) 8 SCC 540, relied on

— S. 20(2) See Ss. 20(1), (2) and (5)

— S. 20(4) See Ss. 164(1), 167, 3, 6, 20(1) and (4)

— S. 20(5) See Ss. 20(1), (2) and (5)

— S. 21 See also S. 12, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 964 in Vol. 2

— S. 21 See also Ss. 20 and 21

[97] — S. 21 — Nature — Two parts of the provision stated

Section 21 may be conveniently divided into two parts. Part I provides power to the State Government to appoint Executive Magistrates to be known as the Special Executive Magistrates and also sets out the terms of such appointment. Part II speaks of the nature of the power to be conferred on the Special Executive Magistrates. It refers only to the powers conferrable on the Executive Magistrate under the Code but not the powers conferred on them by the Code. The power to appoint under part I of S. 21 is not dependent upon or coupled with the power to be conferred under part II of the section. The appointment of Special Executive Magistrates is one thing and conferment of power on them is another. Each is independent of the other. Part II of the section speaks of additional powers to be conferred depending upon the nature of the particular function to be performed. It has nothing to do with the power located under part I of the section. (Paras 15 and 17). State of Maharashtra v. Mohd. Salim Khan, (1991) 1 SCC 550: 1991 SCC (Cri) 253: (1991) 1 Crimes 120.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.N. Singh, K. Jagannatha Shetty and Kuldip Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-1990]

[98] — S. 21 — Purpose of appointment of Special Executive Magistrates

The purpose of empowering the State Government to appoint Special Executive Magistrates was evidently to meet the special needs of a particular area or to perform particular functions in a given area. Such appointments without adequate powers would be futile and the legislation without providing such powers would be pointless. It can be assumed that the Parliament does not indulge in pointless legislation and it has not done so in S. 21. (Para 16). State of Maharashtra v. Mohd. Salim Khan, (1991) 1 SCC 550: 1991 SCC (Cri) 253: (1991) 1 Crimes 120.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.N. Singh, K. Jagannatha Shetty and Kuldip Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-1990]

[99] — Ss. 21, 20 and 107 — Special Executive Magistrates — Held, are nevertheless Executive Magistrates and entitled to exercise powers conferred by the Code — Unnecessary to confer powers under S. 107 on them — Hence quashing of proceedings before a Special Executive Magistrate by High Court under S. 482 on ground of no locus standi improper

The Maharashtra Government by notification dated April 11, 1974 appointed all Assistant Commissioners of Police in the metropolitan area of Greater Bombay as Special Executive Magistrates. By another notification dated October 20, 1976 the government conferred on them the powers of an Executive Magistrate under S. 107 of the Code. Respondent 7 lodged a complaint against a group of persons-respondents 1 to 6 before the Senior Inspector of Police, Mahim Police Station — appellant 2. The complaint was investigated and proceedings under S. 107 of the Code were initiated before the Special Executive Magistrate appellant 3. But the Bombay High Court quashed the proceedings at the instance of respondents 1 to 6 taking the view that the Special Executive Magistrate is not entitled to exercise the powers of an Executive Magistrate and cannot also be conferred with the powers of an Executive Magistrate under S. 107 of the Code. Allowing the appeal of the State Government,

Held :

The Special Executive Magistrates are also Executive Magistrates. They are given a different appellation perhaps to distinguish them from the category of other Magistrates appointed under S. 20. Their area of operation may be limited and the terms of appointment may be different. But nevertheless basically they remain as Executive Magistrates and they do not cease to be so by being called with different designation. Since they are appointed as Executive Magistrates, they are entitled to exercise the powers conferred by the Code much the same way as other Executive Magistrates and it was therefore, unnecessary for the State Government to have conferred the powers under S. 107 on the Special Executive Magistrates. (Paras 16 and 19)

Though there is a broad division between the powers conferred and powers conferrable by or under the Code on the Executive Magistrate, and there was need to use the term 'conferred' or 'conferrable' in Ss. 13 and 18, but the language of S. 21 as analysed earlier is quite different. Since the Special Executive Magistrates are appointed as Executive Magistrates, the draftsman seems to have purposely avoided to use the term "conferred" in the latter part of S. 21. (Paras 15 and 18). State of Maharashtra v. Mohd. Salim Khan, (1991) 1 SCC 550: 1991 SCC (Cri) 253: (1991) 1 Crimes 120.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.N. Singh, K. Jagannatha Shetty and Kuldip Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-1990]

— S. 24 See also S. 492, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1268 in Vol. 2

— S. 24 See Ss. 25 and 24

See also Ss. 170, 169, 173, 2(h), 24 and 482

See also Ss. 170, 173, 36 and 24

See also Ss. 301, 302 and 225 & 24

See also Ss. 302, 24 and 25

See also Ss. 309, 311 and 24, 25

See also Ss. 321, 301 and 24

See also Ss. 406, 24, 2(u) and 7, 8 & 9

See also Ss. 406 and 386(1), 24 and 225

See also Ss. 406, 432(7), 385(1), 225, 2(u), 24 and 378

See also Ss. 482 and 24

See also Ss. 482, 311, 391, 173(8), 216 and 24

[100] — S. 24 — Public Prosecutor — Nature of post of — Held, Public Prosecutor is not part of the investigating agency but an independent statutory authority. Hitendra Vishnu Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 4 SCC 602: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1087: AIR 1994 SC 2623.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-1994]

[101] — S. 24 — Role of Public Prosecutor — Scope — Held (per curiam), the same is restricted to conducting or withdrawal of any prosecution, appeal or other proceedings in court — It does not include the field of investigation

A Public Prosecutor is appointed, as indicated in Section 24 CrPC, for conducting any prosecution, appeal or other proceedings in the court. He has also the power to withdraw any case from the prosecution with the consent of the court. He is the officer of the court. Thus the Public Prosecutor is to deal with a different field in the administration of justice and he is not involved in investigation. It is not the scheme of CrPC for supporting or sponsoring any combined operation between the investigating officer and the Public Prosecutor for filing the report in the court. (Para 29). M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor scam) v. Union of India, (2007) 1 SCC 110: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 264: AIR 2007 SC 1087: (2007) 53 AIC 192 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.B. Sinha[2], S.H. Kapadia[1] and D.K. Jain[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-2006]

R. Sarala v. T.S. Velu, (2000) 4 SCC 459: 2000 SCC (Cri) 823, followed

[102] — S. 24 — Public Prosecutor — Role of — Held, Public Prosecutor is an officer of court — He has to act objectively and not according to dictates of State Government (Para 50). Amarinder Singh v. Parkash Singh Badal, (2009) 6 SCC 260.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and P. Sathasivam and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2009]

[103] — S. 24 — Status and role of Public Prosecutor

The Public Prosecutor is a statutory office of high regard. He does not represent the investigating agencies, but the State. He has wider set of duties than to merely ensure that accused is punished, the duties of ensuring fair play in proceedings, all relevant facts are brought before court in order for determination of truth and justice for all parties including the victims. These duties do not allow the Prosecutor to be lax in any of his duties as against the accused. The court must also ensure that Prosecutor is doing his duties to utmost level of efficiency and fair play. (Paras 185 to 188). Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

Shiv Kumar v. Hukam Chand, (1999) 7 SCC 467: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1277; Hitendra Vishnu Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 4 SCC 602: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1087; Zahira Habibulla H. Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 4 SCC 158: 2004 SCC (Cri) 999, relied on

Ram Chander v. State of Haryana, (1981) 3 SCC 191: 1981 SCC (Cri) 683, referred to

Mohanlal Shamji Soni v. Union of India, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 271: 1991 SCC (Cri) 595, cited

[104] — S. 24 — State counsel — Responsibility of — 'Sharp practice' and unfairness cannot be inferred merely on his adopting a partisan approach due to pressure or zeal — If order is obtained from court legally by stating correct facts no mala fides can be imputed to him. State of Maharashtra v. Budhikota Subbarao (Dr.), (1993) 3 SCC 71: 1993 SCC (Cri) 597.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-1993]

[105] — S. 24 — "Consultation" with District Judge — Interpretation of — Held, High Court erred in directing that instead of making of the recommendation by District Judge alone the recommendation should be made by a collegium of five members headed by him — Reliance on Special Reference No. 1 of 1998, Re, (1998) 7 SCC 739 for taking that view, held misplaced — Appointment of DGC, held, could not be equated with appointments of Supreme Court/High Court Judges — Further held, High Court's power under Art. 226 is not on a par with Supreme Court's power under Art. 142 —

High Court could not direct formulation of a new legal principle or a new procedure contrary to, or inconsistent with, a statutory provision — However, the consultation with District Judge must be an effective one — He should in turn take his colleagues into confidence — State Government must give primacy to his opinion — (U.P. Government) Legal Remembrancer's Manual, Para 7.03

The appointment of District Government Counsel cannot be equated with the appointments of the High Court and the Supreme Court Judges. A distinction must be made between professional engagement and a holder of high public office. Various doctrines and the provisions of the Constitution which impelled the Supreme Court in Special Reference case, (1998) 7 SCC 739 to give meaning of "consultation" as "concurrence" and wherein the Chief Justice of India will have a primacy, cannot be held to be applicable in the matter of consultation between the District Magistrate and the District Judge for the purpose of preparation of a panel of the District Government Counsel. (Para 55)

However, the consultation with the District Judge must be an effective one. The District Judge in turn should take his colleagues into confidence so that only meritorious and competent persons who can maintain the standard of public office can be found out. While making appointments of District Government Counsel, therefore, the State should give primacy to the opinion of the District Judge. Such a course of action would demonstrate fairness and reasonableness of action and, furthermore, to a large extent the action of the State would not be dubbed as politically motivated or otherwise arbitrary. (Paras 56 and 87). State of U.P. v. Johri Mal, (2004) 4 SCC 714: AIR 2004 SC 3800: (2004) 3 SLR 734: (2004) 19 AIC 69 (SC): (2004) 3 LLN 13.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.N. Khare, C.J. and Brijesh Kumar and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

Special Reference No. 1 of 1998, Re, (1998) 7 SCC 739; Supreme Court Advocates-on-Record Assn. v. Union of India, (1993) 4 SCC 441, distinguished

State of H.P. v. A Parent of a Student of Medical College, (1985) 3 SCC 169; Asif Hameed v. State of J&K, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 364; Guruvayoor Devaswom Managing Committee v. C.K. Rajan, (2003) 7 SCC 546, relied on [106] — Ss. 24, 2(u) and 378(1) and (2) — Public Prosecutor — Appointment of Special Public Prosecutors — Power of, when can be exercised and by whom — Appeal from order of acquittal — Central Public Prosecutor vis-à-vis State Public Prosecutor — Powers of — Held, Central Government or State Government may appoint a Special Public Prosecutor — Under S. 378(1) State Government may direct its Public Prosecutor to file an appeal from an order of acquittal — Under S. 378(2) Central Government may direct its Public Prosecutor to file appeal from an order of acquittal — One has no control over the other (Paras 46 and 47). Lalu Prasad Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2010) 5 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.M. Lodha and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision : 1-4-2010]

[107] — Ss. 24 and 25 — Communal riot cases in the State of Gujarat — Post-Godhra riot cases — Fairness in trial — Importance of interests of victim — Necessity of establishing, to dispel apprehension of victims — Appointment of impartial Public Prosecutors — Held, victim is an inseparable stakeholder in adjudicating process — It is essential to establish that Public Prosecutor is conducting prosecution fairly and in proper manner to instil confidence in victims — Directions issued to the State of Gujarat to appoint Public Prosecutors in each of the cases in consultation with SIT — Opinion of SIT to be binding on State Government — Experienced lawyers familiar with conduct of criminal trials to be appointed as Public Prosecutors — Chairman of SIT also permitted to seek change of Public Prosecutor during currency of trial if deficiency in performance noticed — Advocate General of State to take appropriate action in light of SIT's recommendation — SIT also permitted to nominate officers of SIT to assist Public Prosecutor in course of trial — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 14 — United Nations Declaration of Basic Principles of Justice for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power (Resolution 40/34 of 29-11-1985), Arts. 4, 5 and 6 [Paras 19, 20, 31, 32 and 40(v) & (vi)]. NHRC v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 767.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2009]

[108] — Ss. 24 and 157 — Reasons for protraction of criminal cases, highlighted — Urgent need for fast-tracking and deciding in a fixed time-frame, criminal cases relating to offences against State, corruption, dowry death, domestic violence, sexual assault, financial fraud and cyber crimes, emphasised — Requirement of immediate and urgent steps for amending procedural and other laws to achieve aforesaid objectives, noticed — Observed, a strong and efficient criminal justice system is a guarantee to rule of law and vibrant civil society

The investigators hardly have professional orientation; they do not have modern tools. On many occasions impartial investigation suffers because of political interference. The criminal trials are protracted because of non-appearance of official witnesses on time and the non-availability of the facilities for recording evidence by videoconferencing. The Public Prosecutors have their limitations; the defence lawyers do not make themselves available and the court would be routinely informed about their preoccupation with other matters; the courts remain overburdened with the briefs listed on the day and they do not have adequate infrastructure. The adjournments thus become routine; the casualty is justice. It is imperative that the criminal cases relating to offences against the State, corruption, dowry death, domestic violence, sexual assault, financial fraud and cyber crimes are fast-tracked and decided in a fixed time-frame, preferably of three years including the appeal provisions. It is high time that immediate and urgent steps are taken in amending the procedural and other laws to achieve the above objectives. It is to be remembered that a strong and efficient criminal justice system is a guarantee to the rule of law and vibrant civil society. (Para 37). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

[109] — Ss. 24, 25 and 320 — Appointment of Public Prosecutor/District Government Counsel — Nature of — Held, is a professional engagement and not an appointment to a civil post — Such appointment is governed by CrPC and/or executive instructions framed by the State Government and does not attract the proviso to Art. 309 — It is a tenure appointment and the incumbent continues to retain the character of legal practitioner for all intents and purposes — That persons so appointed discharge public functions and possess certain statutory powers, held, does not change the said position — Further held, the duty of District Government Counsel/Public Prosecutor involves an element of public interest but in engaging him a concept of public office does not come into play — But, the position of an Assistant Public Prosecutor is different — Unlike a Public Prosecutor or Additional Public Prosecutor, he is an employee of the State and holds a civil post and his appointment is governed by service rules framed by the State Government — However, the choice of the Government in the matter of appointment of counsel is to a limited extent subject to the provisions of Art. 14 — Constitution of India — Art. 309 proviso — Nature of appointment of — (U.P. Government) Legal Remembrancer's Manual, Paras 7.01 to 7.08 and Ch. XXI

The Legal Remembrancer's Manual clearly states that appointment of a Public Prosecutor or a District Counsel would be professional in nature. It was rightly conceded that the holder of the office of the Public Prosecutor does not hold a civil post. By holding a post of District Counsel or the Public Prosecutor, neither a status is conferred on the incumbent. (Para 37)

Unlike a Public Prosecutor or Additional Public Prosecutor, Assistant Public Prosecutors are employees of the State. They hold civil posts. They are answerable for their conduct to higher statutory authority. Their appointment is governed by the service rules framed by the respective State Governments. (Para 38)

The appointment of Public Prosecutors, on the other hand, is governed by CrPC and/or the executive instructions framed by the State governing the terms of their appointment. The proviso to Article 309 is not applicable in their case. Their appointment is a tenure appointment. Public Prosecutors, furthermore, retain the character of legal practitioners for all intent and purport. They, of course, discharge public functions and certain statutory powers are also conferred upon them but the same would not mean that their conditions of appointment are governed by any statute or statutory rule. (Para 39)

So long as in appointing a counsel the procedures laid down under CrPC are followed and a reasonable or fair procedure is adopted, the court will normally not interfere with the decision. The nature of the office held by a lawyer vis-à-vis the State being in the nature of professional engagements, the courts are normally chary to overturn any decision unless an exceptional case is made out. The question as to whether the State is satisfied with the performance of its counsel or not is primarily a matter between it and the counsel. The Code of Criminal Procedure does not speak of renewal or extension of tenure. The extension of tenure of Public Prosecutor or the District Counsel should not be compared with the right of renewal under a licence or permit granted under a statute. The incumbent has no legal enforceable right as such. The action of the State in not renewing the tenure can be subjected to judicial scrutiny inter alia on the ground that the same was arbitrary. The courts normally would not delve into the records with a view to ascertain as to what impelled the State not to renew the tenure of a Public Prosecutor or a District Counsel. The jurisdiction of the courts in a case of this nature would be to invoke the doctrine of "Wednesbury unreasonableness". (Para 40). State of U.P. v. Johri Mal, (2004) 4 SCC 714: AIR 2004 SC 3800: (2004) 3 SLR 734: (2004) 19 AIC 69 (SC): (2004) 3 LLN 13.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.N. Khare, C.J. and Brijesh Kumar and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

Samarendra Das v. State of W.B., (2004) 2 SCC 274: 2004 SCC (L&S) 402, relied on

Om Kumar v. Union of India, (2001) 2 SCC 386: 2001 SCC (L&S) 1039, followed

[110] — S. 24 — Public Prosecutor/Addl. Public Prosecutor — Renewal of term of — Procedure same as that for fresh appointment — Procedure provided under Legal Remembrancer Manual supplemental to S. 24 — Consultation of DM with D&SJ for preparing a panel must be real and effective — D&SJ has to express his opinion on merits and conduct of the persons recommended for appointment or extension of the period — DM has to apply his mind and consider suitability of persons recommended by D&SJ, from administrative point of view — Though there is no right to extension of the term, judicial review is open on ground of infirmity in decision-making process because of non-affording of fair treatment and non-compliance with the procedure — While D&SJ strongly recommending appellants for renewal of their term as Assistant District Govt. Counsel (Criminal) (deemed as Addl. PPs), DM not recommending their names by making some general comment against them (that their reputation, professional work, behaviour and conduct was not found in accordance with public interest) without preparing any panel and on that basis extension of term refused by State Govt. — Held, DM failed to perform his statutory duty and hence DM directed to perform the same afresh — (U.P. Government) Legal Remembrancer's Manual, Ch. VI, Paras 7.06 & 7.08. Harpal Singh Chauhan v. State of U.P., (1993) 3 SCC 552: 1993 SCC (Cri) 938: AIR 1993 SC 2436: 1993 Cri LJ 3140: (1993) 4 SLR 639: (1993) 3 SLJ 128.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-6-1993]

[111] — S. 24 — Appointment of Public Prosecutor — Submission of biodata pursuant to notice for such appointment if amounts to soliciting briefs within the meaning of R. 36, Bar Council of India Rules — Answer in the negative given by A.P. High Court in B. Rajeswar Reddy case, (2001) 6 An LT 104 (FB) impliedly approved — Bar Council of India Rules, R. 36 — Public Prosecutor (Paras 79 to 81). State of U.P. v. Johri Mal, (2004) 4 SCC 714: AIR 2004 SC 3800: (2004) 3 SLR 734: (2004) 19 AIC 69 (SC): (2004) 3 LLN 13.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.N. Khare, C.J. and Brijesh Kumar and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

B. Rajeswar Reddy v. K. Narasimhachari, (2001) 6 An LT 104 (FB), impliedly approved

[112] — S. 24 — Nature of appointment of District Government Counsel — Held, his appointment is only a professional engagement and not an appointment to a post in government service which continues till the age of superannuation — Hence, contention that he is entitled to automatic renewal of his term up to the age of superannuation, rejected — (U.P. Government) Legal Remembrancer's Manual, Paras 7.06(1) & (2), 7.08 and 7.13 (Paras 4 and 5). State of U.P. v. Ramesh Chandra Sharma, (1995) 6 SCC 527: 1996 SCC (L&S) 46: (1995) 31 ATC 750: AIR 1996 SC 864.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.S. Verma and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-1995]

Shrilekha Vidyarthi v. State of U.P., (1991) 1 SCC 212: 1991 SCC (L&S) 742, followed

Harpal Singh Chauhan v. State of U.P., (1993) 3 SCC 552: 1993 SCC (Cri) 938, distinguished [113] — S. 24 — District Government Counsel — Arbitrary refusal to renew term of — Circumstances rendering grant of relief nonetheless inappropriate — Government's refusal to renew the term of the erstwhile District Government Counsel although found arbitrary, in view of the submission on their behalf that they were keen only to vindicate their honour and not to seek the consequential relief, consideration of the question of grant of relief, held, unnecessary — Moreover, in view of non-impleadment of the persons appointed in their place grant of any further relief in the instant case, held, inappropriate — Constitution of India — Arts. 136 and 14. State of U.P. v. Ramesh Chandra Sharma, (1995) 6 SCC 527: 1996 SCC (L&S) 46: (1995) 31 ATC 750: AIR 1996 SC 864.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.S. Verma and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-1995]

[114] — Ss. 24, 25 and 321 — District Government Counsel — 'Office' or 'post' of — Nature — Public Element — Arbitrary State action affecting person holding — Not purely contractual but public element is attached to it — Hence in case of arbitrary, unreasonable or irrational State action viz. termination of appointment of DGC without any reason, Art. 14 is attracted — Advocates — (U.P. Government) Legal Remembrancer's Manual, Ch. VII, Paras 7.06 to 7.09 — Constitution of India — Art. 14

The provisions of the L.R. Manual clearly show that the Government Counsel in the districts are treated as Law Officers of the State who are holders of an 'office' or 'post'. By 'office' is meant the right and duty to exercise an employment or a position of authority and trust to which certain duties are attached; and an engagement of DGC satisfies that test. The appointment of DGC by the State Government is not merely a professional engagement like that between a private client and his lawyer nor is it purely contractual. A public element is attached to the 'office' or 'post'. There is an element of continuity of the appointment unless the appointee is found to be unsuitable either by his own work, conduct or age or in comparison to any more suitable candidate available at the place of appointment. Suitability of the appointee being the prime criterion for any such appointment, appointment of the best amongst those available is the object sought to be achieved by these provisions, which, even otherwise, should be the paramount consideration in discharge of this governmental function aimed at promoting public interest. All Government Counsel are paid remuneration out of the public exchequer. Further having regard to Ss. 24, 25 and 321, CrPC the function of Public Prosecutor of withdrawal of prosecution relates to a public purpose entrusting him with the responsibility of so acting only in the interest of administration of justice. In the case of Public Prosecutors, this additional public element flowing from statutory provisions in the Code of Criminal Procedure, invest the Public Prosecutors with the attribute of holder of a public office which cannot be whittled down by the assertion that their engagement is purely professional between a client and his lawyer with no public element attaching to it. Clause (3) of Para 7.06 of the L.R. Manual must be understood to mean that the appointment of a District Government Counsel is not to be equated with appointment to a post under the government in the strict sense, which does not necessarily mean that it results in denuding the office of its public character. There is thus a clear public element attaching to the 'office' or 'post' of Government Counsel at the district level. This is sufficient to attract Art. 14 and bring the question of validity of the impugned circular within the scope of judicial review. (Paras 12 to 17)

The scope of judicial review permissible in the present case, does not require any elaborate consideration since even the minimum permitted scope of judicial review on the ground of arbitrariness or unreasonableness or irrationality, once Art. 14 is attracted, is sufficient to invalidate the impugned circular. (Paras 18 and 20). Shrilekha Vidyarthi (Kumari) v. State of U.P., (1991) 1 SCC 212: 1991 SCC (L&S) 742: AIR 1991 SC 537.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.S. Verma and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-9-1990]

[115] — S. 24 — Withdrawal from prosecution — Although corruption cases against some influential public servants ought not to be withdrawn at the instance of the Home Department without any basis whatsoever, but in terms of the doctrine of forum convenience High Court cannot itself usurp the function of inquiring as to who were involved in such withdrawal — Court should rather forward the same to appropriate institutions available for such inquiries — This is a matter of propriety rather than convenience — In any event, time factor also has a definite role to play in the event the matter is to be considered by the High Court itself (Para 10). State of Gujarat v. K.V. Joseph, (2001) 2 SCC 156: 2001 SCC (Cri) 300: (2001) 2 Guj LR 1675.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-2000]

[116] — Ss. 24, 25 and 321 — Withdrawal of prosecution — Power of Public Prosecutor, must be exercised in the interest of administration of justice and relates to a public purpose — Public prosecutor is thus a holder of public office

In the case of Public Prosecutors also known as District Government Counsel (Criminal), there can be no doubt about the statutory element attaching to such appointments by virtue of these provisions in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. In this context, S. 21 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, is also significant.

The power of the Public Prosecutor in charge of the case under S. 321 is derived from statute and the guiding consideration for it, must be the interest of administration of justice. There can be no doubt that this function of the Public Prosecutor relates to a public purpose entrusting him with the responsibility of so acting only in the interest of administration of justice. In the case of Public Prosecutors, this additional public element flowing from statutory provisions in the Code of Criminal Procedure, undoubtedly, invest the Public Prosecutors with the attribute of holder of a public office which cannot be whittled down by the assertion that their engagement is purely professional between a client and his lawyer with no public element attaching to it. (Para 14). Shrilekha Vidyarthi (Kumari) v. State of U.P., (1991) 1 SCC 212: 1991 SCC (L&S) 742: AIR 1991 SC 537.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.S. Verma and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-9-1990]

[117] — S. 24 — Amendment of, by U.P. Act 18 of 1991 — Propriety — Amendment of S. 24(1) and omission of Ss. 24(4), (5) & (6), held, irrational — Making of necessary provisions in (U.P. Government) Legal Remembrancer's Manual, held, does not make up the deficiency caused by said amendments — Hope expressed that the provision for consultation with High Court would be restored or at least acted upon despite deletion (Paras 86, 21, 42 and 87). State of U.P. v. Johri Mal, (2004) 4 SCC 714: AIR 2004 SC 3800: (2004) 3 SLR 734: (2004) 19 AIC 69 (SC): (2004) 3 LLN 13.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.N. Khare, C.J. and Brijesh Kumar and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

[118] — S. 24 — Central Agency — Assignment of sensitive cases like those under Customs Act and Gold (Control) Act by Union of India — Caveat by Supreme Court — Such cases should be assigned only to counsel having experience and ability in that branch of law to defend their cases so that justice might not suffer and economy of the country might not be put in jeopardy — Constitution of India — Arts. 134 and 136 — Customs Act, 1962 — Ss. 130-E & 135 — Gold (Control) Act, 1968 — Ss. 85(1)(a) and 86. K.I. Pavunny v. Asstt. Collector (HQ), Central Excise Collectorate, (1997) 3 SCC 721: 1997 SCC (Cri) 444: (1997) 1 KLT 489.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, S. Saghir Ahmad and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-1997]

[119] — Ss. 24, 225 and 321 — Private complainant also deemed to be a public prosecutor under S. 8(3), Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1952

Being conscious of the position that a private complaint may be filed before a Special Judge who may take cognizance of the offences on such a complaint, the Legislature enacted a deeming fiction under S. 8(3) which is confined to the limits of its requirement in that the person conducting a prosecution before a Special Judge is to be deemed to be a public prosecutor. As such that a public prosecutor may abuse his office is not determinative as to who should be a public prosecutor. The arguments that a public prosecutor is appointed under the CrPC by the Central or State Government and that a private complainant who chooses to conduct his case and thereby enjoys the status of a deemed public prosecutor may initiate some frivolous prosecution and then withdraw it on receiving unlawful gratification, are unwarranted. A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277: AIR 1984 SC 718: 1984 Cri LJ 647: 1984 Bom LR 228.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: D.A. Desai, R.S. Pathak, O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-1984]

[120] — Ss. 24 and 24-A — Parties — Prayer for direction to re-engage original Public Prosecutor — Allegations made against Public Prosecutor, etc. of impropriety — Need for impleadment of — Held (per Lakshmanan, J.), since none of these parties were made parties before Supreme Court, allegations against them cannot be looked into at all — CPC, 1908, Or. 1 R. 9 — Constitution of India — Art. 32

Further, certain allegations have been made against the Public Prosecutors, etc. None of them were made parties before the Supreme Court. Therefore, the allegations made against them are one-sided and cannot be looked into at all. It cannot also be said that all these authorities have acted in a mala fide manner. (Para 57). Rajiv Ranjan Singh 'Lalan' (VIII) v. Union of India, (2006) 6 SCC 613: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 125.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan[1], Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan[2] and S.H. Kapadia[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 21-8-2006]

[121] — Ss. 24 and 25 — Provisions in CrPC and in U.P. Legal Remembrancer's Manual regarding appointment of Public Prosecutor — Nature of — The former, held, are statutory in nature while the Manual is merely a compilation of executive orders and not "law" within the meaning of Art. 13 — (U.P. Government) Legal Remembrancer's Manual, Paras 7.01 to 7.08 and Ch. XXI — District Government Counsel (Criminal) — Administrative Law — Administrative instructions/circular/orders/guidelines — (U.P. Government) Legal Remembrancer's Manual — Nature of — Constitution of India — Art. 13 (Paras 21 and 86). State of U.P. v. Johri Mal, (2004) 4 SCC 714: AIR 2004 SC 3800: (2004) 3 SLR 734: (2004) 19 AIC 69 (SC): (2004) 3 LLN 13.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.N. Khare, C.J. and Brijesh Kumar and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

B. Rajeswar Reddy v. K. Narasimhachari, (2001) 6 An LT 104 (FB), impliedly approved

[122] — Ss. 24 and 25 — Infructuous petition — District Government Counsel (Criminal) — Refusal by State Government to renew the term of, despite recommendations both by District Officer and District Judge in their favour — Whether arbitrary and violative of Art. 14 — High Court's decision, answering in the affirmative, having remained stayed for long five years, held, the petition became infructuous and, therefore, liable to be dismissed without examining the merits of the matter — However, the writ petitioners were at liberty to apply for appointment as Public Prosecutors/Additional Public Prosecutors as and when vacancy arose — Constitution of India — Arts. 226, 32 and 14 (Para 9). State of U.P. v. Netra Pal Singh, (2004) 4 SCC 748: 2004 SCC (L&S) 680: AIR 2004 SC 3513: (2004) 102 FLR 177: 2004 All LJ 2151: (2004) 3 LLN 59: (2004) 5 SLR 364.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.N. Khare, C.J. and S.B. Sinha and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

[123] — Ss. 24 and 25 — Appointment of a prosecutor, alleged to be inimically disposed towards the accused — Whether prejudices the accused — Held (i) where the prosecutor had not given any evidence; (ii) where his personal opinion had no place in the decision-making process of the court; and (iii) the manner in which he presented the case was always subject to judicial scrutiny, no prejudice would be caused to the accused, even when the prosecutor presented his case with vehemence and a touch of vengeance — However, such a practice not approved and advised to be resorted to, only for good reasons — In such cases, further held, the prosecution would be at liberty to recuse himself (Para 7). Varada Rama Mohana Rao v. State of A.P., (2004) 4 SCC 427: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1289.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-2004]

[124] — Ss. 24 and 25-A — Fodder Scam cases — Appointment/change of Public Prosecutor — Interference by Supreme Court — Held (per majority), appointment of advocates, Public Prosecutors, etc. is the prerogative of the Government in power and the court has no role to play — In the present case, if at all petitioners had any grievance regarding removal of the Public Prosecutor, they should have submitted the same before the Special Judge or the High Court — On facts, contention of petitioners that the prosecutor was purposely changed to give benefit to Respondents 4 and 5 is not correct and is not borne out by the material on record — However, CBI would be at liberty to make use of the services of the earlier prosecutor — Constitution of India — Art. 32

Per Balakrishnan, J.

The petitioners in the writ petitions have prayed to re-engage the same prosecutor who was handling the case in the trial court from the very beginning of the trial. From the averments made in the counter-affidavit, it is clear that the earlier Prosecutor Shri Ansari had completed the cases and examined all the witnesses for the prosecution as well as for the defence and he had also submitted his entire arguments to the Special Judge. Therefore, the contention of the petitioners that the prosecutor was purposely changed to give benefit to Respondents 4 and 5 is not correct. There is no allegation to prove that Respondents 4 and 5 had in any way interfered with the appointment of the Public Prosecutor. The petitioners could not produce any documents to show that the allegations made in the original petitions were true. If at all the petitioners had any grievance regarding the removal of the Public Prosecutor, they should have submitted their grievance before the Special Judge or before the High Court. The earlier prosecutor had already been deployed to conduct some other case and there is no necessity to give any direction to CBI. However, CBI would be at liberty to make use of the services of the earlier Prosecutor Shri Ansari. (Paras 20, 25 and 26)

Per Lakshmanan, J.

The appointment of lawyers is the prerogative of the Government and the prosecuting agency. The petitioners are trying to find fault with every attempt with every step taken. In cases like this delay is inevitable. Appointment of advocates, Public Prosecutors, etc. is the prerogative of the Government in power and the court has no role to play. (Paras 50 and 51)

The records would only go to show that Respondent 4 had no hand in the change of the prosecutor. (Para 58). Rajiv Ranjan Singh 'Lalan' (VIII) v. Union of India, (2006) 6 SCC 613: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 125.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan[1], Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan[2] and S.H. Kapadia[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 21-8-2006]

[125] — Ss. 24 and 25 — Appointment of Special Public Prosecutor — Scope of judicial review — Decisions taken at various levels upon a petition by relatives of a victim — Held, said appointment does not in any way cause prejudice to the accused — Power of judicial review is not intended either to review governance under the rule of law nor do the courts step into the areas exclusively reserved by the suprema lex to other organs of the State — A mere wrong decision will not be sufficient to attract the power — While exercising power the court is more concerned with the decision-making process than the merit of the decision itself — Supervisory jurisdiction conferred upon a court is limited to see that the authority concerned functions within its limits of its authority and that its decisions do not occasion miscarriage of justice — Constitution of India — Art. 226 (Paras 5 to 7). State of Maharashtra v. Prakash Prahlad Patil, (2009) 12 SCC 159: (2009) 80 AIC 60 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-4-2009]

[126] — Ss. 24 and 225 — Appointment of Public Prosecutor — Complainant when may suggest names for — Allegations of bias against entire criminal justice machinery in State concerned and transfer of trial sought outside the said State — Public Accountability and Vigilance — Appointment of Public Prosecutor — Alleged bias in State machinery — Relief

Late Prof. H.S. Sabharwal was a professor in Government College, Ujjain, M.P. He was brutally beaten up by certain persons for taking a rigid stand in the college union elections. Though the assaults were made in the presence of several police officials, media persons and members of the public, it was alleged that an attempt had been made to create the impression that his death was as a result of an accident. Initially, first information report was lodged and after investigation charge-sheet was filed and charges had been framed against several persons who were Respondents 2 to 7 in the transfer petition. The trial commenced in the Court of Sessions Judge, Ujjain. During examination of several witnesses who were stated to be eyewitnesses, such witnesses resiled from the statements made during investigation. There were even three police witnesses who also resiled from their earlier statements.

Grievance of the petitioner was that the witnesses had been coerced, threatened and ultimately justice was a casualty. That the role of the investigating officer gave ample scope to doubt impartiality and the sincerity of the investigating agency. Similar was the position of the Public Prosecutor. It was also highlighted that the trial court also did not make a serious effort to see that justice was done. In this connection it was pointed out that Public Prosecutor did not cross-examine the persons who had resiled from their statements made during investigation. This according to the petitioner also showed that the trial court did not act as was required under law.

The State of M.P. and the respondent-accused persons conceded before the Supreme Court that in the larger interest of justice and transparency they had no objection to the case being transferred to some other State.

Disposing of the transfer petition in the terms below,

Held :

In light of the concessions of the State of M.P. and the accused, without examining the correctness of the allegations made, it is directed that the case concerned pending in the Court of Sessions Judge, Ujjain be transferred to the Court of Sessions Judge, Nagpur, Maharashtra. It shall be open to the Sessions Judge to either deal with the case himself or to allot it to an appropriate court. The trial will commence from the stage at which it was when the order of stay was passed by the Supreme Court. The petitioner who is the son of the deceased in the peculiar facts of the case is permitted to suggest two names to function as Public Prosecutor. Similarly, two names shall be given by the respondent State. It shall be for the Sessions Judge, Nagpur to appoint a Public Prosecutor from the names to be suggested. The fees and other expenses of the Public Prosecutor shall be borne by the State of M.P. It shall be open to the Public Prosecutor to be appointed to seek recall of any witness already examined in terms of Section 311 CrPC. This shall be in addition to the three police witnesses who had resiled from their statements. (Para 6). Himanshu Singh Sabharwal v. State of M.P., (2008) 3 SCC 602: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 106: AIR 2008 SC 1943.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-2008]

Zahira Habibulla H. Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 4 SCC 158: 2004 SCC (Cri) 999, relied on

[127] — Ss. 24 and 225 — Public Prosecutor — Role and Duties of — Duty of court in case of dereliction of duty by prosecuting agency

Though a Public Prosecutor is not supposed to be a persecutor, yet the minimum that was required to be done, to fairly present the case of the prosecution, was not done. It is as much the duty of the prosecutor as of the court to ensure that full and material facts are brought on record so that there might not be miscarriage of justice. The prosecutor who does not act fairly and acts more like a counsel for the defence is a liability to the fair judicial system, and courts should not also play into the hands of such prosecuting agency showing indifference or adopting an attitude of total aloofness. (Paras 71, 56 and 43)

In the present case, the Public Prosecutor appears to have acted more as a defence counsel than one whose duty was to present the truth before the court. (Para 68). Zahira Habibulla H. Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 4 SCC 158: 2004 SCC (Cri) 999: 2004 Cri LJ 2050.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2004]

[128] — Ss. 24 and 301 — Public Prosecutor should not appear on behalf of accused. Sunil Kumar Pal v. Phota Sk., (1984) 4 SCC 533: 1985 SCC (Cri) 18: AIR 1984 SC 1591.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-1984]

[129] — S. 24 — Prosecutor — Professional standards and ethics and to maintained — Persons that an advocate seized of a matter to maintain distance from — Witnesses — Familiarity cultivated by Appellant 2, Special Public Prosecutor with one of the prosecution witnesses, deprecated and finding of professional misconduct recorded therefor — Advocates Act, 1961, S. 35

As far as Special Public Prosecutor IU (Appellant 2) is concerned, there is not the slightest doubt that the exchange between K (the prosecution witness concerned) and IU captured in the sting operation and placed on record, far crosses the limits of proper professional conduct of a prosecutor (especially engaged to conduct a sensational trial) and a designated Senior Advocate of long standing. The only common factor between them was the BMW case in which one was the prosecutor and the other was a prosecution witness, later dropped from the list of witnesses. A lawyer, howsoever affable and sociable by disposition, if he has the slightest respect for professional ethics, would not allow himself such a degree of familiarity with the witness of a criminal trial that he might be prosecuting and would not indulge with him in the kind of exchange as admittedly took place between IU and K. The video of the sting recordings leaves no room for doubt that IU was freely discussing the proceeding of BMW case with K and was not at all averse to another meeting with him; rather he was looking forward to it. The High Court's finding that the conduct of IU was inappropriate for a lawyer in general and a prosecutor in particular is fully endorsed. However, there is a wide gap between professional misconduct and criminal contempt of court. (Paras 191 to 197)

As noticed above, the High Court, for arriving at the finding that there was a high degree of familiarity among IU, K and R has repeatedly used the transcripts of the meetings between K and R. It is indeed true that in the exchanges between K and R there are many references to IU. That may give rise to a strong suspicion, of a common connection between the three. But having regard to the charge of criminal contempt any suspicion howsoever strong cannot take the place of proof and it is not wholly prudent to rely upon the exchanges between K and R to record a finding against IU. (Paras 209, 199, 201, 204, 205 and 176 to 178). R.K. Anand v. Delhi High Court, (2009) 8 SCC 106: (2009) 161 DLT 130.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.N. Agrawal, G.S. Singhvi and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-2009]

[130] — Ss. 24 and 321 — Public Prosecutor — Nature of the office and functions of

Per Bhagwati, C.J. and Oza, J.

The Public Prosecutor is the counsel for the Government for conducting prosecution on behalf of the State Government or the Central Government, as the case may be. He is an officer and like every advocate practising before court, he also owes an obligation to the court to be fair and just; he must not introduce any personal interest in the prosecution nor must he be anxious to secure conviction at any cost. He must present the case on behalf of the prosecution fairly and objectively. He is bound to assist the court with his fairly considered view and the fair exercise of his judgment.

Per Venkataramiah, J.

A Public Prosecutor is not a persecutor. He is the representative not of an ordinary party to a controversy, but of sovereignty whose obligation to govern impartially is as compelling as its obligation to govern at all, and whose interest, therefore, in a criminal prosecution is not that it shall win a case, but that justice shall be done. As such he is in a peculiar and very definite sense the servant of the land the twofold aim of which is that guilt shall not escape or innocent suffer. He should prosecute with earnestness and vigour. It is as much his duty to refrain from improper methods calculated to produce a wrongful conviction as it is to use every legitimate one to bring about a just one.

The judgment of a Public Prosecutor under S. 321 cannot be lightly interfered with unless the court comes to the conclusion that he has not applied his mind or that his decision is not bona fide.

Per Khalid and Natarajan, JJ.

The Public Prosecutor should normally be credited with fairness in exercise of his power under S. 321, when there is no attack against him of having acted in an improper manner. Sheonandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, (1987) 1 SCC 288: 1987 SCC (Cri) 82: AIR 1987 SC 877: 1987 Cri LJ 793.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, C.J.[1] and E.S. Venkataramiah[2], V. Khalid[3], G.L. Oza[1] and S. Natarajan[4], JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-1986]

LIBRARY NARAYAN RAO MELGIRI National Law School

[131] — S. 24 and S. 2(u) — Public Prosecutor — Role and function of — Stated (Para 16). Jayendra Saraswati Swamigal (3) v. State of T.N., (2008) 10 SCC 180: AIR 2008 SC 2997: (2008) 3 KLT 669: 2008 Cri LJ 3877.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-2008]

[132] — Ss. 24(1), 2(u) and 378 — State Government notification appointing Advocate General as Public Prosecutor under S. 24 — Advocate General issuing notification under S. 24 r/w S. 2 (u) authorising Deputy Government Advocate to act, plead and argue in all matters covered by the Code — Held, Deputy Advocate General being so authorised is thus a Public Prosecutor having full competence to present an application under S. 378. State of Rajasthan v. Manbhar, (1981) 2 SCC 525: 1981 SCC (Cri) 531.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.D. Koshal and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1981]

[133] — S. 24(3) — Held, does not apply to renewal of appointment of a Public Prosecutor (Para 4). State of U.P. v. Ramesh Chandra Sharma, (1995) 6 SCC 527: 1996 SCC (L&S) 46: (1995) 31 ATC 750: AIR 1996 SC 864.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.S. Verma and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-1995]

[134] — Ss. 24(6) and (9) (as amended in 1978) — Appointment of Public Prosecutors — 'Regular cadre of prosecuting officers' in sub-s. (6) — Means cadre having post of Public Prosecutor at the highest level — Where Assistant Public Prosecutors are members of regular government service having their separate cadre whereas Public Prosecutors and Additional Public Prosecutors are appointed on contract basis for a fixed period and thus their posts are tenure posts, held, State Government not bound to appoint Public Prosecutors and Additional Public Prosecutors only from the cadre of Assistant Public Prosecutors — Sub-s. (6) to be read in the light of sub-s. (9) — Kerala Government Law Officer (Appointment and Conditions of Service) and Conduct of Cases Rules, 1978, R. 5

The expression "regular cadre of Prosecuting Officers" comprised a service with Assistant Public Prosecutor at the lowest level and Public Prosecutors at the top. In case a regular cadre of Prosecuting Officers does not go up to Public Prosecutor at the top, the State Government cannot be considered as bound to appoint Public Prosecutor or Additional Public Prosecutor only from among the persons constituting such cadre under the Code of Criminal Procedure for conducting cases in the Sessions Court. This is clear on a combined reading of sub-sections (6) and (9) of S. 24. In sub-section (9) the expression "Prosecuting Officers" has been used as taking in any persons holding the post of Public Prosecutor, Assistant Public Prosecutor or any other Prosecuting Officer by whatever name called. Sub-section (6) independently can grant no benefit to the Prosecuting Officers unless the clause of deeming fiction contained in sub-section (9) makes them eligible for appointment as a Public Prosecutor or Additional Public Prosecutor. It was not the intention of the legislature while enacting sub-section (6) that even if in a State there exists only a cadre of Prosecuting Inspectors or Assistant Public Prosecutors, the State Government would be bound to appoint Public Prosecutor and Additional Public Prosecutor only from among such cadre under sub-section (6). The basic intention was to appoint Public Prosecutors and Additional Public Prosecutors from the advocates having at least seven years' practice. It lies within the competence of the State Government to keep the posts of Public Prosecutor and Additional Public Prosecutor as tenure posts for some period based on contract and not to make such posts as regular or permanent under any service rule. In such case till the posts are tenure posts, to be filled on contract basis for some period, the Assistant Public Prosecutors who are members of a regular service cannot claim any right to be appointed on such posts under sub-section (6). They are however, eligible to be considered with any advocate of seven years' standing if willing to join such post on tenure basis by the District Magistrate in consultation with the Sessions Judge. It is not possible to accept the contention that Assistant Public Prosecutors can be appointed on such tenure posts on deputation and may return to their parent service after completion of the period of such tenure posts. The State of U.P. in its counter has clearly brought out the distinction in these two kinds of posts in the manner and terms of their appointment, discharge of duties, emoluments etc. The Assistant Public Prosecutors have avenues of promotion in their own cadre and no argument can be advanced in interpreting sub-section (6) on this basis. K.J. John, Asstt. Public Prosecutor v. State of Kerala, (1990) 4 SCC 191: 1990 SCC (Cri) 565: AIR 1990 SC 1902: 1990 ALJ 611: (1990) 3 SLJ 32: (1990) 2 KLT 651.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Kania and N.M. Kasliwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-1990]

[135] — S. 24(6) proviso — Applicability

The proviso to sub-section (6) of S. 24 would not apply in the normal circumstances and would only be attracted where in the opinion of the State Government no suitable person is available in such regular cadre of Prosecuting Officers for appointment as Public Prosecutor or Additional Public Prosecutor. K.J. John, Asstt. Public Prosecutor v. State of Kerala, (1990) 4 SCC 191: 1990 SCC (Cri) 565: AIR 1990 SC 1902: 1990 ALJ 611: (1990) 3 SLJ 32: (1990) 2 KLT 651.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Kania and N.M. Kasliwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-1990]

— S. 24(8) See Ss. 321 & 24(8)

See also Ss. 377(2), 24(8) and 401

[136] — Ss. 24(8) and 25(1) — Appointment of an advocate as Special Public Prosecutor — Cannot be made on mere asking of private complainant — Request of the private complainant for such appointment must be examined by Legal Remembrancer on the basis of guidelines prescribed or to be prescribed and decision taken accordingly — Maharashtra Law Officers (Appointment, Conditions of Service and Remuneration) Rules, 1984, Ch. III — R. 22, held, ultra vires — (Maharashtra) Rules for the Conduct of the Legal Affairs of the Government, 1984

The request for appointment of a Special Public Prosecutor should be properly examined by the Remembrancer of Legal Affairs on the basis of guidelines prescribed or to be prescribed and only when he is satisfied that the case deserves the support of a Public Prosecutor or a Special Public Prosecutor that such a person should be appointed to be in charge of the case. There may be instances where a case instituted on a private complaint is really a public cause. In such a case the prosecution though initiated by a private individual is really one which should be taken over by the State. There may also be cases of private complainants where for various other reasons it would be appropriate for the State to support the prosecution by appointing a Public Prosecutor or a Special Public Prosecutor to look after the case. Similarly there may be cases where a powerful complainant may have begun a proceeding to victimize his opponent. If in such a case the State concedes to the request for appointment of a Special Public Prosecutor there will be travesty of justice. Therefore, it would not be appropriate to accept the position that whenever an application is made it should be allowed and a Special Public Prosecutor should be appointed. The primacy given to the Public Prosecutor under the scheme of the Code has a social purpose and the same would be lost if the procedure adopted by R. 22 of Maharashtra Rules is accepted.

The Remembrancer of Legal Affairs should also scrutinise requests of private complainants for making payments to the Special Public Prosecutors by them and decide in which cases such request should be accepted, keeping in view the prescribed guidelines and the facts of such case.

Thus R. 22 of the Maharashtra Rules is bad and the State Government should properly modify the same keeping in view the above conclusions. Mukul Dalal v. Union of India, (1988) 3 SCC 144: 1988 SCC (Cri) 566.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Pathak, C.J. and Ranganath Misra and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1988]

[137] — Ss. 24(8) and 25(1) — Remuneration of Special Public Prosecutor appointed on the request of a private complainant — Whether should be paid by the State or the private complainant — To be decided by Legal Remembrancer on the basis of guidelines prescribed or to be prescribed — Normally the remuneration to be paid by State

Ordinarily, the Special Public Prosecutor should be paid out of the State funds even when he appears in support of a private complainant but there may be some special case where the Special Public Prosecutor's remuneration may be collected from the private source, such as where the prosecutor is a public sector undertaking, a bank whether nationalised or not, an educational institution and the like. The rate of fees should be prescribed and the private complainant should be called upon to deposit the fees either with the Remembrancer of Legal Affairs or a prescribed State agency from where the fees would be drawn by the Special Public Prosecutor. To leave the private complainant to pay the Special Public Prosecutor would indeed not be appropriate. Mukul Dalal v. Union of India, (1988) 3 SCC 144: 1988 SCC (Cri) 566.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Pathak, C.J. and Ranganath Misra and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1988]

P.G. Narayanankutty v. State of Kerala, (1982) 2 Cri LJ 2085 (Ker), approved

[138] — Ss. 24(8) and 406 — Appointment of Special Prosecutors — When can be exercised and by whom — Transfer of case — Held, power of appointment of Special Prosecutors can be exercised by the Central Government and the State Government for the purpose of any case or class of cases, having requisite qualification — Such powers can also be exercised by the State Government of the transferee court where the sessions case is pending (Para 14). Jayendra Saraswati Swamigal (3) v. State of T.N., (2008) 10 SCC 180: AIR 2008 SC 2997: (2008) 3 KLT 669: 2008 Cri LJ 3877.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-2008]

Jayendra Saraswathy Swamigal (2) v. State of T.N., (2005) 8 SCC 771: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 1, followed

— S. 24(9) See Ss. 24(6) and (9) (as amended in 1978)

— S. 24-A See Ss. 24 and 24-A

— S. 25 See Ss. 24 and 25

See also Ss. 24, 25 and 320

See also Ss. 24, 25 and 321

See also Ss. 302, 24 and 25

See also Ss. 309, 311 and 24, 25

[139] — Ss. 25 and 24 — Public Prosecutor/District Government Counsel — Right of existing incumbent to renewal/extension of his tenure — Appointment of Public Prosecutor or District Government Counsel is in the nature of a professional engagement, governed by provisions of CrPC and relevant executive instructions and does not amount to appointment to a civil post and does not attract the proviso to Art. 309 — Making of such appointment is by following the procedure contained in CrPC and adopting a reasonable or fair procedure, held, hence normally not subject to judicial review — The question of State's satisfaction or otherwise with the performance of its counsel is a matter between it and the counsel — An incumbent has no legal enforceable right for renewal or extension of his tenure — Denial of such renewal although is subject to judicial scrutiny, inter alia, on the ground of arbitrariness or malice, held, the court would not examine as to what impelled the State not to renew the incumbent's tenure — Jurisdiction of the court in such cases would be to invoke the doctrine of Wednesbury unreasonableness — State's action held, can be subjected to review only when it falls in the realm of public law — The position can be determined in each case having regard to the nature of and extent of the authority vested in the State and it is not possible to generalise the nature of actions falling under public law remedy or private law field nor is it desirable to enumerate such actions — Power of judicial review, held, is not intended to assume a supervisory role — Limitations on the power of judicial review restated — Situations in which and extent to which the court of judicial review can reappreciate the findings of fact, restated — Further held, (U.P. Government) Legal Remembrancer's Manual is not "law" under Art. 13 and is not covered even by Art. 166(3) — However, in making such appointments the State has to act fairly and reasonably and normally must follow the principles contained in the said Manual — Hence, where District Officer opined that the term of the existing DGC (Crl) should not be extended as he lacked effective control over ADGCs for "taking steps" and District Judge agreed therewith, non-renewal of his tenure by the State, held, not wholly without jurisdiction and not calling for interference under Art. 226 — Certain specific guidelines laid down to enable appointment of competent lawyers — State's decision not to renew the tenure of existing Public Prosecutor — Scope of judicial review of such decision — (U.P. Government) Legal Remembrancer's Manual, Paras 7.01 to 7.08 and Ch. XXI — Provisions in, for appointment and renewal of the term of District Government Counsel — Nature and binding effect of — Held, they are executive instructions and neither "law" within Art. 13 nor covered by Art. 166(3) — However, normally the State would be bound to follow the principles laid down therein — Constitution of India — Arts. 226, 13 and 166(3) — Judicial review under Art. 226

The respondent herein was appointed as DGC (Crl) at Meerut on 7-1-1993. That post is deemed to be that of Public Prosecutor within the meaning of Section 24 CrPC. His term was renewed on 12-3-1996 and he was again appointed in the same capacity on 17-9-1997 for one year. However, subsequent thereto, despite his request, his term was not renewed and on 18-9-1998 he was relieved from the charge of the said post. On 17-9-1998 the vacancy was notified. The respondent then filed a writ petition before the Allahabad High Court challenging the said order dated 18-9-1998 on the ground that as the District Magistrate and the District Judge had found his conduct and work satisfactory and had recommended for renewal of his term, the renewal ought to have been granted as a matter of course. The High Court held that there was no good or cogent reason for rejecting the recommendation of the District Judge. Therefore, it directed the State Government to renew the respondent's term as DGC (Crl). Referring to Special Reference No. 1 of 1998, Re, (1998) 7 SCC 739, the High Court further opined that the District Judge should not make the recommendation alone but should constitute a five-member collegium headed by himself, for that purpose. Although the State pointed out that the respondent's case was not recommended by the District Judge or the District

Magistrate, the High Court directed the question of renewal of the respondent's term to be considered afresh by the collegium. The State then filed the instant appeals.

The appellant State contended: (i) the High Court proceeded on a wrong premise that the recommendations for renewal of the respondent's term as DGC (Crl) had been made by the District Magistrate, (ii) since the appointment of Public Prosecutors was governed by the provisions of CrPC and renewal thereof, by the U.P. Legal Remembrancer's Manual, the High Court erred in directing the constitution of a collegium, and (iii) professional engagement of a lawyer could not be equated with the appointment in a civil post as there existed a relationship of client and lawyer between the State and the Public Prosecutor. On the other hand, the respondent submitted that the High Court felt the need to constitute a collegium as the action on the part of the State in appointment and/or renewal of the DGCs was found to be arbitrary. The respondent added that the Public Prosecutors looked after the prosecution work and thus the office was public in nature.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

Although the Legal Remembrancer's Manual provides for renewal but it contains executive instructions which even do not meet the requirements of Section 166(3). The Legal Remembrancer's Manual is not law within the meaning of Article 13. (Para 42)

The State, however, while appointing a counsel must take into account the following fundamental principles so that good and competent lawyers are appointed: (i) good administration of justice; (ii) to fulfil its duty to uphold the rule of law; (iii) its accountability to the public; and (iv) expenditure from the taxpayers' money. No appointment of Public Prosecutors or District Counsel should be made either for pursuing a political purpose or for giving some undue advantage to a section of the people. Retention of its counsel by the State must be weighed on the scale of public interest. The State should replace an efficient, honest and competent lawyer, inter alia, when it is in a position to appoint a more competent lawyer. In such an event, even a good performance by a lawyer may not be of much importance. (Paras 43 and 44)

However, malice in law can also be a ground for judicial review. (Para 45)

The Code of Criminal Procedure does not provide for renewal or extension of a term. Evidently, the legislature thought it fit to leave such matters at the discretion of the State. However, even in the matter of extension or renewal of the term of Public Prosecutors, the State is required to act fairly and reasonably. The State normally would be bound to follow the principles laid down in the Legal Remembrancer's Manual. (Para 46)

A Public Prosecutor is not only required to show his professional competence but is also required to discharge certain administrative functions. In the present case, the District Officer was of the opinion that in a district like Meerut the term of the appointment should not be extended as he had no effective control over the other ADGCs for "taking steps". The approach of the District Officer cannot be said to be wholly irrational. Moreover, the District Judge also agreed thereto. The action on the part of the State, therefore, cannot be said to be wholly without jurisdiction requiring interference by the High Court in exercise of its power of judicial review. (Para 51)

The District Government Counsel appointed for conducting civil as also criminal cases hold offices of great importance. They are not only officers of the court but also the representatives of the State. (Para 71)

Public Prosecutors have greater responsibility. They are required to perform statutory duties independently having regard to various provisions contained in CrPC and in particular Section 320 thereof. (Para 72)

The District Government Counsel represent the State. They, thus, represent the interest of the general public before a court of law. The holders of the post have a public duty to perform. Public element is, thus, involved therein. In the matter of engagement of a District Government Counsel, however, a concept of public office does not come into play. The choice is that of the Government and none can claim a right to be appointed because it is a position of great trust and confidence. Article 14, however, will be attracted to a limited extent as the functionaries named in CrPC are public functionaries. They also have a public duty to perform. If the State fails to discharge its public duty or acts in defiance, deviation and departure of the principles of law, the court may interfere. The court may also interfere when the legal policy laid down by the Government for the purpose of such appointments is departed from or mandatory provisions of law are not complied with. Judicial review can also be resorted to, if a holder of a public office is sought to be removed for reasons dehors the statute. (Paras 74 and 75)

The appointment to the post of Districl Government Counsel must not be a political one. The

Manual states that political activity by the District Government Counsel shall be a disqualification to hold the post. (Para 76)

The State, therefore, is not expected to rescind the appointments with the change in the Government. The existing panel of the District Government Counsel may not be disturbed and a fresh panel come into being, only because a new party has taken over charge of the Government. (Para 78)

The power under Article 226 is not on a par with the constitutional jurisdiction conferred upon the Supreme Court under Article 142. The High Court has no jurisdiction to direct formulation of a new legal principle or a new procedure which would be contrary to and inconsistent with a statutory provision like the Code of Criminal Procedure. (Para 57). State of U.P. v. Johri Mal, (2004) 4 SCC 714: AIR 2004 SC 3800: (2004) 3 SLR 734: (2004) 19 AIC 69 (SC): (2004) 3 LLN 13.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.N. Khare, C.J. and Brijesh Kumar and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

Union of India v. Naveen Jindal, (2004) 2 SCC 510, relied on

Kumari Shrilekha Vidyarthi v. State of U.P., (1991) 1 SCC 212: 1991 SCC (L&S) 742; Mukul Dalal v. Union of India, (1988) 3 SCC 144: 1988 SCC (Cri) 566; Mundrika Prasad Singh v. State of Bihar, (1979) 4 SCC 701, considered

[140] — Ss. 25 and 24 — Separation of prosecution agency from investigation agency — Police prosecutors functioning under the control of Inspector General of Police appointed as Assistant Public Prosecutors by a notification under S. 25 issued by the State Government — Held, such Assistant Public Prosecutors could not be allowed to continue as personnel of Police Department and to continue to function under the control of the head of Police Department — State Govt. directed to constitute a separate cadre of Assistant Public Prosecutors by creating a separate Prosecution Department making its head directly responsible to the Govt. — A Police Prosecutor is not eligible for being appointed as Assistant Public Prosecutor — However, since that question not raised before Supreme Court and the appointments of Police Prosecutors as Assistant Public Prosecutors were made about 21 years back, the Supreme Court did not express its view on that question — Service Law — Bombay Police Manual, Rules 32 and 60

When Assistant Public Prosecutors are appointed under Section 25 of the Code for conducting prosecutions in courts of Magistrates in a district fairly and impartially, separating them from the police officers of the Police Department and freeing them from the administrative or disciplinary control of officers of the Police Department, are the inevitable consequential actions required to be taken by the State Government which appoints such Assistant Public Prosecutors, inasmuch as, taking of such actions are statutory obligations impliedly imposed upon it under sub-section (3) thereof. When such consequential actions are taken by the State Government in respect of large number of persons appointed as Assistant Public Prosecutors, it becomes necessary for putting them on a separate cadre of Assistant Public Prosecutors and creating a separate Prosecution Department as suggested by the Law Commission in its Report making those Assistant Public Prosecutors subject to control of their superiors in the hierarchy in matters of administration and discipline, with the head of such Prosecution Department being made directly responsible to the State Government in respect of conduct of prosecutions by the Assistant Public Prosecutors of his department. (Para 12)

In the present case the notification dated 1-4-1974 issued by the Government of Maharashtra under Section 25 of the Code merely appoints the appellants and others, as mentioned in Schedule to the notification, the Police Prosecutors of the Police Department as Assistant Public Prosecutors without freeing such Assistant Public Prosecutors from the administrative and disciplinary control of the Police Department to which they belonged earlier, and without creating a separate department of prosecution for them with the head of that department or departments being made directly responsible to the Government, the Government of Maharashtra has failed to discharge its statutory obligation impliedly imposed upon it in that regard under sub-section (3) of Section 25 of the Code. The Govt. of Maharashtra could not have allowed the Assistant Public Prosecutors appointed thereunder to continue as personnel of its Police Department and to continue to function under the control of the head of Police Department, the Inspector General of Police. (Para 12)

The Govt. of Maharashtra is directed to constitute a separate cadre of Assistant Public Prosecutors either on district-wise basis or on State-wise basis, by creating a separate Prosecution Department for them and making the head to be appointed for such department directly responsible to the State Government for their discipline and the conduct of all prosecutions by them before the Magistrates' courts and further free such Prosecutors fully from the administrative and disciplinary control of the Police Department or its officers, if they still continue to be under such control. (Para 15)

No doubt, when the scheme of the provision in Section 25 of the Code as also the scheme contained in Section 24 of the Code are seen, a police prosecutor cannot even become eligible for being appointed as Assistant Public Prosecutor on regular basis, but that question has since not been raised before the Supreme Court and further since the appointments of the appellants and other similarly situated Police Prosecutors as Assistant Public Prosecutors are made under the notification issued as far back as in the year 1974, the Supreme Court did not express its view on that question. (Para 14). S.B. Shahane v. State of Maharashtra, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 37: (1995) 30 ATC 519: 1995 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 1995 SC 1628.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and N. Venkatachala, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1995]

[141] — S. 25 — Appointment as Law Officer/Assistant Public Prosecutor — Nature of office — Holding "office of profit" under the State Government — Three requirements of, restated — Appointment as Law Officer/Assistant Public Prosecutor, even though provisional, under R. 5(4) of Orissa Law Officers Rules, 1971 read with S. 25, CrPC, held, satisfies all of the said three requirements — Hence, amounts to holding of an office of profit under the State Government — Consequently, a person so appointed, held, not eligible to stand for election of member or Chairman of Panchayat Samiti, and, if elected, would cease to be a member and a fortiori to be Chairman — Orissa Law Officers Rules, 1971, R. 5(4) — Constitution of India — Arts. 102, 191 & 58(2) — Orissa Panchayat Samiti Act, 1959 (7 of 1960) — S. 45(1)(i)

The appellant, an advocate, was appointed as an Assistant Public Prosecutor provisionally under Rule 5(4) of the Orissa Law Officers Rules, 1971 read with Section 25 of CrPC, 1973 to conduct criminal cases. He was entitled to a daily fee of Rs 100 subject to restrictions under the Rules. While so, he as well as Respondent 4 were elected as members of different Panchayat Samitis. Thereafter both of them contested the election to the post of Chairman of the Panchayat Samiti, whereof the appellant was a member. The appellant was declared elected as Chairman. Having lost in the contest, Respondent 4 moved an application before the District Judge under Section 45-B of the Orissa Panchayat Samiti Act, 1959 on the ground that as Assistant Public Prosecutor, the appellant was holding an "office of profit" under the Government, so he was not eligible to be either a member or the Chairman of the Panchayat Samiti. The District Judge decided against the appellant and the High Court confirmed that decision. Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that: (i) his appointment as Public Prosecutor being provisional, he was not holding an office of profit; and (ii) after the election of the appellant was over only an election petition under Section 44-A but not a petition under Section 45-B of the Act was the remedy of Respondent 4. Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The expression "office of profit" only means an office which yields income or profit. The term "office" or "employment" means one subsisting, permanent, substantive position which had an existence independent from the person who filled it, which went on and was filled in succession by successive holders.

In order to prove the incurring of disqualification under Section 45(1)(i) of the Act it must be shown that (i) there was a permanent office of Assistant Public Prosecutor; (ii) income or profit accrued from that office, and (iii) the appellant held that office. Admittedly, permanency is attached to the post of Assistant Public Prosecutor and appointment to that office is regulated by the Rules which deal with the remuneration of the Law Officers. It is immaterial that the appellant did not in fact receive any fee. Requirements (i) and (ii) are, therefore, satisfied. The appointment of the appellant as a Law Officer/Assistant Public Prosecutor under the Rules would satisfy the third requirement as well.

The appellant's contention that his appointment being a stopgap arrangement, he could not be said to be holding an office of profit is devoid of merit. To fulfil the requirements of the said expression it must be shown that permanency is attached to the office and not to the term for which a person holds it. It has, therefore, to be held that the appellant was holding an office of profit on the relevant date and was not eligible to stand for election of member or Chairman of the Panchayat Samiti and in view of Section 45(1)(i) he shall cease to be a member a fortiori to be the Chairman of the Samiti. Rabindra Kumar Nayak v. Collector, Mayurbhanj, Orissa, (1999) 2 SCC 627: AIR 1999 SC 1120: (1999) 2 LLN 625: (1999) 2 SLR 13.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1999]

Kanta Kathuria v. Manak Chand Surana, (1969) 3 SCC 268, followed

Madhukar G.E. Pankakar v. Jaswant Chobbildas Rajani, (1977) 1 SCC 70: AIR 1976 SC 2283, considered

— S. 25(1) See also Ss. 24(8) and 25(1)

[142] — S. 25(1) — "Civil post" — Scope — Post of Assistant Public Prosecutor appointed in Magistrate's court by Governor of the State, held, covered — Therefore, his dispute against termination of his services, held, fell within the jurisdiction, powers and authority of the State Administrative Tribunal — High Court had no jurisdiction to entertain, try and dispose of his writ petition challenging termination of his service — Hence, Division Bench of High Court rightly transferred the same to State Administrative Tribunal — Contention that APP was covered by the exception in S. 2(c), AT Act, rejected — Further held, the termination order passed under R. 6, W.B. Services (Appointment, Probation and Confirmation) Rules, 1979 on payment of notice pay also indicated that the post of APP was a civil post — Assistant Public Prosecutor — Nature of his post and judicial forum competent to decide a dispute regarding termination of his service — W.B. Assistant Public Prosecutors (Qualifications, Method of Recruitment and Conditions of Service) Rules, 1974, Rr. 3 and 4 — W.B. Services (Appointment, Probation and Confirmation) Rules, 1979, R. 6 — W.B. Service Rules, 1971, R. 34-B(2) — W.B. Administrative Tribunal (Procedure) Rules, 1994 — Constitution of India — Arts. 323-A(1) & 226 — Administrative Tribunals Act, 1985 — Ss. 15, 4(2) and 2(c)

On 9-4-1975, exercising his powers under Section 25(1), CrPC, the Governor of West Bengal, appointed the petitioner herein to act as an Assistant Public Prosecutor. He took charge and completed the probation period. As per Rule 4(d) of the Assistant Public Prosecutors (Qualifications, Method of Recruitment and Conditions of Service) Rules, 1974, on 31-3-1978 he was appointed as Assistant Public Prosecutor in the Court of the Judicial Magistrate at Malda. However, his services were terminated by the Governor's order dated 22-9-1979 which was communicated to him along with a cheque for the amount of one month's salary in lieu of notice as required under Rule 34-B(2) of the West Bengal Service Rules, 1971. A Single Judge of the Calcutta High Court allowed his writ petition and set aside the termination order. But a Division Bench of the High Court held that the Single Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain, try and hear the writ petition after coming into force of the Administrative Tribunals Act, 1985 and, consequently, the Division Bench transferred the matter to the State Administrative Tribunal for disposal. The petitioner then filed the instant SLP. The petitioner contended that as Assistant Public Prosecutor was an officer of the Court of the Judicial Magistrate which was a court subordinate to the Calcutta High Court and, therefore, the petitioner came within the ambit of the exception in Section 2(c) of the AT Act, the High Court had the jurisdiction to consider the matter and it erred in transferring his writ petition to the State Administrative Tribunal. The question thus arising for determination was whether the post of APP was a civil post under Section 15, AT Act.

Answering in the affirmative and dismissing the SLP,

Held :

Rules 3 and Rule 4 of the West Bengal Assistant Public Prosecutors (Qualifications, Method of Recruitment and Conditions of Service) Rules, 1974 indicate that the post of Assistant Public Prosecutor is a civil post, and consequently, all service matters concerning such posts shall fall within the jurisdiction, powers and authority of the State Administrative Tribunal under Section 15 of the AT Act. Further, the order of termination passed in the present matter also indicates that the services of the petitioner came to be terminated as Assistant Public Prosecutor, Malda under Rule 6 of the West Bengal Services (Appointment, Probation and Confirmation) Rules, 1979 on payment of one month's salary in lieu of notice. This also indicates that the post of Assistant Public Prosecutor was a civil post under the State in terms of Section 15(1) of the Administrative Tribunals Act, 1985. Moreover, the West Bengal Administrative Tribunal has been established under Section 4(2) of the Administrative Tribunals Act, 1985, which is also indicated by the West Bengal Administrative Tribunal (Procedure) Rules, 1994. Hence, the present dispute regarding termination of service of Assistant Public Prosecutor came within the jurisdiction, powers and authority of the Tribunal under Section 15 of the AT Act. (Paras 6 and 5)

Moreover, the petitioner held his employment under the State Government of West Bengal. Therefore, in view of Article 323-A(1) of the Constitution, the Single Judge of the High Court had no jurisdiction to entertain, try and dispose of this matter under Article 226 of the Constitution. Hence, the Division Bench of the High Court was right in transferring the matter to the State Administrative Tribunal. (Paras 7 and 5). Samarendra Das, Advocate v. State of W.B., (2004) 2 SCC 274: 2004 SCC (L&S) 402: (2004) 1 LLN 523: (2004) 2 CHN 76: (2004) 100 FLR 849: (2004) 2 SLR 56.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.N. Khare, C.J. and S.H. Kapadia, J. [Date of decision: 16-1-2004]

— S. 25-A See also Ss. 24 and 25-A

[143] — S. 25-A — Separation of prosecuting agency from investigating agency — Desirability of — Background for insertion of S. 25-A by amendment in 2006 of CrPC, 1973 for establishment of separate prosecution agency brought out — Law in Commonwealth countries compared (Paras 23 to 30). NHRC v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 767.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2009]

Zahira Habibulla H. Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 4 SCC 158: 2004 SCC (Cri) 999, relied on

— Ch. III (Ss. 26 to 35) See Ss. 228 & 240 and Ch. III (Ss. 26 to 35)

— S. 26 See also Ss. 28 & 29, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 965 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 26 See Ss. 11(1) proviso, 4(1) & (2), 3(4)(a), 26 and 245
See also Ss. 209 and 26 and Sch. I
See also Ss. 209, 193, 26 and 306
See also Ss. 228, 227 and 26

[144] — S. 26 — Specific powers have been conferred by hierarchy of courts to deal with the matter as it seems just and proper — Therefore, powers have to be exercised in accordance with law — Even discretionary power has to be exercised in consonance with the known principles of law

The criminal jurisprudence of the country proceeds on the basis that a person is innocent and the burden rests on the prosecution to prove beyond all reasonable doubts as regards the guilt of the accused persons. It is with this background that the Code of Criminal Procedure has conferred on to the hierarchy of the courts specific powers to deal with the matter as it seems just and proper. The words "just and proper" used herein do not however, mean and imply an arbitrary exercise of power — powers are circumscribed and have to be exercised in accordance with the provisions of law and not dehors the same. Even discretionary powers shall have to be exercised in a manner and in consonance with the known principles of law and not otherwise. (Para 13). Dwarka Dass v. State of Haryana, (2003) 1 SCC 204: 2003 SCC (Cri) 264: AIR 2003 SC 185.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Y.K. Sabharwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-2002]

— S. 26(a)(ii) See Ss. 374(2) and 26(a)(ii)
See also Ss. 408(1), 406, 407, 228(1), 227 and 26(a)(ii)

[145] — Ss. 26(a)(ii) & (iii) and Sch. I — Bar under, on Court Martial's jurisdiction to try the offence of rape, held, not applicable to the offence of attempting to commit rape — Provisions of Sch. I to CrPC in respect of Ss. 511 and 376 IPC could not be invoked to reach a different conclusion as the question of Court Martial's jurisdiction to try an offence has to be adjudged from the provisions of the Army Act itself and not with reference to CrPC — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 376 and 511 — Army Act, 1950 — S. 70 (Para 2). Madan Lal v. Union of India, (2002) 10 SCC 185.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-9-1999]

State v. Jaikaran Singh, AIR 1955 NUC 1721 (All), overruled

— S. 26(a)(iii) See Ss. 26(a)(ii) & (iii) and Sch. I

— S. 26(b) See Ss. 167, 2(h), 4(2), 26(b) and Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176)
See also Ss. 167(1), 4(2), 5, 26(b)

— S. 27 See also CRIMINAL LAW — 'Juvenile Justice and Children's Acts' in Vol. 20, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn.

[146] — S. 27 — Accused below 16 years convicted and sentenced under S. 302, IPC — Whether entitled to the benefits of Haryana Children Act, 1974 (Haryana Act 14 of 1974) — Held, clause "any offence not punishable with death or imprisonment for life" in S. 27, Criminal Procedure Code will override the non obstante clause in S. 65(1) of the Act, the Central legislation (Criminal Procedure Code) having been enforced subsequent to the State Act and hence applicability of the Act in case of trial of the child convicted under S. 302, IPC would be barred by S. 27, Criminal Procedure Code

[But since Rohtas v. State of Haryana, (1979) 4 SCC 229: 1979 SCC (Cri) 963, which held that by virtue of S. 65(1) the State Act would apply to a child notwithstanding the fact that he was accused of an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life, had not been decided from the above angle, the Court advised that the case be referred to a larger Bench in order to resolve the conflict.]. Raghbir v. State of Haryana, (1981) 3 SCC 170: 1981 SCC (Cri) 667.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.D. Koshal and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-3-1981]

[147] — Ss. 27 and 5 — Haryana Children Act, 1974 — Ss. 21 and 65(1) — Held that that even though the Code came into force after the Haryana Act, it would not have overriding effect — Benefit of the Haryana Act therefore available to a delinquent child accused under S. 302, IPC — Held further that there is no inconsistency or repugnancy between the provisions of the Code and the State Act in terms of Art. 254(1) of the Constitution — S. 27, Criminal Procedure Code only an enabling provision and not a "specific provision to the contrary" within S. 5, Criminal Procedure Code — Children Act, 1960 — S. 20. Raghbir v. State of Haryana, (1981) 4 SCC 210: 1981 SCC (Cri) 818: AIR 1981 SC 2037: 1981 Cri LJ 1497.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-1981]

— S. 28 See Ss. 30, 28 and 29

See also Ss. 357, 29(2) to (4) and 28

See also CRIMINAL TRIAL — 'Sentence', in Vol. 3

See also under PENAL CODE, 1860 — 'S. 302 — Murder Trial'

[148] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Imposition of "appropriate sentence" — Emphasising need of, object of law as well as duty and role of courts in this regard, stated — Awarding inadequate sentence — Effect of, on justice system and society, explained — Relevant considerations while determining sentence — Held, sentence should be proportionate to gravity of crime — Corrective machinery or deterrent approach to be adopted depending upon factual matrix — No formula of a foolproof nature is possible that would provide a reasonable criterion in determining a just and appropriate punishment — Due consideration should be given to facts and circumstances of case, having regard to various factors including nature of offence and manner in which it was executed or committed, motive for the crime, conduct of accused, nature of weapons used and all other attendant circumstances — Aggravating and mitigating circumstances should be delicately balanced — Rights not only of criminals but also of victims of crime and society at large to be kept in view

The law regulates social interests, arbitrates conflicting claims and demands. Security of persons and property of the people is an essential function of the State. It could be achieved through instrumentality of criminal law. Undoubtedly, there is a cross-cultural conflict where living law must find answer to the new challenges and the courts are required to mould the sentencing system to meet the challenges. The contagion of lawlessness would undermine social order and lay it in ruins. Protection of society and stamping out criminal proclivity must be the object of law which must be achieved by imposing appropriate sentence. Therefore, law as a cornerstone of the edifice of "order" should meet the challenges confronting the society. In operating the sentencing system, law should adopt the corrective machinery or the deterrence based on factual matrix. By deft modulation, sentencing process be stern where it should be, and tempered with mercy where it warrants to be. The facts and given circumstances in each case, the nature of the crime, the manner in which it was planned and committed, the motive for commission of the crime, the conduct of the accused, the nature of weapons used and all other attending circumstances are relevant facts which would enter into the area of consideration. (Para 7)

Undue sympathy to impose inadequate sentence would do more harm to the justice system to undermine the public confidence in the efficacy of law, and society could not long endure under such serious threats. It is, therefore, the duty of every court to award proper sentence having regard to the nature of the offence and the manner in which it was executed or committed, etc. (Para 8)

The criminal law adheres in general to the principle of proportionality in prescribing liability according to the culpability of each kind of criminal conduct. It ordinarily allows some significant discretion to the Judge in arriving at a sentence in each case, presumably to permit sentences that reflect more subtle considerations of culpability that are raised by the special facts of each case. Judges in essence affirm that punishment ought always to fit the crime; yet in practice sentences are determined largely by other considerations. Sometimes it is the correctional needs of the perpetrator that are offered to justify a sentence. Sometimes the desirability of keeping him out of circulation, and sometimes even the tragic results of his crime. Inevitably these considerations cause a departure from just deserts as the basis of punishment and create cases of apparent injustice that are serious and widespread. (Para 9)

Proportion between crime and punishment is a goal respected in principle, and in spite of errant notions, it remains a strong influence in the determination of sentences. The practice of punishing all serious crimes with equal severity is now unknown in civilised societies, but such a radical departure from the principle of proportionality has disappeared from the law only in recent times. Even now for a single grave infraction, drastic sentences are imposed. Anything less than a penalty of greatest severity for any serious crime is thought then to be a measure of toleration that is unwarranted and unwise. But in fact, quite apart from those considerations that make punishment unjustifiable when it is out of proportion to the crime, uniformly disproportionate punishment has some very undesirable practical consequences. (Para 10)

After giving due consideration to the facts and circumstances of each case, for deciding just and appropriate sentence to be awarded for an offence, the aggravating and mitigating factors and circumstances in which a crime has been committed are to be delicately balanced on the basis of really relevant circumstances in a dispassionate manner by the Court. Such act of balancing is indeed a difficult task. No formula of a foolproof nature is possible that would provide a reasonable criterion in determining a just and appropriate punishment in the infinite variety of circumstances that may affect the gravity of the crime. In the absence of any foolproof formula which may provide any basis for reasonable criteria to correctly assess various circumstances germane to the consideration of gravity of the crime, the discretionary judgment in the facts of each case, is the only way in which such judgment may be equitably distinguished. (Para 11)

The imposition of appropriate punishment is the manner in which the court responds to the society's cry for justice against the criminal. Justice demands that courts should impose punishment befitting the crime so that the courts reflect public abhorrence of the crime. The court must not only keep in view the rights of the criminal but also the rights of the victim of the crime and the society at large while considering the imposition of appropriate punishment. (Para 12)

It is the nature and gravity of the crime but not the criminal, which are germane for consideration of appropriate punishment in a criminal trial. The court will be failing in its duty if appropriate punishment is not awarded for a crime which has been committed not only against the individual victim but also against the society to which the criminal and the victim belong. The punishment to be awarded for a crime must not be irrelevant but it should conform to and be consistent with the atrocity and brutality with which the crime has been perpetrated, the enormity of the crime warranting public abhorrence and it should "respond to the society's cry for justice against the criminal". If for extremely heinous crime of murder perpetrated in a very brutal manner without any provocation, most deterrent punishment is not given, the case of deterrent punishment will lose its relevance. (Para 13). Shailesh Jasvantbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 2 SCC 359: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 499: (2006) 2 Guj LR 1428: 2006 Cri LJ 1132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-1-2006]

Sevaka Perumal v. State of T.N., (1991) 3 SCC 471: 1991 SCC (Cri) 724; Dennis Councle McGautha v. State of California, 402 US 183: 28 L Ed 2d 711 (1971); Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358; Ravji v. State of Rajasthan, (1996) 2 SCC 175: 1996 SCC (Cri) 225; State of M.P. v. Ghanshyam Singh, (2003) 8 SCC 13: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1935; Surjit Singh v. Nahara Ram, (2004) 6 SCC 513: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1801; State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559, relied on [149] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Relevant considerations — Duty of courts to award "appropriate sentence" — Need to avoid lenient/sympathetic approach on account of mere lapse of time — Held, courts should impose appropriate punishment befitting the crime — They should impose such sentence which reflects the conscience of the society — Sentencing process must be stern where it should be — While considering imposition of appropriate sentence, courts must keep in view not only the rights of victim of crime but also the rights of society at large — Any liberal attitude by imposition of meagre sentences or taking too sympathetic view on account of mere lapse of time, held, will be counterproductive in long run and against the interest of society — In present case, A-1 was the main accused involved in brutal murder of nine persons — Hence, order passed against him by TADA Court imposing sentence of life imprisonment with the condition that it shall not be of less than 20 years, held, was proper — Not liable to be modified — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987, S. 5 (Paras 99 to 102). Ahmed Hussein Vali Mohammed Saiyed v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 7 SCC 254: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 368: (2009) 79 AIC 229 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and P. Sathasivam and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-2009]

[150] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Imposition of "appropriate sentence" — Emphasising the need of, object of law as well as duty and role of courts in this regard, stated — Awarding inadequate sentence — Effect of, on justice system and society, explained — Principle of proportionality — Extent of adherence to, while determination of sentences in practice, discussed — Relevant factors to be taken into account while determining proper sentence, restated — Further, need of balancing the aggravating and mitigating circumstances of the case, expressed — On facts, two years' custodial sentence under S. 304 Pt. I IPC, held, was not proper — Hence, enhanced to six years. State of M.P. v. Ghanshyam Singh, (2003) 8 SCC 13: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1935: AIR 2003 SC 3191.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-2003]

State of Punjab v. Bira Singh, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 708: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1152; Pashora Singh v. State of Punjab, 1993 Supp (2) SCC 33: 1993 SCC (Cri) 387; Dilbag Singh v. State of Punjab, (1979) 2 SCC 103: 1979 SCC (Cri) 376, not followed

Mahesh v. State of M.P., (1987) 3 SCC 80: 1987 SCC (Cri) 379; Jashubha Bharatsinh Gohil v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 4 SCC 353: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1193; Sevaka Perumal v. State of T.N., (1991) 3 SCC 471: 1991 SCC (Cri) 724; Dennis Councle McGautha v. State of California, 402 US 183: 28 L Ed 2d 711 (1971); Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358; Ravji v. State of Rajasthan, (1996) 2 SCC 175: 1996 SCC (Cri) 225, relied on [151] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Imposition of "appropriate sentence" — Emphasising the need of, and reiterating the object of law as well as duty and role of courts in this regard, held, sentence should be proportionate to the gravity of offence — It should reflect the conscience of the society — Awarding inadequate sentence — Effect of, on justice system and society, explained — No formula of a foolproof nature is possible that would provide a reasonable criterion in determining a just and appropriate punishment — Due consideration should be given to the facts and circumstances of the case — Relevant factors to be taken into account while determining proper sentence, restated — Aggravating and mitigating factors should be delicately balanced — Penology — Sentencing — Principle of proportionality — Applicability. State of M.P. v. Babbu Barkare, (2005) 5 SCC 413: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1335: AIR 2005 SC 2846: 2005 Cri LJ 3117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2005]

Mahesh v. State of M.P., (1987) 3 SCC 80: 1987 SCC (Cri) 379; Sevaka Perumal v. State of T.N., (1991) 3 SCC 471: 1991 SCC (Cri) 724; Jashubha Bharatsinh Gohil v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 4 SCC 353: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1193; Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358; Ravji v. State of Rajasthan, (1996) 2 SCC 175: 1996 SCC (Cri) 225; Dennis Councle McGautha v. State of California, 402 US 183: 28 L Ed 2d 711 (1971); State of M.P. v. Ghanshyam Singh, (2003) 8 SCC 13: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1935, relied on

[Ed.: See in this regard (2005) 8 SCC 1 and 8.]

[152] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Health and old age as factors — Alteration of sentence to period already undergone i.e. 70 days — Relief of — Entitlement to — Forgery case — Girl B securing admission on basis of forged marksheets — Sentence of 3 months and 6 months passed against B and her father F respectively by High Court — B, a housewife, having no job/source of income of her own — She was a heart patient and had undergone two open heart surgeries — F, a retired Engineer of 81 years, was also a heart patient and having no income other than his pension — Incident occurred a quarter of century back — Considering peculiar facts of the case and an earlier order of Supreme Court, held, sentence could be reduced to period already undergone by B and F i.e. 70 days — However, fine imposed by courts below would remain unaltered — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 420, 421, 466, 468, 471, 465 and 120-B (Paras 7, 8 and 10). Beena Philipose v. State of Kerala, (2006) 7 SCC 414: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 288.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-2006]

[153] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Leniency in sentence — Conviction of police personnel in serious offences — Leniency in sentence in such cases, held, not proper — In these cases, the court will be justified in imposing a deterrent sentence so that it may serve as a warning to others and may restore to some extent the diminishing faith of the public in the police force — Accused police personnel attempting to commit robbery and with that in view committing house trespass in the dead of night armed with firearms — Considering that accused could not commit any other offence as police party promptly arrived at the spot and the fact that accused had been on bail for the last more than six years, High Court reducing the sentence of four years' RI imposed by trial court to period already undergone — Held, High Court was not justified in doing so — Reduction of sentence set aside — Sentence by trial court restored — Penology — Sentencing — Deterrent sentence — Imposition of, held, will be justified in cases of involvement of police personnel in serious offences like under Ss. 458 and 393 IPC — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 458 and 393 — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 28 and 29 (Paras 6 to 8). Ajmer Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 6 SCC 633: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1481.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-2005]

[154] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Lesser sentence merely on the ground of long pendency of matter — Held, is not justified

The appellant State contended that considering the gravity of the offences and the brutal manner of attacks, the custodial sentence of two years awarded to the respondent under Section 304 Pt. I IPC, was too meagre. But the accused-respondent submitted that in view of the fact that the occurrence took place in 1981, the sentence awarded was just and proper. He contended that after a period of two decades it would be unreasonable and inequitable to send him back to custody, particularly when he had deposited the fine which was also imposed on him.

Rejecting the contention of the accused,

Held :

Long pendency of a matter by itself could not justify lesser sentence. Taking note of the purpose for which a sentence is imposed, it cannot be laid down as a rule of universal application that a long passage of time in all cases would justify minimal sentence. (Para 10). State of M.P. v. Ghanshyam Singh, (2003) 8 SCC 13: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1935: AIR 2003 SC 3191.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-2003]

State of Punjab v. Bira Singh, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 708: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1152; Pashora Singh v. State of Punjab, 1993 Supp (2) SCC 33: 1993 SCC (Cri) 387; Dilbag Singh v. State of Punjab, (1979) 2 SCC 103: 1979 SCC (Cri) 376, not followed

Mahesh v. State of M.P., (1987) 3 SCC 80: 1987 SCC (Cri) 379; Jashubha Bharatsinh Gohil v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 4 SCC 353: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1193; Sevaka Perumal v. State of T.N., (1991) 3 SCC 471: 1991 SCC (Cri) 724; Dennis Councle McGautha v. State of California, 402 US 183: 28 L Ed 2d 711 (1971); Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358; Ravji v. State of Rajasthan, (1996) 2 SCC 175: 1996 SCC (Cri) 225, relied on

[155] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Reduction of sentence — Based on meaningless considerations — Held, not justified — "Discretion" in determination of quantum of punishment is required to be exercised judiciously and judicially — Court must also keep in view rights of the victim of the crime and society at large — Penology — Sentencing — Exercise of judicial discretion while determination of sentence — Mode of

The law regulates social interests and arbitrates conflicting claims and demands. Undoubtedly, there is a cross-cultural conflict where living law must find answer to the new challenges and the courts are required to mould the sentencing system to meet the challenges. The contagion of lawlessness would undermine social order and lay it in ruins. Therefore, in operating the sentencing system, law should adopt the corrective machinery or deterrence based on the factual matrix. By deft modulation sentencing process be stern where it should be, and tempered with mercy where it warrants to be. The facts and given circumstances in each case, the nature of the crime, the manner in which it was planned and committed, the motive for commission of the crime, the conduct of the accused, and all other attending circumstances are relevant facts which would enter into the area of consideration. After giving due consideration to the facts and circumstances of each case, for deciding a just and appropriate sentence to be awarded for an offence, the aggravating and mitigating factors and circumstances in which a crime has been committed are to be delicately balanced on the basis of really relevant circumstances in a dispassionate manner by the court. Such act of balancing is indeed a difficult task. The discretionary judgment in the facts of each case, is the only way in which such judgment may be equitably distinguished. The court must not only keep in view the rights of the criminal but also the rights of the victim of the crime and the society at large while considering the imposition of appropriate punishment. (Paras 8, 12 and 15). Union of India v. Kuldeep Singh, (2004) 2 SCC 590: 2004 SCC (Cri) 597: AIR 2004 SC 827: 2004 Cri LJ 836.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-2003]

Dennis Councle McGautha v. State of California, 402 US 183: 28 L Ed 2d 711 (1971); Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358, relied on [156] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Reduction of sentence to period already undergone — Duty of court in case of — Held, the court should categorically notice and state the period actually undergone by the accused (Para 10). Ajmer Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 6 SCC 633: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1481.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-2005]

[157] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Reduction of sentence to period already undergone, by High Court — Propriety — Relevant aspects — Non-consideration of — Offences under Ss. 307, 324 and 114 IPC — Accused also involved in nine other cases — During pendency of trial, bail granted to one of the accused was cancelled for breach of conditions imposed by the court for grant of bail — These aspects not considered by High Court while reducing sentence — High Court proceeded on factually erroneous premises without keeping in view the correct principles relating to punishment — In view of the above, held, High Court's judgment not sustainable — Matter remitted to High Court for a fresh hearing on question of sentence — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 307, 324 and 114 (Paras 14 and 15). Shailesh Jasvantbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 2 SCC 359: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 499: (2006) 2 Guj LR 1428: 2006 Cri LJ 1132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-1-2006]

[158] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Accused on bail for the last more than six years — High Court reducing sentence on ground of — Propriety — Held, mere fact that a person is on bail for some time does not mitigate the offence — In view of the facts of the case, High Court's order reducing sentence to period already undergone not sustainable (Paras 7 and 8). Ajmer Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 6 SCC 633: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1481.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-2005]

[159] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Sentence should be commensurate with gravity of offence — Relevant factors to be taken into account while determining proper sentence — Held, no formula of a foolproof nature is possible that would provide a reasonable criterion in determining a just and appropriate punishment — Due consideration should be given to facts and circumstances of case, having regard to various factors including nature of offence and manner in which it was executed or committed, motive for the crime, conduct of accused and all other attendant circumstances — Aggravating and mitigating factors should be delicately balanced — Discretion in determination of quantum of punishment is required to be exercised judiciously and judicially — Extent of adherence to principle of proportionality, while sentences were determined in actual practice, discussed — On facts, reduction of sentence of imprisonment of seven years' RI imposed by trial court under S. 376(1), to period already undergone (three years and six months in case of one of the co-accused, and two months in case of the other) by High Court, held, not proper — Sentence imposed by trial court restored — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 375 and 376 (Paras 11 to 13, 19 and 20). State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559: AIR 2005 SC 682: 2005 Cri LJ 913.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2005]

[160] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Sentence should be commensurate with gravity of offence — Relevant factors to be taken into account while determining proper sentence — Held, no formula of a foolproof nature is possible that would provide a reasonable criterion in determining just and appropriate punishment — Due consideration should be given to facts and circumstances of case, having regard to various factors including nature of offence and manner in which it was executed or committed, motive for the crime, conduct of accused and all other attendant circumstances — On facts, High Court's reduction of sentences of 5 and 4 years' RI respectively under Ss. 307 and 330 IPC to period already undergone (six months and 23 days) on grounds that appellants were illiterate persons belonging to lower income group and were only 23 years' old at time of commission of offence, held, not proper — Anguish expressed at High Court's casual and mechanical manner of disposal of question of sentence, without application of mind, oblivious to consequences of awarding inappropriate sentences — However, matter not disposed of finally and remitted to High Court instead, since it had not considered certain other alleged mitigating factors put forward by respondents

Undue sympathy to impose inadequate sentence would do more harm to the justice system to undermine the public confidence in the efficacy of law and society could not long endure under such serious threats. It is, therefore, the duty of every court to award proper sentence having regard to the nature of the offence and the manner in which it was executed or committed etc. (Para 6)

After giving due consideration to the facts and circumstances of each case, for deciding just and appropriate sentence to be awarded for an offence, the aggravating and mitigating factors and circumstances in which a crime has been committed are to be delicately balanced on the basis of really relevant circumstances in a dispassionate manner by the court. Such act of balancing is indeed a difficult task. No formula of a foolproof nature is possible that would provide a reasonable criterion in determining a just and appropriate punishment in the infinite variety of circumstances that may affect the gravity of the crime. In the absence of any foolproof formula which may provide any basis for reasonable criteria to correctly assess various circum- stances germane to the consideration of gravity of crime, the discretionary judgment in the facts of each case, is the only way in which such judgment may be equitably distinguished. (Para 7). State of M.P. v. Saleem, (2005) 5 SCC 554: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1329: 2005 Cri LJ 3435.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-7-2005]

Sevaka Perumal v. State of T.N., (1991) 3 SCC 471: 1991 SCC (Cri) 724; Dennis Councle McGautha v. State of California, 402 US 183: 28 L Ed 2d 711 (1971); State of Maharashtra v. Balram Bama Patil, (1983) 2 SCC 28: 1983 SCC (Cri) 320; Girija Shankar v. State of U.P., (2004) 3 SCC 793: 2004 SCC (Cri) 863; R. Prakash v. State of Karnataka, (2004) 9 SCC 27: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1408; Sarju Prasad v. State of Bihar, AIR 1965 SC 843: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 766, relied on

[Ed.: See also Adu Ram v. Mukna, (2005) 10 SCC 597]

[161] — Ss. 28 and 29 — Sentence — Deterrent theory — Sentence should be proportionate to the gravity of the offence — Nature of sentence should depend upon facts and circumstances of each case, having regard to factors such as nature of the offence, manner in which it was committed or executed, motive for the crime, conduct of the accused and all other attendant circumstances —

Aggravating and mitigating factors should be properly balanced — Object of sentence being to protect the society and to deter the criminal, social impact of the crime and effect of the sentence on the social order are relevant considerations — Court must also keep in view rights of the victim of the crime and society at large — Sentence should reflect conscience of the society — That reformative and preventive theories of punishment can result in injustice pointed out — Penology

Imposition of sentence without considering its effect on the social order in many cases may be in reality a futile exercise. The social impact of the crime e.g. where it relates to offences relating to narcotic drugs or psychotropic substances which have great impact not only on the health fabric but also on the social order and public interest, cannot be lost sight of and per se requires exemplary treatment. Any liberal attitude by imposing meagre sentences or taking too sympathetic view merely on account of lapse of time or personal inconveniences in respect of such offences will be resultwise counterproductive in the long run and against societal interest which needs to be cared for and strengthened by a string of deterrence inbuilt in the sentencing system. The object should be to protect the society and to deter the criminal in achieving the avowed object of law by imposing appropriate sentence. It is expected that the courts would operate the sentencing system so as to impose such sentence which reflects the conscience of the society and the sentencing process has to be stern where it should be. (Paras 14 and 13)

Criminal law adheres in general to the principle of proportionality in prescribing liability according to the culpability of each kind of criminal conduct. It ordinarily allows some significant discretion to the judge in arriving at a sentence in each case, presumably to permit sentences that reflect more subtle considerations of culpability that are raised by the special facts of each case. Judges in essence affirm that punishment ought always to fit the crime; yet in practice sentences are determined largely by other considerations. (Para 10)

The punishment to be awarded for a crime must not be irrelevant but it should conform to and be consistent with the atrocity and brutality with which the crime has been perpetrated, the enormity of the crime warranting public abhorrence and should "respond to the society's cry for justice against the criminal". Proportion between crime and punishment is a goal respected in principle, and in spite of errant notions, it remains a strong influence in the determination of sentences. The practice of punishing all serious crimes with equal severity is now unknown in civilized societies, but such a radical departure from the principle of proportionality has disappeared from the law only in recent times. Undue sympathy to impose inadequate sentence would do more harm to the justice system to undermine the public confidence in the efficacy of law and society could not long endure under such serious threats. It is, therefore, the duty of every court to award proper sentence having regard to the nature of the offence and the manner in which it was executed or committed etc. (Paras 16 and 9). Union of India v. Kuldeep Singh, (2004) 2 SCC 590: 2004 SCC (Cri) 597: AIR 2004 SC 827: 2004 Cri LJ 836.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-2003]

Sevaka Perumal v. State of T.N., (1991) 3 SCC 471: 1991 SCC (Cri) 724: AIR 1991 SC 1463; Ravji v. State of Rajasthan, (1996) 2 SCC 175: 1996 SCC (Cri) 225, relied on [162] — Ss. 28 & 29 and 235(2) — Imposition of "just and appropriate sentence" — Need and object of, and duty of courts in this regard emphasised — Imposition of inadequate sentence — Effect of, on society and justice-delivery system explained — Relevant factors to be taken into account while imposing proper sentence, restated — Undue sympathy to be avoided and need for balancing aggravating and mitigating circumstances expressed (Paras 5 to 9). State of U.P. v. Shri Kishan, (2005) 10 SCC 420: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1568: AIR 2005 SC 1250: 2005 Cri LJ 333.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-2004]

State of M.P. v. Ghanshyam Singh, (2003) 8 SCC 13: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1935; Sevaka Perumal v. State of T.N., (1991) 3 SCC 471: 1991 SCC (Cri) 724; Dennis Councle McGautha v. State of California, 402 US 183: 28 L Ed 2d 711 (1971), relied on

[163] — Ss. 28 & 29 and 235(2) — Sentence should be commensurate with gravity of offence — Relevant factors to be taken into account while determining proper sentence — Held, no formula of a foolproof nature is possible that would provide a reasonable criterion in determining a just and appropriate punishment — Due consideration should be given to facts and circumstances of case, having regard to various factors including nature of offence and manner in which it was executed or committed, motive for the crime, conduct of accused and all other attendant circumstances — Aggravating and mitigating factors should be delicately balanced — Discretion in determination of quantum of punishment is required to be exercised judiciously and judicially — Extent of adherence to principle of proportionality, while sentences were determined in actual practice, discussed — On facts, three years' custodial sentence under S. 304 Pt. I IPC imposed by High Court, held, not proper — Found that case fell under S. 304 Pt. II and not S. 304 Pt. I — Even so, on facts and circumstances of case, custodial sentence enhanced to six years — Further held, had it been a case falling under S. 304 Pt. I, sentence would have been even more

The law regulates social interests, arbitrates conflicting claims and demands. Ensuring security of persons and property of the people is an essential function of the State. It could be achieved through instrumentality of criminal law. Undoubtedly, there is a cross-cultural conflict where living law must find answer to the new challenges and the courts are required to mould the sentencing system to meet the challenges. The contagion of lawlessness would undermine social order and lay it in ruins. Protection of society and stamping out criminal proclivity must be the object of law which must be achieved by imposing appropriate sentences. Therefore, law as a cornerstone of the edifice of "order" should meet the challenges confronting society. In operating the sentencing system, law should adopt the corrective machinery or the deterrence based on factual matrix. By deft modulation sentencing process should be stern where it should be, and tempered with mercy where it warrants to be. The facts and given circumstances in each case, the nature of the crime, the manner in which it was planned and committed, the motive for commission of the crime, the conduct of the accused, the nature of weapons used and all other attendant circumstances are relevant facts which would enter into the area of consideration. For instance, a murder committed due to deep-seated mutual and personal rivalry may not call for penalty of death. But an organised crime or mass murder of innocent people would call for imposition of the death sentence as a deterrent. Therefore, undue sympathy to impose inadequate sentence would do more harm to the justice system to undermine the public confidence in the efficacy of law and society could not long endure under such serious threats. It is, therefore, the duty of every court to award proper sentence having regard to the nature of the offence and the manner in which it was executed or committed, etc. (Paras 11 and 12)

Criminal law adheres in general to the principle of proportionality in prescribing liability according to the culpability of each kind of criminal conduct. It ordinarily allows some significant discretion to the Judge in arriving at a sentence in each case, presumably to permit sentences that reflect more subtle considerations of culpability that are raised by the special facts of each case. Judges in essence affirm that punishment ought always to fit the crime; yet in practice sentences are determined largely by other considerations. Sometimes it is the correctional needs of the perpetrator that are offered to justify a sentence. Sometimes the desirability of keeping him out of circulation, and sometimes even the tragic results of his crime. Inevitably these considerations cause a departure from just deserts as the basis of punishment and create cases of apparent injustice that are serious and widespread. (Para 13)

Proportion between crime and punishment is a goal respected in principle, and in spite of errant notions, it remains a strong influence in the determination of sentences. The practice of punishing all serious crimes with equal severity is now unknown in civilised societies, but such a radical departure from the principle of proportionality has disappeared from the law only in recent times. Even now for a single grave infraction drastic sentences are imposed. Anything less than a penalty of greatest severity for any serious crime is thought then to be a measure of toleration that is unwarranted and unwise. But in fact, quite apart from those considerations that make punishment unjustifiable when it is out of proportion to the crime, uniformly disproportionate punishment has some very undesirable practical consequences. After giving due consideration to the facts and circumstances of each case, for deciding just and appropriate sentence to be awarded for an offence, the aggravating and mitigating factors and circumstances in which a crime has been committed are to be delicately balanced on the basis of really relevant circumstances in a dispassionate manner by the court. Such act of balancing is indeed a difficult task. No formula of a foolproof nature is possible that would provide a reasonable criterion in determining a just and appropriate punishment in the infinite variety of circumstances that may affect the gravity of the crime. In the absence of any foolproof formula which may provide any basis for reasonable criteria to correctly assess various circumstances germane to the consideration of gravity of crime, the discretionary judgment in the facts of each case, is the only way in which such judgment may be equitably distinguished. (Paras 14, 15 and 17). Adu Ram v. Mukna, (2005) 10 SCC 597: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1635: AIR 2004 SC 5064: 2004 Cri LJ 4674.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2004]

Mahesh v. State of M.P., (1987) 3 SCC 80: 1987 SCC (Cri) 379; Sevaka Perumal v. State of T.N., (1991) 3 SCC 471: 1991 SCC (Cri) 724; Dennis Councle McGautha v. State of California, 402 US 183: 28 L Ed 2d 711 (1971), relied on

[Ed.: See also (2002) 3 SCC 76, paras 26 to 28, (2002) 6 SCC 81, para 54, (2002) 7 SCC 691, paras 23 to 25, (2003) 8 SCC 13, paras 11 to 15 and 17, (2003) 8 SCC 224, paras 36 to 38, (2003) 8 SCC 461, para 41, (2004) 1 SCC 475, paras 6 and 10 to 13, (2004) 2 SCC 338, paras 19 to 21, (2004) 2 SCC 590, paras 8, 9, 10, 12 to 16, (2004) 6 SCC 513, paras 5 to 7 and (2004) 9 SCC 37, paras 23 to 25]

[164] — Ss. 28 & 29 and 235(2) — Sentence — Delay in trial/proceedings — Effect — Accused charged with causing homicidal death — Trial court convicting accused under S. 304 Pt. II and awarding sentence of 7 years' RI — In appeal against sentence before High Court it was submitted that since the alleged occurrence had taken place in 1988, a lenient view be taken in view of long lapse of time — High Court by an unreasoned and non-speaking order reducing the custodial sentence to the period already undergone but imposing a fine of Rs 15,000 without, however, indicating what period of custody the accused had already suffered — Held, High Court erred in doing so — It would be appropriate for the High Court to rehear the appeal on the question of sentence keeping in view the ratio in Ghanshyam Singh case — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 304 Pt. II (Paras 3 and 11). State of U.P. v. Shri Kishan, (2005) 10 SCC 420: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1568: AIR 2005 SC 1250: 2005 Cri LJ 333.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-2004]

State of M.P. v. Ghanshyam Singh, (2003) 8 SCC 13: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1935, followed

[165] — Ss. 28 & 29 and 354(3) — Death sentence — Importance of principle of proportion between crime and punishment stressed and highlighted — Discretion in determination of quantum of punishment, held, is required to be exercised judiciously and judicially — Extent of adherence to principle of proportionality, while sentences were determined in actual practice based on other considerations, discussed — On facts, imposition of death sentence by trial court for rape and murder of minor less than six years old, held, fell in the rarest of rare category — Death sentence confirmed — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302 and 376(2)

The principle of proportion between crime and punishment is a principle of just deserts that serves as the foundation of every criminal sentence that is justifiable. As a principle of criminal justice it is hardly less familiar or less important than the principle that only the guilty ought to be punished. Indeed, the requirement that punishment not be disproportionately great, which is a corollary of just deserts, is dictated by the same principle that does not allow punishment of the innocent, for any punishment in excess of what is deserved for the criminal conduct is punishment without guilt. The criminal law adheres in general to the principle of proportionality in prescribing liability according to the culpability of each kind of criminal conduct. It ordinarily allows some significant discretion to the judge in arriving at a sentence in each case, presumably to permit sentences that reflect more subtle considerations of culpability that are raised by the special facts of each case. Judges in essence affirm that punishment ought always to fit the crime; yet in practice sentences are determined largely by other considerations. Sometimes it is the correctional needs of the perpetrator that are offered to justify a sentence. Sometimes the desirability of keeping him out of circulation, and sometimes even the tragic results of his crime. Inevitably these considerations cause a departure from just deserts as the basis of punishment and create cases of apparent injustice that are serious and widespread. Proportion between crime and punishment is a goal respected in principle, and in spite of errant notions, it remains a strong influence in the determination of sentences. Anything less than a penalty of greatest severity for any serious crime is thought to be a measure of toleration that is unwarranted and unwise. But in fact quite apart from those considerations that make punishment unjustifiable when it is out of proportion to the crime, uniformly disproportionate punishment has some very undesirable practical consequences. (Paras 28 to 30). State of U.P. v. Satish, (2005) 3 SCC 114: 2005 SCC (Cri) 642: AIR 2005 SC 1000: 2005 Cri LJ 1428.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-2-2005]

[166] — S. 28 — Maximum prescribed sentence imposed by trial court under NDPS Act, 1985 — Factors for reduction of — Reduction of, by High Court considering age of accused's father, his family problems and accused being not a "habitual offender", held, not justified — Having regard to the disastrous effect of the seized contraband (880 litres of Acitic N Hydride from which 300 kg of heroin could have been extracted), held, the above considerations for reducing the sentence were meaningless — High

Court failed to exercise its discretion judiciously and judicially — None of the reasons were either relevant or reasonable — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 9-A/25-A and Ss. 9-A/25-A r/w S. 29

The accused-appellant was convicted by the trial court under Sections 9-A/25-A and Sections 9-A/25-A read with Section 29 of the NDPS Act. The said court imposed sentence of 10 years' RI in respect of each of the convictions and a fine of Rs 1,00,000 on each ground with default stipulation of one year. In appeal before the High Court, it was contended that this was not a case where the maximum sentence should have been awarded. It was pointed out that the father of the accused was a person of 85 years of age and the mother had expired four months earlier and there was no other earning member in that family. The High Court noticed the factual position and held that the conviction had been rightly made but taking note of the fact that there was no evidence to show that the accused was a habitual offender, the sentence was reduced to the period of custody undergone which was taken to be 6 1/2 years, and the fine was also reduced to Rs 25,000 on each count. The reduction in sentence was assailed before the Supreme Court by filing the instant appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

When the volume of contraband articles is taken note of, it is sufficient for a conclusion that the quantity of finished product out of it which would have been extracted would have been nearly 300 kilograms of heroin, and the accused would have got about forty kilograms as admitted by him. The disastrous effect (of this quantity of heroin) would be mind-boggling. The High Court seems to have been swayed by the age of the accused's father, his family problems and more importantly, he being not a "habitual offender". Such considerations are really meaningless when one considers the fact that the accused was in possession of contrabands which would have destroyed the health and mental equilibrium of thousands of people. The Court was not dealing with an accused charged with commission of any minor offence where he being not a habitual offender may have some relevance. But it is really inconsequential for a drug-trafficker and smuggler. The reasons given by the High Court to reduce the sentence have no foundation. (Para 25)

The High Court seems to have wholly misdirected itself not only as to the seriousness of the offences but also with reference to the relevant consideration which should weigh with the Court in exercising its discretion. (Para 18)

The discretion does not appear to have been judiciously and judicially exercised by the High Court in this case. (Para 25). Union of India v. Kuldeep Singh, (2004) 2 SCC 590: 2004 SCC (Cri) 597: AIR 2004 SC 827: 2004 Cri LJ 836.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-2003]

— S. 29 See Ss. 28 and 29

See also Ss. 28 & 29 and 235(2)

See also Ss. 30, 28 and 29

See also Ss. 357 and 29

— S. 29(2) See Ss. 357 and 29(2)

See also Ss. 357, 29(2) to (4) and 28

See also Ss. 357(3), 386 second proviso and 29(2)

[167] — Ss. 29(2), 5, 4(2), 325(1) and 357 — Sentence — Judicial Magistrate of the First Class has no jurisdiction to impose a sentence of fine exceeding Rs 5000 in view of limitation prescribed in S. 29(2) CrPC — Non obstante clause contained in S. 142 is confined to the three aspects mentioned in cls. (a), (b) and (c) thereof and is not intended to expand the power of the Magistrate to impose fine beyond the limit provided in S. 29(2) CrPC — S. 142 does not confer "any special jurisdiction or power" within the meaning of S. 5 CrPC so as to claim non-applicability of provisions of CrPC including S. 29(2) thereof — If Magistrate of the First Class wants to impose a more severe sentence of fine then he can follow the procedure prescribed under S. 325(1) CrPC or if he considers it fit that the complainant should be compensated with his loss, he should follow the provisions of S. 357 CrPC under which no limit is prescribed — On facts, fine of Rs 83,000 changed to compensation while maintaining the sentence — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 — Ss. 138 and 142

A Judicial Magistrate of the First Class, after convicting an accused of the offence under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act sentenced him to imprisonment for six months and a fine of Rs 83,000. The conviction and sentence were confirmed by the Sessions Judge in appeal and the revision filed by the convicted person was dismissed by the High Court. Before the Supreme Court the question was confined to whether a Judicial Magistrate of the First Class could have imposed a sentence of fine beyond Rs 5000 in view of the limitation contained in Section 29(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Disposing of the appeal,

Held :

The non obstante clause contained in Section 142 of the Negotiable Instruments Act is intended to operate in respect of three aspects specified in clauses (a), (b) and (c) thereof and nothing more. The first is this: Under the Code, a Magistrate can take cognizance of an offence either upon receiving a complaint, or upon a police report, or upon receiving information from any person, or upon his own knowledge except in the cases differently indicated in Chapter XIV of the Code. But Section 142 of the NI Act says that insofar as the offence under Section 138 is concerned no court shall take cognizance except upon a complaint made by the payee or the holder in due course of the cheque. The second is this: Under the Code a complaint could be made at any time subject to the provisions of Chapter XXXVI. But so far as the offence under Section 138 of the NI Act is concerned such complaint shall be made within one month of the cause of action. The third is this: Under Article 511 of the First Schedule of the Code, if the offence is punishable with imprisonment for less than 3 years or with fine only under any enactment (other than the Indian Penal Code) such offence can be tried by any Magistrate. Normally Section 138 of the NI Act which is punishable with a maximum sentence of imprisonment for one year would have fallen within the scope of the said Article. But Section 142 of the NI Act says that for the offence under Section 138, no court inferior to that of a Metropolitan Magistrate or Judicial Magistrate of the First Class shall try the said offence. Thus, the non obstante limb provided in Section 142 of the NI Act is not intended to expand the powers of a Magistrate of the First Class beyond what is fixed in Chapter III of the Code. Section 29, which falls within Chapter III of the Code, contains a limit for a Magistrate of the First Class in the matter of imposing a sentence i.e. if the sentence is imprisonment it shall not exceed 3 years and if the sentence is fine (even if it is part of the sentence) it shall not exceed Rs 5000. (Paras 6 to 8)

Section 4(2) CrPC, is in a way cognate to the saving provision of Section 5. Non-application of the Code on "any special jurisdiction or power conferred by any other law for the time being in force" as provided under Section 5 is limited to the area where such special jurisdiction or power is conferred. Section 142 of the NI Act has not conferred any "special jurisdiction or power" on a Judicial Magistrate of the First Class. That section has only excluded the powers of other Magistrates from trying the offence under Section 138 of the NI Act. (Paras 10 and 11)

The method usually adopted by Parliament for conferring special jurisdiction or powers on Magistrates of the First Class in the matter of awarding sentences, obviating the limitation stipulated in Section 29(2) of the Code can be illustratively seen in Section 12 of the Essential Commodities Act or Section 36 of the Drugs and Cosmetics Act or Section 21 of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act. In the absence of any such provision in the NI Act it is not possible to read any special power into it as having conferred on a Magistrate of the First Class in the matter of imposition of sentence. (Paras 12 and 14)

If a Magistrate of the First Class thinks that the fact-situation in a particular case warrants imposition of a sentence more severe than the limit fixed under Section 29 of the Code, the legislature has taken care of such a situation also under Section 325(1) CrPC. Even that apart, a Magistrate who thinks it fit that the complainant must be compensated with his loss he can resort to the course indicated in Section 357 of the Code. He can, after imposing a term of imprisonment, award compensation to the complainant for which no limit is prescribed in Section 357 of the Code. (Paras 15, 17 and 18)

While retaining the sentence of imprisonment of six months, the fine portion is deleted from the sentence and the appellant is directed to pay compensation of Rs 83,000 to the respondent complainant. The said amount shall be deposited with the trial court within six months failing which the trial court shall resort to the steps permitted by law to realise it from the appellant. (Para 19). Pankajbhai Nagjibhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2001) 2 SCC 595: 2001 SCC (Cri) 369: AIR 2001 SC 567: (2001) 104 Comp Cas 418: (2001) 1 KLT 517.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-2001]

A.Y. Prabhakar v. Naresh Kumar N. Shah, 1994 MLJ (Cri) 91: (1995) 83 Comp Cas 191 (Mad); K.P. Sahadevan v. T.K. Sreedharan, 1996 Cri LJ 1223: (1996) 1 KLT 40 (Ker), overruled

K. Bhaskaran v. Sankaran Vaidhyan Balan, (1999) 7 SCC 510: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1284, relied on

— S. 29(3) See Ss. 357, 29(2) to (4) and 28

— S. 29(4) See Ss. 357, 29(2) to (4) and 28

— S. 30 See also S. 33, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 966 in Vol. 2

[168] — S. 30 — Imprisonment in default of payment of fine — Cautious use of — Held, it is not only the power, but the duty of the court to keep in view the nature of offence, circumstances under which it was committed, the position of the offender and other relevant considerations before ordering the offender to suffer imprisonment in default of payment of fine — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 64 (Para 31). Shantilal v. State of M.P., (2007) 11 SCC 243: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 1: (2007) 59 AIC 103 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2007]

[169] — S. 30 — Imprisonment in default of payment of fine — Nature of — Sentence and penalty, distinguished — Held, the term of imprisonment in default of payment of fine is not a sentence — It is a penalty which a person incurs on account of non-payment of fine — Sentence is something which an offender must undergo unless it is set aside or remitted in part or in whole, either in appeal or revision or in other appropriate judicial proceedings or "otherwise" — A term of imprisonment ordered in default of payment of fine stands on a different footing — A person is required to undergo imprisonment either because he is unable to pay the amount of fine or refuses to pay such amount — He, therefore, can always avoid to undergo imprisonment in default of payment of fine by paying such amount — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 64 and 53 (Para 31). Shantilal v. State of M.P., (2007) 11 SCC 243: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 1: (2007) 59 AIC 103 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2007]

[170] — S. 30 — Award of imprisonment in default of payment of fine — Existence of power even not explicitly conferred — Held, S. 25 makes it explicitly clear that Ss. 63 to 70 IPC and provisions of CrPC relating to award of imprisonment in default of payment of fine would apply to all cases wherein fines have been imposed on an offender unless "the Act, regulation, rule or bye-law contains an express provision to the contrary" — Therefore, on facts, held, contention of appellant that in absence of specific provision to order imprisonment in default of payment of fine in a statute, a court of law has no power to order imprisonment of an offender who fails to pay fine and such action would be illegal or without authority of law, cannot be upheld — So in absence of a provision to the contrary, that no order of imprisonment can be passed in default of payment of fine, held, such power is explicit and can always be exercised by a court subject to the relevant provisions of IPC and CrPC — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 63 to 70 — General Clauses Act, 1897 — S. 25 (Para 30). Shantilal v. State of M.P., (2007) 11 SCC 243: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 1: (2007) 59 AIC 103 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2007]

Bashiruddin Ashraf v. State of Bihar, AIR 1957 SC 645: 1957 SCR 1032, relied on

Queen-Empress v. Yakoob Sahib, ILR (1899) 22 Mad 238; Sukhdeo Singh v. Calcutta Corpn., AIR 1953 Cal 41, approved

[171] — S. 30 — Imprisonment in default of payment of fine — Reduction in period of imprisonment in default of payment of fine — When warranted — Considerations involved — Present case is under NDPS Act — S. 18 provides penalty for certain offences in relation to opium poppy and opium — Minimum fine contemplated under said provision is rupees one lakh — Here, appellant was ordered to undergo substantive sentence of ten years' RI, which is the minimum and also to pay fine of rupees one lakh with default stipulation of three years' RI — Maximum sentence imposable on appellant is twenty years — S. 30(1)(b) CrPC authorises court to award imprisonment in default of payment of fine up to one-fourth term of imprisonment which the court is competent to inflict as punishment for the offence — However, on facts, considering the circumstances of appellant-accused, that he was very poor, was merely a carrier, has to maintain his family, it was his first offence, because of his poverty, he could not pay the heavy amount of fine (rupees one lakh) and if he is ordered to remain in jail even after the period of substantive sentence is over only because of his inability to pay fine, serious prejudice will be caused not only to him, but also to his family members who are innocent, held, though an amount of payment of fine of rupees one lakh which is minimum as specified in S. 18, NDPS Act, cannot be reduced in view of legislative mandate, ends of justice would be met if that part of direction is retained, but ordered that in default of payment of fine, the appellant shall undergo RI for six months instead of three years as ordered by trial court and confirmed by High Court — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — S. 18 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 65 & 66 (Paras 39 and 40). Shantilal v. State of M.P., (2007) 11 SCC 243: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 1: (2007) 59 AIC 103 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2007]

[172] — S. 30 — Conviction under S. 18, NDPS Act, 1985 — Imprisonment in default of payment of fine — Tenability of — Question whether a court of law can order a convict imprisonment in default of payment of fine, in absence of any express power — Here, S. 18, NDPS Act, merely provides for imposition of sentence and payment of fine — Held, even in absence of specific provision in the Act empowering a court to order imprisonment in default of payment of fine, such power is implicit and is possessed by a court administering criminal justice — In this regard, Ss. 63 to 70 IPC are relevant which deal with imposition of fine and imprisonment in default of payment of fine — S. 30 CrPC prescribes maximum period for which a court may award imprisonment in default of payment of fine — To the issue whether the statutory provisions would apply to special laws, here NDPS Act, where there is no express power in a court to order imprisonment in default of payment of fine, held, the law is well settled that such an order can be passed by a competent court of law having power to impose fine as one of the punishments — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 63 to 70 — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — S. 8 r/w S. 18 (prior to 2001)

If a person commits any offence under IPC, he can be punished and when such offence is punishable with substantive sentence and fine, or substantive sentence or fine, or fine only, in default of payment of fine, he can be ordered to undergo imprisonment. Section 30 CrPC prescribes maximum period for which a court may award imprisonment in default of payment of fine. (Paras 18 to 23)

But more important issue is whether the above statutory provisions would apply to special laws and offences committed by a person not covered by IPC. In the present case, the concern is regarding provisions of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 which is a special law. There is no express power in a court to order imprisonment in default of payment of fine. But the law is well settled and it has been held since more than a century that such an order can be passed by a competent court of law having power to impose fine as one of the punishments. (Para 24). Shantilal v. State of M.P., (2007) 11 SCC 243: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 1: (2007) 59 AIC 103 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2007]

Bashiruddin Ashraf v. State of Bihar, AIR 1957 SC 645: 1957 SCR 1032, relied on

Queen-Empress v. Yakoob Sahib, ILR (1899) 22 Mad 238; Sukhdeo Singh v. Calcutta Corpn., AIR 1953 Cal 41, approved

[173] — Ss. 30, 28 and 29 — Conviction under S. 138, NI Act, 1881 — Imposition of fine — Sentence of imprisonment on failure to pay — Propriety — Direction that in case the accused failed to pay any of the amounts of fine, he would undergo simple imprisonment for a period of three months on each count, held, was proper — There was nothing to show why a distinction should be made in case a fine is not paid in relation to offences under IPC vis-à-vis offence under S. 138 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 — S. 138 (Para 4). Joseph Moolayil v. V.A. Chachko, (2006) 9 SCC 165: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 352.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-11-2005]

— S. 31 See also S. 35, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 967 in Vol. 2

— S. 31 See also Ss. 427, 31 and 482

[174] — S. 31 — Sentence in cases of conviction of several offences at one trial — "Punishments when consisting of imprisonment to commence the one after the expiration of the other" — "Imprisonment" in the context, held, includes life imprisonment — Words and phrases — "Imprisonment"

The term "imprisonment" is not defined under the Code of Criminal Procedure. Section 31 of the Code falls under Chapter III of the Code which deals with power of courts. Section 28 of the Code empowers the High Court to pass any sentence authorised by law. Similarly, the Sessions Judge and Additional Sessions Judge may pass any sentence authorised by law, except the sentence of death which shall be subject to confirmation by the High Court. Therefore, the term "imprisonment" would include the sentence of imprisonment for life. (Para 76). Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2005 SC 2132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2005]

[175] — S. 31 — Several offences — Power to pass several sentences in respect of — Held (per curiam), each of the terms of imprisonment imposed has to be within power of court and term of imprisonment is not rendered illegal or beyond power of court merely because total term of imprisonment in case of consecutive sentences is in excess of the punishment within competency of court (Para 47). K. Prabhakaran v. P. Jayarajan, (2005) 1 SCC 754: 2005 SCC (Cri) 451: AIR 2005 SC 688: (2005) 1 KLT 510.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J.[1] and Shivaraj V. Patil[1], K.G. Balakrishnan[2], B.N. Srikrishna[1] and G.P. Mathur[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-2005]

Shibu Soren v. Dayanand Sahay, (2001) 7 SCC 425, relied on

[176] — S. 31 — Direction for sentence to run concurrently or consecutively — Criteria for — Held (per K.G. Balakrishnan, J.), there are no statutory or judicial guidelines therefor — Further held (per curiam), in certain cases, if the person convicted is a habitual offender and has been found guilty on various counts and it is suspected that he would be a menace if let loose in society, then direction for consecutive running of sentences should be given

Per K.G. Balakrishnan, J. (dissenting)

The direction for the sentence to run concurrently or consecutively is a direction as to the mode in which the sentence is to be executed. That does not affect the nature of the sentence. It is also important to note that in the Code of Criminal Procedure, there are no guidelines or specific provisions to suggest under what circumstances the various sentences of imprisonment shall be directed to run concurrently or consecutively. There are no judicial decisions by superior courts laying down the guidelines as to what should be the criteria for directing the convict to undergo imprisonment on various counts concurrently or consecutively. In certain cases, if the person convicted is a habitual offender and he had been found guilty of offences on various counts and it is suspected that he would be a menace if he is let loose on the society, then the court would direct that such person shall undergo the imprisonment consecutively. (Para 69). K. Prabhakaran v. P. Jayarajan, (2005) 1 SCC 754: 2005 SCC (Cri) 451: AIR 2005 SC 688: (2005) 1 KLT 510.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J.[1] and Shivaraj V. Patil[1], K.G. Balakrishnan[2], B.N. Srikrishna[1] and G.P. Mathur[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-2005]

[177] — S. 31 — Direction for sentence to run concurrently or consecutively — Nature and effect of — Held (per K.G. Balakrishnan, J.), said direction is a direction as to mode in which sentence is to be executed — That does not affect the nature of the sentence (Para 69). K. Prabhakaran v. P. Jayarajan, (2005) 1 SCC 754: 2005 SCC (Cri) 451: AIR 2005 SC 688: (2005) 1 KLT 510.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J.[1] and Shivaraj V. Patil[1], K.G. Balakrishnan[2], B.N. Srikrishna[1] and G.P. Mathur[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-2005]

[178] — S. 31 and proviso — Several offences — Power to pass several sentences in respect of — Appellant prosecuted for kidnapping and murdering two boys aged 10 to 12 years — Trial court finding that there was no evidence to show that victims had been killed by the appellant or that they were kidnapped for obtaining ransom or for murdering them — However, two letters demanding ransom were proved to be written by him, and hence he was convicted under Ss. 364 and 365 IPC by the trial court and sentenced as under: — "Under S. 364 IPC: RI for 10 years — Under S. 364 IPC: RI for 10 years — Under S. 365 IPC: RI for 4 years — Under S. 365 IPC: RI for 4 years — Under S. 120-B IPC: RI for 5 years — Under S. 120-B IPC: RI for 5 years — Under S. 201 IPC: RI for 2 years" — High Court in appeal maintaining the conviction and directing the sentence under S. 364 to run consecutively, while for other offences it was to be concurrent i.e. total period of 20 years' RI imposed — Appellant already in jail for more than 12 years, while the maximum sentence that could be imposed was 14 years — Held, provisos appended to S. 31 clearly mandate that the accused could not have been sentenced to imprisonment for a period longer than fourteen years — Trial court as well as the High Court committed a serious illegality in passing the impugned judgment — Appellant sentenced to the period already undergone — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 364 & 365 (Paras 2, 3, 6 to 12). Chatar Singh v. State of M.P., (2006) 12 SCC 37: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 370: AIR 2007 SC 319: (2007) 49 AIC 725 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 796.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2006]

Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121; Zulfiwar Ali v. State of U.P., 1986 All LJ 1177: (1986) 3 Crimes 199, relied on

K. Prabhakaran v. P. Jayarajan, (2005) 1 SCC 754: 2005 SCC (Cri) 451, distinguished (partly)

— S. 32 See also S. 39, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 967 in Vol. 2

[179] — S. 32 — "Specially empowered" — Meaning of — Word specially if refers to the mode of empowerment or its purpose — Heydon's rule — Applicability — Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act, 1956 — S. 2(c)

The State Government notification ran as follows:

In exercise of the powers conferred by S. 2(c) of the Suppression of Immoral Traffic in Women and Girls Act, 1956, the Government of Bombay hereby empowers all the Judicial Magistrates of the First Class to exercise jurisdiction under the said Act, except under Ss. 12(1), 18(1) 19, 20(1) and (3) of the Act.

The question was whether this notification had the effect of making every Judicial Magistrate of the First Class in the State within the area of his respective jurisdiction, a Magistrate competent to try any offence under Ss. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 or 8 of the Act.

Held :

(i) Where the language of a statutory provision is susceptible of two interpretations, the one which promotes the objects of the provision, comports best with its purpose and preserve its smooth working, should be chosen in preference to the other which introduces inconvenience and uncertainty in the working of the system. This rule will apply in full force where the provision confers ample discretion on the Government for a specific purpose to enable it to bring about an effective result.

(ii) Therefore the word "specially" is an adverb to the verb "empowered" and not an adjective to the noun "Magistrate" and this word means "specifically" or "for a particular purpose". The word "specially" connotes that it is the empowerment which is special and not the person. Thus considered, special empowerment does not necessarily involve selection of individuals by name or ex officio from the Magistrates of the First Class. Hence the State Government is within its competence to confer powers under S. 2(c) of the Act on some or all law, and the Magistrate or Magistrates on whom powers are so conferred will be "specially empowered" within the meaning of S. 2(c). State of Gujarat v. Chaturbhuj Maganlal, (1976) 3 SCC 54: 1976 SCC (Cri) 359: AIR 1976 SC 1697: 1976 MLJ (Cri) 496: 1976 Cri LJ 1367: (1976) 17 GLR 828.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-1976]

M.M. Vijayan v. State, AIR 1953 TC 402: ILR 53 TC 514: 54 Cri LJ 1613; State v. Judhabir Chetri, AIR 1953 Ass 35: 1953 Cri LJ 395 (FB); State of Mysore v. Kashambi, 1963 2 Cri LJ 226; Ashaq Hussain Khan v. S. D. O., AIR 1965 Pat 446 and C. V. Madhava Mannadiar v. District Collector, AIR 1970 Ker 50: ILR (1969) 1 Ker 371: 1970 Cri LJ 344, approved

Sindhi Lohana Chaithram v. State of Gujarat, (1967) 3 SCR 351: AIR 1967 SC 1532: 1967 Cri LJ 1396 and Abdul Hussein Tayabali v. State of Gujarat, (1968) 1 SCR 597: AIR 1968 SC 432, followed

Mohd, Qasin v. Emperor, AIR 1918 Mad 1159: 1917 MWN 560; Emperor v. Udho Chandumal, AIR 1943 Sind 107: ILT 43 Kar 20: 44 Cri LJ 502; Polubha Vajubha v. Tapu Ruda, AIR 1956 Sau 73: 1956 Cri LJ 1231 and Sabuddin Sheikh Mansur v. J. S. Thakkar, ILR 1968 Guj 4, overruled

— Ch. IV-A (S. 36) See Chs. XII (Ss. 154 to 176), IV-A (S. 36), V to VII (Ss. 41 to 105)

— S. 36 See also S. 551, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1302 in Vol. 2

— S. 36 See Ss. 154(3) & 36, 156(3), 200 and 482

See also Ss. 156(3) and 36

See also Ss. 170, 173, 36 and 24

See also Ss. 173(8) and 36

See also Ss. 173(8), 36 and 156

[180] — S. 36 — Does not deal with competence of police officer to conduct investigation — S. 5-A of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 overrides S. 36 of the Code

Section 36 of the CrPC is not attracted. Firstly, in view of the non obstante clause occurring in the beginning of S. 5-A of the Prevention of Corruption Act the provisions with regard to investigation of an offence punishable under S. 5 of the Act are to prevail over any provision to the contrary. Secondly, S. 36, CrPC only purports to confer on police officers superior in rank to an officer in charge of police station, the same powers throughout the local area to which they are appointed as may be exercised by such officer within the limits of his station. It does not contain a provision similar to Regulation 486(I)(3) that investigation shall be made by a police officer higher in rank than the officer charged. State of U.P. v. Surinder Pal Singh, (1989) 2 SCC 470: (1989) 10 ATC 442: 1989 SCC (Cri) 402: AIR 1989 SC 811: 1989 Cri LJ 998.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: E.S. Venkataramiah and N.D. Ojha, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1989]

[181] — Chs. IV (Ss. 36 to 40) and V (Ss. 41 to 60) — Power of police to investigate and arrest — Whether extends to authorised officers under TOHO — Application, scope and implications of S. 22 — TOHO vis-à-vis CrPC — Whether authorised officer has power to arrest and investigate as per provisions of Chs. IV and V CrPC — Held, doubtful — Parliament directed to take appropriate steps to suitably amend the law

— Situations in other special statutes like Customs Act and NDPS Act and their implications, contemplated — Transplantation of Human Organs Act, 1994, Ss. 22, 18, 19 and 20

It is doubtful as to whether in the event of authorisation of an officer of the Department to carry out investigation on a complaint made by a third party, he would be entitled to arrest the accused and carry on investigation as if he is a police officer. CBI having specially been empowered both under the 1946 Act as also under CrPC to carry out investigation and file a charge-sheet is precluded from doing so only by reason of Section 22 TOHO. It is hoped that Parliament would take appropriate measures to suitably amend the law in the near future. (Para 37)

In some decisions where some special statutory authorities like the authorities under the Customs Act have been granted all the powers of the investigating officer under a special statute like the NDPS Act, but, it has been held that they cannot file charge-sheet and to that extent they would not be police officers. (Para 36). Jeewan Kumar Raut v. CBI, (2009) 7 SCC 526: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 475: (2009) 80 AIC 243 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

Ramesh Chandra Mehta v. State of W.B., AIR 1970 SC 940; Raj Kumar Karwal v. Union of India, (1990) 2 SCC 409: 1990 SCC (Cri) 330, relied on

[182] — Ss. 36, 173(8) and (3) — Territorial jurisdiction of police officers superior in rank to officer in charge of a police station — Power to direct further investigation — Superior police officer in exercise of powers under S. 36 can direct further investigation — CID being a part of the investigating authorities of the State can be entrusted with further investigation by Additional Director General of Police, reaffirmed

Section 36 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 empowers a police officer, superior in rank to an officer in charge of a police station, to exercise the same powers throughout the local area to which they are appointed, as may be exercised by such officer within the limits of his police station. It is not correct to contend that the investigation was taken up by a different agency. CID is a part of the investigating authorities of the State. It was, therefore, permissible for the higher authority to carry out or direct further investigation in the matter. (Paras 11, 12 and 18)

It was not a case where investigation was carried out in relation to a separate conspiracy. As allegations had been made against the officer of a local police station in regard to the mode and manner in which investigation was carried out, a further investigation was directed. (Para 17). State of A.P. v. A.S. Peter, (2008) 2 SCC 383: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 427: AIR 2008 SC 1052.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-2007]

[183] — S. 36 — Scope of applicability — Investigation into corruption charges against State Government Minister and officers — Whether excluded from the jurisdiction of CBI officers — FIR lodged by the State Vigilance Department against several persons including Appellant 1 (ex-Minister) for alleged commission of offences under Ss. 420, 467, 468, 120-B IPC and Ss. 13(1)(d), (e) and 13(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act in relation to appointment and selection of panchayat secretaries — State Government issued notification under S. 6 of Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 referring the case to CBI — CBI thereafter registered a second FIR on 26-6-2003 considering the nature and extent of crime — Held, when S. 36 CrPC uses the words "in rank", it should be given a purposive construction — Although S. 36 appears to limit jurisdiction to State police, in the context of the power of the State vis-à-vis the provisions of the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946, the same deserves a wider application — Hence validity of investigation made by CBI, upheld — As investigations were complete, CBI permitted to file charge-sheet before the appropriate court — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), Ss. 5, 6, 6-A and 2 — Jurisdiction of officers under, not restricted by S. 36 CrPC — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 120-B — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(d), (e) and 13(2)

On 14-6-2002, an FIR was lodged by the State Vigilance Department against several persons including Appellant 1 (ex-Minister, Rural Development and Panchayats), for alleged commission of offences under Sections 420, 467, 468, 120-B IPC and Sections 13(1)(d), (e) and 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act in terms of recommendations of the Financial Commissioner, Rural Development and Panchayat Department giving an enquiry report to set aside the selection of panchayat secretaries due to involvement of favouritism and corruption in the selection process. In a writ petition filed with regard to the selection process the High Court changed the writ from private interest litigation to public interest litigation. A charge-sheet was filed against Appellant 1. Appellants 2 and 3 were shown as the witnesses in the said report. Despite the same a statement was made before the High Court on behalf of the State on 1-11-2002 that the investigation was proposed to be handed over to CBI. Initially, CBI was reluctant to take up investigation on the ground of lack of manpower and infrastructure and the State Government delayed in issuing a notification under Section 6 of the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (the Act). However, with the intervention of the High Court (by order dated 30-4-2003), the State Government, on 2-5-2003, issued the Section 6 notification. In view of the said notification the High Court (by order dated 7-5-2003) directed the Director, CBI to take up the investigation by requesting the Central Government for more funds and manpower as per requirement. CBI, thereafter, informed the High Court on 13-8-2003 that a special team had been sent for a meaningful investigation in respect of the allegations, and the same had proceeded to a considerable length. CBI thereafter registered a second FIR on 26-6-2003. The appellants filed applications for recalling of the orders dated 30-4-2003 and 7-5-2003 of the High Court. By reason of the impugned judgment dated 4-10-2005, the said applications were dismissed.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held:

Contention raised that the investigating officer appointed by CBI would not be a superior officer in rank to the police officer of the State Government in terms of Section 36 CrPC is not applicable to the facts of the present case. The Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (the Act) is a special statute by which CBI was constituted and given jurisdiction. The law and order, however, being a State subject, CBI derives jurisdiction only when a consent therefor is given. The reference for CBI investigation may be given by the following: (a) Prime Minister of India (b) Cabinet Ministers of the Government of India/Chief Ministers of the State Governments or their equivalent (c) State Governments (d) Supreme Court/High Courts. (Paras 70 and 66)

In terms of Section 3 of the Police Act, 1861, the State has the ultimate say in the matter of superintendence of investigation. Section 36 CrPC must be read harmoniously with Section 3 of the Police Act, 1861. Therefore, when Section 36 CrPC uses the words "in rank", it should be given a purposive construction. Although a plain reading of the aforementioned provision appears to be containing three ingredients, namely, (i) the investigation must be carried out by an officer-in-charge; (ii) which may be supervised by an officer superior in rank; and (iii) in respect of a local area to which they are appointed, but in the context of the power of the State vis-à-vis the provisions of the Act, the same deserves a wider application. (Para 27)

If the State has the ultimate supervisory jurisdiction over an investigation for an offence and if it intends to hand over a further investigation even after filing of the charge-sheet, it may do so. The State as in terms of the provisions of CrPC and the Act exercises two different and distinct jurisdictions. The power of supervision over investigation vested in the State in terms of Section 3 of the Police Act, 1861 is absolute. The said power of the State is wholly unrestricted by Section 36 of the Act or otherwise. As a logical corollary if while making preliminary inquiry pursuant to the notification issued by the State in terms of Section 6 of the Act, CBI comes to know of commission of other and further offence involving a larger conspiracy which required prosecution against a large number of persons who had not been proceeded against at all by the local police officers, even lodging of second FIR would not be a bar. (Paras 62 and 71)

An accused is entitled to a fair investigation. Fair investigation and fair trial are concomitant to preservation of fundamental right of an accused under Article 21 of the Constitution of India. But the State has a larger obligation i.e. to maintain law and order, public order and preservation of peace and harmony in the society. A victim of a crime, thus, is equally entitled to a fair investigation. When serious allegations were made against a former Minister of the State, save and except the cases of political revenge amounting to malice, it is for the State to entrust one or the other agency for the purpose of investigating into the matter. The State for achieving the said object at any point of time may consider handing over of investigation to any other agency including a Central agency which has acquired specialisation in such cases. (Para 28)

As the investigations are complete, CBI is allowed to file charge-sheet before a court having appropriate jurisdiction. (Para 76). Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441.
Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Aftab Alam, JJ.
[Date of decision: 22-10-2008]

— Ch. IV-B (Ss. 37 to 40)

[184] — Ss. 37, 41, 129 to 131 and 144 — Duty of police to protect life and property — Non-performance of, disapproved — Inaction of police during burning of bus in public agitation against a court verdict where girl students were trapped (three of them dying and 20 getting injured) —

When others helped in bringing out trapped girl students police not lending a helping hand — Said inaction of police, disapproved

Observed :

It may be noted that that this crime occurred right in the middle of a busy city. Innocent girls trapped in a burning bus were shouting for help and only the male students from their University came to their rescue and succeeded in saving some of them. There were large number of people including the shopkeepers, media persons and on-duty police personnel, present at the place of the "Rasta Roko Andolan", which was very close to the place of the occurrence of the crime, and none of them considered it proper to help in their rescue. Even if the common man fails to respond to the call of his conscience, the police should not have remained inactive. The so-called administration did not bother to find out why the police did not intervene and assist in the rescue of the girl students. It is clear that the so-called protectors of the society stood there and witnessed such a heinous crime being committed and allowed the burning of the bus and roasting of the innocent children without being reprimanded for failing in their duty. If the common citizens and public officials present at the scene of the crime had done their duty, the death of three innocent young girls could have been prevented. (Paras 98 and 99). C. Muniappan v. State of T.N., (2010) 9 SCC 567: (2010) 5 CTC 794 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-8-2010]

— S. 39 See also Ss. 222 and 39

[185] — S. 39 — Obligation to furnish information under S. 14, POTA — Provision for, held, intra vires Arts. 14, 19, 20(3) and 21 — Further held, neither can a lawyer claim a right over professional communication beyond what is permitted under S. 126, Evidence Act nor is there any law permitting a newspaper or a journalist to withhold relevant information from courts, nor can withholding of such information be traced to the right to privacy, which itself is not an absolute right — Constitution of India — Arts. 21, 19, 20(3) and 14 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 126 — Press Council Act, 1978 — S. 15(2) — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — S. 14

It was submitted inter alia that Section 14 was violative of Articles 14, 19, 20(3) and 21 inasmuch as it gave unbridled powers to the investigating officer to compel any person to furnish information, including even lawyers or journalists who were bound by their professional ethics to keep the information given by their clients as privileged communication;

Dismissing the petitions,

Held :

Section 39 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 casts a duty upon every person to furnish information regarding offences. Criminal justice system cannot function without the cooperation of people. Rather it is the duty of everybody to assist the State in detection of the crime and bringing criminals to justice. Withholding such information cannot be traced to right to privacy, which itself is not an absolute right. (Para 37)

Section 14 confers power to the investigating officer to ask for furnishing information that will be useful for or relevant to the purpose of the Act. Furthermore, such information could be asked only after obtaining a written approval from an officer not below the rank of a Superintendent of Police. Such power to the investigating officers is quite necessary in the detection of terrorist activities or terrorists. (Para 37)

It is settled position of law that a journalist or lawyer does not have a sacrosanct right to withhold information regarding crime under the guise of professional ethics. A lawyer cannot claim a right over professional communication beyond what is permitted under Section 126 of the Evidence Act. There is also no law that permits a newspaper or a journalist to withhold relevant information from courts though they have been given such power by virtue of Section 15(2) of the Press Council Act, 1978 as against the Press Council. Of course the investigating officers will be circumspect and cautious in requiring them to disclose information. In the process of obtaining information, if any right of a citizen is violated, nothing prevents him from resorting to other legal remedies. (Para 38). People's Union for Civil Liberties v. Union of India, (2004) 9 SCC 580: AIR 2004 SC 456.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2003]

Sanjay Dutt v. State (II), (1994) 5 SCC 410: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1433, followed

Sharda v. Dharmpal, (2003) 4 SCC 493; State of Gujarat v. Anirudhsing, (1997) 6 SCC 514: 1997 SCC (Cri) 946; M.S.M. Sharma v. Sri Krishna Sinha, AIR 1959 SC 395: 1959 Supp (1) SCR 806; Sewakram Sobhani v. R.K. Karanjia, (1981) 3 SCC 208: 1981 SCC (Cri) 698; Arnold v. King Emperor, (1913-14) 41 IA 149: 15 Cri LJ 309; British Steel Corpn. v. Granada Television, (1981) 1 All ER 417: 1981 AC 1096: (1980) 3 WLR 774; Branzburg v. Hayes, 408 US 665: 33 L Ed 2d 626 (1972), relied on

[186] — S. 39 — Duty to give information — Duty of citizen to assist and cooperate with the investigation agency to unearth the real offender and appear before the court to unfold the prosecution case as given in his statement — Witnesses turning hostile due to deterioration in law and order situation and principle of self-preservation — Need to amend CrPC in this regard stressed — Role and conduct of high-ranking officials and respectable citizens present at the scene of crime in not assisting the prosecution strongly deprecated

Every criminal trial is a voyage in quest of truth for public justice to punish the guilty and restore peace, stability and order in the society. Every citizen who has knowledge of the commission of cognizable offence has a duty to lay information before the police and cooperate with the investigating officer who is enjoined to collect the evidence and if necessary summon the witnesses to give evidence. He is further enjoined to adopt scientific and all fair means to unearth the real offender, lay the charge-sheet before the court competent to take cognizance of the offence. The charge-sheet needs to contain the facts constituting the offence/s charged. The accused is entitled to a fair trial. Every citizen who assists the investigation is further duty-bound to appear before the Court of Session or competent criminal court, tender his ocular evidence as a dutiful and truthful citizen to unfold the prosecution case as given in his statement. Any betrayal in that behalf is a step to destabilise social peace, order and progress.

It is the salutary duty of every witness who has the knowledge of the commission of crime, to assist the State in giving evidence; unfortunately for various reasons, in particular deterioration in law and order situation and the principle of self-preservation, many a witness turn hostile and in some instances even direct witnesses are being liquidated before they are examined by the Court. In such circumstances, it is high time that the Law Commission looks into the matter. The Law Commission has recommended to the Central Government to make necessary amendments to the CrPC and this aspect of the matter should also be looked into and proper principles evolved in this behalf. State of Gujarat v. Anirudhsing, (1997) 6 SCC 514: 1997 SCC (Cri) 946: AIR 1997 SC 2780: 1997 Cri LJ 3397.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-1997]

[187] — Ss. 39, 156(1), 161(1), 161(2), 313(3) and 315(1) proviso (b) — Citizens' cooperation in criminal investigation vis-à-vis right against self-incrimination — Right guaranteed by Art. 20(3) against self-incrimination, held, has overriding effect — Provisions contained in Ss. 39, 156(1) and 161(1) CrPC are subject to right against self-incrimination — No adverse inference can be drawn against an accused who chooses to remain silent — Constitution of India — Article 20(3) (Paras 90 and 91). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

[188] — Ss. 40, 162 and 164 — Extra-judicial confession — When admissible — Recorded by Village Administrative Officer, a Village Headman, held, admissible — R. 72 of Criminal Rules of Practice and Orders, 1931 of Madras High Court, absolutely prohibiting Village Magistrates from recording any confession or statement of an accused after commencement of police investigation, has become redundant since a Village Headman cannot be treated as a Village Magistrate under CrPC, 1973 — Scope of power and function of Village Headman stated — Madras High Court Criminal Rules of Practice and Orders, 1931, R. 72 — Madras Village Police Regulations, 1816 — Regn. 10 — Madras Village Police Regulations, 1821 — Regn. 6 — CrPC, 1898 — S. 528(6) — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24

A Village Administrative Officer may have a power to report an offence committed within the jurisdiction of the police station where he is posted but the same would not make him a person in authority. Even under certain circumstances, Section 40 of the Code of Criminal Procedure enjoins a duty upon every officer employed in connection with the affairs of a village and every person residing in a village to communicate to the nearest Magistrate or to the officer in charge of the nearest police station, whichever is nearer any information which he may possess respecting the matters enumerated therein. Sub-section (2)(iii) of Section 40 defines "officers employed in connection with the affairs of a village" to mean a member of the Panchayat of the village and includes the Headman and every officer or other person appointed to perform any function connected with the administration of the village. The Madras High Court in some decisions held that a Village Munsif was a Magistrate within the meaning of the Code of Criminal Procedure whereupon Section 26 of the Evidence Act was amended by adding an explanation that the Magistrate does not include the head of the village discharging magisterial functions in the Presidency of Fort St. George or elsewhere unless such Headman is a Magistrate under the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1882. The only provision where such a power may be traced to was Section 528(6) of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898 which provides that the "head of a village under the Madras Village Police Regulations, 1816 or the Madras Village Police Regulations, 1821 is a Magistrate for the purposes of this section". But this provision has not been retained by the 1973 Code. The 1973 Code was brought about to give effect to the constitutional mandate to separate the judiciary from the executive. The entire control and supervision of the Magistrates in terms of the 1973 Code now vests in the Sessions Judge and the High Court. Transfer of criminal cases is now dealt in Chapter 31 of the 1973 Code. (Paras 30, 25 and 34)

Rule 72 of the Criminal Rules of Practice and Orders, 1931 provides "Village Magistrates are absolutely prohibited from reducing or writing any confession or statement whatever made by an accused person after the police investigation has begun." The said rule has lost all its significance in view of the fact that now under the Code of Criminal Procedure or any other statute or statutory regulations, the Village Headman is not a Village Magistrate. The post of a Village Magistrate since 1973 does not exist. The Village Administrative Officer, it has not been shown, has been conferred with any power of a Magistrate by reason of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure or otherwise. It has also not been shown that he exercises any judicial or quasi-judicial function. Indisputably, he has no role to play in the matter of an investigation in a criminal case. The Village Magistrates evidently, under the new Code of Criminal Procedure, are not empowered to record any confession or statement either in terms of Section 162 or Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. For all intent and purport, therefore, Rule 72 of the Criminal Rules of Practice has become redundant and nugatory, logical corollary whereof would be that there does not exist any embargo for an accused person to make an extra-judicial confession before a Village Administrative Officer. There is thus no reason as to why such an extra-judicial confession could not be made before a Village Administrative Officer. (Paras 35 to 40)

With a view to exclude the admissibility of the confession made before a person, he must be a police officer. A Village Administrative Officer does not answer the description. While carrying out his duty to inform the police or the Magistrate in terms of Section 40 of the Code, the Village Headman does not act as a public servant removable only by or with the sanction of the local government nor does he act in his capacity as Magistrate. (Para 40)

Therefore, in this case the extra-judicial confession by the appellant before the Village Administrative Officer was not inadmissible and, thus, could be relied upon. (Para 41). Sivakumar v. State, (2006) 1 SCC 714: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 470: AIR 2006 SC 653: (2006) 37 AIC 70 (SC): 2006 Cri LJ 536.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-2005]

Raja v. State, (1995) 2 LW (Cri) 513, overruled

Pregada Balanagu v. Krosuru Kotayya, AIR 1937 Mad 578: 38 Cri LJ 950; Lakshmanan, Re, (1971) 1 MLJ 242, approved

— Ch. V (Ss. 41 to 60) See S. 436 and Ch. V (Ss. 41 to 60)

See also Chs. XII (Ss. 154 to 176), IV-A (S. 36), V to VII (Ss. 41 to 105)

[189] — Ch. V (Ss. 41 to 60) — Nature and scope — Held, deals with safeguards required to be followed by police to protect interests of arrested person — Part of the guarantee to live with dignity enshrined in Art. 21 — Police atrocities/Custodial violence or deaths — Implications of — Guarantees against — Reasons for increase in instances of, assuming "alarming proportions" — Dignity — Right to live with — Held, life or personal liberty includes a right to live with human dignity — There is an inbuilt guarantee against torture or assault by the State or its functionaries — Arts. 20(3) and 22 and Ch. V CrPC, 1973 and even Art. 5 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 1948 further manifest the protection extended to every citizen in this regard and the guarantees held out for making life meaningful and not a mere animal existence — Torture, assault and death in custody raise serious questions about the credibility of the rule of law and administration of the criminal justice system — Increase in instances of custodial violence/torture attributed to misuse of police machinery by those at the helm of affairs to settle personal scores — State of affairs bemoaned, that concern shown and anguish expressed by Supreme Court in this regard in many cases had fallen on deaf ears and the situation was not showing any noticeable change — Constitution of India — Arts. 21, 20 and 22

The sacred and cherished right of personal liberty has an important role to play in the life of every citizen. Life or personal liberty includes a right to live with human dignity. There is an inbuilt guarantee against torture or assault by the State or its functionaries. Chapter V of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (for short "the Code") deals with the powers of arrest of persons and the safeguards required to be followed by the police to protect the interest of the arrested person. Articles 20(3) and 22 of the Constitution further manifest the constitutional protection extended to every citizen and the guarantees held out for making life meaningful and not a mere animal existence. It is, therefore, difficult to comprehend how torture and custodial violence can be permitted to defy the rights flowing from the Constitution. The dehumanising torture, assault and death in custody, which have assumed alarming proportions, raise serious questions about the credibility of the rule of law and administration of the criminal justice system. The community rightly gets disturbed. The cry for justice becomes louder and warrants immediate remedial measures. The Supreme Court has in a large number of cases expressed concern at the atrocities perpetuated by the protectors of the law. (Para 4)

Custodial violence, torture and abuse of police power are not peculiar to this country, but are widespread. It has been the concern of the international community because the problem is universal and the challenge is almost global. Despite the pious declaration contained in Article 5 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 1948 the crime continues unabated, though every civilised nation shows its concern and makes efforts for its eradication. If it is assuming alarming proportions nowadays, all around, it is merely on account of the devilish devices adopted by those at the helm of affairs who proclaim from roof tops to be the defenders of democracy and protectors of peoples' rights and yet do not hesitate to condescend behind the screen to let loose their men in uniform to settle personal scores, feigning ignorance of what happens and pretending to be peace loving puritans and saviours of citizens' rights. (Paras 2 and 3)

The diabolic recurrence of police torture results in a terrible scare in the minds of common citizens, that their lives and liberty are under a new and unwarranted peril because the guardians of the law destroy human rights by custodial violence and torture, invariably resulting in death. The vulnerability of human rights assumes a traumatic torture when functionaries of the State, whose paramount duty is to protect citizens and not to commit gruesome offences against them, in reality perpetrate them. The concern shown and anguish expressed by the Supreme Court in this regard in many cases seems to have fallen on deaf ears and the situation does not seem to be showing any noticeable change. (Para 5). Munshi Singh Gautam v. State of M.P., (2005) 9 SCC 631: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1269: AIR 2005 SC 402: 2005 Cri LJ 320.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-11-2004]

Gauri Shanker Sharma v. State of U.P., 1990 Supp SCC 656: 1991 SCC (Cri) 67; Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1992) 3 SCC 249: 1992 SCC (Cri) 629; Nilabati Behera v. State of Orissa, (1993) 2 SCC 746: 1993 SCC (Cri) 527; Pratul Kumar Sinha v. State of Bihar, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 100: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1666; Kewal Pati v. State of U.P., (1995) 3 SCC 600: 1995 SCC (Cri) 556; Inder Singh v. State of Punjab, (1995) 3 SCC 702: 1995 SCC (Cri) 586: 1995 SCC (L&S) 857: (1995) 30 ATC 122; State of M.P. v. Shyamsunder Trivedi, (1995) 4 SCC 262: 1995 SCC (Cri) 715; D.K. Basu v. State of W.B., (1997) 1 SCC 416: 1997 SCC (Cri) 92, relied on

[190] — Ch. V (Ss. 41 to 60) — Directions issued in D.K. Basu v. State of W.B., (1997) 1 SCC 416 and Joginder Kumar v. State of U.P., (1994) 4 SCC 260 — Violation of — Plea raised in respect of — Held on facts, not established — Contempt of Courts Act, 1971, S. 2(b)

Petitioner 1 (Smt Rajkumari) was a leader of CITU. She was arrested on the ground that she was leading a mob of workers and was inciting them to show their strength by beating the employers or anyone who came in their way and to teach them a lesson by destroying their property. In the instant writ petitions and contempt petitions, it was contended that the respondents (police officials) did not comply with the directions issued by the Supreme Court in D.K. Basu v. State of W.B. and Joginder Kumar v. State of U.P. as (i) the police personnel who came to arrest her, did not bear any name tags with designation, (ii) no memo of arrest was prepared at the time of her arrest, (iii) the provisions of Section 50 CrPC were not complied with, (iv) she was not informed of her right that she was entitled to meet her lawyer during interrogation, and (v) there was no necessity to arrest her during the middle of the night.

Held :

Petitioner 1 was produced in the Court of Magistrate on the same day of her arrest. She applied for bail before the Magistrate concerned. She did not state anything nor did she make any grievance before the said Magistrate regarding non-compliance with the directions issued in the aforesaid two cases, though her bail application was drafted and filed by a lawyer. If the plea taken now in the writ petitions was correct, in normal course grievance regarding the same should have been made on that very day when she was produced before the Magistrate especially when the legal aid and advice of a counsel was available to her. (Para 13)

The affidavits filed by the respondents (police officials) show that the name plate showing their name and designation was affixed on the uniform of all the police personnel; that it was lady Constable S, who had formally arrested Petitioner 1; that the grounds of arrest were disclosed not only to her but also to her son and husband; that her family members including her son and husband, some relations and friends were throughout present at the police station and that she was sent to the Court of the Magistrate concerned at 9.15 a.m. It is averred that an arrest memo was prepared at the time of her arrest and she was asked to sign the same but she refused to do so. It is further averred that the police personnel who arrested her informed that she would be released on bail in case she furnished bail bonds but she declined to do so. A copy of the arrest memo has also been placed on record. Apart from her own affidavit, Petitioner 1 has not filed affidavit of any other person to show that the version given by the respondents is not correct. She could have easily filed affidavits of her son and husband, but she has chosen not to do so. On the material which is available on record, it is not possible to hold that the directions issued in Joginder Kumar and D.K. Basu cases were flouted or were not complied with by the respondents. (Para 14). Rajkumari v. SHO, NOIDA, (2003) 11 SCC 500: 2004 SCC (Cri) 196: AIR 2003 SC 4693.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2003]

[191] — Ch. V (Ss. 41 to 60) — Arrest — Allegation of police partiality and suppression of material facts regarding custodial death — Need of evidence and proof, stressed

The petitioner lodged an FIR for the custodial death of his son. The police alleged that the deceased who had been arrested for the theft of some mobile phone committed suicide inside the lockup. Allegedly attempts by the petitioner to have an impartial post-mortem of the body of the deceased were thwarted by the police who was insisting on the theory of the suicide by hanging with the help of a shirt. It was alleged that the external injuries all over the body of the deceased were not explained and in fact the post-mortem report itself was not accurate as compared with the photographs. The petitioner and his other family members gave a statement setting out the facts.

Pursuant to notice issued in this case, the State filed its response that an FIR had been registered and certain police officials had been charged for commission of offences punishable under Sections 330, 342 and 306 IPC. Sanction for prosecution had been given and the charge-sheet had been filed. The accused persons had surrendered before the CJM and their bail applications had been rejected. Cognizance of the aforesaid offences had been taken. It was submitted that the police after investigation had not found any evidence of murder and, therefore, the charge-sheet had been filed accordingly. Counsel for the petitioner submitted that it was a clear case of custodial torture and death and by giving a colour of Section 306 IPC, an attempt was being made to protect the erring police officials. It was also stated that the compensation should be paid.

Disposing of the petition in the terms below,

Held :

No compensation can be granted in the absence of any adjudication on the issue as to whether there was custodial death. In view of the fact that sanction for prosecution had been granted, charge-sheet had been filed and cognizance had been taken, no further direction at present is necessary. If at any point of time, evidence surfaces before the court concerned to show that some other offences appear to have been committed, necessary orders can be passed. (Paras 14 and 15). Dalbir Singh v. State of U.P., (2009) 11 SCC 376: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1388: AIR 2009 SC 1674: 2009 Cri LJ 1543: (2009) 75 AIC 115 (SC): (2009) 2 All LJ 661: (2009) 1 APLJ 110 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-2009]

Shakila Abdul Gafar Khan v. Vasant Raghunath Dhoble, (2003) 7 SCC 749, relied on [192] — Ch. V (Ss. 41 to 60) — Police atrocities — Alarming increase in cases of torture, assault and death in police custody and non-availability of direct evidence in such cases normally, noticed with concern — Further noticed, exaggerated adherence to and insistence of proof beyond every reasonable doubt by the prosecution and sometimes by the courts in such cases often results in miscarriage of justice — Custodial torture, held, violates the basic rights of citizens — Therefore, the courts advised to deal with such cases in a realistic manner and with the sensitivity they deserve so that the truth may be found and the guilty may not escape — Moreover, the Government and the Legislature directed to give serious thought to the recommendation in Law Commission's 113th Report to amend the Evidence Act to provide that injury received by a person during police custody may be presumed to have been caused by the police officer having the custody of that person during that period — However, it should be carefully examined whether the allegations of custodial violence are genuine or false and designed to gain undeserved benefit — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 101 and 114 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 330 and 331 — Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 1948, Art. 5 — Constitution of India — Arts. 21, 20(3) and 22 (Paras 1 to 8). Shakila Abdul Gafar Khan v. Vasant Raghunath Dhoble, (2003) 7 SCC 749: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1918: AIR 2003 SC 4567.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-2003]

— S. 41 See Ss. 46 and 41

See also Ss. 157 & 155 and 41 to 44 & 46 and Ss. 437 to 439

See also Ss. 167, 41, 44 and 46

See also Ss. 438 and 41

See also Ss. 438, 437 & 438 and 2(h), 155 to 157 and 41 to 44 & 46

See also Ss. 438, 437 & 439 and 41 to 44 & 46

[193] — S. 41 — Arrest — Discretionary power of investigating agency — Scope — Judicial interference — Discretion should not be exercised mechanically but should be exercised cautiously and with circumspection having regard to the nature of the offence alleged and the type of person accused of having committed a cognizable offence — But when investigating officer, having regard to facts and circumstances, considered arrest of certain persons in a case unnecessary, held, High Court under Art. 226 had no jurisdiction to direct the State to arrest those persons even though the case was still at the stage of investigation as that would amount to unjustified interference with the investigation — Merely because anticipatory bail applications of those persons had been rejected, that itself is not a ground for directing their immediate arrest — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 226

Maharashtra Antibiotics and Pharma- ceuticals Ltd. (MAPL), a joint venture of the Govt. of India and the State of Maharashtra, was declared to be a sick industry by BIFR on 14-1-1997. A complaint was lodged by the Provident Fund Commissioner against the Directors of MAPL alleging offences under Sections 406 and 409/34 IPC. Some of the accused persons moved the High Court for grant of anticipatory bail under Section 438 CrPC. Those petitions were rejected by the High Court against which no appeal had been preferred. A writ petition in public interest was filed before the High Court by the Maharashtra Antibiotics and Pharmaceutical Employees Association and others raising a grievance that though the Provident Fund Commissioner had lodged a complaint against several directors of MAPL the investigation made no progress on account of the fact that the Directors are government servants and enjoy considerable influence. On 10-1-2002 the High Court passed the first impugned order observing that as despite the fact that the applications for grant of anticipatory bail had been rejected by the High Court by a reasoned order, the accused had not been arrested, the only course open to the State was to cause their arrest and prosecute them. The Court, therefore, directed the State to cause the arrest of the accused and produce them before it. On the next date i.e. 11-1-2002 an application filed on behalf of Respondents 1 and 2 in the writ petition for modification of the order dated 10-1-2002 came up for hearing before the Court in which certain additional facts were sought to be brought to the notice of the Court, namely, that the complainant himself had written to the investigating officer that the Chairman of MAPL and a part-time Director were appointed by the Government of India and as such they were not concerned with the day-to-day working of the establishment and therefore the complaint should be restricted to other accused persons excluding these two. The High Court was surprised as to how such a letter could be issued to the investigating officer, because the question as to whether they were concerned with the day-to-day affairs of the Company was a matter which had to be considered by the Court taking cognizance of the offence. Some other submissions were also urged on the basis of Section 41-A of the State Financial Corporations Act but the same were also rejected. Lastly, it was urged before the High Court that the investigating officer had taken an opinion from the Assistant Director and Public Prosecutor, Nagpur who was of the view that the matter deserved to be treated as 'C' summary as no funds had been found to be misappropriated. The High Court observed that this could not be the reason for not proceeding further in the matter particularly in view of the observations made by the Court in the order rejecting the applications for grant of anticipatory bail. The application for modification was accordingly dismissed. The order directing arrest of the appellants herein was appealed against before the Supreme Court and the Supreme Court by an order dated 14-1-2002 passed an interim order staying the directions of the High Court to arrest the appellants. The High Court noticed the order passed by the Supreme Court and by its order dated 16-1-2002 it directed the respondent State to take necessary steps in the matter subject to interim order passed by the Supreme Court. In this connection it observed: "Our anxiety is to see that the State expeditiously conclude the investigation in the case and file a charge-sheet. We may again remind the State of the order passed by this Court while rejecting the pre-arrest bail application on 7-9-2001 and should not show any laxity in the investigation." The High Court's orders dated 10-1-2002, 11-1-2002 and 16-1-2002 were impugned before the Supreme Court.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

Section 41 gives discretion to the police officer who may, without an order from a Magistrate and even without a warrant, arrest any person in the situations enumerated in that section. It is open to him, in the course of investigation, to arrest any person who has been concerned with any cognizable offence or against whom reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received, or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been so concerned. Obviously, he is not expected to act in a mechanical manner and in all cases to arrest the accused as soon as the report is lodged. In appropriate cases, after some investigation, the investigating officer may make up his mind as to whether it is necessary to arrest the accused person. At that stage the court has no role to play. Since the power is discretionary, a police officer is not always bound to arrest an accused even if the allegation against him is of having committed a cognizable offence. Since an arrest is in the nature of an encroachment on the liberty of the subject and does affect the reputation and status of the citizen, the power has to be cautiously exercised. It depends inter alia upon the nature of the offence alleged and the type of persons who are accused of having committed the cognizable offence. The power has to be exercised with caution and circumspection. In the instant case the appellants had not been arrested. It appears that the result of the investigation showed that no amount had been defalcated. The court is here not concerned with the correctness of the conclusion that the investigating officer may have reached. What is, however, significant is that the investigating officer did not consider it necessary, having regard to all the facts and circumstances of the case, to arrest the accused. In such a case there was no justification for the High Court to direct the State to arrest the appellants against whom the first information report was lodged, as it amounted to unjustified interference in the investigation of the case. (Paras 14 and 15)

The mere fact that the bail applications of some of the appellants had been rejected is no ground for directing their immediate arrest. In the very nature of things, a person may move the court on mere apprehension that he may be arrested. The court may or may not grant anticipatory bail depending upon the facts and circumstances of the case and the material placed before the court. There may, however, be cases where the application for grant of anticipatory bail may be rejected and ultimately, after investigation, the said person may not be put up for trial as no material is disclosed against him in the course of investigation. The High Court proceeded on the assumption that since petitions for anticipatory bail had been rejected, there was no option open for the State but to arrest those persons. This assumption is erroneous. A person whose petition for grant of anticipatory bail has been rejected may or may not be arrested by the investigating officer depending upon the facts and circumstances of the case, nature of the offence, the background of the accused, the facts disclosed in the course of investigation and other relevant considerations. Therefore, the order dated 10-1-2002, insofar as it directs the arrest of the appellants, must be set aside. (Paras 15 to 16)

It is for the investigating agency to submit a report to the Magistrate after full and complete investigation. The investigating agency may submit a report finding the allegations substantiated. It is also open to the investigating agency to submit a report finding no material to support the allegations made in the first information report. It is open to the Magistrate concerned to accept the report or to order further enquiry. But while it is open to the High Court, in appropriate cases, to give directions for prompt investigation etc. the High Court cannot direct the investigating agency to submit a report that is in accord with its views as that would amount to unwarranted interference with the investigation of the case by inhibiting the exercise of statutory power by the investigating agency. Even in a case where a report is submitted by the investigating agency finding that no case is made out for prosecution, it is open to the Magistrate to disagree with the report and to take cognizance, but what he cannot do is to direct the investigating agency to submit a report to the effect that the allegations have been supported by the material collected during the course of investigation. (Para 17)

In the instant case the investigation is in progress. It is the statutory duty of the investigating agency to fully investigate the matter and then submit a report to the Magistrate concerned. The Magistrate will thereafter proceed to pass appropriate order in accordance with law. It was not appropriate for the High Court in these circumstances to issue a direction that the case should not only be investigated, but a charge-sheet must be submitted. The High Court exceeded its jurisdiction in making this direction which deserves to be set aside. (Paras 17 and 18)

In the circumstances, therefore, the direction contained in the order of the High Court dated 10-1-2002 directing the arrest of the appellants is set aside. The direction made by the High Court directing the investigating agency to submit a charge-sheet is also set aside. However, the investigating agency must promptly take all necessary steps, conclude the investigation and submit its report to the Magistrate concerned. It is open to the investigating agency to submit such report as it considers appropriate, having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case and result of the investigation. After such a final report is submitted by the investigating agency, the Magistrate concerned will proceed to deal with the matter further in accordance with law without being influenced by any observation made by the High Court in the impugned orders. (Para 19). M.C. Abraham v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 2 SCC 649: 2003 SCC (Cri) 628.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-2002]

State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; King Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, (1944) 71 IA 203: AIR 1945 PC 18; S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: 1968 Cri LJ 97, relied on

[194] — Ss. 41, 105-B, 157 and 166-B — Interpol notices — Binding effect, if any — Mode of effectuation

An Interpol red corner notice by itself cannot be the basis of arrest or transfer of an Indian citizen to a foreign jurisdiction, though issue of red corner notice has several consequences like (i) the requesting country may make a deportation request, (ii) law enforcement agency in India is required to take follow-up action with regard to arrest of fugitive criminal, (iii) information emanating from red corner notice is required to be distributed all over Interpol website, (iv) requesting Embassy can request Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) to carry out its instructions for surveillance, arrest and detention, (v) requesting Embassy can even contact Indian police directly, (vi) extradition proceedings may follow. Keeping in view the constitution of Interpol and various resolutions passed by CBI, red corner notice per se does not give it a status of warrant of arrest, it is merely a request of issuing authority to keep surveillance on him, and provisionally or finally to arrest the wanted person for extradition. (Paras 35 to 38 and 96)

The notices issued by Interpol are not considered as administrative decisions on individual cases with transnational effect. They are not construed as an "international administrative act". They lack a character of regulation. They do not constitute an international arrest warrant and they are not in any other form binding the individuals concerned legally. (Para 63)

In fact, Interpol's "red notices" often function as de facto international arrest warrants and countries issue warrants immediately upon receipt of such a notice. However, they do so with the understanding that a request for extradition with supporting evidence will follow the red notice, without delay. The suspect must then go through the standard extradition process. The bottom line is that "warrants to arrest suspects must have legal authority in the jurisdiction where the suspect is found" and Interpol red notices do not have such authority. They are primarily a means of facilitating communication between police agencies and the success of the Interpol system still depends entirely upon voluntary cooperation. (Para 64)

A number of States recognise the red notices as an official request for the arrest of a person. However, such a request does not require the action of national police authorities and does not provide a legal basis thereto. It is for the State concerned to take a decision in regard to (red corner) notices, keeping in view the municipal law of the country concerned. Recognition of request as the basis for an arrest operates as an internationalisation or transnationalisation of a foreign administrative decision. Formal admissible procedure by Interpol cannot be the single cause of internationalisation. It is just a precondition for recognition by other States. (Paras 64, 65, 48 and 112))

Municipal laws of a country reign supreme in matters of extradition. It is for the State concerned to take decision in regard to red corner and yellow corner notices, keeping in view municipal laws of the country. It is wrong to say that red corner notice issued by Interpol should not be tinkered with. When a person complains of a violation of his fundamental rights, he is entitled to judicial review. (Para 112)

In the present case, no request has been received by Government of India for appellant's extradition. The Extradition Act, 1962 cannot be bypassed in red corner cases concerning Indian citizens. Extradition Treaty is also subject to provisions of the said 1962 Act. Besides, appellant being an Indian citizen, is entitled to protection of fundamental rights. A person cannot be arrested without authority of law. Arrest of a person must therefore be affected in terms of provisions of the said 1962 Act. A person wanted for an offence in a foreign jurisdiction may be arrested on fulfilment of two conditions, namely, (i) offence should be recognised by Indian law also, and (ii) person concerned must be liable to be arrested in India, either under any law relating to extradition or otherwise. (Paras 39 to 41, 112 and 113)

Hence, further action in terms of the red corner notice has not been and could not be taken against the appellant, in the instant case. (Para 108). Bhavesh Jayanti Lakhani v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 9 SCC 551.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[195] — Ss. 41, 157, 105-B and 166-B — Arrest of (international) fugitive criminal — Condition for arrest — Held, arrest can be made at the instance of Central Government only when request to this effect is received from foreign country and not otherwise — Appellant husband involved in civil dispute with his erstwhile wife regarding custody of minor child — USA court granting custody to wife and issuing arrest warrant on account of husband's failure to entrust child to wife — However, no request received from USA Government for appellant's arrest — Held, appellant could not be arrested in these circumstances — Extradition Treaties — Treaty between India and USA dt. 14-9-1999 — Arts. 1, 9, 12 and 21 — Extradition Act, 1962, Ss. 4, 6, 15, 16, 34-B and 2(c). Bhavesh Jayanti Lakhani v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 9 SCC 551.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[196] — Ss. 41, 157, 105-B and 166-B — Arrest based only on Interpol red corner notice — Permissibility — Procedure for arrest under the Extradition Act — Apprehension of a fugitive criminal against whom red corner notice has been issued by Interpol — Liability to be arrested in India based thereon — Held, arrest in India is not automatic in case of red corner notice — Fugitive criminal can be apprehended only according to provisions of 1962 Act — This is because an Indian citizen is entitled to protection of fundamental rights and therefore he can be apprehended only according to procedure established by law — Extradition treaty, where entered into by India with another country, is subject to provisions of the 1962 Act — Implications of red corner notice also explained — Constitution of India — Arts. 21, 14 and 19 — Extradition Act, 1962, Ss. 6, 14, 15, 16, 17, 34-B, 2(d) and 2(f). Bhavesh Jayanti Lakhani v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 9 SCC 551.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[197] — Ss. 41 to 44 & 46 and 155 and 157, 2(h) — Arrest — Usual reasons for making — Role in investigation against person arrested — Discussed (Para 19). Adri Dharan Das v. State of W.B., (2005) 4 SCC 303: 2005 SCC (Cri) 933: AIR 2005 SC 1057: (2005) 117 DLT 686: (2005) 2 Mah LJ 259: 2005 Cri LJ 1706.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2005]

[198] — Ss. 41, 105-B and 157 — "Apprehend" — Interpretation and scope — Held, "apprehend" means seizing or taking hold of a man, the act of arresting or seizing under the process of law — Power to apprehend includes power to investigate — Extradition Act, 1962, Ss. 6, 15, 16 and 34-B (Para 78). Bhavesh Jayanti Lakhani v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 9 SCC 551.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[199] — S. 41 — Arrest — Giving prior notice of, to the person who is to be arrested — Imposition of condition of, by court — Propriety — Direction by High Court to not arrest the first respondent in any crime, except after written notice to him, held, could not be passed — Hence, said direction set aside (Para 7). State of Maharashtra v. Mohd. Rashid, (2005) 7 SCC 56: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-7-2005]

[200] — S. 41 — Guidelines laid down by Supreme Court to be followed by State Governments as well as High Courts while arresting Judicial Officers — Judicial Officers should not visit any police station except in connection with official and judicial duties and with prior intimation to District and Sessions Judge

It is hoped that the State Government will take effective measures to avoid reoccurrence of any such instance as happened in Nadiad where the CJM was trapped, arrested, handcuffed and then paraded. The State Government should further take immediate steps for the review and revision of the Police Regulations in the light of the findings recorded by the Commission. However, the following guidelines are laid down which should be followed in case of arrest and detention of a Judicial Officer:

(A) A Judicial Officer should be arrested for any offence under intimation to District Judge or the High Court as the case may be.

(B) In case of necessity for immediate arrest of a Judicial Officer only a technical or formal arrest may be effected.

(C) The fact of such arrest should be immediately communicated to the District and Sessions Judge of the concerned District and the Chief Justice of the High Court.

(D) The Judicial Officer so arrested shall not be taken to a police station, without the prior order or directions of the District and Sessions Judge of the concerned district, if available.

(E) Immediate facilities shall be provided to the Judicial Officer for communication with his family members, legal advisers and Judicial Officers, including the District and Sessions Judge.

(F) No statement of a Judicial Officer who is under arrest be recorded nor any panchnama be drawn up nor any medical tests be conducted except in the presence of the Legal Adviser of the Judicial Officer concerned or another Judicial Officer of equal or higher rank, if available.

(G) Ordinarily there should be no handcuffing of a Judicial Officer.

The above guidelines are not exhaustive but these are minimum safeguards which must be observed in case of arrest of a Judicial Officer. These guidelines should be implemented by the State Government as well as by the High Courts. (Paras 54, 55 and 56)

Further, no Judicial Officer should visit a Police Station on his own except in connection with his official and judicial duties and functions. If it is necessary for a Judicial Officer or a Subordinate Judicial Officer to visit the Police Station in connection with his official duties, he must do so with prior intimation of his visit to the District and Sessions Judge. (Para 57). Delhi Judicial Service Assn. v. State of Gujarat, (1991) 4 SCC 406: AIR 1991 SC 2176.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.N. Singh, Kuldip Singh and N.M. Kasliwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1991]

[201] — Ss. 41, 151, 2(c), 156 and 157(1) — Duty of police officer to arrest a person in cognizable offence — Nature of — Whether mandatory — Per Markandey Katju, J., a police officer is not bound to arrest even in case of a cognizable offence — When a police officer should arrest and when not is clarified in Joginder Kumar case, (1994) 4 SCC 260 — Interpretation of Statutes — Subsidiary rules — Mandatory or directory — Use of word "may" — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 & 22(1)

Section 2(c) CrPC defines a cognizable offence as an offence in which a police officer may arrest without warrant. Similarly Section 41 CrPC states that a police officer may arrest a person involved in a cognizable offence. The use of the word "may" shows that a police officer is not bound to arrest even in a case of a cognizable offence. Again in Section 157(1) CrPC it is mentioned that a police officer shall investigate a case relating to a cognizable offence, and if necessary take measures for the arrest of the offender. This again makes it clear that arrest is not a must in every case of a cognizable offence. When a police officer should arrest and when not is clarified in Joginder Kumar case, (1994) 4 SCC 260. (Paras 43 and 44). Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 753: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 895: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 73: AIR 2008 SC 1126: (2008) 2 LLN 690: 2008 Cri LJ 1610.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema[1] and Markandey Katju[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 29-1-2008]

[202] — Ss. 41, 151, 156 and 157(1) — Arrest of a person — Exercise of power by police — Satisfaction of police officer about necessity and justification of such arrest on the basis of some investigation — Requirement of, laid down in Joginder Kumar case, (1994) 4 SCC 260 — Non-implementation of, by police — Direction issued to strictly comply with the judgment made in Joginder Kumar case [per Markandey Katju, J.] — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 & 22(1) — Non-compliance with procedure for arrest

Despite the categorical judgment of the Supreme Court made in Joginder Kumar case, (1994) 4 SCC 260 it appears that the police is not at all implementing it. What invariably happens is that whenever an FIR of a cognizable offence is lodged the police immediately goes to arrest the accused person. This is clear violation of the aforesaid judgment of the Supreme Court. Therefore, a strict compliance with the said judgment is directed herein. (Paras 42 and 60). Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 753: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 895: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 73: AIR 2008 SC 1126: (2008) 2 LLN 690: 2008 Cri LJ 1610.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema[1] and Markandey Katju[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 29-1-2008]

[203] — S. 41 — Protection against compulsion of self-incrimination — Scope — Person merely accosted by police, if covered — Contention that once police accosted the respondent, who was suspected of possessing contraband opium, he must be deemed to be under arrest and therefore any confession made by him could not be used against him, held, unsustainable — Merely because respondent was questioned by police on suspicion, it could not be said that he was under arrest — There was nothing on record to suggest that respondent was compelled to make a confession — Plea that compelling a person to be searched amounts to confession could not be accepted — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 8/18 — Constitution of India — Art. 20(3) (Para 11). State of Rajasthan v. Daulat Ram, (2005) 7 SCC 36: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1594: 2005 Cri LJ 4117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-8-2005]

[204] — Ss. 41, 151, 157 and 172 — Arrest of a person — Arrestee has right to have his friend, relative or some other known person informed about his arrest — Police officer must make an entry in his diary about the person who was so informed — Magistrate must be satisfied about compliance with these requirements in all cases of arrest — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 22(1)

The right of the arrested person to have someone informed, upon request and to consult privately with a lawyer was recognised by S. 56(1) of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984 in England. These rights are inherent in Arts. 21 and 22(1) of the Constitution and require to be recognised and scrupulously protected. For effective enforcement of these fundamental rights, the following requirements are issued:

1. An arrested person being held in custody is entitled, if he so requests to have one friend, relative or other person who is known to him or likely to take an interest in his welfare told as far as is practicable that he has been arrested and where he is being detained.

2. The police officer shall inform the arrested person when he is brought to the police station of this right.

3. An entry shall be required to be made in the diary as to who was informed of the arrest. These protections from power must be held to flow from Arts. 21 and 22(1) and enforced strictly.

It shall be the duty of the Magistrate, before whom the arrested person is produced, to satisfy himself that these requirements have been complied with.

The above requirements shall be followed in all cases of arrest till legal provisions are made in this behalf. These requirements shall be in addition to the rights of the arrested persons found in the various police manuals. These requirements are not exhaustive. The Directors General of Police of all the States in India shall issue necessary instructions requiring due observance of these requirements. In addition, departmental instruction shall also be issued that a police officer making an arrest should also record in the case diary, the reasons for making the arrest. Joginder Kumar v. State of U.P., (1994) 4 SCC 260: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1172: AIR 1994 SC 1349: (1994) 2 BLJR 975: (1994) 1 KLT 919: (1994) 2 Crimes 106: 1994 Cri LJ 1981.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.N. Venkatachaliah, C.J. and S. Mohan and Dr. A.S. Anand, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-1994]

Applied in Ahmed Noormohmed Bhatti v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 647

[205] — Ss. 41, 151, 157 and 172 — Arrest of a person — Exercise of power by police — Should not be merely on suspicion about the person's complicity in the crime — Police officer must be satisfied about necessity and justification of such arrest on the basis of some investigation — Reasons for arrest must be recorded by police officer in his diary — Arrest should normally be avoided except in cases of heinous crime — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 22(1)

No arrest can be made because it is lawful for the police officer to do so. The existence of the power to arrest is one thing. The justification for the exercise of it is quite another. The police officer must be able to justify the arrest apart from his power to do so. Arrest and detention in police lock-up of a person can cause incalculable harm to the reputation and self-esteem of a person. No arrest can be made in a routine manner on a mere allegation of commission of an offence made against a person. It would be prudent for a police officer in the interest of protection of the constitutional rights of a citizen and perhaps in his own interest that no arrest should be made without a reasonable satisfaction reached after some investigation as to the genuineness and bona fides of a complaint and a reasonable belief both as to the person's complicity and even so as to the need to effect arrest. Denying a person of his liberty is a serious matter. The recommendations of the Police Commission merely reflect the constitutional concomitants of the fundamental right to personal liberty and freedom. A person is not liable to arrest merely on the suspicion of complicity in an offence. There must be some reasonable justification in the opinion of the officer effecting the arrest that such arrest is necessary and justified. Except in heinous offences, an arrest must be avoided if a police officer issues notice to person to attend the Station House and not to leave the station without permission would do. Joginder Kumar v. State of U.P., (1994) 4 SCC 260: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1172: AIR 1994 SC 1349: (1994) 2 BLJR 975: (1994) 1 KLT 919: (1994) 2 Crimes 106: 1994 Cri LJ 1981.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.N. Venkatachaliah, C.J. and S. Mohan and Dr. A.S. Anand, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-1994]

See also Ahmed Noormohmed Bhatti v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 647

[206] — Ss. 41 and 154 — Arrest of petitioner — Scope of interference under Art. 32 — *Stay in respect of, and prohibition regarding filing of proceedings against petitioner by CBI except by the leave of the Court — Order made by Supreme Court on 21-2-2005 [*Sanjiv Kumar v. Om Prakash

Chautala, (2005) 5 SCC 526] in relation to, vacated — However, directed that petitioner shall not be arrested or called for interrogation except after apprising the Director, CBI — Further directed that no harassment shall be caused to him and any action taken against him shall be promptly brought to the notice of the competent court having jurisdiction over the case — Constitution of India — Art. 32 [Para 13(3)]. Sanjiv Kumar v. Om Prakash Chautala, (2005) 5 SCC 510: AIR 2005 SC 2571.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and D.M. Dharmadhikari and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2005]

— S. 41(1)(a) See Ss. 154 and 41(1)(a) & (g)

[207] — S. 41(1)(a) — Gunshots fired by police to dispel attempts to accused-respondents to rescue their friend from illegal custody of police — Firing sufficient to cause reasonable apprehension in the minds of respondents of death or grievous injury — Subsequent act of the respondents to inflict fatal injuries to deceased-informer accompanying the police party when the deceased tried to prevent the respondents from snatching the gun from the police, held on facts, done in exercise of their right of private defence — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 97 and 99. State of U.P. v. Niyamat, (1987) 3 SCC 434: 1987 SCC (Cri) 565: AIR 1987 SC 1652: 1987 Cri LJ 1881.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Khalid and G.L. Oza, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-4-1987]

— S. 41(1)(g) See Ss. 154 and 41(1)(a) & (g)

— S. 42 See Ss. 41 to 44 & 46 and 155 and 157, 2(h)

See also Ss. 157 & 155 and 41 to 44 & 46 and Ss. 437 to 439

See also Ss. 438, 437 & 438 and 2(h), 155 to 157 and 41 to 44 & 46

See also Ss. 438, 437 & 439 and 41 to 44 & 46

[208] — S. 42 — Condition precedent for exercise of power of police officer to arrest, held, justifiability thereof — Mere availability of the power, not sufficient — Constitution of India — Arts. 22 and 21

The court must bear in mind that at times the applicant would approach the court for grant of anticipatory bail on mere apprehension of being arrested on accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence. In fact, the investigating agency concerned may not otherwise arrest that applicant who has applied for anticipatory bail but just because he makes an application before the court and gets the relief from the court for a limited period and thereafter he has to surrender before the trial court and only thereafter his bail application can be considered and the life of anticipatory bail comes to an end. This may lead to disastrous and unfortunate consequences. The applicant who may not have otherwise lost his liberty loses it because he chose to file application of anticipatory bail on mere apprehension of being arrested on accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence. No arrest should be made because it is lawful for the police officer to do so. The existence of power to arrest is one thing and the justification for the exercise of it is quite another. The police officer must be able to justify the arrest apart from his power to do so. (Para 103). Siddharam Satlingappa Mhetre v. State of Maharashtra, (2011) 1 SCC 694.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Dalveer Bhandari and K.S.P. Radhakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-12-2010]

Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 565: 1980 SCC (Cri) 465, followed

Hyman v. Rose, 1912 AC 623, 631, cited

Salauddin Abdulsamad Shaikh v. State of Maharashtra, (1996) 1 SCC 667: 1996 SCC (Cri) 198; K.L. Verma v. State, (1998) 9 SCC 348: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1031; Adri Dharan Das v. State of W.B., (2005) 4 SCC 303: 2005 SCC (Cri) 933; Sunita Devi v. State of Bihar, (2005) 1 SCC 608: 2005 SCC (Cri) 435; Naresh Kumar Yadav v. Ravindra Kumar, (2008) 1 SCC 632: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 277, held, per incuriam

— S. 43 See Ss. 41 to 44 & 46 and 155 and 157, 2(h)

See also Ss. 157 & 155 and 41 to 44 & 46 and Ss. 437 to 439

See also Ss. 438, 437 and 2(h), 155 to 157 and 41 to 44 & 46

See also Ss. 438, 437 & 439 and 41 to 44 & 46

— S. 44 See Ss. 41 to 44 & 46 and 155 and 157, 2(h)

See also Ss. 157 & 155 and 41 to 44 & 46 and Ss. 437 to 439

See also Ss. 167, 41, 44 and 46

See also Ss. 438, 437 and 2(h), 155 to 157 and 41 to 44 & 46

See also Ss. 438, 437 & 439 and 41 to 44 & 46

> — S. 46 See also S. 46, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 967 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 46 See Ss. 41 to 44 & 46 and 155 and 157, 2(h)

See also Ss. 157 & 155 and 41 to 44 & 46 and Ss. 437 to 439

See also Ss. 167, 41, 44 and 46

See also Ss. 438, 437 and 2(h), 155 to 157 and 41 to 44 & 46

See also Ss. 438, 437 & 439 and 41 to 44 & 46

[209] — S. 46 — A person can be deemed to have surrendered to the police when he offers to give information leading to discovery under S. 27, Evidence Act, 1872

When a person not in custody approaches a police officer investigating an offence and offers to give information leading to the discovery of a fact, having a bearing on the charge which may be made against him, he may appropriately be deemed so have surrendered himself to the police. The broad foundation of this rule is stated to be that S. 46 of the Code of Criminal Procedure does not contemplate any formality before a person can be said to be taken in custody: submission to the custody by word or action by a person is sufficient. Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 565: 1980 SCC (Cri) 465: AIR 1980 SC 1632: 1980 Cri LJ 1125.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and P.N. Bhagwati, N.L. Untwalia, R.S. Pathak and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-4-1980]

[210] — Ss. 46 and 49 — Handcuffing of under trial prisoners by escorts while taking them from the jail to court and back — Constitutionality — Test for determining — Held, permissible only in very exceptional situations — Onus on the authority imposing the handcuffs to justify the action — Authority should record reasons and act on clear materials and produce them before the trial Court for obtaining judicial approval — Once disapproved by court, handcuffing would be illegal — Constitution of India — Arts. 21, 14 & 19

Per Krishna Iyer and Chinnappa Reddy, JJ.

To handcuff is to hoop harshly and to punish humiliatingly. It is necessarily implicit in Arts. 14 and 19 that when there is no compulsive need to fetter a person's limbs, it is sadistic, capricious, despotic and demoralising to humble a man by manacling him. The minimal freedom of movement, which even a detainee is entitled to under Art. 19, cannot be cut down by application of handcuffs.

To be consistent with Arts. 14 and 19 handcuffs must be the last refuge as there are other ways for ensuring security. No prisoner shall be handcuffed or fettered routinely or merely for the convenience of the custodian or escort. Functional compulsions of security must reach that dismal degree where no alternative will work except manacles. There must be material, sufficiently stringent, to satisfy a reasonable mind that there is clear and present danger of escape of the prisoner who is being transported by breaking out of the police control and further that by adding to the escort party or other strategy, he cannot be kept under control. The onus of proof in this regard is on him who puts the person under irons.

The belief that the prisoner is likely to break out of custody or play the vanishing trick must be based on antecedents which must be recorded and proneness to violence must be authentic. Vague surmises or general averments that the undertrial is a crook or desperado, rowdy or maniac cannot suffice. Even orders of superiors are no valid justification as constitutional rights cannot be kept in suspense by superior orders, unless there is material in that regard.

Even where in extreme circumstances, handcuffs have to be put on the prisoner, the escorting authority must record contemporaneously the reasons for doing so. Not only that, as that can be a mechanical process mindlessly made, the escorting officer, whenever he handcuffs a prisoner produced in court, must show the reasons so recorded to the Presiding Judge and get his approval. The judicial officer before whom the prisoner is produced has to interrogate the prisoner, as a rule, whether he has been subjected to handcuffs or other 'irons' treatment and, if he has been the official concerned shall be asked to explain the action forthwith. Otherwise, there is no control over possible arbitrariness in applying handcuffs and fetters. And once the court directs that handcuffs shall be off, no escorting authority can overrule judicial direction. This is implicit in Art. 21.

Merely because a person is charged with grave or serious offences the inference of escape proneness or desperate character does not follow and therefore, on that premise alone he cannot be handcuffed. Therefore, the provisions under cls. (a), (b) and (c) of para 26.22(1) of the Punjab Police Rules for routinely handcuffing an undertrial who is accused of a non-bailable offence punishable with more than 3 years' imprisonment or an offence punishable under Ss. 148 or 226, Indian Penal Code or an offence as to bring the case under S. 75, Indian Penal Code violative of Arts. 14, 19 and 21. Clauses (d), (e) and (f) of para 26.22(1) also hover perilously near unconstitutionality unless read down. Who is a 'desperate character' within clause (d) or why the prisoner should be tortured because others will demonstrate or attempt to rescue as contemplated in cls. (e) and (f) is not clear.

Another aspect of the matter is that all prisoners should not be placed on the same footing unless there is a rational classification based upon health, age, academic or occupational needs or like legitimate ground and not irrelevant factors like wealth, political importance, social status and other criteria which are a hangover of the hierarchical social structure hostile to the constitutional ethos. It is arbitrary and irrational to classify prisoners, for the purposes of handcuffs, into 'better' class and 'ordinary' class. No one shall be fettered in any form based on superior class differentia, as the law treats them equally. Therefore, paragraphs 26.21-A and 26.22 of the Punjab Police Rules insofar as they put the ordinary Indian beneath the better class breed are untenable and arbitrary.

Per Pathak, J. (concurring)

If a police officer is vested with the power to restrain a person by handcuffing him or otherwise there is a simultaneous restraint by the law on the police officer as to the exercise of that power. An arbitrary exercise of that power infringes the fundamental rights of the person in custody and a malicious use of that power can bring S. 220, Indian Penal Code into play.

Sections 46 and 49, Criminal Procedure Code define the parameters of the power envisaged by the Code, in the matter of arrest and S. 49 of the Code, in particular, foreshadows the central principle controlling the power to impose restraint on the person of prisoner while in continued custody. Consistent with the fundamental rights of such person the restraint can be imposed, if at all, to a degree no greater than is necessary for preventing his escape. To prevent his escape is the object of imposing the restraint, and that object defines at once the bounds of that power.

The authority responsible for the prisoner's custody, should consider the case of each prisoner individually and decide whether the prisoner is a person who having regard to his circumstances, general conduct, behaviour and character will attempt to escape or disturb the peace by becoming violent. That is the basic criterion, and all provisions relating to the imposition of restraint must be guided by it. In the ultimate analysis it is that guiding principle which must determine in each individual case whether a restraint should be imposed and to what degree.

Whether handcuffs or other restraint should be imposed on a prisoner is primarily a matter for the decision of the authority responsible for his custody and not of any other. It is a judgment to be exercised with reference to each individual case. The matter is one where the circumstances may change from one moment to another, and inevitably in some cases it may fall to the decision of the escorting authority midway to decide on imposing a restraint on the prisoner. Any prior decision of external authority cannot be reasonably imposed on the exercise of that power. However, one sector of supervisory jurisdiction could appropriately lie with the court trying the accused, and it would be desirable for the custodial authority to inform that court of the circumstances in which, and the justification for imposing a restraint on the body of the accused. It should be for the court concerned to work out the modalities of the procedure requisite for the purpose of enforcing such control. Prem Shankar Shukla v. Delhi Admn., (1980) 3 SCC 526: 1980 SCC (Cri) 815: AIR 1980 SC 1535: 1980 Cri LJ 930.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer[1], R.S. Pathak[2] and O. Chinnappa Reddy[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1980]

[211] — Ss. 46 and 49 — Handcuffing of undertrials and convicts and putting them under fetters not permissible — Violation of directions issued by the Supreme Court in Prem Shankar Shukla case and Sunil Batra case would attract the provisions of Contempt of Courts Act apart from other penal consequences — Magistrate may grant permission to handcuff the prisoner in very rare cases — Relevant considerations for handcuffing or putting the prisoners under fetters inside or outside the jail — If the police officer, who arrests a person without warrant, is satisfied, on the basis of guidelines given by the Supreme Court, that it is necessary to handcuff such a person he may do so till he is taken to the police station and thereafter produced before the Magistrate — Directions issued — Constitution of India — Arts. 21, 14 and 19

Handcuffs or other fetters shall not be forced on a prisoner — convicted or undertrial — while lodged in a jail anywhere in the country or while transporting or in transit from one jail to another or from jail to court and back. The police and the jail authorities, on their own, shall have no authority to direct the handcuffing of any inmate of a jail in the country or during transport from one jail to another or from jail to court and back. (Para 16)

The law declared in Prem Shankar Shukla case and Sunil Batra case and the directions issued by the Supreme Court are binding on all concerned and any violation or circumvention shall attract the provisions of the Contempt of Courts Act apart from other penal consequences under law. Judicial notice is taken of the fact that the police and the jail authorities are even now using handcuffs and other fetters indiscriminately and without any justification. This Court has categorically held that the relevant considerations for putting a prisoner in fetters are the character, antecedents and propensities of the prisoner. The peculiar and special characteristics of each individual prisoner have to be taken into consideration. The nature or length of sentence or the number of convictions or the gruesome character of the crime the prisoner is alleged to have committed are not by themselves relevant consideration. (Paras 3, 14 and 9)

The police and the jail authorities are under a public duty to prevent the escape of prisoners and provide them with safe custody but at the same time the rights of the prisoners guaranteed to them under Articles 14, 19 and 21 of the Constitution of India cannot be infracted. The authorities are justified in taking suitable measures, legally permissible, to safeguard the custody of the prisoners, but the use of fetters purely at the whims or subjective discretion of the authorities is not permissible. (Para 13)

Where the police or the jail authorities have well-grounded basis for drawing a strong inference that a particular prisoner is likely to jump jail or break out of the custody then the said prisoner be produced before the Magistrate concerned and a prayer for permission to handcuff the prisoner be made before the said Magistrate. Save in rare cases of concrete proof regarding proneness of the prisoner to violence, his tendency to escape, he being so dangerous/desperate and the finding that no other practical way of forbidding escape is available, the Magistrate may grant permission to handcuff the prisoner. (Para 17)

In all the cases where a person arrested by police, is produced before the Magistrate and remand — judicial or non-judicial — is given by the Magistrate the person concerned shall not be handcuffed unless special orders in that respect are obtained from the Magistrate at the time of the grant of the remand. (Para 18)

When the police arrests a person in execution of a warrant of arrest obtained from a Magistrate, the person so arrested shall not be handcuffed unless the police has also obtained orders from the Magistrate for the handcuffing of the person to be so arrested. (Para 19)

Where a person is arrested by the police without warrant the police officer concerned may if he is satisfied, on the basis of the guidelines given above, that it is necessary to handcuff such a person, he may do so till the time he is taken to the police station and thereafter his production before the Magistrate. Further use of fetters thereafter can only be under the orders of the Magistrate. (Para 20). Citizens for Democracy v. State of Assam, (1995) 3 SCC 743: 1995 SCC (Cri) 600: AIR 1996 SC 2193.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and N. Venkatachala, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-1995]

Prem Shankar Shukla v. Delhi Admn., (1980) 3 SCC 526: 1980 SCC (Cri) 815; Sunil Batra v. Delhi Admn., (1978) 4 SCC 494: 1979 SCC (Cri) 155, followed

[212] — Ss. 46 and 41 — Arrest of a woman — Presence of a female constable — Necessity of — Said arrest after sunset and before sunrise — Permissibility of — High Court preventing the police officers from arresting a woman without the presence of a female constable and also prohibiting her arrest after sunset and before sunrise under any circumstances — Held, a strict compliance with High Court's direction would cause practical difficulties to the investigating agency and might even give room for evading the process of law by unscrupulous accused — Hence Supreme Court modifying the said direction by permitting the said arrest at any time of the day or night even without the presence of a female constable if the arresting officer is reasonably satisfied that such presence of a female constable is not available or possible and/or the delay in arrest would impede the course of investigation — Reasons for such arrest to be recorded by the arresting officer either before or immediately after the arrest

The mandate issued by the High Court prevents the police from arresting a lady without the presence of a lady constable. The said direction also prohibits the arrest of a lady after sunset and before sunrise under any circumstances. We do agree with the object behind the direction issued by the High Court, but a strict compliance with the said direction, in a given circumstance, would cause practical difficulties to the investigating agency and might even give room for evading the process of law by unscrupulous accused. While it is necessary to protect the female sought to be arrested by the police from police misdeeds, it may not be always possible and practical to have the presence of a lady constable when the necessity for such arrest arises, therefore, this direction issued requires some modification without disturbing the object behind the same. The object will be served if a direction is issued to the arresting authority that while arresting a female person, all efforts should be made to keep a lady constable present but in the circumstances where the arresting officer is reasonably satisfied that such presence of a lady constable is not available or possible and/or the delay in arresting caused by securing the presence of a lady constable would impede the course of investigation, such arresting officer for reasons to be recorded either before the arrest or immediately after the arrest be permitted to arrest a female person for lawful reasons at any time of the day or night depending on the circumstances of the case even without the presence of a lady constable. (Para 9). State of Maharashtra v. Christian Community Welfare Council of India, (2003) 8 SCC 546.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-10-2003]

[213] — Ss. 46 and 41 — Arrest of a woman — Time of arrest — If on facts was between sunset and sunrise — Petitioner R stating that she was arrested at 1.30 a.m. — Respondents (police officials) filed four affidavits stating that R was arrested at 5.30 a.m. — Except petitioner's affidavit and rejoinder-affidavit, no other affidavit or corroborating material to support her version — In view of these conflicting affidavits and no independent or corroborative material having been filed on behalf of the petitioners, held, it was not possible to hold that R had been arrested at 1.30 a.m. or that the version given by respondents was not correct — Further held, in case IO came to conclusion that R had committed cognizable offences, he was perfectly within his right to arrest her and no exception could be taken to such a course of action (Para 12). Rajkumari v. SHO, NOIDA, (2003) 11 SCC 500: 2004 SCC (Cri) 196: AIR 2003 SC 4693.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2003]

[214] — Ss. 46 and 41 — Arrest of a woman between sunset and sunrise — Prayer made in writ petitions that a general direction may be issued to the respondents (police officials) to stop arresting women between sunset and sunrise except in grave offences like murder — No submission made by petitioners in respect thereof — That apart, present one, held, not a fit case where some general directions may be issued in this regard (Para 15). Rajkumari v. SHO, NOIDA, (2003) 11 SCC 500: 2004 SCC (Cri) 196: AIR 2003 SC 4693.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2003]

— S. 46(1) See Ss. 438, 439 and 46(1)

See also Ss. 439 and 46(1) & (2)

— S. 46(2) See Ss. 439 and 46(1) & (2)

— S. 49 See Ss. 46 and 49

— S. 49(2)(b) See S. 167(2) r/w S. 49(2)(b)

[215] — Ss. 50, 57 and 167 — Conform to the right to life and personal liberty enshrined in Art. 21 and the safeguards ingrained in Art. 22 of the Constitution — Constitution of India, Arts. 21 & 22. Union of India v. W.N. Chadha, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 260: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1171: AIR 1993 SC 1082: 1993 Cri LJ 859.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1992]

— S. 51 See also Ss. 51 and 52, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 968 in Vol. 2

— S. 51 See also Ss. 100 and 51

[216] — S. 51 — Search of arrested person — Personal search memo not mentioning that the accused was wearing a kirpan at the time of arrest — Existence of kirpan on person of accused proved by Munshi, District Jail — Held, trial court not justified in making inference that the kirpan was supplied to the accused when he was on his way to the jail (Para 10). Balwant Singh v. State of Punjab, (1995) 3 SCC 214: 1995 SCC (Cri) 432: AIR 1995 SC 1785.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1995]

[217] — S. 51 — Capsules containing sachets of contraband concealed by accused persons in their body cavities — Purging of, in a hospital — Recovery of 41 sachets from respondent H — Doubt in respect of — The appropriate person who could have spoken about the purging by H was the sweeper of the hospital who collected the sachets — Non-examination of — Further, the resident doctor to whom sachets given after cleaning every time the same were purged, also not examined — Sachets purged by H not kept separately from those similarly purged by other accused persons — Serious doubt as to the identity of the sachets actually purged by H — Hence, said recovery from H, held, not established beyond all reasonable doubt — Acquittal by High Court upheld — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 8(c)/21, 28, 23 and 50

There were nine accused persons who were intercepted at the airport by the NCB officers. All these nine persons were brought to the hospital and subjected to radiological test and were suspected of having concealed certain foreign substance in their body cavity. All these accused persons were kept in the hospital because it was thought that they would in due course of time, purge foreign substance from their bodies. Arrangements were made by the hospital authorities in regard to each of these accused persons to facilitate them to purge the foreign substance from their body cavities. Each of the accused persons was provided with a toilet pan and every time the accused persons purged the sachets, they were collected, cleaned by the sweeper of the hospital and handed over to the resident doctor. The sachets purged by each of these accused persons were collected, sealed and sent for chemical examination. The Chemical Examiner found that the capsules contained diacetylmorphine i.e. heroin. The trial court convicted all the accused persons including the respondent herein. But the High Court, in appeal, disagreed with the trial court and set aside the conviction and sentence imposed on the accused persons. Since the other accused apart from the respondent herein, had left the country, the instant appeal was confined only to the respondent who could not go out of the country for various reasons.

Dismissing the appeal filed by the State,

Held :

The High Court has rightly held that the prosecution has failed to establish that the 41 sachets recovered by it are really the ones which were allegedly purged by this respondent. (Para 7)

It is evident from the evidence of PW 3 (doctor of the hospital) that neither was he personally present when these sachets were recovered after they were purged by the accused concerned nor when the sachets after collection and cleaning, were handed over to the resident doctor, therefore, this witness is not competent to say that the 41 sachets collected from the respondent are the very same sachets which he had purged and not those which the other accused might have purged. The appropriate person who could have spoken about this fact of purging by the respondent, was the sweeper who collected the said sachets. He has not been examined by the prosecution. Further, the resident doctor to whom these sachets were given after cleaning every time the same were purged, was also not examined. That apart, there is no material to show that as and when these sachets were purged, they were kept separately from the other sachets which were also similarly purged by other accused persons. Therefore, there is a serious doubt as to the identity of the sachets actually purged by the respondent. (Para 7)

Further, the so-called inventory maintained by the hospital is not signed or attested by any of the officials of the hospital nor has any person who really maintained the said inventory been examined in this regard. Even the panch witness PW 4, who had signed the panchnama for the recovery of the alleged sachets from the respondent, has not fully supported the prosecution case. (Para 7)

Thus, the prosecution has not established beyond reasonable doubt that the sachets which were collected on various dates between 16-3-1994 and 20-3-1994, as a matter of fact, were purged by the respondent and not by anybody else. (Para 7). Narcotics Control Bureau v. Abdullah Hussain Juma, (2003) 7 SCC 245: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1608: AIR 2003 SC 4216.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-7-2003]

[218] — Ss. 51 and 102 — Recovery, seizure and deposit of seized contraband in maalkhana disputed by the accused — Uncertainty as to when and by whom the entries in the arrest memo regarding the seizure of Rs 27,000 from the accused were made, when the said seizure was denied by the IO at the time of judgment changing his earlier statement — Held, the accused cannot be made to suffer for the said failure of prosecution — On facts, case not proved beyond all reasonable doubt — Conviction of accused based on the sole testimony of IO, set aside — Contradictory statement of IO about seizure of Rs 27,000 from accused — Benefit of, given to accused — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — S. 8 r/w S. 15 and S. 42

Appellant B, a truck driver, was tried and convicted for the offence under Section 8 r/w S. 15 NDPS Act. The conviction was based on the sole testimony of the IO. There was a controversy regarding the seizure of amount of Rs 27,000 by the IO from B as the IO in his cross-examination had accepted the seizure of the said amount, but subsequently at the time of judgment he denied the said fact. There were also discrepancies in the entries made in arrest memo regarding the seizure of the said amount as the time of the said entries and the person responsible for making them was not certain. The appellant, before the Supreme Court, disputed the recovery of contraband on the ground that there were serious discrepancies in its recovery, seizure and deposit in the maalkhana.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

There is statement of PW 4, a constable, that when he along with PW 1, a hostile prosecution witness, reached the spot where the truck was apprehended, PW 3, the IO, had already conducted the search of the truck. (Para 5)

The explanation of the police official who made the entries in the Maalkhana register was that he forgot to make an entry of the seized material in the said register and made the same after 5 days of the incident. The entry could be made at its appropriate place and under the correct date on which it was actually made and any delay in making the same could be explained. Entries as made by interpolation in the instant case cannot be permitted. (Para 5)

The said police official also deposed that since no cash was deposited, he did not make any entry for receipt of Rs 27,000 connected with the crime. The appellant cannot be made to suffer for the prosecution's failure to prove as to when and by whom the entries in arrest memo regarding the said amount were made. (Paras 5 and 7)

The question of applicability of Section 35 of the Act will not arise in the present case when the recovery itself is doubtful. (Para 8). Bahadur Singh v. State of M.P., (2002) 1 SCC 606: 2002 SCC (Cri) 172: AIR 2002 SC 289: (2002) 142 ELT 281: 2002 Cri LJ 579: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 34.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Y.K. Sabharwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2001]

[219] — Ss. 51, 94 and 100 — Search and Seizure — Data on electronic device — Laptops of assessee's auditor seized — Department claiming requirement of access to electronic data pertaining to assessee for proper assessment — Held, two laptops be desealed — Data therein be examined by DG, National Informatics Centre or his nominee in presence of representatives of IT Department and assessee — All data on laptops directed to be made available for inspection by the Department to verify whether it pertains to assessee — Supreme Court identifying only specific entities/clients whose data the Department may copy — Respondents also directed to provide authenticated hard copies of data pertaining to assessee to Department — Department permitted to inspect data contained relating to 46 parties — However, such data not to be copied in any form — Any of such files/folders connected with assessee group required by assessing officer, to be pointed out in writing to respondent — Respondent may either consent to or challenge such claim by appropriate proceedings — Appeal disposed of — However, question of law sought to be raised in appeal kept open — IT Act, 1961, S. 132(1)(ii-b) — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 34, 3 "Evidence" (2), 17, 22-A, 39, 65-B — Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 11. Deptt. of Income Tax (Investigation) v. S.R. Batliboi & Co., (2009) 17 SCC 767.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2009]

[220] — S. 51 — Search — Requirement under S. 50, NDPS Act, 1985 on the part of the officer conducting the search to inform the accused of his right to choose to be searched in the presence of a Gazetted Officer or a Magistrate, held, mandatory — Prosecution must prove that the accused was made aware of this right but he did not choose to be searched before a Gazetted Officer or a Magistrate — If no evidence to this effect given court must assume that the accused was not informed of his right and must find that the possession of the illicit articles was not established — Presumption of regularity of official act as contemplated under S. 114 Ill. (e), Evidence Act cannot be relied upon — Protection given to the accused under S. 50 cannot be disregarded on the technicality that this point was not raised in the trial court — Investigating officers directed to take care to comply with the requirement of S. 50 — On facts, conviction under Ss. 65 and 66 of the Bombay Prohibition Act, 1949 for which no separate punishment has been awarded by the High Court is also not sustainable — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 114 Ill. (e) — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 50, 54 and 20

Having regard to the grave consequences that may entail the possession of illicit articles under the NDPS Act, namely, the shifting of the onus to the accused and the severe punishment to which he becomes liable, the Legislature has enacted the safeguard contained in Section 50. To obviate any doubt as to the possession by the accused of illicit articles under the NDPS Act, the accused is authorised to require the search for such possession to be conducted in the presence of a Gazetted Officer or a Magistrate. The provisions in this behalf are mandatory and the language thereof obliges the officer concerned to inform the person to be searched of his right to demand that the search be conducted in the presence of a Gazetted Officer or a Magistrate. (Para 6)

When evidence of the search is given, all that transpired in its connection must be stated. Very relevant in this behalf is the testimony of the officer conducting the search that he had informed the person to be searched that he was entitled to demand that the search be carried out in the presence of a Gazetted Officer or a Magistrate and that the person had not chosen to so demand. If no evidence to this effect is given the court must assume that the person to be searched was not informed of the protection the law gave him and must find that the possession of illicit articles under the NDPS Act was not established. (Para 7)

It cannot be said that in cases under the NDPS Act it is the duty of the court to raise a presumption, when the officer concerned has not deposed that he had followed the procedure mandated by Section 50, that he had in fact done so. When the officer concerned has not deposed that he had followed the procedure mandated by Section 50, the court is duty-bound to conclude that the accused had not had the benefit of the protection that Section 50 affords; that, therefore, his possession of articles which are illicit under the NDPS Act is not established; that the precondition for his having satisfactorily accounted for such possession has not been met; and to acquit the accused. (Para 8)

It is necessary that courts dealing with offences under the NDPS Act should be very careful to see that it is established to their satisfaction that the accused has been informed by the officer concerned that he had a right to choose to be searched before a Gazetted Officer or a Magistrate. The accused must be made aware of this right or protection granted by the statute and unless cogent evidence is produced to show that he was made aware of such right or protection, there would be no question of presuming that the requirements of Section 50 were complied with. Instructions in this behalf need to be issued so that investigation officers take care to comply with the statutory requirement and drug-pedlars do not go scot-free due to non-compliance thereof. Such instructions would be of great value in the effort to curb drug trafficking. At the same time, those accused of possessing drugs should, however heinous their offence may appear to be, have the safeguard that the law prescribes. (Para 10). Saiyad Mohd. Saiyad Umar Saiyad v. State of Gujarat, (1995) 3 SCC 610: 1995 SCC (Cri) 564: (1995) 78 ELT 649: (1995) 2 GCD 197: 1995 Cri LJ 2662.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and S.P. Bharucha and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-1995]

State of Punjab v. Balbir Singh, (1994) 3 SCC 299, followed

— S. 51(2) See also S. 52, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 968 in Vol. 2

[221] — S. 51(2) — Search of female — Applicability of provisions of CrPC — Search must be conducted by a female — Procedure indicated — Failure to observe the requirements not only affects the credibility of the prosecution case but also is violative of basic right of a female to be treated with decency and proper dignity — Constitution of India — Art. 21 — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 50(4) and 51

While conducting search and seizure, in addition to the safeguards provided under the Code of Criminal Procedure, the safeguards provided under the NDPS Act are also required to be followed. Section 50(4) of the NDPS Act lays down that no female shall be searched by anyone excepting a female. This provision is similar to the one contained in Section 52 of CrPC, 1898 and Section 51(2) of CrPC, 1973 relating to search of females. Section 51(2) of CrPC, 1973 lays down that whenever it is necessary to cause a female to be searched, the search shall be made by another female with strict regard to decency. The empowered officer must, therefore, act in the manner provided by Section 50(4) of the NDPS Act read with Section 51(2) of CrPC, 1973 whenever it is found necessary to cause a female to be searched. The document prepared by the investigating officer at the spot must invariably disclose that the search was conducted in the aforesaid manner and the name of the female official who carried out the personal search of the female concerned should also be disclosed. The personal search memo of the female concerned should indicate compliance with the aforesaid provisions. Failure to do so may not only affect the credibility of the prosecution case but may also be found as violative of the basic right of a female to be treated with decency and proper dignity. (Para 13). State of Punjab v. Baldev Singh, (1999) 6 SCC 172: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1080: AIR 1999 SC 2378: 1999 Cri LJ 3672.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and S.B. Majmudar, Sujata V. Manohar, K. Venkataswami and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-1999]

[222] — S. 52 — Conviction under S. 5, TADA — Validity of — Discrepancy about the recovery of revolver used in crime — A, who committed the murder, saying that the revolver was given to appellant V — According to prosecution, PW 20 along with other police officers including PW 9 recovered a polythene bag containing bloodstained clothes and a revolver from the possession of V — Further, PW 9 stating that the bag contained only two pieces of cloth and the revolver was a separate article — Accepting the evidence of PW 20, the author of recovery, held, there was reasonable doubt as to whether V had only a polythene bag without knowing the contents therein — Hence, he was liable to be set at liberty forthwith — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 3 and 27 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 5 (Para 16). Vijay Pal Singh v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2001) 10 SCC 45: AIR 2001 SC 2405.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2001]

[223] — S. 52 — Investigation — Failure of investigating officer to smell the firearms at the time of recovery to confirm if freshly used can assume importance when serious doubt regarding the use of the firearms and the fact of arrest of accused and recovery of firearms present. Nachhattar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1976) 1 SCC 750: 1976 SCC (Cri) 182: AIR 1976 SC 951: 1976 Cri LJ 691.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, P.K. Goswami and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-1975]

[224] — S. 53 — Aspects — Direction for DNA test — When can be given — Approach/Duty of courts — Paternity of a child — DNA test being an extremely delicate and sensitive aspect, a direction for said test, held, can be given if a strong prima facie case and an eminent need is made out for such a course — Cautious and judicious approach prescribed, considering that such infringement on right to privacy may not only be prejudicial to rights of the parties but may have devastating effect on the child — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 112 — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 19(1)(a)

Two questions arise for consideration—first, the extent of power of the State Commission for Women constituted under Section 3 of the Orissa State Commission for Women Act, 1993 and then, as to whether the High Court was justified in issuing a suo motu direction for deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) test of the child and the appellant who, according to the mother of the child, was its father suo motu.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The order of the High Court directing DNA test is not sustainable. Instead of correcting the void order of the State Commission directing DNA test, the High Court exceeded its jurisdiction in passing the impugned order. (Paras 24 and 13)

When a matrimonial dispute between the parties was pending in the court of competent jurisdiction, all aspects concerning matrimonial dispute raised by the parties should be adjudicated and determined by the matrimonial court. Should an issue arise before the matrimonial court concerning the paternity of the child, obviously that court will be competent to pass an appropriate order at the relevant time in accordance with law. (Para 24)

DNA test in a matter relating to paternity of a child should not be directed by the court as a matter of course or in a routine manner, whenever such a request is made. The court has to consider diverse aspects including presumption under Section 112 of the Evidence Act; pros and cons of such order and the test of "eminent need" whether it is not possible for the court to reach the truth without use of such test. The result of a genuine DNA test may not be enough to escape from the conclusiveness of Section 112. When there is apparent conflict between the right to privacy of a person not to submit himself forcibly to medical examination and duty of the court to reach the truth, the court must exercise its discretion only after balancing the interests of the parties and on due consideration whether for a just decision in the matter, DNA test is eminently needed. (Paras 22 and 19)

In a matter where paternity of a child is in issue before the court, the use of DNA test is an extremely delicate and sensitive aspect. One view is that when modern science gives the means of ascertaining the paternity of a child, there should not be any hesitation to use those means whenever the occasion requires. The other view is that the court must be reluctant in the use of such scientific advances and tools which result in invasion of right to privacy of an individual and may not only be prejudicial to the rights of the parties but may have devastating effect on the child. Sometimes the result of such scientific test may bastardise an innocent child even though his mother and her spouse were living together during the time of conception. Any order for DNA test can be given by the court only if a strong prima facie case is made out for such a course. (Paras 21 and 23)

The order of the High Court directing DNA test, is, therefore, set aside. Respondent 2 wife, however would not be precluded from claiming maintenance or any other order of financial support against the appellant in appropriate proceedings from the court of competent jurisdiction or in the petition filed by the appellant before the District Judge. Obviously the appellant husband would be at liberty to contest the claim of Respondent 2 on all available grounds and the court concerned would consider and determine such claim in accordance with law on its own merits. (Paras 25 and 26)

The State Commission constituted under the Orissa State Commission for Women Act, 1993 has no authority, competence or power to order DNA test. The State Commission is broadly assigned to take up studies on issues of economic, educational and health care that may help in overall development of the women of the State; gather statistics concerning offences against women; probe into the complaints relating to atrocities on women, deprivation of women of their rights in respect of minimum wages, basic health, maternity rights, etc. and upon ascertainment of facts take up the matter with the authorities concerned for remedial measures; help women in distress as a friend, philosopher and guide in enforcement of their legal rights. However, no power or authority has been given to the State Commission to adjudicate or determine the rights of the parties. (Paras 24, 10 and 9). Bhabani Prasad Jena v. Orissa State Commission for Women, (2010) 8 SCC 633.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision : 3-8-2010]

Banarsi Dass v. Teeku Dutta, (2005) 4 SCC 449, followed

Goutam Kundu v. State of W.B., (1993) 3 SCC 418: 1993 SCC (Cri) 928; Sharda v. Dharmpal, (2003) 4 SCC 493, relied on and clarified

Ramkanya Bai v. Bharatram, (2010) 1 SCC 85, relied on

Rayden's Law and Practice in Divorce and Family Matters (1983), Vol. I, p. 1054, referred to [225] — S. 53 — Medical examination of arrestee — High Court laying down certain requirements in respect of, and directing the State to issue necessary instructions to police officials for compliance therewith — In view of the law settled by the Supreme Court in D.K. Basu case regarding the said matter, held, the above directions issued by the High Court would be substituted by the requirement laid down in sub-paras (7) and (8) of para 35 of the judgment in Basu case — Constitution of India — Art. 21 (Paras 5 to 7). State of Maharashtra v. Christian Community Welfare Council of India, (2003) 8 SCC 546.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-10-2003]

D.K. Basu v. State of W.B., (1997) 1 SCC 416: 1997 SCC (Cri) 92, followed

[226] — Ss. 53, 53-A and 54 — Scope — Validity of narcoanalysis, polygraph and BEAP tests — Wider perspective of personal liberty, held, is required to cover situations not specifically covered by Art. 20(3) — Undesirable effects of these tests in certain situations are not taken care of by Art. 20(3) and therefore validity of these tests is to be examined from wider perspective of personal liberty under Art. 21, which includes right to mental privacy, right against cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment and right to fair trial — Mere fact that use of reasonable force in exercise of police power and taking of samples of bodily substances (like hair, blood, etc.) is permissible in law, does not necessarily mean that narcoanalysis, polygraph and BEAP tests should also be permitted without examining their effect on test subject's rights under Art. 21 — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 20(3)

Article 20(3) is not applicable when a person gives his/her informed consent to undergo any of the impugned tests. Right against self-incrimination does not protect persons who may be compelled to undergo tests in the course of administrative proceedings or any other proceedings which may result in civil liability. It is also conceivable that a person who is forced to undergo these tests may not subsequently face criminal charges. In this context, Article 20(3) will not apply in situations where test results could become the basis of non-penal consequences for the subject such as custodial abuse, police surveillance and harassment among others. In order to account for these possibilities, it has to be examined whether involuntary administration of any of these tests is compatible with constitutional guarantee of substantive due process. The standard of substantive due process is the threshold for examining validity of all categories of governmental action that tend to infringe upon the idea of personal liberty as understood in the context of Article 21. (Paras 190 and 191)

Since administering impugned tests entails physical confinement of the subject, it is important to consider whether they can be read into an existing statutory provision. This is so because any form of restraint on personal liberty, howsoever slight it may be, must have a basis in law. (Para 192)

There are several ways in which involuntary administration of either of the impugned tests could be viewed as a restraint on personal liberty. The most obvious indicator of restraint is the use of physical force to ensure that an unwilling person is confined to premises where tests are to be conducted. Furthermore, drug-induced revelations or substantive inferences drawn from measurement of subject's physiological responses can be described as an intrusion into subject's mental privacy. A person could make an incriminating statement on being threatened with prospective administration of any of these techniques. Conversely, a person who has been forcibly subjected to these techniques could be confronted with the results in a subsequent interrogation, thereby eliciting incriminating statements. (Para 193)

A person who undergoes the said tests is subsequently exposed to harmful consequences, though not of a penal nature. There may be situations where contents of test results could prompt investigators to engage in custodial abuse, surveillance or undue harassment. There are instances where investigating agencies have leaked video recordings of narcoanalysis interviews to media organisations. This is an especially worrisome practice since public distribution of these recordings can expose the subject to undue social stigma and specific risks. It may even encourage acts of vigilantism in addition to a trial by media. (Para 194)

Law provides for some restrictions on personal liberty in routine exercise of police powers. CrPC incorporates an elaborate scheme prescribing the powers of arrest, detention, interrogation, search and seizure. A fundamental premise of criminal justice system is that the police and judiciary are empowered to exercise a reasonable degree of coercive powers. The provision that enables courts to order a person who is under arrest to undergo a medical examination also provides for use of force as is reasonably necessary for this purpose. Notion of personal liberty does not grant rights in absolute sense and validity of restrictions placed on the same needs to be evaluated on the basis of criterion such as fairness, non-arbitrariness and reasonableness. (Para 195)

An analogy has been drawn between the pin-prick of a needle for extracting a blood sample and intravenous administration of drugs such as sodium pentothal (in narcoanalysis). Even though extracted sample of blood is purely physical evidence as opposed to narcoanalysis interview where the test subject offers testimonial responses, the comparison can be sustained to examine whether puncturing the skin with a needle or an injection is an unreasonable restraint on personal liberty. (Para 196)

Compelled extraction of blood samples in the course of a medical examination does not amount to conduct that shocks the conscience. Use of force as may be reasonably necessary is mandated by law and hence it meets the threshold of procedure established by law. There are two crucial considerations that are relevant in the present case. Firstly, restrictions placed on personal liberty in the course of administering impugned techniques are not limited to physical confinement and extraction of bodily substances. All the three techniques in question also involve testimonial responses. Secondly, most of the cases cited in this regard were decided in accordance with the threshold of procedure established by law for restraining personal liberty. However, in this case broader standard of reasonableness has to be used to evaluate validity of techniques in question. This wider inquiry calls for deciding whether they are compatible with various judicially recognised dimensions of personal liberty such as the right to privacy, right against cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment and the right to fair trial. (Para 203). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

Rochin v. California, 96 L Ed 183: 342 US 165 (1951); Breithaupt v. Abram, 1 L Ed 2d 448: 352 US 432 (1956), relied on

State of Maharashtra v. Sheshappa Dudhappa Tambade, AIR 1964 Bom 253; Jamshed v. State of U.P., 1976 Cri LJ 1680 (All); Ananth Kumar Naik v. State of A.P., 1977 Cri LJ 1797 (AP); Anil Anantrao Lokhande v. State of Maharashtra, 1981 Cri LJ 125 (Bom), approved

Brown v. Mississippi, 80 L Ed 682: 297 US 278 (1935), referred to

[227] — S. 53 Expln. (a) — Compulsory medical examination — Use of reasonable force — Permissibility

Medical examination of an arrested person can be directed during the course of an investigation either at the instance of the investigating officer or arrested person himself. It is also within the powers of a court to direct such a medical examination on its own. Medical examination can also be directed in respect of a person who has been released from custody on bail as well as a person who has been granted anticipatory bail. Section 53 which contemplates use of "force as is reasonably necessary" for conducting a medical examination implies that once a court has directed medical examination of a particular person it is within the powers of investigators and examiners to resort to a reasonable degree of physical force for conducting the same. (Para 166). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

[228] — S. 53 Expln. (a) — Doctor-patient privilege — Exceptions — Use of medical knowledge in criminal investigation — Held, is permissible within certain limits — Testimonial acts such as results of psychiatric examination cannot however be used in evidence without subject's informed consent — U.N. Principles of Medical Ethics, 1982 — Principle 4

The Court does not have expertise to mould the specifics of professional ethics for medical profession. Furthermore, involvement of doctors in the course of investigation in criminal cases has long been recognised as an exception to physician-patient privilege. In the Indian context, statutory provisions for directing a medical examination are an example of the same. Fields such as forensic toxicology have become important in criminal justice systems all over the world and doctors are frequently called on to examine bodily substances such as samples of blood, hair, semen, saliva, sweat, sputum and fingernail clippings as well as marks, wounds and other physical characteristics. A reasonable limitation on the forensic uses of medical expertise is the fact that testimonial acts such as results of a psychiatric examination cannot be used as evidence without the subject's informed consent. (Para 178). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

[229] — S. 53 Expln. (a) — DNA profile and DNA sample — Difference between — Explained — Uses of DNA profile also indicated

DNA profiling technique has been expressly included among various forms of medical examination in amended Explanation to Section 53 CrPC. DNA profile is different from a DNA sample which can be obtained from bodily substances. A DNA profile is a record created on the basis of DNA samples made available to forensic experts. Creating and maintaining DNA profiles of offenders and suspects are useful practices since newly obtained DNA samples can be readily matched with existing profiles that are already in the possession of law-enforcement agencies. Matching of DNA samples is emerging as a vital tool for linking suspects to specific criminal acts. (Para 220). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

[230] — S. 53 Expln. (a) [as substituted by 2005 Amendment] — Tests which can be conducted on accused — Whether narcoanalysis, polygraph and BEAP tests covered by general expression "such other tests" occurring in Expln. (a) — Held, general expression, which comes after specific tests enumerated in Expln. (a), has to be interpreted by applying principle of ejusdem generis — Specific tests include examination of bodily substances and therefore general expression cannot be construed to include tests which reveal testimonial responses — Besides, Parliament while amending Expln. (a) in 2005 was presumed to be aware of latest techniques yet did not include narcoanalysis, polygraph and BEAP tests — These tests are therefore not covered by expression "such other tests"

The phrase "and such other tests" [which appears in the Explanation to Sections 53, 53-A and 54 CrPC] should be read so as to confine its meaning to include only those tests which involve the examination of physical evidence. Rule of ejusdem generis applies in this case. Explanation to Sections 53, 53-A and 54 CrPC does not enumerate certain other forms of medical examination that involve testimonial acts, such as psychiatric examination among others. This demonstrates that amendment to this provision was informed by a rational distinction between examination of physical substances and testimonial acts. (Para 169)

While it is most likely that Parliament was well aware of impugned techniques at the time of the 2005 Amendment to CrPC and deliberately chose not to enumerate them, the Court cannot arrive at a conclusive finding on this issue. While it is open to courts to examine legislative history of a statutory provision, it is not proper for the Court to try and conclusively ascertain the legislative intent. Such an inquiry is impractical since the Court does not have access to all the materials which would have been considered by Parliament. (Para 170)

There are some clear obstructions to the dynamic interpretation of amended Explanation to Sections 53, 53-A and 54 CrPC. Firstly, the general words in question i.e. "and such other tests" should ordinarily be read to include tests which are in the same genus as the other forms of medical examination that have been specified. Since all the explicit references are to examination of bodily substances, it cannot be readily construed that the said phrase includes the impugned tests because the latter seem to involve testimonial responses. Secondly, compulsory administration of the impugned techniques is not the only means for ensuring an expeditious investigation. Furthermore, there is also a safe presumption that Parliament was well aware of existence of impugned techniques but deliberately chose not to enumerate them. The impugned tests i.e. narcoanalysis technique, polygraph examination and BEAP test cannot be read into the provisions for "medical examination" under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. It is however to be noted that even though impugned techniques have not been expressly enumerated in CrPC there is no statutory prohibition against them either. It is a case of silence in the law. In circumstances where an individual consents to undergo these tests, there is no dilution of Article 20(3). (Paras 172 and 173). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

Thogorani v. State of Orissa, 2004 Cri LJ 4003 (Ori), approved

Bhondar v. Emperor, AIR 1931 Cal 601; Deomam Shamji Patel v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1959 Bom 284, referred to

Sharda v. Dharmpal, (2003) 4 SCC 493; Mahipal Maderna v. State of Rajasthan, 1971 Cri LJ 1405 (Raj); Jamshed v. State of U.P., 1976 Cri LJ 1680 (All), discussed

Royal College of Nursing of the United Kingdom v. Deptt. of Health and Social Security, 1981 AC 800: (1981) 2 WLR 279: (1981) 1 All ER 545 (HL); Senior Electric Inspector v. Laxminarayan Chopra, AIR 1962 SC 159; Sharda v. Dharmpal, (2003) 4 SCC 493, relied on

[231] — Ss. 53 and 54 — Application under Ss. 13(1)(iii), 12(1)(b) and 5(ii)(b), HMA, 1955 for divorce — Court's direction in such a case to the respondent to undergo medical examination, held, not violative of right to personal liberty under Art. 21 — Provisions in other Central Acts enabling subjecting the accused to medical or other tests noticed — Such power however, to be exercised only on applicant putting up a prima facie case — Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 — Ss. 185, 202, 203 and 204 — Identification of Prisoners Act, 1920 — S. 3 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 269 and 270 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Ss. 13(1)(iii), 12(1)(b) and 5(ii)(b)

The right to privacy has been developed by the Supreme Court over a period of time. With the expansive interpretation of the phrase "personal liberty", this right has been read into Article 21. (Paras 54 and 56)

But the right to privacy in terms of Article 21 of the Constitution is not an absolute right. If there were a conflict between fundamental rights of two parties, that right which advances public morality would prevail. (Paras 57 and 59)

Certain laws have been enacted by the Indian Parliament where the accused may be subjected to certain medical or other tests. By way of example, one may refer to Sections 185, 202, 203, 204 of the Motor Vehicles Act, Sections 53 and 54 CrPC and Section 3 of the Identification of Prisoners Act, 1920. Reference in this connection may also be made to Sections 269 and 270 IPC. Constitutionality of these laws, if challenge is thrown, may be upheld. (Para 62)

In all such matrimonial cases where divorce is sought, say on the ground of impotency, schizophrenia etc. normally without medical examination, it would be difficult to arrive at a conclusion as to whether the allegation is correct or not. In order to substantiate such allegation, the petitioner would always insist on medical examination. If the respondent avoids such medical examination on the ground that it violates his/her right to privacy or for that matter right to personal liberty as enshrined under Article 21, then it may in most of such cases become impossible to arrive at a conclusion. It may render the very grounds on which divorce is permissible nugatory. Therefore, when there is no right to privacy specifically conferred by Article 21 and with the extensive interpretation of the phrase "personal liberty" this right has been read into Article 21, it cannot be treated as an absolute right. What is emphasized is that some limitations on this right have to be imposed and particularly where two competing interests clash. In matters of the said nature where the legislature has conferred a right upon his spouse to seek divorce on such grounds, it would be the right of that spouse which comes in conflict with the so-called right to privacy of the respondent. Thus the court has to reconcile these competing interests by balancing the interests involved. (Para 76)

If for arriving at the satisfaction of the court and to protect the right of a party to the lis who may otherwise be found to be incapable of protecting his own interest, the court passes an appropriate order, the question of such action being violative of Article 21 would not arise. The court having regard to Article 21 must also see to it that the right of a person to defend himself must be adequately protected. (Para 77)

However, a court shall not order a roving inquiry. It must have sufficient materials before it to enable it to exercise its discretion. Exercise of such discretion would be subject to the supervisory jurisdiction of the High Court in terms of Section 115 CPC and/or Article 227. Abuse of the discretionary power at the hands of a court is not expected. The court must arrive at a finding that the applicant has established a strong prima facie case before passing such an order. (Para 78)

If despite an order passed by the court, a person refuses to submit himself to such medical examination, a strong case for drawing an adverse inference would be made out. Section 114 of the Evidence Act also enables a court to draw an adverse inference if the party does not produce the relevant evidences in his power and possession. (Para 79)

So viewed, the implicit power of a court to direct medical examination of a party to a matrimonial litigation in a case of this nature cannot be held to be violative of one's right of privacy. (Para 80)

To sum up, our conclusions are:

1. A matrimonial court has the power to order a person to undergo medical test.

2. Passing of such an order by the court would not be in violation of the right to personal liberty under Article 21.

3. However, the court should exercise such a power if the applicant has a strong prima facie case and there is sufficient material before the court. If despite the order of the court, the respondent refuses to submit himself to medical examination, the court will be entitled to draw an adverse inference against him. (Para 81). Sharda v. Dharmpal, (2003) 4 SCC 493: AIR 2003 SC 3450: (2003) 2 KLT 243.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.N. Khare, C.J. and S.B. Sinha and Dr. AR. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-3-2003]

Gobind v. State of M.P., (1975) 2 SCC 148: 1975 SCC (Cri) 468; 'X' v. Hospital 'Z', (1998) 8 SCC 296; 'X' v. Hospital 'Z', (2003) 1 SCC 500; R (on the application of S) v. Chief Constable of South Yorkshire, (2003) 1 All ER 148 (CA); Armando Schmerber v. State of California, 384 US 757: 16 L Ed 2d 908 (1966); Paul H. Breithaupt v. Morris Abram, 352 US 432: 1 L Ed 2d 448 (1957); State of Bombay v. Kathi Kalu Oghad, AIR 1961 SC 1808: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 856; State (Delhi Admn.) v. Gulzari Lal Tandon, (1979) 3 SCC 316: 1979 SCC (Cri) 526; Matthew R., Re, 113 Mo App 701, 715, 688 A 2d 955, 961; Zuniga v. Pierce, 714 F 2d 632 (1983); Laznovsky v. Laznovsky, 74.5 A 2d 1054 (Md Ct App 2000), relied on

M. Vijaya v. Chairman and Managing Director, Singareni Collieries Co. Ltd., AIR 2001 AP 502 (FB), impliedly approved

Charles Joseph Kastigar v. United States, 32 L Ed 2d 212: 406 US 441 (1972), considered

[232] — Ss. 53-A and 53 — Blood samples — Loss of blood during period when blood was taken from accused's body and handed over to CCMB, Hyderabad — Whether loss created doubt about genuineness of blood samples — On facts held, loss was due to leakage from vials wherein blood was stored and therefore loss was satisfactorily explained — 20 ml blood taken from appellant's body for DNA profiling and transferred into four vials, each containing 5 ml — Vials were also sealed and signed by hospital doctor under whose supervision blood samples were taken — However, by the time four vials were received in CCMB, Hyderabad, only 3 ml found in each vial (total 12 ml) and therefore there was loss of 8 ml blood — Before handing over vials to CCMB, blood was stored in a refrigerator in government hospital and therefore there was no possibility of evaporation of blood — Argument raised on behalf of appellant that blood samples were tampered with — Expert who conducted DNA profiling in CCMB deposing that some leakage was found in vials and traces of blood appeared on the material with which vials were sealed — Held, loss of blood satisfactorily explained — Tests conducted on blood samples could not therefore be doubted on this count

PW Dr. N.S. Kalra who was the Head of the Biochemistry Department of Ram Manohar Lohia Hospital at the relevant time deposed that by letter Ext. 34/A a request had been made to the hospital to take blood samples of the appellant in two vials totalling 20 ml. Ms Godawari, a Laboratory Assistant, was accordingly directed to take the blood samples in two 10 ml syringes whereafter the blood was transferred to 4 vials each containing 5 ml which were duly sealed and tape applied over them which was signed by Dr. Kalra, Dr. S.K. Gupta and DSP Ohri and a memo, Ext. PW-34/B to that effect was prepared. He further deposed that the said vials had been kept in a refrigerator under his supervision and were taken by CBI officers on 31-1-1996 from him and that while the vials remained in his custody, they were not tampered with in any manner. He also testified that whenever blood was kept in a refrigerator, as in the present case, there was little possibility of evaporation if the rubber cork was air tight and in cross-examination he deposed that the watery constituent of blood would not evaporate in the cool atmosphere of a refrigerator. (Para 60)

It has been argued on behalf of accused that though CBI had requested for two samples of 10 ml each yet the 20 ml blood had been divided into four vials, and that when the samples had been opened in the laboratory at Hyderabad, only 12 ml blood in all had been recovered from the four vials. No suspicion can be raised with regard to the sanctity of the samples. (Para 61)

It has come in the evidence of Dr. Lalji Singh from CCMB, Hyderabad that 12 ml of blood said to be that of the appellant in four sterile vials containing about 3 ml each had been received through Inspector Ranbir Shekhawat along with other items. He further explained in cross-examination that if the blood samples were kept in a refrigerator and handed over to the Inspector on 31st January and received in the laboratory the next day, it was not likely that 2 ml out of each of the four vials would evaporate although some blood could have evaporated. He further stated that there appeared to be some leakage in the vials as traces of blood appeared to be in the material with which the vials had been sealed although this fact did not find mention in his report. The blood samples were in the custody of the hospital till they were received by Inspector Shekhawat for the first time on 31-1-1996 and he had left for Hyderabad the same day and handed over the samples and other items to the laboratory on 1-2-1996. (Para 62)

There is no reason to accept the very broad and defamatory statement of the trial court that Dr. N.S. Kalra was a convenient witness for the prosecution as there is no basis for this finding. On the other hand, there is ample evidence to suggest that the blood samples had been kept in the hospital in a proper way and handed over to Inspector Shekhawat who had taken them to CCMB, Hyderabad and that the explanation tendered by Dr. Lalji Singh and Dr. G.V. Rao as to why the quantity of blood may have been reduced, merits acceptance. The High Court was, therefore, justified in holding that the trial court's conclusions on the question of the retention and dispatch of the swabs and slides and the clothes of the deceased and the blood samples were faulty, and based on a perverse assessment of the evidence. (Para 64). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

[233] — Ss. 53-A and 53 — DNA test — Expert opinion on DNA profiling — Held, court cannot substitute its own opinion for that of an expert, especially in case of complex subject like DNA profiling — Further held, opinion of two experts from Centre for Cellular & Molecular Biology (CCMB), Hyderabad could not be rejected by trial court by relying on text books, particularly when questions raised by trial court were not put to experts during their deposition — DNA report must be accepted as scientifically accurate and an exact science — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 375, 376 and 302 — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 45 and 46

The court cannot substitute its own opinion for that of an expert, more particularly in a science such as DNA profiling which is a recent development. Dr. Lalji Singh in his examination-in-chief deposed that he had been involved with the DNA technology ever since the year 1974 and he had returned to India from the UK in 1987 and joined CCMB, Hyderabad and had developed indigenous methods and techniques for DNA fingerprinting which were now being used in this country. The expertise and experience of Dr. Lalji Singh in his field has been recognised by the Supreme Court in Kamalanantha case, (2005) 5 SCC 194. CW 1 Dr. G.V. Rao was a scientist of equal repute and he had in fact conducted the tests under the supervision of Dr. Lalji Singh. It was not even disputed before the Supreme Court during the course of arguments that these two scientists were persons of eminence and that the laboratory in question was also held in the highest esteem in India. (Paras 65 and 66)

The statements of Dr. Lalji Singh and Dr. G.V. Rao reveal that the samples had been tested as per the procedure developed by the laboratory, that the samples were sufficient for the purposes of comparison and that there was no possibility of the samples having been contaminated or tampered with. The two scientists gave very comprehensive statements supported by documents that DNA of the semen stains on the swabs and slides and the underwear of the deceased and the blood samples of the appellant was from a single source and that source was the appellant. (Para 67)

Not a single question was put to PW Dr. Lalji Singh as to the accuracy of the methodology or the procedure followed for DNA profiling. The trial court has referred to a large number of textbooks and has given adverse findings on the accuracy of the tests carried out in the present case. These conclusions cannot be accepted as the court has substituted its own opinion ignoring the complexity of the issue on a highly technical subject, more particularly as the questions raised by the trial court had not been put to the expert witnesses. It would be a dangerous doctrine to lay down that the report of an expert witness could be brushed aside by making reference to some text on that subject without such text being put to the expert. The court cannot usurp the function of an expert. (Para 68)

The trial court was not justified in rejecting the DNA report, as nothing adverse could be pointed out against the two experts who had submitted it. The DNA report must be accepted as scientifically accurate and an exact science. In arriving at its conclusions, the trial court was also influenced by the fact that the semen swabs and slides and the blood samples of the appellant had not been kept in proper custody and had been tampered with. The trial court was in error on this score. (Para 71). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121, referred to

Bhagwan Das v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1957 SC 589: 1957 Cri LJ 889; Gambhir v. State of Maharashtra, (1982) 2 SCC 351: 1982 SCC (Cri) 431; Kamti Devi v. Poshi Ram, (2001) 5 SCC 311: 2001 SCC (Cri) 892, relied on

— S. 54 See also Ss. 53 and 54

[234] — S. 54 — Right of arrested person to inform the court about torture or assault (Para 27). Shakila Abdul Gafar Khan v. Vasant Raghunath Dhoble, (2003) 7 SCC 749: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1918: AIR 2003 SC 4567.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-2003]

— S. 56 See Ss. 57 and 56

See also Ss. 167, 56 and 57

[235] — Ss. 56, 57, 167 — MLA deliberately prevented from attending session of Legislative Assembly by arresting and illegally detaining him in police custody — Held, Arts. 21 and 22(2) violated — Mala fide conduct of police officers and casual and irresponsible attitude of Magistrate and Sub-Judge or their collusion with police in passing orders of police remand against the MLA strongly condemned — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 22(2). Bhim Singh v. State of J&K, (1985) 4 SCC 677: 1986 SCC (Cri) 47: AIR 1986 SC 494.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and V. Khalid, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-1985]

[236] — Ss. 56 and 173 — Extension of powers and jurisdiction of members of Delhi Special Police Establishment — Recording reasons for, not necessary — State Government's notification granting consent under S. 6 and the Central Govt.'s notification extending the powers and jurisdiction of the Delhi Special Police Establishment to the whole of that State in connection with the investigation of a particular case, held, need not mention reasons therefor — Such reasons can be shown independently — On facts held, investigation had been entrusted to the CBI as the investigation by the local police was not satisfactory — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 457, 436, 427 and 201 — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946) — Ss. 5 and 6

The decision to investigate or the decision on the agency which should investigate, does not attract principles of natural justice. The accused cannot have a say in who should investigate the offences he is charged with. Nor is there any provision in law under which, while granting consent or extending the powers and jurisdiction of the Delhi Special Police Establishment to the specified State and to any specified case any reasons are required to be recorded on the face of the notification. The reasons can be shown independently. If investigation by the local police is not satisfactory, a further investigation is not precluded. In the present case the material on record shows that the investigation by the local police was not satisfactory. In fact the local police had filed a final report before the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Dhanbad. The report, however, was pending and had not been accepted when the Central Government with the consent of the State Government issued the impugned notification extending the powers and jurisdiction of the members of the Delhi Special Police Establishment to the whole of the State of Bihar for investigation of offences under Sections 457, 436, 427/120-B and 201 IPC and Section 4 of the Prevention of Damage to Public Property Act, 1984 registered at Dhanbad Police Station, Dhansar, Bihar in their case No. 159 dated 9-3-1993 and any other offences, attempts, abetment and conspiracy in relation to or in connection with the said offence committed in the course of the same transactions or arising out of the same fact or facts in relation to the said case. As a result, the CBI be directed to further investigate the offences registered under the said FIR with the consent of the State Government and in accordance with law. Under Section 173(8) of the CrPC 1973 also, there is an analogous provision for further investigation in respect of an offence after a report under sub-section (2) has been forwarded to the Magistrate. CBI v. Rajesh Gandhi, (1996) 11 SCC 253: 1997 SCC (Cri) 88: AIR 1997 SC 93.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and Sujata V. Manohar, J. [Date of decision: 7-10-1996]

(1996) 2 BLJ 54, reversed

— S. 57 See also S. 61, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 968 in Vol. 2

— S. 57 See Ss. 50, 57 and 167

See also Ss. 56, 57, 167

See also Ss. 167, 56 and 57

See also Ss. 167(1), 57 and 167(2)

See also Ss. 167(2), 57, 437 and 439

See also Ss. 167(2) proviso, 437(5), 439(2), 57 and 173

See also Ss. 167(2), proviso (a)(i)&(ii), 57 and 309

See also Ss. 433-A & 57

[237] — S. 57 — Requirement to produce arrested person before Judicial Magistrate within 24 hours of the arrest must be scrupulously observed — Constitution of India — Art. 21

The provision inhibiting detention without remand is a very healthy provision which enables the magistrates to keep check over the police investigation and it is necessary that the magistrates should try to enforce this requirement and where it is found to be disobeyed, come down heavily upon the police. Khatri (II) v. State of Bihar, (1981) 1 SCC 627: 1981 SCC (Cri) 228: AIR 1981 SC 928 (Order dt.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-1980]

[238] — Ss. 57 and 56 — Wrongful confinement by police personnel — One V, who was arrested on direction of A-1 (officer-in-charge of police station) on 19-10-1988 at 9.30 a.m., died by hanging himself in police station on 20-10-1988 at about 5.30 p.m. — V not produced before nearest Magistrate within 24 hours of his arrest, as required by CrPC — Held, the accused police personnel (including A-1) were guilty of offence under S. 348 IPC — Contention that duty to produce the accused before the nearest Magistrate was of IO and not of A-1, rejected — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 348 (Para 10). Sanganagouda A. Veeranagouda v. State of Karnataka, (2005) 12 SCC 468.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2005]

[239] — Ss. 57 and 165 — Arrest and seizure — Whether accused had been released from police custody — Burden of proof on prosecution in case of denial by accused — Independent witnesses should be produced

Per Oza, J.

In all matters where the police want that the story should be believed they always get an independent witness of the locality so that the evidence may lend support to what is alleged by the police officers. More so, as in this case when the prosecution story regarding release of the accused after his earlier arrest and his abscondence were not proved. In such a controversial situation the presence of an independent witness from the public, if not of the locality, would have lent some support to the case of the prosecution. There was no evidence as to how he appeared at the scene of arrest viz. a bus-stand. If the police officers had gone with prior information to arrest the absconding accused who was involved in such a crime, they could have taken an independent witness with them. The police also did not think it necessary to have an independent witness even for the seizure memo, when particularly some important piece of evidence was recovered from his possession. The plea that nobody was available or none was prepared to be a witness in this matter is unsustainable as it is unthinkable at a public place and that too at the bus-stand. It is very difficult to believe that no citizen in this Capital came forward to be a witness for seizure memo. The arrest of the accused in the circumstances appears to be only a show and not an arrest in actuality.

If the release of this accused after his arrest is not established and his abscondence is not proved, then the story of his rearrest with the recovery of the articles loses all its significance.

Per Shetty, J.

Courts do not interfere with the discretion of the police in matters of arrest, search and release of persons suspected in criminal cases. But the courts do insist that it should be done according to law. If the prosecution say that the accused was released from custody and the accused denies it, it will be for the prosecution to place material on record in support of the version. In the present case there was no record indicating release of the accused (Balbir Singh) from police custody (in Yamuna Velodrome). The explanation that the place of custody being not a police station, registers were not maintained to account for the incoming and outgoing suspects, was hardly an explanation where life and death questions are involved.

[Ed.: Ray, J. concurred with the above views of Oza, J. and Shetty, J.]. Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1988) 3 SCC 609: 1988 SCC (Cri) 711: AIR 1988 SC 1883.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.L. Oza[1], B.C. Ray[2] and K. Jagannatha Shetty[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1988]

— Ch. VI See Chs. XII (Ss. 154 to 176), IV-A (S. 36), V to VII (Ss. 41 to 105)

[240] — S. 61 — Documents to be supplied — Allegation that summons issued under S. 108(1) of Customs Act not supplied to the detenu despite demand — In view of positive case of the State that no summons had been issued and the detenu had only been orally directed to attend the office of the authorities concerned, held, no summons was in existence and therefore, detenu suffered no prejudice — COFEPOSA Act, 1974 — S. 3(1). Poonam Lata v. M.L. Wadhawan, (1987) 4 SCC 48: 1987 SCC (Cri) 685: AIR 1987 SC 2098: 1987 Cri LJ 1924: (1987) 14 ECC 17.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-1987]

[241] — S. 61 — Applicable to issuance of summons under S. 108(1) of Customs Act. Poonam Lata v. M.L. Wadhawan, (1987) 4 SCC 48: 1987 SCC (Cri) 685: AIR 1987 SC 2098: 1987 Cri LJ 1924: (1987) 14 ECC 17.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-1987]

— S. 67 See Ss. 227, 228, 67 and 407

— S. 70 See also S. 75, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 968 in Vol. 2

— S. 70 See Ss. 204, 70, 72, 73, 78 and 79
See also Ss. 204, 201-203 and 70
See also Ss. 438, 70 and 82

[242] — S. 70 — Warrant of detention, held, must specify the age of the detenu — Otherwise, the warrant can be refused to be honoured by the jail authorities — Particularly in Delhi, decision should be taken by the jail authorities on the basis of the age so indicated, to place the detenu in Tihar Jail or juvenile jail — Juvenile Justice Act, 1986 — Ss. 2(e), 2(h) and 10 — Children Act, 1960 — Ss. 2(e), 2(j) and 10 — Prisoners Act, 1900 — Ss. 15 and 16. Sanjay Suri v. Delhi Admn., 1988 Supp SCC 160: 1988 SCC (Cri) 248: AIR 1988 SC 414: 1988 Cri LJ 705.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-1987]

[243] — Ss. 70 and 201 to 204 — Prosecution of medical practitioners — Reiterated, indiscriminate prosecution of medical professionals for criminal medical negligence is counterproductive and does no service or good to society — Penal Code, 1860, S. 304-A — Medical negligence (Para 49). Ins. Malhotra v. Dr. A. Kriplani, (2009) 4 SCC 705.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: L.S. Panta and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-2009]

Jacob Mathew v. State of Punjab, (2005) 6 SCC 1: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1369, followed

— S. 72 See Ss. 204, 70, 72, 73, 78 and 79

— S. 73 See also S. 78, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 969 in Vol. 2

— S. 73 See also Ss. 204, 70, 72, 73, 78 and 79

[244] — Ss. 73, 167, 204, 82, 83 and 155 — Magistrate has power to issue a warrant under S. 73 during investigation also — Such power can be exercised by him for appearance of the accused before the court only and not before the police in aid of investigation — On such production the court can authorise his detention in police custody only after exercise of his judicial discretion and not on the mere asking of the police — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — Ss. 8(3) and 20

Section 73 is of general application. In course of the investigation a Court can issue a warrant in exercise of power thereunder to apprehend, inter alia, a person who is accused of a non-bailable offence and is evading arrest. A Magistrate plays, not infrequently, a role during investigation, in that, on the prayer of the Investigating Agency he holds a test identification parade, records the confession of an accused or the statement of a witness, or takes or witnesses the taking of specimen handwritings etc. However, in performing such or similar functions the Magistrate does not exercise judicial discretion like while dealing with an accused of a non-bailable offence who is produced before him pursuant to a warrant of arrest issued under Section 73. On such production, the Court may either release him on bail under Section 439 or authorise his detention in custody (either police or judicial) under Section 167 of the Code. Whether the Magistrate, on being moved by the Investigating Agency, will entertain its prayer for police custody will be at his sole discretion which has to be judicially exercised in accordance with Section 167(3) of the Code. Since warrant is and can be issued for appearance before the Court only and not before the police and since authorisation for detention in police custody is neither to be given as a matter of course nor on the mere asking of the police, but only after exercise of judicial discretion based on materials placed before him, it cannot be said that warrant of arrest under Section 73 of the Code could be issued by the courts solely for the production of the accused before the police in aid of investigation. (Para 24). State v. Dawood Ibrahim Kaskar, (2000) 10 SCC 438: 1997 SCC (Cri) 636: AIR 1997 SC 2494.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee, G.T. Nanavati and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-1997]

Mohd. Ahmed Yasin Mansuri v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cri LJ 1854 (Bom), overruled

[245] — Ss. 76, 57, 79 and 80 — Transit warrant — Timely judicial custody — Valid duration of police custody — Held, IO is bound to keep the custody till the end of the period specified in the transit warrant (Para 56). Mohd. Amin v. CBI, (2008) 15 SCC 49: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 693: (2009) 73 AIC 139 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-11-2008]

— S. 78 See Ss. 204, 70, 72, 73, 78 and 79

— S. 79 See Ss. 204, 70, 72, 73, 78 and 79

— S. 81 See Ss. 436, 2, 81 and Sch. I

See also Ss. 482, 436 and 81

— S. 82 See also S. 87, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 969 in Vol. 2

— S. 82 See Ss. 73, 167, 204, 82, 83 and 155

See also Ss. 438, 70 and 82

[246] — Ss. 82, 83 and 85 — Nature and scope — Held, provisions contained in S. 82 were enacted to secure the presence of the accused — Once the said purpose is achieved, the attachment of property shall be withdrawn — Even the property which was attached should be restored — Provisions of CrPC do not warrant sale of the property despite the fact that the absconding accused had surrendered and obtained bail — Once he surrenders before the court and the standing warrants are cancelled, he is no longer an absconder — Purpose of attaching the property comes to an end — It is to be released subject to the provisions of CrPC — Securing the attendance of an absconding accused is a matter between the State and the accused — Complainant should not ordinarily derive any benefit therefrom — If the property is to be sold it vests with the State subject to any order passed under S. 85 — It cannot be a subject-matter of execution of a decree, far less for executing the decree of a third party, who has no right, title or interest thereon — Therefore, order pertaining auction-sale of properties of Appellant 1 was wrong — CPC, 1908, Or. 21 Rr. 64 and 66 (Paras 32 and 33). Vimlaben Ajitbhai Patel v. Vatslaben Ashokbhai Patel, (2008) 4 SCC 649: AIR 2008 SC 2675.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2008]

[247] — S. 82 — Proclamation under — Effective duration/valid period — Held, continues till the offender is arrested — Once the offender is arrested, the proclamation ceases to operate

Once a person is arrested and/or is otherwise capable of being brought to court, a proclamation declaring accused as an absconder under Section 82 CrPC ceases to have any effect. It is not a law that once a proclaimed offender shall all along be treated to be so. If he had a right to take part in the trial, the trial court was duty-bound to provide for the same. In any event, in the present case the Designated Judge did not rely on the proclamation issued under Section 82 in February 1993. (Para 43). Jayendra Vishnu Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 7 SCC 104.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-5-2009]

[248] — S. 82 — Accused called at police station several times after the incident and he always remaining available to the police — No evidence adduced by prosecution to hold that soon after the date of the offence the accused was found missing from his residence or the place of his employment and was not available, though searched, at the place or places where normally he ought to have been — Held, finding that the accused was absconding was unwarranted — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 8 and 114 Ill. (i) (Para 23). Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2001]

[249] — Ss. 82 and 83 — Abscondence as a circumstance — Absconding of accused, held, leads to no decisive implication, nevertheless it has utility to form a link to concatenate the full chain — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 8. Manish Dixit v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 1 SCC 596: 2001 SCC (Cri) 235: AIR 2001 SC 93: 2001 Cri LJ 133.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2000]

[250] — Ss. 82 and 83 — Relevance of abscondence — Murder of a popular and powerful trade union leader — Strong allegations that the industrialists in the area had been instrumental in causing his death — Under such circumstances, if any of the accused industrialists had absconded from the place of their business at the relevant time it could not be said to be a factor to prove their guilt — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 8 (Para 17). State of M.P. v. Paltan Mallah, (2005) 3 SCC 169: 2005 SCC (Cri) 674: AIR 2005 SC 733: 2005 Cri LJ 918.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-2005]

— S. 83 See Ss. 73, 167, 204, 82, 83 and 155

See also Ss. 82 and 83

See also Ss. 82, 83 and 85

[251] — S. 83 — Attachment of property — Effect, if any, on right as a tenant — Held, right as a tenant could not be affected by reason of any order of attachment — Order of attachment of a property has nothing to do with the right of tenancy — Terms and conditions of tenancy, being governed by statute, the tenant cannot be evicted except in accordance with law — CPC, 1908, Or. 21 R. 54 — Transfer of Property Act, 1882 — Ss. 105 and 111

The Metropolitan Magistrate had, in his order wrongly asked the District Magistrate to put the said properties on auction-sale stating them to be belonging to the appellants and their son. The Mamlatdar appears to have exceeded his jurisdiction in trying to evict the 1st respondent. His right as a tenant could not have been affected by reason of any order of attachment. An order of attachment of a property has nothing to do with the right of tenancy. The terms and conditions of tenancy, being governed by statute, the tenant cannot be evicted except in accordance with law. It is a matter of grave concern that an independent right was also sought to be interfered with at the instance of S. (Para 33). Vimlaben Ajitbhai Patel v. Vatslaben Ashokbhai Patel, (2008) 4 SCC 649: AIR 2008 SC 2675.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2008]

[252] — S. 84 — Applicability — Persons who may bring claim for attachment under and purpose for which claim may be brought — Held, on facts, right to object in terms of S. 84 could not have been invoked by S, wife, as she had no independent claim over the property — Said provision also could not have been invoked for the purpose of execution of a decree (Para 34). Vimlaben Ajitbhai Patel v. Vatslaben Ashokbhai Patel, (2008) 4 SCC 649: AIR 2008 SC 2675.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2008]

— S. 85 See Ss. 82, 83 and 85

— S. 87 See Ss. 204 and 87

— Ch. VII (Ss. 91 to 105) See S. 4 and Chapters VII, XIII & XXXIV

See also Chs. XII (Ss. 154 to 176), IV-A (S. 36), V to VII (Ss. 41 to 105)

— S. 91 See also S. 94, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 969 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 91 See Ss. 161, 162, 91, 172 and 207

See also Ss. 227 & 228, 239 & 240, 91 and 482

See also Ss. 397, 401, 91, 311 and 200

See also Ss. 397(2), 401, 91 and 311

[253] — S. 91 — Production of document or other thing — Court's power to issue summons for — Scope — Held, a police officer may move the court for summoning and production of a document at any of the stages mentioned in the section but the accused can seek such order only at the stage of defence — No right conferred on the accused to produce document in his possession to prove his defence at the stage of framing of charge — Further held, necessity and desirability of the document is to be examined considering the stage when such a prayer is made and the party who makes it, whether police or accused

Section 91 CrPC does not confer any right on the accused to produce document in his possession to prove his defence. Section 91 presupposes that when the document is not produced process may be initiated to compel production thereof. Any document or other thing envisaged under the aforesaid provision can be ordered to be produced on finding that the same is "necessary or desirable for the purpose of investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceedings under the Code". The first and foremost requirement of the section is about the document being necessary or desirable. The necessity or desirability would have to be seen with reference to the stage when a prayer is made for the production. If any document is necessary or desirable for the defence of the accused, the question of invoking Section 91 at the initial stage of framing of a charge would not arise since defence of the accused is not relevant at that stage. When the section refers to investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceedings, it is to be borne in mind that under the section a police officer may move the court for summoning and production of a document as may be necessary at any of the stages mentioned in the section. Insofar as the accused is concerned, his entitlement to seek order under Section 91 would ordinarily not come till the stage of defence. When the section talks of the document being necessary and desirable, it is implicit that necessity and desirability is to be examined considering the stage when such a prayer for summoning and production is made and the party who makes it, whether police or accused. If under Section 227, what is necessary and relevant is only the record produced in terms of Section 173 CrPC, the accused cannot at that stage invoke Section 91 to seek production of any document to show his innocence. (Para 25). State of Orissa v. Debendra Nath Padhi, (2005) 1 SCC 568: 2005 SCC (Cri) 415: AIR 2005 SC 359: (2005) 1 KLT 80: (2005) 99 Cut LT 348.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal, D.M. Dharmadhikari and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-2004]

Om Parkash Sharma v. CBI, (2000) 5 SCC 679: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1014, relied on

[254] — S. 91 — Production of documents "necessary or desirable" — Court's power to issue summons for — Scope — When can it be exercised — Depends upon facts of each case — Court has a wide discretion in the matter — It is only in case where the discretion is exercised neither judiciously nor judicially and there is gross or improper failure to exercise the discretion which is demonstrably unreasonable, that the superior court would interfere — On facts held, Supreme Court's interference with rejection of accused's application under S. 91 for summoning certain documents for CBI not called for

The appellant made an application under Section 91 CrPC for summoning and production of certain documents which were stated to be required to show that the appellant had not shown any favour to persons commonly known as Jain brothers or to any person for that matter in the course of discharge of his duties while working as DIG, CBI, and that the present action against the appellant was vitiated on account of mala fides on the part of CBI, who was alleged to bear animus against the appellant. The Special Judge held that none of the documents sought to be summoned would help to show that the case of the prosecution was improbable or unworthy of even a trial and that summoning them at that stage of the proceedings was meant by the appellant to delay the proceedings initiated by CBI. The High Court held that the exercise of discretion by the trial court in disallowing the claim was neither unjust nor unreasonable nor improper and that the order was neither illegal nor vitiated by any infirmity, so as to call for interference, in exercise of the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court. Before the Supreme Court the appellant reiterated his stand taken in courts below and invited the Court's decision in Satish Mehra v. Delhi Admn., (1996) 9 SCC 766 laying emphasis on the fact that the very learned Judge in the High Court had taken a different view in such matters, in the decision reported in Ashok Kaushik v. State, (1999) 49 DRJ 202. The respondents not only contended that the decisions relied upon for the appellants would not justify the claim of the appellant in this case, at this stage, but also invited, extensively the Supreme Court's attention to the exercise undertaken by the courts below to find out the relevance, desirability and necessity of those documents as well as the need for issuing any such directions as claimed at that stage and that consequently there was no justification whatsoever, to interfere at the present stage of the proceedings. Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The powers conferred under Section 91 are enabling in nature aimed at arming the court or any officer in charge of a police station concerned to enforce and to ensure the production of any document or other things "necessary or desirable" for the purposes of any investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding under the Code, by issuing a summons or a written order to those in possession of such material. The language of Section 91 would, no doubt, indicate the width of the powers to be unlimited but the inbuilt limitation inherent therein takes its colour and shape from the stage or point of time of its exercise, commensurately with the nature of proceedings as also the compulsions of necessity and desirability, to fulfil the task or achieve the object. The question, at the present stage of the proceedings before the trial court would be to address itself to find whether there is sufficient ground for proceeding to the next stage against the accused. If the accused could produce any reliable material even at that stage which might totally affect even the very sustainability of the case, a refusal to even look into the materials so produced may result in injustice, apart from averting an exercise in futility at the expense of valuable judicial/public time. It is trite law that the standard of proof normally adhered to at the final stage is not to be insisted upon at the stage where the consideration is to be confined to find out a prima facie case and decide whether it is necessary to proceed to the next stage of framing the charges and making the accused to stand trial for the same. The Supreme Court has already cautioned against undertaking a roving inquiry into the pros and cons of the case by weighing the evidence or collecting materials, as if during the course or after trial. Ultimately, this would always depend upon the facts of each case and it would be difficult to lay down a rule of universal application and for all times. The fact that in one case the court thought fit to exercise such powers is no compelling circumstance to do so in all and every case before it, as a matter of course and for the mere asking. The court concerned must be allowed a large latitude in the matter of exercise of discretion and unless in a given case the court was found to have conducted itself in so demonstrably an unreasonable manner unbecoming of a judicial authority, the court superior to that court cannot intervene very lightly or in a routine fashion to interpose or impose itself even at that stage. The reason being, at that stage, the question is one of mere proprieties involved in the exercise of judicial discretion by the court and not of any rights concretised in favour of the accused. (Para 6)

Therefore, it is to be only seen as to whether the trial court has judiciously and judicially exercised its discretion. The trial court as also the High Court, seem to have properly applied their minds by going into the nature of the documents sought to be summoned, their bearing and relevance for the nature of consideration to be made at that stage of the proceedings before the Special Judge as well as the necessity and desirability whereof. The consideration so made by the courts below in rejecting the claim of the appellant, could not be held to be either condemnable or constitute any gross or improper failure to exercise their jurisdiction and consequently, it does not call for any interference by the Supreme Court. (Para 7). Om Parkash Sharma v. CBI, (2000) 5 SCC 679: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1014: AIR 2000 SC 2335: 2000 Cri LJ 3478.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-2000]

Satish Mehra v. Delhi Admn., (1996) 9 SCC 766: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1104; Ashok Kaushik v. State, (1999) 49 DRJ 202, distinguished

Union of India v. Prafulla Kumar Samal, (1979) 3 SCC 4: 1979 SCC (Cri) 609, relied on

[Ed.: Held in State of Orissa v. Debendra Nath Padhi, (2005) 1 SCC 568 page 581, para 27 that: "But observations were made in para 6 to the effect that if the accused could produce any reliable material even at that stage which might totally affect even the very sustainability of the case, a refusal to look into the material so produced may result in injustice, apart from averting an exercise in futility at the expense of valuable judicial/public time, these observations are clearly obiter dicta and in any case of no consequence in view of conclusion reached by us hereinbefore. Further, the observations cannot be understood to mean that the accused has a right to produce any document at the stage of framing of charge having regard to the clear mandate of Sections 227 and 228 in Chapter 18 and Sections 239 and 240 in Chapter 19."]

[255] — S. 91 — Order for production of documents — Application for recall of its order, by High Court — Disposal of, only on the basis of statement of counsel when not justified — Appli- cation filed by prosecution under S. 91 CrPC for summons to produce FIR lodged by appellant — Application disposed of by order of SDJM — Order challenged before High Court — Matter closed by High Court observing that counsel for State and accused submitted before it that FIR already stood cancelled and that in any case, the documents were available in court which could be examined but counsel for State stated that State was no more interested in taking documents from court — Application for recall of the order of High Court filed on ground that there was no order cancelling FIR — High Court dismissed the application — Held, in absence of any order cancelling FIR, dismissal of the application on ground that FIR had been cancelled on the basis of statement of counsel cannot be maintained — Counsel for the State directed to place before High Court a copy of the order purporting to cancel FIR within four weeks, failing which High Court shall hear the matter afresh. Vasudev v. Parvinder Kumar, (2008) 17 SCC 77.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2008]

[256] — Ss. 91, 165 and 166 — Right to privacy of the person — Right to freedom from unreasonable search and seizure — Scope — Confidentiality of bank documents, telephone calls and correspondence — Held, State cannot have unrestricted access to inspect and seize or make roving inquiries into all bank records relating to a person, without any reliable information before it prior to such inspection — Documents or copies of documents of the customer which are in the bank must continue to remain confidential vis-à-vis the person, even if they are no longer at the customer's house and have been voluntarily sent to a bank — Search, taking of notes or extracts or seizure of the said documents would amount to a breach of confidentiality and be violative of privacy rights of customers of the bank, unless there is some probable or reasonable cause or basis, to be recorded in writing, or materials before the authority making or authorising the search, taking of notes or extracts or seizure — However, cautioned that various provisions in the Income Tax Act, 1961 (S. 132, etc.) or CrPC (Ss. 91, 165 & 166) which authorised search and seizure were not ipso facto being invalidated herein; in any case said provisions had been extensively considered by the courts and had been held to be valid — Stamp Act, 1899 — S. 73 (as amended by A.P. Act 17 of 1986) — IT Act, 1961 — S. 132 — Constitution of India — Arts. 19(1)(a) & (d) and 21

Section 73 of the Stamp Act, 1899 as incorporated by Andhra Pradesh Act 17 of 1986, by amending the Central Act in its application to the State, was struck down by the High Court as ultra vires the provisions of the Stamp Act and Article 14 of the Constitution. The State, through the named officers, was in appeal thereagainst.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

A bare reading of Section 73 as substituted by A.P. Act 17 of 1986 indicates the infirmities with which the provision suffers. The provision empowers "any person" authorised in writing by the Collector to have access to documents in private custody or custody of a public officer without regard to the fact whether the documents are sought to be used before any authority competent to receive evidence or whether such document would ever be voluntarily produced or brought before a public officer during the performance of any of his specified functions in his capacity as such (contrary to the Scheme of the rest of the Stamp Act, 1899 even as applicable to the State of Andhra Pradesh). The power is capable of being exercised by such persons at all reasonable times and it is not preceded by any requirement of reasons being recorded by the Collector or the person authorised, for his belief necessitating search. The provision suffers from the vice of excessive delegation as there are no guidelines in the Act as to the persons who may be authorised. The State must clearly define the officers by designation or state that the power can be delegated to officers not below a particular rank in the official hierarchy, as may be designated by the State. The person authorised has been vested with authority to impound the document. It is only in case of documents in custody of any bank that an exception has been carved out for giving a 30 days' previous notice to the bank to make good the deficit stamp duty before seizing and impounding the document. Not only there is no valid reason — none pointed out either in the pleadings or at the hearing — for drawing the distinction between a bank and other public office or any person having custody of document, even in the case of a bank, the power to adjudicate upon the need for impounding the document has been vested in the person authorised. (Paras 16, 12, 54, 46, 58, 3 and 43)

It cannot be denied that there is an element of confidentiality between a bank and its customers in relation to the latter's banking transactions. However, in the case of a matter being part of public records, including court records, the right of privacy cannot be claimed. Our cheques are not merely negotiable instruments but yet the world can learn a vast amount about us by knowing how and with whom we have spent our money. Same is the position when we use the telephone or post a letter. The State cannot have unrestricted access to inspect and seize or make roving inquiries into all bank records, without any reliable information before it prior to such inspection. Once it is accepted that the right to privacy deals with persons, the documents or copies of documents of the customer which are in a bank, must continue to remain confidential vis-à-vis the person, even if they are no longer at the customer's house and have been voluntarily sent to a bank. Therefore, unless there is some probable or reasonable cause or basis, to be recorded in writing, or material before the Collector for reaching an opinion that the documents in the possession of the bank tend to secure any stamp duty or to prove or to lead to the discovery of any fraud or omission in relation to any duty, the search or the taking of notes or extracts cannot be valid. The above safeguards must necessarily be read into the provision relating to search, inspection and seizure so as to save it from any unconstitutionality. When public records in the Sub- Registrar's Office or a bank or for that matter any other public office are inspected for the purposes referred to in the impugned Section 73, the public officer may indeed have no objection to such inspection. But, as in the present case, in the context of a bank, which either holds the private documents of its customers or copies of such private documents, the disclosure of the contents of the documents by the bank would amount to a breach of confidentiality and would, therefore, be violative of privacy rights of its customers. (Paras 53, 54, 45, 46 and 48; and 18 to 40)

However, it is not being said that any law which is not on the lines of the US Right to Financial Privacy Act, 1978 (Pub L No. 95-630) is invalid. Indian laws such as Section 132, etc. of the Income Tax Act, 1961; or Sections 91, 165 and 166 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 as to search and seizure have been extensively considered by the courts in India and have been held to be valid. (Para 48). District Registrar and Collector v. Canara Bank, (2005) 1 SCC 496: AIR 2005 SC 186: (2005) 126 Comp Cas 356.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and Ashok Bhan, J. [Date of decision: 1-11-2004]

Kharak Singh v. State of U.P., (1964) 1 SCR 332: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 329; Gobind v. State of M.P., (1975) 2 SCC 148: 1975 SCC (Cri) 468; R. Rajagopal v. State of T.N., (1994) 6 SCC 632; People's Union for Civil Liberties v. Union of India, (1997) 1 SCC 301; 'X' v. Hospital 'Z', (1998) 8 SCC 296; People's Union for Civil Liberties v. Union of India, (2003) 4 SCC 399; Sharda v. Dharmpal, (2003) 4 SCC 493; Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, (1978) 1 SCC 248, relied on

Semayne's case, (1603) 5 Coke's Rep 91a: 77 ER 194 (KB); Entick v. Carrington, (1765) 19 Howells' State Trials 1029: 95 ER 807: 2 Wils KB 275; Boyd v. United States, 116 US 616: 29 L Ed 746 (1886); Olmstead v. United States, 277 US 438: 72 L Ed 944 (1928) (dissenting opinion of Brandeis, J.); Griswold v. State of Connecticut, 381 US 479: 14 L Ed 2d 510 (1965); Warden v. Heyden, 387 US 294 (1967); Katz v. United States, 389 US 347: 19 L Ed 2d 576 (1967); Terry v. Ohio, 392 US 1 (1968); Thornburgh v. American College of O&G, 476 US 747 (1986); Whalen v. Roe, 429 US 589: 51 L Ed 2d 64 (1977); United States v. Orito, 413 US 139 (1973); Stanley v. Georgia, 394 US 557: 22 L Ed 2d 542 (1969), discussed

United States v. Miller, 425 US 435 (1976), disapproved

[Ed.: See also Art. 19(1)(a), '(c)(2)(vii)8. Other constituents of Art. 19(1)(a) — Privacy, Right to', pp. 111 et seq., '(c)(2)(vii)9. Subjective and psychological content of Art. 19(1)(a)', p. 113, and Art. 21, '(c)(3) Privacy, Right to', pp. 635 et seq., and see also under Art. 21, '(d)(2) "Personal liberty" — Meaning and scope — Particular Instances and Statutes', pp. 763 et seq. in Vol. 6, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn.]

[257] — S. 91 — Request for samples (of handwriting, fingerprints, blood, saliva, semen, etc.) from suspect persons — Constitutionality of — Held, it does not bind the court to allow a police officer's request — Request based on a wrong premise can be rejected — Such a discretionary power of the court presupposes the requirement of recording the reasoning for allowing or refusing the request — In view of the decision in Kathi Kalu Oghad, AIR 1961 SC 1808, the contention that S. 27, POTA violated Art. 20(3), rejected — Hence, S. 27, POTA held, intra vires Arts. 14, 20(3) and 21 — Constitution of India — Arts. 21, 20(3) and 14 — Right to privacy — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — S. 27

In the instant petitions filed under Article 32, the petitioners challenged the constitutionality of various provisions of the Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 (for short "POTA"). They contended that:

* * *

Section 27 violated Articles 14, 20(3) and 21 inasmuch as it left no power with the court to decide whether the request of the police officer was reasonable, it did not require the court to record any reason for allowing the request, and it amounted to compelling a person to give evidence against himself,

* * *

Dismissing the petitions,

Held :

Section 27 does not fix a blanket responsibility upon the court to grant permission immediately upon the receipt of a request. If the request is based on a wrong premise, the court is free to refuse the request. This discretionary power granted to the court presupposes that the court will have to record its reasoning for allowing or refusing a request. In view of the decision in Kathi Kalu Oghad case, AIR 1961 SC 1808, the contention that Section 27 violated Article 20(3) is not sustainable. Moreover, Section 27 is only a step in aid for further investigation and the samples so obtained can never be considered as conclusive proof for conviction. Consequently, the constitutionality of Section 27 is upheld. (Paras 52 and 53). People's Union for Civil Liberties v. Union of India, (2004) 9 SCC 580: AIR 2004 SC 456.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2003]

State of Bombay v. Kathi Kalu Oghad, AIR 1961 SC 1808: (1962) 3 SCR 10: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 856, followed [258] — S. 91 — Party summoned to produce document disclaiming possession — Party not a witness in the proceedings — Held, such party cannot be forced to appear in court, made to state on oath and be subjected to cross-examination by the court or counsel — CrPC, 1898 — S. 94. Parmeshwari Devi v. State, (1977) 1 SCC 169: 1977 SCC (Cri) 74: AIR 1977 SC 403: (1977) 2 SCR 160.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, A.C. Gupta and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-11-1976]

[259] — Ss. 91, 227, 228, 239 and 240 — Summons to produce document or other thing — Accused cannot at the stage of framing of charge invoke S. 91 to seek production of any document to prove his innocence (Para 25). State of Orissa v. Debendra Nath Padhi, (2005) 1 SCC 568: 2005 SCC (Cri) 415: AIR 2005 SC 359: (2005) 1 KLT 80: (2005) 99 Cut LT 348.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal, D.M. Dharmadhikari and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-2004]

[260] — Ss. 91 and 233 — Accused's applications to secure certain materials, documents and witnesses to establish their defence — Rejected by trial court — Held, trial court can refuse securing of defence evidence if it feels it is being done to further delay the trial

In this particular matter there has been an inordinate delay, despite the High Court granting six months for the completion of the trial and thereafter another three months' extension was sought by the trial court. As per Section 233 CrPC, the trial court can refuse securing of defence evidence if it so feels that the same is being done to further delay the trial. Thus, the trial court has committed no error in rejecting the above applications. Even otherwise there seems to be no prejudice caused to the accused by mere rejection of these applications. (Paras 48 to 50). C. Magesh v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 5 SCC 645.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision : 30-4-2010]

Criminal Revision Petition No. 677 of 2003 (Kant), referred to

— S. 93 See also S. 96, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 972 in Vol. 2

— S. 93 See also S. 1(2) proviso and Ss. 93-105

[261] — Ss. 93 to 101 and 165 — Confession during illegal remand to police custody leading to search and seizure — Relevant evidence obtained thereunder, held, is not excluded by law on supposed illegality of the police custody or illegality of the search and seizure — Their admissibility to be entirely judged by provisions of Evidence Act, 1872 — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 5, 27 and 24

The High Court held that since the order granting police custody is ex facie illegal, the so-called confession and alleged recovery made during that custody have no evidentiary value. Even if it is assumed that the order granting police custody was illegal (though it is held in this case that the aforesaid order being a purely interlocutory order, no revision lay against the same and the High Court committed manifest error of law in entertaining the revision and setting aside the said order), the admissibility or otherwise of a piece of evidence has to be judged having regard to the provisions of the Evidence Act. The Evidence Act or the Code of Criminal Procedure or for that matter any other law in India does not exclude relevant evidence on the ground that it was obtained under an illegal search and seizure. Hence, the direction given by the High Court that the confession and alleged recovery have no evidentiary value is clearly illegal and has to be set aside. The effect of the confession and also the recovery of the incriminating article at the instance of the accused has to be examined strictly in accordance with the provisions of the Evidence Act. (Paras 14 and 15.2). State v. N.M.T. Joy Immaculate, (2004) 5 SCC 729: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1722: AIR 2004 SC 2282: 2004 Cri LJ 2515.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu, C.J.[1] and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan[2] and G.P. Mathur[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2004]

M.P. Sharma v. Satish Chandra, AIR 1954 SC 300: 1954 Cri LJ 865; Kurma v. R., 1955 AC 197: (1955) 1 All ER 236: (1955) 2 WLR 223 (PC); Pooran Mal v. Director of Inspection (Investigation), (1974) 1 SCC 345: 1974 SCC (Tax) 114, relied on

2002 MLJ (Cri) 661, reversed

[262] — S. 93(1) — Issue of search warrant — Magistrate should apply his mind and give reasons reflecting application of mind

The Magistrate should not dispose of an application for search warrant in a mechanical way by a laconic order. Issue of search warrant being in the discretion of the Magistrate it would be reasonable to expect of the Magistrate to give reasons which swayed his discretion in favour of granting the request. A clear application of mind by the learned Magistrate must be discernible in the order granting the search warrant. V.S. Kuttan Pillai v. Ramakrishnan, (1980) 1 SCC 264: 1980 SCC (Cri) 226: AIR 1980 SC 185: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 402: (1980) 17 ACC 120.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-1979]

[263] — S. 93(1)(a) — Search warrant under, when can issue — Such warrant if issued to an accused person, held, would violate Art. 20(3)

A search warrant under S. 93(1)(a) could only be issued where a summons could have been issued under S. 91(1) but the same would not be issued on an apprehension that the person to whom the summons is directed would not comply with the same and, therefore, in order to obtain the document or thing to produce which the summons was to be issued, a search warrant may be issued under S. 93(1)(a). A summons to produce a thing or document as contemplated by S, 91(1) cannot be issued to a person accused of an offence calling upon him to produce document or thing considered necessary or desirable for the purpose of an investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding under the Code. Ipso facto, therefore, a search warrant contemplated by S. 93(1)(a) cannot be issued by the Court to an accused person. V.S. Kuttan Pillai v. Ramakrishnan, (1980) 1 SCC 264: 1980 SCC (Cri) 226: AIR 1980 SC 185: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 402: (1980) 17 ACC 120.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-1979]

[Ed.: The above statement is obiter in view of the search warrant not having been issued under clause (a) of S. 93(1).]

— S. 93(1)(b) See Ss. 93(1)(c) and (b)

[264] — S. 93(1)(c) — Search of premises, occupied by the accused in pursuance of a general search warrant issued under and recovery of incriminating evidence — Such recovery arising out of passive submission of the accused to the search, held, does not violate Art. 20(3) even if documents recovered contain incriminating statements attributable to the personal knowledge of the accused. V.S. Kuttan Pillai v. Ramakrishnan, (1980) 1 SCC 264: 1980 SCC (Cri) 226: AIR 1980 SC 185: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 402: (1980) 17 ACC 120.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-1979]

[265] — Ss. 93(1)(c) and (b) — Scope — General search warrant under cl. (c) for search of premises of a public institution, held, can be issued — Cl. (b) has no application to such a case — Cl. (c) cannot be construed in the context of cl. (b)

Section 93(1)(c) comprehends a situation where a search warrant can be issued as the Court is unaware of not only the person but even the place where the documents may be found and that a general search is necessary. The power of the Court under S. 93(1)(c) cannot be cut down by importing into it some of the requirements of S. 93(1)(b) and as such cl. (c) need not be read in the context of cl. (b). Even where the documents are known to be at a certain place in possession of certain persons, a search warrant under cl. (c) cannot be ruled out on the ground of applicability of cl. (a).

In the present case search warrant was being issued to conduct search of the premises used as office of an institution. The place will be in possession of the institution. The office-bearers of the Sabha are accused of an offence. Documents and books of accounts of the institution are required for the purpose of the trial against the office-bearers of the institution. The office premises could not be said to be in possession of any individual accused but stricto sensu it would be in possession of the institution. Books of accounts and other documents of the institution could not be said to be in personal custody or possession of the office-bearers of the institution but they are in possession of the institution and are lying in the office of the institution. A search of such a public place under the authority of a general search warrant can be sustained under S. 93(1)(c).

Under S. 93(1)(b) there is a definite allegation to recover certain document or thing from a certain specific place but the Court is unaware of the fact whether that document or thing or the place is in possession of a particular person. In the present case the search warrant was to be executed at the office of the institution and the office-bearers of the institution were the persons who were in possession of the documents in respect of which the search warrant was issued. Therefore, S. 93(1)(b) would not be attracted. V.S. Kuttan Pillai v. Ramakrishnan, (1980) 1 SCC 264: 1980 SCC (Cri) 226: AIR 1980 SC 185: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 402: (1980) 17 ACC 120.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-1979]

— S. 94 See also S. 98, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 973 in Vol. 2

— S. 94 See S. 1(2) proviso and Ss. 93-105
See also Ss. 93 to 101 and 165

[266] — Ss. 94 and 156(3) — Criminal writ petition — Direction for examination of documents — Scope — Successive orders passed for examination of documents — Determination of comparative scope of the orders — Relevance of circumstances in which the writ petition was filed — Dispute among permanent trustees — One set of them claiming that in the meeting of trustees held on the date specified, the respondent trustee was reappointed as a permanent trustee — The other set comprising the appellants alleging that the minutes of the said meeting were forged and fabricated — Appellants first filing a complaint before police in that regard and, thereafter before Magistrate under Ss. 120-B, 465, 467, 468, 471 and 420 — Magistrate directing the police to investigate into the complaint — Police therefore registering an FIR — Meanwhile, appellants filing a civil suit for a declaration that the minutes of the alleged meeting of that date were forged and fabricated — In that suit, the Trust tendering copy of minutes book containing minutes of meetings allegedly held over a period of several years and one of the defendants disclosing herself to be in possession of certain relevant documents — Appellants then unsuccessfully approaching the Magistrate for issuance of a warrant for search and seizure of the minutes book and the said documents — Later, the police issuing notice to the respondent to produce the said documents — Respondent filing criminal writ petition for quashing the Magistrate's order for police investigation as well as the consequential FIR and the police notice — Appellants also getting themselves impleaded therein as interveners — Writ court, by a consent order, appointing a handwriting expert as Court Commissioner to examine the minutes book of meetings for the entire four year period including the meeting in dispute and also the documents required by the police — In view of a query from the Court Commissioner and also in view of appellants' denial of all of their signatures in the minutes book and the other documents, High Court passing a subsequent order that the Commissioner was not required "for the present" to examine all the signatures in the minutes book except those relating to the date of the disputed resolution — Effect of — Other matters having come to the notice of appellants only during the proceedings in the civil suit, the subsequent order of High Court, held, limited the examination of the minutes book to the meeting of the said date only for the present for the purpose of the complaint filed before the Magistrate — It did not restrict further examination of the minutes book if required — Hence, in case of necessity for any such further examination, appellants were at liberty to apply for the same to High Court before whom the matter was still pending — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 120-B, 465, 467, 468, 471 and 420 — CPC, 1908, Or. 11 Rr. 12, 14, 15, 18 & 20 — Constitution of India — Art. 226 (Para 60). Kishor Kirtilal Mehta v. Vijay Kirtilal Mehta, (2008) 3 SCC 404: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 373: AIR 2008 SC 1667.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-2008]

— S. 95 See also S. 99-A, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 973 in Vol. 2

— S. 95 See S. 1(2) proviso and Ss. 93-105
See also Ss. 93 to 101 and 165

[267] — S. 95 — Effect of confirmed forfeiture under, held, is to shut out its publication and distribution for all time (Para 25). Baragur Ramachandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 5 SCC 11: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 427: 2007 Cri LJ 2933: (2007) 56 AIC 129 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Harjit Singh Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2007]

[268] — S. 95 — Forfeiture of publication under — Standard by which offending publication to be judged — Progressiveness or conservativeness of class of people concerned — Relevance of — Held, it would be difficult to examine all publications on a common yardstick and what may be a laughable allegation to a progressive people could appear as sheer heresy to a conservative or sensitive one — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 295-A — Forfeiture of publication under S. 95 CrPC — Standard by which offending publication to be judged — Progressiveness or conservativeness of class of people concerned — Constitution of India — Art. 19(2) — Forfeiture of publication under S. 95 CrPC — Standard by which offending publication to be judged — Progressiveness or conservativeness of class of people concerned —

Relevance of (Para 12). Baragur Ramachandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 5 SCC 11: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 427: 2007 Cri LJ 2933: (2007) 56 AIC 129 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Harjit Singh Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2007]

State of U.P. v. Lalai Singh Yadav, (1976) 4 SCC 213: 1976 SCC (Cri) 556; S. Rangarajan v. P. Jagjivan Ram, (1989) 2 SCC 574, relied on

[269] — S. 95 — Forfeiture of publication under — Whether State Govt. may be actuated under S. 95 by complaint from eminent personalities or affected persons — Held, mere actuation of State Government by such persons would not amount to an abdication of its functions — In present case, Govt. had applied its mind to contents of the novel complained against and taken a balanced and reasoned decision on the matter

The contention that the action taken by the State Government was not on its own volition and was therefore mala fide must also be rejected. Merely because some eminent personalities or group of persons had taken it upon themselves to bring to the notice of the State Government the inflammatory and baseless statements that had been made, it would not amount to an abdication by the State of its functions. The impugned notification shows that the State Government had applied its mind to the contents of the novel and the allegations made therein and had taken a balanced and reasoned decision on the matter. (Para 13). Baragur Ramachandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 5 SCC 11: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 427: 2007 Cri LJ 2933: (2007) 56 AIC 129 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Harjit Singh Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2007]

[270] — S. 95 — Freedom of speech and expression — Role in inculcating scientific temperament and spirit of enquiry — Permissible reasonable restrictions on the said freedom — Deliberate and malicious statements in publication intended to outrage religious feelings of any class — Protection of minorities and those outside the mainstream of society from such attacks — Power of State Government to declare forfeiture of such publication under S. 95 CrPC — Constitutional validity and scope of — Safeguard under S. 96 CrPC — Effect — Held, S. 95 CrPC is preventive in nature and exemplifies the principle that freedom of speech and expression is not unfettered — No person has a right to impinge on the feelings of others on the premise that his right of freedom of speech remains unrestricted and unfettered — India being a country with vast disparities in language, culture and religion, the weaker amongst them must be shown extra care and consideration — Unwarranted and malicious criticism or interference in the faith of others cannot be accepted — S. 96 CrPC itself takes care of any misuse of authority conferred under S. 95, and the balancing of the individual right vis-à-vis larger public interest can be put under final scrutiny by a High Court Bench — Hence S. 95 is not violative of Art. 19(1)(a) — Hence Govt. has the power to nullify a publication which endangers public order — Held, on facts, offending publication in question contains an insidious and inflammatory suggestion as to character of an important figure of a particular religious cult — Said suggestion is designed to be hurtful and to bring the family of said figure to shame — Further, said imputation was not based in folklore, tradition or history as claimed in defence by the author since none of the scholarly articles cited in defence support such a claim — Lastly, the author refusing to remove the offending portions, forfeiture of book upheld — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 295-A — Constitution of India — Arts. 19(1)(a) & (2) and 51-A(h)

Basaveshwara also known as "Basavanna" was considered to be a great saint of the 12th century by the Veershaivas, a religious sect. He was born in Bagewadi in Bijapur District, Karnataka State. His elder sister Akkanagamma was also considered to be a saintly woman. Her son Channabasaveshwara too was considered to be a great social reformer and a preacher of Veerashaivism, and of the Basava Philosophy. The family was considered to consist of individuals of progressive thought who sought to promote social reform in Hindu society and who for that purpose preached that all were equal.

Petitioner 11, Dr. P.V. Narayanna published a novel in 1995 entitled Dharmakaarana portraying the story of Basaveshwara, Akkanagamma and Channabasaveshwara narrated in the first person, the narrator being Basaveshwara himself. The book was selected by the Karnataka Sahitya Academy for its annual award as the best novel for the year 1995. Some eminent figures in the field of literature and otherwise, including Shri B.D. Jatti, the former Vice-President of India wrote to the State Government that some of the statements made therein were objectionable, inflammatory, hurtful and insulting to the sentiments and feelings of the Veerashaivas and the followers of Basaveshwara, and suggested that the novel should be forfeited.

The Akhila Bharat Veerashaiva Mahasabha filed a suit in the City Civil Court at Bangalore seeking an injunction restraining the Government from conferring the award on the author and for an order banning the publication and sale of the book, on which such an order was in fact made. Faced with this delicate situation, the State Government issued the notification under Section 95 CrPC, ordering the forfeiture of the book. A petition was thereafter filed under Section 96 CrPC by the author Dr. P.V. Narayanna, on which the matter was referred for decision to a Bench of three Judges of the High Court under Section 96(2) CrPC. The Judges examined the matter in extenso and by their judgment and order dated 16-4-1998 dismissed the petition. This judgment was impugned before the Supreme Court by special leave.

While dismissing the petition the High Court had observed that the story projected by the author in Chapter 12 that Channabasaveshwara was the illegitimate son of Akkanagamma as he had been conceived out of wedlock, was indeed hurtful. The High Court had further held that the allegation that it was the public odium that had followed the pregnancy that had compelled Basaveshwara and Akkanagamma to leave their home at Bagewadi and shift to Koodalasangama, was again an unwarranted accusation and without any basis. The Court finally found that the explanation tendered by the author for the change of residence was the subject-matter of a raging debate amongst historians and religious functionaries and that he had merely adopted this story for the novel, was unacceptable and without any foundation.

Dismissing the appeal and confirming the forfeiture of the book,

Held :

It is true that the inculcation of a scientific temperament and a spirit of enquiry is essential for human development and is a sine qua non for progress and for social change and Article 51-A(h) of the Constitution clearly recognises this principle. Likewise Article 19(1)(a) of the Constitution gives every citizen the right to freedom of speech and expression and this freedom is yet another vehicle towards the same direction and goal. (Para 8)

It is however clear that the freedom of speech and expression is not unfettered and Section 95 CrPC exemplifies this principle on the understanding that this freedom must be available to all and no person has a right to impinge on the feelings of others on the premise that his right to freedom of speech remains unrestricted and unfettered. It cannot be ignored that India is a country with vast disparities in language, culture and religion and unwarranted and malicious criticism or interference in the faith of others cannot be accepted. (Para 9)

The Government has the power to nullify a publication which endangers public order, although the freedom of expression in this situation is undoubtedly restricted even though such freedom "is an indicator of the permanent address of human progress". It would be difficult to examine all publications on a common yardstick and what may be a laughable allegation to a progressive people could appear as sheer heresy to a conservative or sensitive one. (Para 12)

The contention that the action taken by the State Government was not on its own volition and was therefore mala fide must also be rejected. Merely because some eminent personalities or group of persons had taken it upon themselves to bring to the notice of the State Government the inflammatory and baseless statements that had been made, it would not amount to an abdication by the State of its functions. The impugned notification shows that the State Government had applied its mind to the contents of the novel and the allegations made therein and had taken a balanced and reasoned decision on the matter. (Para 13)

Section 95 and Section 96 CrPC when read together are clearly preventive in nature and are designed to pre-empt any disturbance to public order. At the same time, Section 95 does not by itself create a criminal offence and the reference to the various sections of the Penal Code is merely descriptive of the kind of offences which need to be prevented by a declaration under Section 95. Hence the contention that the onus of proof would lie on the State Government is not acceptable as the intention has, to some extent, to be inferred from the nature of the publication. It is true that a forfeiture of a newspaper or book or a document is a serious encroachment on the right of a citizen, but if forfeiture is called for in the public interest it must without a doubt have pre-eminence over any individual interest. (Para 16)

The State Government must take a pragmatic approach in the matter. (Para 16)

Section 96 itself takes care of any misuse of the authority conferred under Section 95 and the right of an individual vis-à-vis the larger public interest can be put under scrutiny as the final decision is left to a High Court Bench of (if possible) three Judges. Section 95 CrPC is not violative of Article 19(1)(a) of the Constitution, as the action taken thereunder is of a preventive nature and an extremely efficacious remedy under Section 96 CrPC is available to an aggrieved party or person. It is significant, and it is clear from the very large number of judgments that most of the matters pertain to attacks on minorities or religious and social groups or individuals who are perceived as being prodigals or heretics and therefore unacceptable to the conservatives amongst the mainstream. It cannot ever be overemphasised that India is a country with huge diversities in language and religion and the weaker amongst them must be shown extra care and consideration. (Paras 18 and 19)

In the book in question Basaveshwara narrates a story about a woman, Jabala by name, who was said to be a "debased one" and goes on to state that when Jabala was questioned by her son as to the identity of his father, she had replied that she was unable to identify him as she had been with many men. A perusal of a translation of the offending part of the book in Chapter 12, reveals that as a matter of fact Jabala has been equated with Basaveshwara's elder sister Nagakka in terms of being of low character and whereas the former had become pregnant, without a marriage the latter had been visited by so many men that she did not know who had fathered her son. As this story had been told by Basaveshwara himself in first person the insidious and inflammatory suggestion is noticed that he like Jabala's son, did not shrink from facing the truth about his closest relative-his sister with whom he shared a mother-son relationship. It is true that if the allegations made in Chapter 12 were based in folklore, tradition or history something in extenuation could perhaps be said for the author. (Paras 22 and 23)

There is no indication in any of the scholarly articles submitted by the appellant to support his contention that the story portrayed in Chapter 12 had not been revealed for the first time in his book, as the circumstances leading to the birth of Channabasaveshwara and the reason for the change in residence from Bagewadi to Koodalasangama had been a matter of study, debate and speculation in the Veerashaiva community for generations, and had found its echo not only in numerous books and articles but in lore and legend as well. None of the articles relied on indicate that Akkanagamma was of low character to be equated with Jabala or the slightest hint that Akkanagamma had conceived Channabasaveshwara outside her marriage and had left Bagewadi in shame for that reason. Chapter 12 is not in sync with the rest of the novel and has been deliberately designed to be hurtful and to bring the family to shame. The novel with its complimentary passages in favour of Basaveshwara is merely a camouflage to spin and introduce a particularly sordid and puerile story in Chapter 12. (Paras 20 and 24)

As the forfeiture of the novel would have the result of shutting out its publication and distribution for all time, it was put to the author by the Supreme Court if he could be persuaded to remove the portions which had been found to be offensive by the State Government. The author was willing to remove only three or four references from the novel, which would be only cosmetic changes and would not satisfy the need of the hour. Hence the appeal is dismissed. (Para 25). Baragur Ramachandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 5 SCC 11: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 427: 2007 Cri LJ 2933: (2007) 56 AIC 129 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Harjit Singh Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2007]

Indian Express Newspapers (Bombay) (P) Ltd. v. Union of India, (1985) 1 SCC 641: 1985 SCC (Tax) 121; State of U.P. v. Lalai Singh Yadav, (1976) 4 SCC 213: 1976 SCC (Cri) 556; S. Rangarajan v. P. Jagjivan Ram, (1989) 2 SCC 574, relied on

Nand Kishore Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1986 Pat 98, approved

[271] — Ss. 95 and 96 — Essential condition for issuance of forfeiture notification under S. 95 — Effect of quashment of criminal proceedings re offending material — Held, one of the essential conditions for exercise of power under S. 95 is that the publication contains matter which is an offence under the various provisions of IPC specified therein — Hence quashment of FIR in respect of offending material in present case knocked off entire edifice of impugned notification

In the present case, the opinion of the State Government is based on the factum of registration of an FIR against the author and others for offences punishable under Sections 153 and 153-A read with Section 34 IPC. But, in Manzar Sayeed Khan case, (2007) 5 SCC 1, while quashing the same FIR, it was held that the offending articles in the book did not constitute an offence under Section 153-A IPC. Thus, the entire edifice of the impugned notification got knocked off by the said decision. (Paras 40 and 41)

It is not possible to accept the contention of the appellants that only the subjective satisfaction of the State Government was called for and the matter covered by the notification is sufficient and cannot be assailed. The impugned notification does not identify the communities between which the book had caused or is likely to cause enmity. Therefore, it cannot be found out from the impugned notification as to which communities got outraged by the publication of the book or it had caused hatred and animosity between which particular communities or groups. (Paras 42 and 15)

The statement in the impugned notification to the effect that the book was "likely to result in breach of peace and public tranquillity and in particular between those who revere Shivaji and those who may not" is too vague a ground to satisfy the tests enumerated herein. The High Court was therefore right in holding that the impugned notification does not fulfil the mandatory requirements of Section 95(1) CrPC and is therefore invalid. (Paras 43 and 44). State of Maharashtra v. Sangharaj Damodar Rupawate, (2010) 7 SCC 398.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision : 9-7-2010]

State of U.P. v. Lalai Singh Yadav, (1976) 4 SCC 213: 1976 SCC (Cri) 556, relied on

Sangharaj Damodar Rupawate v. Nitin Gadre, (2007) 4 Mah LJ 461, affirmed

Gopal Vinayak Godse v. Union of India, AIR 1971 Bom 56; M.T. Khan v. Govt. of A.P., (2004) 2 SCC 267; Periyar and Pareekanni Rubbers Ltd. v. State of Kerala, (1991) 4 SCC 195; S. Rangarajan v. P. Jagjivan Ram, (1989) 2 SCC 574; Bilal Ahmed Kaloo v. State of A.P., (1997) 7 SCC 431: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1094, cited

[272] — Ss. 95 and 96 — Nature and scope — Exercise of power under, by Govt. in ordering forfeiture — Proper manner of and approach to be followed — Balancing of public and private interests — Held, Ss. 95 and 96 when read together are clearly preventive in nature and are designed to pre-empt any disturbance to public order — S. 95 does not by itself create a criminal offence and reference to various sections of IPC therein is merely descriptive of the kind of offences which need to be prevented under S. 95 — The onus of proof does not lie on Govt. as the intention has, to some extent, to be inferred from the nature of the publication — If forfeiture is called for in the public interest, it must without a doubt have pre-eminence over any individual interest — Govt. must take a pragmatic approach in the matter — Constitution of India — Arts. 19(1)(a) & (2) — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 295-A

Section 95 and Section 96 CrPC when read together are clearly preventive in nature and are designed to pre-empt any disturbance to public order. At the same time, Section 95 does not by itself create a criminal offence and the reference to the various sections of the Penal Code is merely descriptive of the kind of offences which need to be prevented by a declaration under Section 95. Hence the contention that the onus of proof would lie on the State Government is not acceptable as the intention has, to some extent, to be inferred from the nature of the publication. It is true that a forfeiture of a newspaper or book or a document is a serious encroachment on the right of a citizen, but if forfeiture is called for in the public interest it must without a doubt have pre-eminence over any individual interest. (Para 16)

The State Government must take a pragmatic approach in the matter. (Para 16)

Section 96 itself takes care of any misuse of the authority conferred under Section 95 and the right of an individual vis-à-vis the larger public interest can be put under scrutiny as the final decision is left to a High Court Bench of (if possible) three Judges. Section 95 CrPC is not violative of Article 19(1)(a) of the Constitution, as the action taken thereunder is of a preventive nature and an extremely efficacious remedy under Section 96 CrPC is available to an aggrieved party or person. It is significant, and it is clear from the very large number of judgments that most of the matters pertain to attacks on minorities or religious and social groups or individuals who are perceived as being prodigals or heretics and therefore unacceptable to the conservatives amongst the mainstream. It cannot ever be overemphasised that India is a country with huge diversities in language and religion and the weaker amongst them must be shown extra care and consideration. (Paras 18 and 19). Baragur Ramachandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 5 SCC 11: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 427: 2007 Cri LJ 2933: (2007) 56 AIC 129 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Harjit Singh Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2007]

State of U.P. v. Lalai Singh Yadav, (1976) 4 SCC 213: 1976 SCC (Cri) 556, relied on

Nand Kishore Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1986 Pat 98, approved

[273] — S. 95(1) — Provision in, conferring power to forfeit newspaper, book or document — Nature of, and mode of its interpretation — Held, it affects right to freedom of speech and expression as well as right to privacy — Hence, it has to be construed strictly and power thereunder has to be exercised in manner and according to procedure laid down therein — Constitution of India — Arts. 19(1)(a) and 21

The power to forfeit a newspaper, book or document is a drastic power inasmuch as it not only has a direct impact upon the due exercise of the cherished right of freedom of speech and expression as envisaged in Article 19(1)(a) of the Constitution, it also clothes a police officer to seize the infringing copies of the book, document or newspaper and to search places where they are reasonably suspected to be found, impinging upon the right of privacy. Therefore, the provision has to be construed strictly and exercise of power under it has to be in the manner and according to the procedure laid down therein. (Para 28). State of Maharashtra v. Sangharaj Damodar Rupawate, (2010) 7 SCC 398.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision : 9-7-2010]

State of U.P. v. Lalai Singh Yadav, (1976) 4 SCC 213: 1976 SCC (Cri) 556, followed

Manzar Sayeed Khan v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 5 SCC 1: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 417; Baragur Ramachandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 5 SCC 11: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 427, considered

Ramesh v. Union of India, (1988) 1 SCC 668: 1988 SCC (Cri) 266; Bhagwati Charan Shukla v. Provincial Govt., AIR 1947 Nag 1; Nand Kishore Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1986 Pat 98, referred to

[274] — Ss. 95(1) and 96(1) & (4) — Forfeiture notification under S. 95(1) — Test of validity of, and amenability to judicial review — Subjective satisfaction of Government — If enough — Notification forfeiting the book Shivaji—Hindu King in Islamic India — Validity — Held, forfeiture notification must state grounds on which Government formed its opinion under S. 95(1) — Mere citation of words of the section, not sufficient — Detailed, albeit not inflexible guidelines to test validity of such notification laid down — Contention that only subjective satisfaction of State Government is called for and matter covered by impugned notification is sufficient and cannot be assailed, rejected — Notification in question forfeiting book on grounds that contents thereof had caused enmity between various communities, that book was "likely to result in breach of peace and public tranquillity and in particular between those who revere Shivaji and those who may not", and that for publication thereof FIR under Ss. 153, 153-A and 34 IPC had been registered against author — In view of: (i) omission to specify the "communities" it referred to, (ii) vagueness of statement therein, and (iii) quashment of very same FIR in Manzar Sayeed Khan case, (2007) 5 SCC 1 with finding that contents of book in question herein did not constitute offence under S. 153-A IPC, said notification rightly annulled by High Court — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 153, 153-A and 34 — Constitution of India — Article 19

By a Notification dated 20-12-2006 issued under Section 95(1) CrPC, the Maharashtra Government directed forfeiture of every copy of the book Shivaji—Hindu King in Islamic India. The notification indicated that in the opinion of the Government, the circulation of the said book, containing scurrilous and derogatory references to Shivaji, had resulted in causing enmity between various communities and had led to acts of violence and disharmony and that any further circulation of the said book was likely to result in breach of peace and public tranquillity. The said opinion was based on the grounds that the author had made several derogatory references, specified in the schedule appended to the notification, regarding Shivaji, in particular about his parentage and the Bhosle family; the said derogatory references were prejudicial to the maintenance of harmony between different groups and had disturbed the public tranquillity, the publication and circulation of the book had not only already resulted in causing enmity between the persons who revered Shivaji and other persons who might not so revere him but was likely to continuously cause such enmity. For publication of the book an FIR for offences under Sections 153 and 153-A read with Section 34 IPC had been registered against the author. In a petition filed under Section 96 CrPC read with Article 226 of the Constitution by the respondents herein and certain others, the High Court set aside and quashed the said notification. The State then filed the present appeal thereagainst by special leave.

Dismissing the appeal of the State,

Held :

The power to issue a declaration of forfeiture under Section 95 CrPC postulates compliance with twin essential conditions viz. (i) the Government must form the opinion to the effect that the newspaper, book or document contains "any matter ... Section 295-A IPC", and (ii) the Government must state the grounds of its opinion. Therefore, it is mandatory that such a declaration by the State Government in the form of notification must state the grounds on which the State Government has formed a particular opinion. A mere citation of the words of the section is not sufficient. (Para 26)

The power to forfeit a newspaper, book or document is a drastic power inasmuch as it not only has a direct impact upon the due exercise of the cherished right of freedom of speech and expression as envisaged in Article 19(1)(a) of the Constitution, it also clothes a police officer to seize the infringing copies of the book, document or newspaper and to search places where they are reasonably suspected to be found, impinging upon the right of privacy. Therefore, the provision has to be construed strictly and exercise of power under it has to be in the manner and according to the procedure laid down therein. (Para 28)

No inflexible guidelines can be laid down to test the validity of a notification issued under Section 95 CrPC. Nonetheless the following legal aspects can be kept in mind while examining the validity of such a notification:

(i) The statement of the grounds of its opinion by the State Government is mandatory and a total absence thereof would vitiate the declaration of forfeiture. Therefore, the grounds of the Government's opinion must be stated in the notification issued under Section 95 CrPC and while testing the validity of the notification the Court has to confine the inquiry to the grounds so disclosed;

(ii) Grounds of opinion must mean conclusion of facts on which the opinion is based. Grounds must necessarily be the import or the effect or the tendency of matters contained in the offending publication, either as a whole or in portions of it, as illustrated by passages which the Government may choose. A mere repetition of an opinion or reproduction of the section will not answer the requirement of a valid notification. However, at the same time, it is not necessary that the notification must bear a verbatim record of the forfeited material or give a detailed gist thereof;

(iii) The validity of the order of forfeiture would depend on the merits of the grounds. The High Court would set aside the order of forfeiture if there are no grounds of opinion because if there are no grounds of opinion it cannot be satisfied that the grounds given by the Government justify the order. However, it is not the duty of the High Court to find out for itself whether the book contained any such matter whatsoever;

(iv) The State cannot extract stray sentences of portions of the book and come to a finding that the said book as a whole ought to be forfeited;

(v) The intention of the author has to be gathered from the language, contents and import of the offending material. If the allegations made in the offending article are based on folklore, tradition or history, something in extenuation could perhaps be said for the author;

(vi) If the writing is calculated to promote feelings of enmity or hatred, it is no defence to a charge under Section 153-A IPC that the writing contains a truthful account of past events or is otherwise supported by good authority. Adherence to the strict path of history is not by itself a complete defence to a charge under Section 153-A IPC;

(vii) Section 95(1) CrPC postulates that the ingredients of the offences stated in the notification should "appear" to the Government to be present. It does not require that it should be "proved" to the satisfaction of the Government that all requirements of punishing sections, including mens rea, were fully established;

(viii) The onus to dislodge and rebut the prima facie opinion of the Government that the offending publication comes within the ambit of the relevant offence, including its requirement of intent, is on the applicant and such intention has to be gathered from the language, contents and import thereof;

(ix) The effect of the words used in the offending material must be judged from the standards of reasonable, strong-minded, firm and courageous men, and not those of weak and vacillating minds, nor of those who scent danger in every hostile point of view. The class of readers for whom the book is primarily meant would also be relevant for judging the probable consequences of the writing. (Para 37)

In the present case, the opinion of the State Government is based on the factum of registration of an FIR against the author and others for offences punishable under Sections 153 and 153-A read with Section 34 IPC. But, in Manzar Sayeed Khan case, (2007) 5 SCC 1, while quashing the same FIR, it was held that the offending articles in the book did not constitute an offence under Section 153-A IPC. Thus, the entire edifice of the impugned notification got knocked off by the said decision. (Paras 40 and 41)

It is not possible to accept the contention of the appellants that only the subjective satisfaction of the State Government was called for and the matter covered by the notification is sufficient and cannot be assailed. The impugned notification does not identify the communities between which the book had caused or is likely to cause enmity. Therefore, it cannot be found out from the impugned notification as to which communities got outraged by the publication of the book or it had caused hatred and animosity between which particular communities or groups. (Paras 42 and 15)

The statement in the impugned notification to the effect that the book was "likely to result in breach of peace and public tranquillity and in particular between those who revere Shivaji and those who may not" is too vague a ground to satisfy the tests enumerated herein. The High Court was therefore right in holding that the impugned notification does not fulfil the mandatory requirements of Section 95(1) CrPC and is therefore invalid. (Paras 43 and 44). State of Maharashtra v. Sangharaj Damodar Rupawate, (2010) 7 SCC 398.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision : 9-7-2010]

Harnam Das v. State of U.P., AIR 1961 SC 1662: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 815; Narayan Dass Indurakhya v. State of M.P., (1972) 3 SCC 676: 1972 SCC (Cri) 720; State of U.P. v. Lalai Singh Yadav, (1976) 4 SCC 213: 1976 SCC (Cri) 556; State of U.P. v. Lalai Singh Yadav, (1976) 4 SCC 213: 1976 SCC (Cri) 556, followed

Random House Dictionary, referred to

Manzar Sayeed Khan v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 5 SCC 1: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 417; Baragur Ramachandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 5 SCC 11: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 427, considered

Ramesh v. Union of India, (1988) 1 SCC 668: 1988 SCC (Cri) 266; Bhagwati Charan Shukla v. Provincial Govt., AIR 1947 Nag 1; Nand Kishore Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1986 Pat 98, referred to

State of U.P. v. Lalai Singh Yadav, (1976) 4 SCC 213: 1976 SCC (Cri) 556, relied on

Sangharaj Damodar Rupawate v. Nitin Gadre, (2007) 4 Mah LJ 461, affirmed

Gopal Vinayak Godse v. Union of India, AIR 1971 Bom 56; M.T. Khan v. Govt. of A.P., (2004) 2 SCC 267; Periyar and Pareekanni Rubbers Ltd. v. State of Kerala, (1991) 4 SCC 195; S. Rangarajan v. P. Jagjivan Ram, (1989) 2 SCC 574; Bilal Ahmed Kaloo v. State of A.P., (1997) 7 SCC 431: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1094, cited

— S. 96 See S. 1(2) proviso and Ss. 93-105
See also Ss. 93 to 101 and 165
See also Ss. 95 and 96

[275] — Ss. 96 to 103 and 165 — Importance of search and seizure during investigation — Statement of Objects and Reasons, Ch. V and Ss. 42(1), (2) (as amended by Act 9 of 2001), 50 (as amended by Act 9 of 2001) and 96 to 103, NDPS Act — Need to maintain balance between stringent laws for tackling drug trafficking by well-organised smugglers on the one hand and safeguards against misuse and arbitrary or indiscriminate exercise of power by officers empowered under NDPS Act on the other hand — Need of proper balance, stressed — Such balance evident from the scheme of NDPS Act and its amendments due to signing of the Convention on Psychotropic Substances Act, 1971 — Convention on Psychotropic Substances Act, 1971, Preamble — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985. Karnail Singh v. State of Haryana, (2009) 8 SCC 539: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 887.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran, D.K. Jain, P. Sathasivam and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-2009]

[Ed.: India was amongst the 71 countries that signed the Protocol on Psychotropic Substances which met in Vienna from 11 January to 21 February, 1971. The website of International Narcotics Control Board may be referred to for relevant data and the PDF file on the convention: the weblinks are (1) http://www.incb.org/incb/convention_1971.html and (2) http://www.incb.org/pdf/e/conv/convention_1971_en.pdf]

— S. 97 See S. 1(2) proviso and Ss. 93-105
See also Ss. 93 to 101 and 165

[276] — S. 97 — Custody of minor children — Allegation by the father that the mother left the matrimonial home along with two children without any information — Held, mother is also a natural guardian under S. 6 of the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956 — Hence custody of the children with the mother was neither illegal nor were the children under her wrongful confinement — Order of the Chief Judicial Magistrate giving custody of such children to the father quashed and the father directed to hand over the custody of the children to the mother — However, this order is confined to proceedings under S. 97 and would not affect proceedings under S. 25 of the Guardian and Wards Act, 1890 pending before the Family Court — Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956 — S. 6 — Guardians and Wards Act, 1890 — S. 25. Anjali Anil Rangari v. Anil Kripasagar Rangari, (1997) 10 SCC 342: 1997 SCC (Cri) 827.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.C. Sen and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-1997]

[277] — S. 97 — Search for person wrongfully confined — Child, aged 9 years, living with his own father — S. 97 not attracted — However, this shall not be construed as any expression of opinion on merits of controversy regarding custody of the child which is pending adjudication in an application filed under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890. Ramesh v. Laxmi Bai, (1998) 9 SCC 266: 1998 SCC (Cri) 999.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-1997]

— Ss. 98 and 99 See S. 1(2) proviso and Ss. 93-105
See also Ss. 93 to 101 and 165

— S. 100 See also Ss. 102 and 103, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 973 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 100 See S. 1(2) proviso and Ss. 93- 105
See also Ss. 93 to 101 and 165
See also Ss. 102, 100 and 165
See also Ss. 165 and 100
See also Ss. 165, 102 and 100

[278] — S. 100 — Search of person distinguished from search of premises — Only when an empowered officer or a duly authorised officer acting on prior information is about to carry out search of a "person" as distinguished from search of "premises", it is imperative for that officer to inform the person being searched of his right under S. 50(1), NDPS Act of being taken to the nearest gazetted officer or Magistrate for making the search — However, such information may not necessarily be in writing — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — S. 50 (Para 7). Gurbax Singh v. State of Haryana, (2001) 3 SCC 28: 2001 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 2001 SC 1002: (2001) 1 Crimes 235 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2001]

Kalema Tumba v. State of Maharashtra, (1999) 8 SCC 257: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1422; State of Punjab v. Baldev Singh, (1999) 6 SCC 172: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1080, relied on [279] — S. 100 — Non-sealing of seized articles casts serious doubt on prosecution. Surinder v. State of Haryana, (1994) 4 SCC 365: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1202.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.M. Sahai and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-1994]

[280] — Ss. 100, 102 — Search and seizure — Failure to join independent witnesses of locality — Corroboration — Necessity — Seizure of stolen wood by forest authorities — Failure to join independent witness though available at a distance of about 100 yards — Even at the time of recording of confession of accused persons no independent witness was joined — Held, in the circumstances of the case, conviction cannot be based on uncorroborated testimony of forest officials though as a matter of law some corroboration was not a legal imperative — Forest Act, 1927 — Ss. 26 and 41. Gyan Singh v. State of U.P., 1995 Supp (4) SCC 658: 1996 SCC (Cri) 73.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.C. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-4-1992]

[281] — S. 100 — Arrest, warrant, search and seizure under NDPS Act, 1985 — General legal provision applicable for — Appropriate procedure/conditions — Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 shall apply insofar as they are not inconsistent with the provisions of the NDPS Act, re-emphasised — Therefore, in case of search of a house investigating officer having followed conditions under S. 42 of the Act r/w S. 100 CrPC, allegation of breach of the right of a person's house being searched in the absence of a Magistrate or gazetted officer, held, was wholly incorrect — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 42 and 51 (Para 7). Ghasita Sahu v. State of M.P., (2008) 3 SCC 52: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 605: AIR 2008 SC 1425: 2008 Cri LJ 2060.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2008]

State of H.P. v. Pawan Kumar, (2005) 4 SCC 350: 2005 SCC (Cri) 943, relied on [282] — Ss. 100, 102, 103 and 165 — Chance recovery of narcotic drug or psychotropic substance — Investigation under CrPC — Duty of Investigating Officer who comes across a person being in possession of contraband indicated — Provisions of NDPS Act attracted thereafter — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — S. 50

The provisions of Sections 100 and 165 CrPC are not inconsistent with the provisions of the NDPS Act and are applicable for affecting search, seizure or arrest under the NDPS Act also. However, when an empowered officer carrying on the investigation including search, seizure or arrest under the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, comes across a person being in possession of the narcotic drug or the psychotropic substance, then he must follow from that stage onwards the provisions of the NDPS Act and continue the investigation as provided thereunder. If the investigating officer is not an empowered officer then it is expected of him that he must inform the empowered officer under the NDPS Act, who should thereafter proceed from that stage in accordance with the provisions of the NDPS Act. Failure to comply with the provisions of CrPC in respect of search and seizure and particularly those of Sections 100, 102, 103 and 165 per se would not vitiate the prosecution case. If there is such a violation, what the courts have to see is whether any prejudice was caused to the accused. While appreciating the evidence and other relevant factors, the courts should bear in mind that there was such a violation and evaluate the evidence on record keeping that in view. (Para 14). State of Punjab v. Baldev Singh, (1999) 6 SCC 172: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1080: AIR 1999 SC 2378: 1999 Cri LJ 3672.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and S.B. Majmudar, Sujata V. Manohar, K. Venkataswami and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-1999]

State of Punjab v. Balbir Singh, (1994) 3 SCC 299: 1994 SCC (Cri) 634, relied on [283] — Ss. 100 and 51 — Search of offender — Search memo signed only by policemen accompanying the Head Constable and not by any independent witnesses though present — Matter not free from doubt — CrPC, 1898 — Ss. 103 and 51. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1976) 1 SCC 15: 1975 SCC (Cri) 737: AIR 1976 SC 985: 1976 Cri LJ 713.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-8-1975]

[284] — Ss. 100 and 165 — Search and seizure — Chance recovery of narcotic drugs by a police officer, not being an empowered officer — Procedure to be followed by him — Non-compliance with mandatory requirements of the provisions under NDPS Act vitiates the conviction — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 42(1), (2), 50, 52 and 57

In the present case the police officer purely accidentally stumbled upon the offending articles and not being the empowered person, on coming to know about the accused persons being in custody of the offending articles, he sent for the panchas and on their arrival drew up the panchnama. In the circumstances, from the stage he had reason to believe that the accused persons were in custody of narcotic drugs and sent for the panchas, he was under an obligation to proceed further in the matter in accordance with the provisions of the NDPS Act. Under Section 42(1) proviso, if the search is carried out between sunset and sunrise, he must record the grounds of his belief. Admittedly, he did not record the grounds of his belief at any stage of the investigation subsequent to his realising that the accused persons were in possession of charas. He also did not forward a copy of the grounds to his superior officer, as required by Section 42(2) of the Act because he had not made any record under the proviso to Section 42(1). He also did not adhere to the provisions of Section 50 of the Act in that he did not inform the person to be searched that if he would like to be taken to a Gazetted Officer or a Magistrate, a requirement which has been held to be mandatory. Therefore, the accused is entitled to be acquitted. Mohinder Kumar v. State, Panaji, Goa, (1998) 8 SCC 655: AIR 1995 SC 1157.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and N.P. Singh and Sujata V. Manohar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-1995]

State of Punjab v. Balbir Singh, (1994) 3 SCC 299: 1994 SCC (Cri) 634, followed

[285] — Ss. 100 and 165 — Recovery of incriminating articles (belonging to deceased) from flat of accused at his instance — Reliability — Said flat was easily accessible, without disturbing the lock — Planting of articles by police, not totally ruled out — Hence held, the evidence of seizure of incriminating articles from the said flat, was rightly discarded by the courts below — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 27

The search and recovery of articles by the police on 11-2-2000 does not inspire confidence as the flat was easily accessible, without disturbing the lock and planting of the articles by the police cannot totally be ruled out. After going through the evidence of the witnesses and the panchnamas and list of seized articles, it is found that reasoning adopted by the courts below in discarding the evidence of seizure of articles from the flat of the accused persons cannot be said to be without any basis. (Para 20). State of Goa v. Sanjay Thakran, (2007) 3 SCC 755: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 162: (2007) 2 Guj LH 122: (2007) 54 AIC 240 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-2007]

[286] — Ss. 100 and 172 — Applicability of Ss. 5 and 6, TADA — Person in possession of arms and ammunition — On facts who was in possession — Arms and ammunition given by the accused to P for safe custody at his residence, recovered at the instance of the accused from the residence of P — In such circumstances, the accused and none else, held, was having the control over the said arms and ammunition for the purpose of conviction under Ss. 5 and 6, TADA — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — Ss. 5 and 6 (Para 10). Prasad Ramakant Khade v. State of Maharashtra, (1999) 8 SCC 493: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1487: AIR 2000 SC 138.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, S.P. Kurdukar and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-1999]

— S. 100(4) See Ss. 165, 102, 100(4) and 154

See also Ss. 165, 102, 166(3) & (4) and 100(4)

See also Ss. 165, 166(3) & (4) and 100(4)

See also Ss. 165(4) and 100(4)

[287] — S. 100(4) — Independent witness — Meaning of — Mere acquaintance with police officers would not make a witness non-independent — Every citizen is presumed to be independent until proved to be dependant on police for any purpose whatsoever — Merely because the witness was complainant in another bribery case or that he was a witness in two other cases though not yet examined in those cases would not render him a non-independent witness — Similarly, mere fact that one of the witnesses was driver of the vehicle in which raiding officials went to the place would not result in his losing the status of independent witness

The necessity for "independent witness" in cases involving police raid or police search is incorporated in the statute not for the purpose of helping the indicated person to bypass the evidence of those panch witnesses who have had some acquaintance with the police or officers conducting the search at some time or the other. Acquaintance with the police by itself would not destroy a man's independent outlook. In a society where police involvement is a regular phenomenon many people would get acquainted with the police. But as long as they are not dependent on the police for their living or liberty or for any other matter, it cannot be said that they are not independent persons. If the police in order to carry out official duties, have sought the help of any other person he would not forfeit his independent character by giving help to police action. The requirement to have independent witness to corroborate the evidence of the police is to be viewed from a realistic angle. Every citizen of India must be presumed to be an independent person until it is proved that he was a dependant of the police or other officials for any purpose whatsoever. State of U.P. v. Zakaullah, (1998) 1 SCC 557: 1998 SCC (Cri) 456: AIR 1998 SC 1474: 1998 All LJ 290: 1998 Cri LJ 863.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-1997]

[288] — S. 100(4) — Independent witnesses — Non-availability of — If vitiative of the evidence regarding search — Bedding which the accused was carrying searched and found to contain 10 kg of opium — IO and other witnesses disclosing that many independent witnesses had been requested to witness the search but all of them refused — Evidence of IO and the other witnesses on this point remaining unshaken despite cross-examination — In such circumstances, their evidence regarding the search, held, nonetheless admissible — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 42, 43 and 51 (Para 4). Jal Singh v. State of Haryana, (2000) 2 SCC 119: 2000 SCC (Cri) 337.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-12-1999]

[289] — S. 100(4) — Recovery from the house of the accused — No reasonable explanation for not summoning any independent witness residing in that locality — Residents of the houses in the immediate proximity of the house of the accused available and large number of people present at the time of recovery — Held, prosecution should have come forward with some explanation why PW 4, who was not resident of that locality and belonged to the biradari of the complainant, was called and so selectively chosen to be the witness for the recoveries

PW 4 is not a resident in the immediate proximity of the house of the respondent. He belongs to the same biradari of the complainant and lives behind the house of the IO, PW 9. There is no reasonable explanation, why such a person was called to be a witness to the recovery when there were any number of people available and who are residents of the houses in the immediate proximity of the house of the respondent. It is evident from the records that a large number of people were present at the time of the recovery, therefore, the prosecution should have come forward with some explanation, why PW 4 was so selectively chosen to be the witness for the recoveries. (Para 16). State of U.P. v. Arun Kumar Gupta, (2003) 2 SCC 202: 2003 SCC (Cri) 481: AIR 2003 SC 801: 2003 Cri LJ 894.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-2003]

[290] — S. 100(4) — Search — "Independent and respectable inhabitants of locality" — Panch witnesses not belonging to the locality where search was conducted — Inconsistent versions given by them regarding purpose of their visit to justify their presence at the place of occurrence — One of the witnesses found to be a pocket witness and the other witness being his friend and associate their friendship having developed during their days of gambling — His conduct of giving false address to the police on more than one occasions rendering him untrustworthy — No serious attempt made by the raiding party to join independent and respectable inhabitants of the locality — Held, in the circumstances, panch witnesses not reliable (Paras 8, 9 and 10). Pradeep Narayan Madgaonkar v. State of Maharashtra, (1995) 4 SCC 255: 1995 SCC (Cri) 708: AIR 1995 SC 1930: 1995 Cri LJ 3213.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-1995]

[291] — S. 100(4) — Search and seizure — Accused apprehended at a bus stand in the evening — Shopkeeper and the people present there not willing to join search party — Held, in the circumstances, failure to join independent witness of locality not fatal — Conviction based on evidence of police officers alone not improper — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 5 — Arms Act, 1959 — S. 25. Rakesh Kumar v. State (Delhi Admn.), 1994 Supp (3) SCC 729.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-11-1994]

[292] — S. 100(4) — Search and seizure — Failure to call independent inhabitants of locality — Effect

Before conducting a search the police officer concerned is required to call upon some independent and respectable people of the locality to witness the search. In a given case it may so happen that no such person is available or, even if available, is not willing to be a party to such search. It may also be that after joining the search, such persons later on turn hostile. In any of these eventualities the evidence of the police officers who conducted the search cannot be disbelieved solely on the ground that no independent and respectable witness was examined to prove the search but if it is found — as in the present case — that no attempt was made even by the police officer concerned to join with him some persons of the locality who were admittedly available to witness the recovery, it would affect the weight of evidence of the police officer, though not its admissibility. Sahib Singh v. State of Punjab, (1996) 11 SCC 685: AIR 1997 SC 2417.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1996]

[293] — S. 100(4) — Search and seizure — Failure to join independent witness — Witnesses looking from a distance but none of them coming at the spot — Held, in the circumstances, not joining of those witnesses cannot affect the creditworthiness of the prosecution case. Balbir Singh v. State, (1996) 11 SCC 139: 1997 SCC (Cri) 134.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-9-1996]

[294] — S. 100(4) — Search and seizure — Panch witnesses belonging to other village — Explanation that accused's village being a small village and inhabited mostly by relations of the accused — Held, in the circumstances of the case, explanation for not joining independent witnesses of the same village acceptable. Sama Alana Abdulla v. State of Gujarat, (1996) 1 SCC 427: 1996 SCC (Cri) 113: AIR 1996 SC 569.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-11-1995]

[295] — S. 100(4) — All disclosures, discoveries and arrests made in presence of three interested witnesses as no independent witness could be found — Held, creates a doubt or suspicion which must go to the benefit of the accused — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 27

Significantly all disclosures, discoveries and even arrests have been made in the presence of three specific persons, who were related to the deceased — no independent witness could be found in the aforesaid context — is it deliberate or is it sheer coincidence. The ingenuity devised by the prosecutor knew no bounds — can it be attributed to be sheer coincidence? Without any further consideration of the matter, one thing can be, more or less with certain amount of conclusiveness be stated that these at least create a doubt or suspicion as to whether the same have been tailor-made or not and in the event of there being such a doubt, the benefit must and ought to be transposed to the accused persons. (Para 19). State of Haryana v. Ram Singh, (2002) 2 SCC 426: 2002 SCC (Cri) 350: AIR 2002 SC 620: 2002 Cri LJ 987.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-1-2002]

[296] — S. 100(4) — Evidentiary value — Failure to join independent witness during search and seizure — Effect

There can be no legal proposition that evidence of police officers, unless supported by independent witnesses, is unworthy of acceptance. Non-examination of independent witness or even presence of such witness during police raid would cast an added duty on the court to adopt greater care while scrutinising the evidence of the police officers. If the evidence of the police officer is found acceptable it would be an erroneous proposition that the court must reject the prosecution version solely on the ground that no independent witness was examined. Kalpnath Rai v. State, (1997) 8 SCC 732: AIR 1998 SC 201.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-1997]

Balbir Singh v. State, (1996) 11 SCC 139: 1997 SCC (Cri) 134; Paras Ram v. State of Haryana, (1992) 4 SCC 662: 1993 SCC (Cri) 13; Sama Alana Abdulla v. State of Gujarat, (1996) 1 SCC 427: 1996 SCC (Cri) 113; Anil v. State of Maharashtra, (1996) 2 SCC 589: 1996 SCC (Cri) 356; Tahir v. State (Delhi), (1996) 3 SCC 338: 1996 SCC (Cri) 515, followed [297] — S. 100(4) — Arms Act, 1959 — S. 25 — Search and seizure of illicit arms — Independent witness available but not joined — No explanation for such lapse forthcoming — Held, in the circumstances of the case, conviction on the basis of two police officials alone not sustainable — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 5. Sans Pal Singh v. State of Delhi, (1998) 2 SCC 371: 1998 SCC (Cri) 641: AIR 1999 SC 49.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and M. Srinivasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-1998]

[298] — S. 100(4) — Appellant found in possession of 90 litres of spirit — Convicted by lower courts under S. 16(1)(a) r/w S. 61(1)(a), Punjab Excise Act, 1914 and sentenced to one year's RI and to pay a fine of Rs 500 and in default to undergo six months' RI — Appellant challenging conviction on the ground that during the search two witnesses were not summoned as required by S. 100(4) CrPC — Held, that by itself would not render conviction illegal once the court accepted the evidence of official witnesses as trustworthy — Conviction confirmed — However, sentence reduced to six months' RI as the occurrence had taken place in 1979 — Sentence of fine with default clause confirmed. Madan Lal v. State of Punjab, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 241: 1995 SCC (Cri) 834.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-8-1993]

[299] — S. 100(4) — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1985 — S. 6 — Arms Act, 1959 — S. 25 — Accused apprehended in early hours of morning in a lonely road — Not possible to procure independent witnesses — Conviction based on evidence of police officers alone not improper. Jaloba v. State of Haryana, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 197: 1990 SCC (Cri) 46.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and Kuldip Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-1989]

[300] — S. 100(4) — Witnesses of same area — Accused apprehended in midnight near police outpost along with incriminating articles — Pancha witnesses residents of same area — Held, procedure relating to search not violated — Fact that pancha witness was not residing in vicinity of seizure does not disturb acceptance of his evidence relating to seizure of contrabands and other articles — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — S. 51. Durand Didier v. UT, Goa, (1990) 1 SCC 95: 1990 SCC (Cri) 65: AIR 1989 SC 1966: (1990) 25 ECC 289.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and S. Ratnavel Pandian, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-1989]

[301] — Ss. 100(4) and (5) — Panch witness to the taking of sample of the contraband article and sealing thereof — Omission on the part of such panch witness to support the prosecution case — Effect of — Such omission by itself, held, not fatal to the prosecution case if from material on record and evidence of seizing authority the court is satisfied that the seizure was genuinely made — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — S. 51

The mere fact that a panch witness did not support the prosecution case by itself would not make the prosecution case any less acceptable, if otherwise the court is satisfied from the material on record and from the evidence of the seizing authority that such seizure was genuinely made. (Para 7). P.P. Fathima v. State of Kerala, (2003) 8 SCC 726.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2003]

[302] — Ss. 100(4) & (5) and 166(3) & (4) — Search and recovery of articles — Search witness — Witness not belonging to the locality where search taking place but brought by police along with them — Driver of the car in which investigating team came to the place — Held, can be taken as a witness for the search in absence of any material infirmity in his evidence

A witness of search other than the one from the locality even if he has been brought by the investigating agencies along with them cannot be disbelieved only on the ground that he was not of the locality where the search took place but was brought by the police along with them for the purposes of search. The evidence, however, can be rejected if it suffers from any serious infirmities or if there is any inherent inconsistency in the testimony. If there is intrinsic merit in the evidence of the witness of the search the same cannot be rejected solely on the ground that the witness is not from the locality of the search or that he was brought by the police with them. Merely because the witness in question was not of the locality and he was one of the drivers of the cars in which the investigating team came to the place of search and he was taken as a witness of search for the sake of convenience, his evidence cannot be rejected when there was no material in cross-examination to discredit his testimony. Ronny v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 3 SCC 625: 1998 SCC (Cri) 859: AIR 1998 SC 1251.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-1998]

[303] — Ss. 100(4) and 165 — Recovery — Omission on the part of investigating officer to join with him some independent persons or respectables of the locality to witness the recovery, held, devalues evidence regarding the recovery but does not render it inadmissible. State of Punjab v. Wassan Singh, (1981) 2 SCC 1: 1981 SCC (Cri) 292: AIR 1981 SC 697: (1981) 2 SCR 615: 1981 Cri LJ 410.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-1-1981]

— S. 100(5) See Ss. 100(4) and (5)
See also Ss. 100(4) & (5) and 166(3) & (4)

[304] — Ss. 100(5), 161 and 162 — Recovery of article (bloodstained knickers of deceased) on the basis of statement made by accused before police — Held, seizure memo need not be attested by any independent witness — Mere absence of independent witness when investigating officer recorded the statement of the accused and the article was recovered pursuant thereto is not sufficient ground to discard the evidence — Evidence of police officer regarding the recovery at the instance of the accused should ordinarily by believed — It is for the accused to show that such evidence is unreliable — However, position is different when search is made under Ch. VII CrPC — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 27

The circumstance relating to the recovery of the bloodstained knickers is a formidable one. Mere absence of independent witness when the investigating officer recorded the statement of A-2 and the knickers were recovered pursuant to the said statement, is not a sufficient ground to discard the evidence under Section 27 of the Evidence Act. (Para 22)

There is no requirement either under Section 27 of the Evidence Act or under Section 161 CrPC, to obtain signature of independent witnesses on the record in which statement of an accused is written. The legal obligation to call independent and respectable inhabitants of the locality to attend and witness the exercise made by the police is cast on the police officer when searches are made under Chapter VII of the Code. A search is made to find out a thing or document about which the searching officer has no prior idea where the thing or document is kept. He prowls for it either on reasonable suspicion or on some guesswork that it could possibly be ferreted out in such prowling. It is a stark reality that during searches the team which conducts the search would have to meddle with lots of other articles and documents also and in such process many such articles or documents are likely to be displaced or even strewn helter-skelter. The legislative idea in insisting on such searches to be made in the presence of two independent inhabitants of the locality is to ensure the safety of all such articles meddled with and to protect the rights of the persons entitled thereto. But recovery of an object pursuant to the information supplied by an accused in custody is different from the searching endeavour envisaged in Chapter VII of the Code. (Para 19)

Hence it is a fallacious impression that when recovery is effected pursuant to any statement made by the accused the document prepared by the investigating officer contemporaneous with such recovery must necessarily be attested by the independent witnesses. Of course, if any such statement leads to recovery of any article it is open to the investigating officer to take the signature of any person present at that time, on the document prepared for such recovery. But if no witness was present or if no person had agreed to affix his signature on the document, it is difficult to lay down, as a proposition of law, that the document so prepared by the police officer must be treated as tainted and the recovery evidence unreliable. The court has to consider the evidence of the investigating officer who deposed to the fact of recovery based on the statement elicited from the accused on its own worth. (Para 20)

It is an archaic notion that actions of the police officer should be approached with initial distrust. It is time now to start placing at least initial trust on the actions and the documents made by the police. At any rate, the court cannot start with the presumption that the police records are untrustworthy. As a proposition of law the presumption should be the other way around. That official acts of the police have been regularly performed is a wise principle of presumption and recognised even by the legislature. Hence when a police officer gives evidence in court that a certain article was recovered by him on the strength of the statement made by the accused it is open to the court to believe the version to be correct if it is not otherwise shown to be unreliable. It is for the accused, through cross-examination of witnesses or through any other materials, to show that the evidence of the police officer is either unreliable or at least unsafe to be acted upon in a particular case. If the court has any good reason to suspect the truthfulness of such records of the police the court could certainly take into account the fact that no other independent person was present at the time of recovery. But it is not a legally approvable procedure to presume the police action as unreliable to start with, nor to jettison such action merely for the reason that police did not collect signatures of independent persons in the documents made contemporaneous with such actions. (Para 21). State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi) v. Sunil, (2001) 1 SCC 652: 2001 SCC (Cri) 248: 2001 Cri LJ 504.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-2000]

Transport Commr., A.P., Hyderabad v. S. Sardar Ali, (1983) 4 SCC 245: 1983 SCC (Cri) 827: AIR 1983 SC 1225, relied on

State v. Ramesh, 1998 Cri LJ 4233 (Del), reversed

—S. 101 See S. 1(2) proviso and Ss. 93-105

See also Ss. 93 to 101 and 165

—S. 102 See S. 1(2) proviso and Ss. 93-105

See also Ss. 51 and 102

See also Ss. 100, 102

See also Ss. 100, 102, 103 and 165

See also Ss. 104, 102 and 165

See also Ss. 165 and 102

See also Ss. 165, 102 and 100

See also Ss. 165, 102, 100(4) and 154

See also Ss. 165, 102, 166(3) & (4) and 100(4)

See also Ss. 437, 439 and 102

See also Ss. 457 and 102

[305] — S. 102 — Executive power of State in respect of search and seizure — Extent of, depends upon facts and circumstances in each case — Exercise of the executive power for search and seizure on check-posts and barriers set up under S. 28 of U.P. Sales Tax Act for verification and control of essential commodities, held, justified — U.P. Sales Tax Act, 1948 (15 of 1948) — Ss. 28 and 28-A to 28-C — U.P. Sales Tax Rules, 1948, R. 83(4) — Essential Commodities Act, 1955 — S. 6-A — Constitution of India — Art. 162

The executive power of search and seizure is a necessary concomitant of a welfare State. Many questions arising in the field of search and seizure are factual in nature. Every factual variation presents not only a new problem, but also a new constitutional question. In this field the decisions of courts do not help in clarifying the law and are of little precedential value.

From the point of view either of Entry 54, List II, or of Art. 301 of the Constitution, there is no question of any lack of competence in the State legislature to set up the checkposts and barriers on the State's borders. These check-posts and barriers though set up under the sales tax law can be utilised as a machinery for due observance of other laws and orders, e.g. for verification and control of movement of wheat by traders on private account from the State of Uttar Pradesh to various other States. Bishambhar Dayal Chandra Mohan v. State of U.P., (1982) 1 SCC 39: 1982 SCC (Cri) 53: AIR 1982 SC 33: (1982) 1 SCR 1137.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-11-1981]

[306] — S. 102 — Seizure and confiscation of bricks by Collector in exercise of power under — Exercise of such statutory power is not a sovereign act so as to disentitle the aggrieved person to sue State of M.P. — M.P. Ceiling on Agricultural Holdings Act, 1960 (20 of 1960) — S. 228(7) and (8). Bhuri Bai v. State of M.P., 1987 Supp SCC 690.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy, M.H. Kania and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-1987]

Kasturi Lal v. State of U.P., AIR 1965 SC 1039: 1965 (2) Cri LJ 144 and State of Gujarat v. Memon Mahomed, AIR 1967 SC 1885, relied on

[307] — S. 102 — Freezing of all bank accounts of a Mutt and its connected bodies, merely on ground that head of the said Mutt was involved in a murder case — Propriety — Held, was not proper

That apart, the order of the High Court allowing the writ petition and setting aside the direction issued regarding freezing of the accounts has attained finality as the same has not been challenged in any higher forum. The High Court rightly observed that an organisation (Mutt) cannot be paralysed or closed down by issuing a direction under Section 102 CrPC only for the reason that the head of the Mutt and a few office-bearers are alleged to be involved in some offence. The freezing of all the accounts of the Mutt and its associated trusts and endowments is a clear pointer to the fact that the State machinery anyhow wants to paralyse the entire working of the Mutt and the associated trusts and endowments in order to put pressure upon the petitioner and other co-accused who are in any manner connected with the Mutt so that they may not be able to defend themselves. It is indeed surprising that in spite of the clear language used in sub-section (1) of Section 102 CrPC to the effect — any police officer may seize any property which may be alleged or suspected to have been stolen, or which may be found under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of any office — all the 183 accounts were frozen merely on the ground that the head of the Mutt was involved in the murder case. The action of freezing the accounts demonstrates as to what extent the State machinery can go while prosecuting the petitioner in the present case. (Paras 23 and 15). Sri Jayendra Saraswathy Swamigal (II) v. State of T.N., (2005) 8 SCC 771.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur, J. [Date of decision: 26-10-2005]

[308] — S. 102 — Omission on the part of Raid Officer to seize the case property, if on facts amounted to misconduct — Meaning of misconduct — Case-law regarding, discussed and dictionary meaning considered — Error of judgment or negligence simpliciter, held, is not misconduct — In a given case what should have been done, held, depends on the facts and circumstances of the case and no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down therefor — In the present case, Police Inspector, on receiving a complaint of alleged demand of bribe by Inspector (Malaria), constituting a raiding party comprising himself and certain others — A member of the raiding party offering tainted money to Inspector (Malaria) but the latter refusing to accept the same — Police Inspector not seizing the said tainted money — Criminal proceedings against Inspector (Malaria) ending in acquittal — However, the criminal court not pass- ing any adverse remarks against the said Police Inspector — Department however, initiating disciplinary proceedings against the Police Inspector under provisions of service rules on the charge that he had not seized the tainted money which could be an important piece of evidence in the criminal proceedings — Disciplinary authority not recording any finding of fact that the delinquent Police Inspector was guilty of an unlawful behaviour in relation to discharge of his duties in service — In such circumstances, held, the said Police Inspector could not be said to have committed any misconduct merely because in the opinion of higher authorities he ought to have seized the tainted money — Delhi Police (Punishment and Appeal) Rules, 1980, Rr. 15, 16 and 8(b)

The appellant was an Inspector in the Delhi Police and was at the relevant time posted in the Anti-Corruption Branch (for short "AC"). Allegedly, one K lodged a complaint with AC that P, Inspector (Malaria), MCD, was demanding a certain sum by way of illegal gratification from him for not challaning his godown. The appellant constituted a raiding party consisting of the complainant K (PW 2), D (PW 4) and certain other police officers including himself. The complainant produced currency notes in the said sum whereupon phenolphthalein powder was applied and the tainted money was handed over to the complainant. When the complainant attempted to pay the said amount to P, he did not accept the same. The tainted money was, therefore, not seized. P allegedly indicated that the complainant might give the same to D (PW 4) and that he in turn would accept the money from him. Thereafter, PW 4 sat on the pillion of the scooter and they reached at a petrol pump. He was arrested. However, the tainted money was returned to the complainant by the investigating officer. In the criminal proceedings the criminal court, on appreciation of evidence, disbelieved the prosecution case and acquitted P. During pendency of the said criminal proceedings, a departmental proceedings was initiated against the appellant on the charge of his omission to seize the tainted money which was allegedly an important piece of evidence. He was held guilty of the said charges and a punishment of forfeiture of one year's approved service was imposed upon him. His appeal was dismissed by the appellate authority. After unsuccessfully approaching CAT and the High Court, the appellant filed the present appeal by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that that in the peculiar facts and circumstances of the present case, the appellant could not be said to have committed any misconduct.

On the other hand, the Department supported the impugned judgment.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

A disciplinary proceeding was initiated against the appellant in terms of the provisions of the Delhi Police (Punishment and Appeal) Rules, 1980. It was, therefore, necessary for the disciplinary authority to arrive at a finding of fact that the appellant was guilty of an unlawful behaviour in relation to discharge of his duties in service, which was wilful in character. No such finding was arrived at. An error of judgment per se is not a misconduct. A negligence simpliciter also would not be a misconduct. (Para 12)

CAT opined that the acts of omission on the part of the appellant were not a mere error of judgment. On what premise the said opinion was arrived at is not clear. The Appellate Authority had categorically held that the appellant being a raiding officer should have seized the tainted money as case property. In a given case, what should have been done, is a matter which would depend on the facts and circumstances of each case. No hard-and-fast rule can be laid down therefor. The criminal court admittedly did not pass any adverse remarks against the appellant. A finding of fact was arrived at that the accused did not make demand of any amount from the complainant and thus no case has been made out against him. Therefore, in the peculiar facts and circumstances of the present case, the appellant cannot be said to have committed any misconduct. (Paras 13 to 16). Inspector Prem Chand v. Govt. of NCT of Delhi, (2007) 4 SCC 566: (2007) 2 SCC (L&S) 58: (2007) 3 LLN 106: (2007) 114 FLR 982: (2007) 4 SLR 240.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2007]

Union of India v. J. Ahmed, (1979) 2 SCC 286: 1979 SCC (L&S) 157; Zunjarrao Bhikaji Nagarkar v. Union of India, (1999) 7 SCC 409: 1999 SCC (L&S) 1299, relied on [309] — S. 102 — Penalty for confiscation, of goods — Not justified for commission or omission of acts which were lawful at the time of such commission or omission but became illegal subsequently by operation of law. J.K. Cotton Spg. & Wvg. Mills Ltd. v. Union of India, 1987 Supp SCC 350: AIR 1988 SC 191.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Pathak, C.J. and Ranganath Misra and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-10-1987]

[310] — S. 102 — Seizure — General purpose and aim of

In the very nature of things when property is seized and not recovered during a search, it is not possible to comply with the provisions of sub-sections (4) and (5) of S. 100 of the Code. In the case of a seizure under the Act, there is no provision for preparing a list of the things seized in the course of the seizure for, all those things are seized not separately but as part of the vehicle itself. But it is in the interests of the very officer or person seizing the vehicle, so that they may not be open to any charge being laid against them later, that such officer or person takes care to prepare a list of detachable things which are ordinarily not part of the vehicle and give a copy of the list to the person incharge of the vehicle at the time of the seizure. Transport Commr. v. S. Sardar Ali, Bus Owner, (1983) 4 SCC 245: 1983 SCC (Cri) 827: AIR 1983 SC 1225: 1983 Cri LJ 1506.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-1983]

[311] — Ss. 102, 100 and 165 — Search and seizure — Seized articles — Admissibility of — Need for independent witnesses — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 3 and 5

There is no such inflexible proposition of law that in the absence of independent witnesses being associated with search, the seizure cannot be relied upon. In the absence of independent witnesses during seizure operations investigating officers' evidence need not always be disbelieved. Of course, closer scrutiny of evidence is what is required. Having regard to the fact situation in the present case, the police officers cannot be faulted for not going in search of the witnesses in the locality. There is no law that the evidence of police officials in regard to seizure ought to be discarded. They took the help of Gilani (A-3) who by then was in police custody to locate the house of Shaukat (A-2) and that Gilani (A-3) was with the police, was mentioned by Afsan Guru (A-4) in her Section 313 statement. (Para 309). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Sahib Singh v. State of Punjab, (1996) 11 SCC 685: 1997 SCC (Cri) 315; Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1988) 3 SCC 609: 1988 SCC (Cri) 711, clarified

Sanjay v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2001) 3 SCC 190: 2001 SCC (Cri) 449, relied on

[312] — Ss. 102 and 104 — "Seizing" and "impounding" — Difference between — A seizure is made at a particular moment of property which was not earlier possessed, whereas impounding means to keep in custody of law and to take legal or formal possession of property after it has been seized — Documents seized by CBI under S. 104 CrPC does not amount to impounding of documents as special Act i.e. Passports Act which exists for the impounding of a passport — Passport Act, 1967 — S. 10(3)(e)

There is a difference between seizing of a document and impounding a document. A seizure is made at a particular moment when a person or authority takes into his possession some property which was earlier not in his possession. Thus, seizure is done at a particular moment of time. However, if after seizing of a property or document the said property or document is retained for some period of time, then such retention amounts to impounding of the property or document. (Para 15). Suresh Nanda v. CBI, (2008) 3 SCC 674: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 121: AIR 2008 SC 1414: 2008 Cri LJ 1599: (2008) 147 DLT 397.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2008]

[313] — Ss. 102 and 451 — Search and seizure — Vehicle seized by police — Return of — Procedure

Once a car is seized in connection with a case it can be returned pursuant to the order of a competent court only. George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: AIR 1998 SC 1376: 1998 Cri LJ 2034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-3-1998]

[314] — S. 102(1) — Police officer's power to seize property — Pre-conditions for applicability — Word "property" — Import of — Bank account of accused or his relation, held, constitutes "property" — If circumstances exist creating suspicion of commission of any offence in relation to the bank account, S. 102(1) is attracted empowering the police officer investigating the offence to seize the bank account and issue order prohibiting the account from being operated upon — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — Ss. 13 & 16

The CBI, ACB, Mumbai registered FIR against the respondent and others under Sections 120-B, 467, 468, 471 and 420 IPC and Section 13(2) r/w Section 13(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. The respondent at the material time was an Architect and Town Planner in the Deptt. of Town Planning of the Union Territory of Daman and Diu. The original plan of Daman was prepared by the Department of Architecture and Planning and was approved by the Town and Country Planning Board. In the approved plan, various zones were earmarked for industries, roads, defence, agriculture etc. It was alleged that the respondent and one D entered into a conspiracy by which D caused a forged map of Daman to be prepared, thereby increasing the industrial zone. On the basis of the same forged map, the respondent issued false certificates indicating that the land fell within the industrial zone. On account of such act, the land prices shot up from Rs 100 to Rs 110 per square metre to Rs 800 to Rs 1600 per square metre, and in the process, accused persons caused pecuniary advantage to be gained by the landowners. Pursuant to the FIR the premises of the respondent at Daman and the premises of his mother at Calcutta were searched and certain incriminating documents were seized. Lockers in banks held jointly by mother and brother and mother and sister of the respondent were also searched and sealed. The investigating officer issued instructions to the Managers of different banks not to allow the accounts to be operated upon. The mother of the respondent then filed an application before the Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate under Section 457 CrPC to allow her to operate the bank account and for return of the documents and articles seized, claiming that they belonged to her. The Magistrate granted the relief in respect of the locker in question but refused to allow the mother to operate the bank account. The matter was carried to the High Court which held that the bank account of an accused or any relation of the accused cannot be held to be "property" within the meaning of Section 102 CrPC and, therefore, the investigating officer had no powers either to seize the said bank account or to issue any order prohibiting the operation of the bank account.

Allowing the appeal of the State,

Held :

The High Court in the present case erred in taking the view it did. (Para 12)

A plain reading of sub-section (1) of Section 102 indicates that the police officer has the power to seize any property which may be found under circumstances creating suspicion of the commission of any offence. The legislature having used the expression "any property" and "any offence" have made the applicability of the provisions wide enough to cover offences created under any Act. But the two preconditions for applicability of Section 102(1) are that it must be "property" and secondly, in respect of the said property there must have been suspicion of commission of any offence. (Para 6)

The bank account of the accused or any of his relations is "property" within the meaning of Section 102 CrPC and a police officer in course of investigation can seize or prohibit the operation of the said account if such assets have direct links with the commission of the offence which the police officer is investigating into. Corruption in public offices has become so rampant that it has become difficult to cope up with the same. Then again the time consumed by the courts in concluding the trials is another factor which should be borne in mind in interpreting the provisions of Section 102 CrPC and the underlying object engrafted therein, inasmuch as if there can be no order of seizure of the bank account of the accused then the entire money deposited in a bank which is ultimately held in the trial to be the outcome of the illegal gratification, could be withdrawn by the accused and the courts would be powerless to get the said money which has any direct link with the commission of the offence committed by the accused as a public officer. Under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, in the matter of imposition of fine under sub-section (2) of Section 13, the legislatures have provided that the courts in fixing the amount of fine shall take into consideration the amount or the value of the property which the accused person has obtained by committing the offence or where the conviction is for an offence referred to in clause (e) of sub-section (1) of Section 13, the pecuniary resources or property for which the accused person is unable to account satisfactorily. The interpretation given in respect of the power of seizure under Section 102 CrPC is in accordance with the intention of the legislature engrafted in Section 16 of the Prevention of Corruption Act. (Para 12)

Though law has been laid down as above, but so far as the present case is concerned, the impugned order of the High Court has already been given effect to and the accused has been operating his account, and so, the same need not be interfered with. (Para 12). State of Maharashtra v. Tapas D. Neogy, (1999) 7 SCC 685: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1352: (1999) 98 Comp Cas 626.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-1999]

Purbanchal Road Service v. State, 1991 Cri LJ 2798 (Gau); Textile Traders Syndicate Ltd. v. State of U.P., AIR 1960 All 405: 1960 Cri LJ 871; Malnad Construction Co. v. State of Karnataka, 1994 Cri LJ 645 (Kant); Swaran Sabharwal v. Commr. of Police, 1988 Cri LJ 241 (Del) (DB), overruled

P.K. Parmar v. Union of India, 1992 Cri LJ 2499 (Del); Bharath Overseas Bank v. Minu Publication, 1988 MLW (Cri) 106; Bharat Overseas Bank Ltd. v. Prema Ramalingam, 1991 MLW (Cri) 353; Gurcharan Singh (Dr.) v. State of Punjab, (1978) 80 Punj LR 514 (DB), approved

[315] — S. 102(3) — Non-production of seizure list, held, would not affect the prosecution case — Lapses, when do not affect the prosecution case — Held, non-production of seizure list is, undoubtedly, a lapse on the part of the prosecution — However, if there exists credible evidence on record, such a lapse would not affect the prosecution case — Lapses, if do not have the effect of causing any prejudice to the accused, cannot be used to impeach the testimony of eyewitnesses — Criminal Trial — Appreciation of Evidence — Infirmities/Lapses/Omissions

Non-production of the seizure list in court as a part of the records is undoubtedly, a lapse on the part of the prosecution but the issue, however, needs to be considered from the point of view of credibility of the witnesses. In the event of there being credible evidence on record, a lapse pertaining to non-production of seizure list would not really affect the case of prosecution in any way. The issue has to be considered from the point of view of prejudice to the accused. (Para 14)

Although there are lapses in the prosecution case, but the question that arises for consideration is whether any prejudice has been caused by reason of such a lapse. If the answer thereto is in the affirmative it would definitely have a serious impact on the trial. But in case if it is in the negative no prejudice could be said to have been caused to the accused and correspondingly question of the trial being vitiated on that ground would not arise at all. The eyewitnesses' account as available on record cannot but be termed to be trustworthy and by reason therefor, the lapses stand overshadowed by the testimony of the eyewitnesses. (Para 15). Sukhdev Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2001) 8 SCC 86: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1416: AIR 2001 SC 3678.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2001]

Shivnath Singh v. State of U.P., (1994) 2 SCC 563: 1994 SCC (Cri) 568, considered

Baleshwar Mandal v. State of Bihar, (1997) 7 SCC 219: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1042, relied on

— S. 103 See S. 1(2) proviso and Ss. 93- 105

See also Ss. 100, 102, 103 and 165

— S. 104 See S. 1(2) proviso and Ss. 93- 105

See also Ss. 102 and 104

[316] — S. 104 — Power to impound documents and to recover duty with or without penalty — Held, has to be construed strictly and would be sustained only when falling within the four corners and letter of the law — Passports Act, 1967 — S. 10 — Constitution of India — Arts. 19(1)(a) & (d) and 21 — Stamp Act, 1899 — Ss. 33, 34, 35 and 38

Power to impound a document and to recover duty with or without penalty thereon has to be construed strictly and would be sustained only when falling within the four corners and letter of the law. This has been the consistent view of the courts. (Para 14). District Registrar and Collector v. Canara Bank, (2005) 1 SCC 496: AIR 2005 SC 186: (2005) 126 Comp Cas 356.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and Ashok Bhan, J. [Date of decision: 1-11-2004]

[317] — Ss. 104, 102 and 165 — Impounding of passport — Permissibility of, under CrPC — Appellant a non-resident Indian; search conducted by CBI and passport seized — Application moved by appellant before Special Judge, CBI for release of passport allowed but was set aside by High Court in criminal revision — Order of High Court set aside — Held, in case of impounding of passport, resort should be had to S. 10(3)(e) of Passports Act which specifically deals with impounding of passport and not S. 104 CrPC which allows a court to impound document or thing produced before it — Passports Act is a special Act, it would override the provisions of CrPC for the purposes of impounding of passport — Passport Act, 1967 — Ss. 10(3)(e) and 10-A

The passport of the appellant, an NRI as well as other documents were seized by the respondent from New Delhi. The said search and seizure was pursuant to an FIR. The passport seized during the search was retained by the CBI officials. An application was moved by the appellant before the Special Judge, CBI, New Delhi praying for release of his passport. The learned Special Judge, directed the release of the passport to the appellant by imposing upon him certain conditions. Aggrieved, CBI, the respondent preferred a criminal revision before the High Court. The High Court, reversed the order of the learned Special Judge and refused to release the passport to the appellant. Aggrieved against the order of the High Court, present appeal, by special leave, has been preferred by the appellant.

Contention of the appellant was that power and jurisdiction to impound the passport of any individual has to be exercised under the Passports Act, 1967 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act"). Specifically under sub-section (3)(e) of Section 10 of the Act.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

When Section 104 CrPC and Section 10 of the Act are read together, under CrPC, the court is empowered to impound any document or thing produced before it whereas the Act speaks specifically of impounding of the passport. Thus, the Act is a special Act relating to a matter of passport, whereas Section 104 CrPC authorises the court to impound document or thing produced before it. Where there is a special Act dealing with specific subject, resort should be had to that Act instead of general Act providing for the matter connected with the specific Act. As the Passports Act is a special Act, the rule that "general provision should yield to the specific provision" is to be applied. Thus, by necessary implication, the power of court to impound any document or thing produced before it would exclude passport. The maxim generalia specialibus non derogant applies to such situation. Hence, impounding of a passport cannot be done by the court under Section 104 CrPC though it can impound any other document or thing. (Paras 9, 10, 11 and 18)

While the police may have the power to seize a passport under Section 102(1) CrPC, it does not have the power to impound the same. Impounding of a passport can only be done by the Passport Authority under Section 10(3) of the Passports Act, 1967. Hence, while the police may have power to seize a passport under Section 102 CrPC if it is permissible within the authority given under Section 102 CrPC, it does not have power to retain or impound the same, because that can only be done by the Passport Authority under Section 10(3) of the Passports Act. Hence, if the police seizes a passport (which it has power to do under Section 102 CrPC), thereafter the police must send it along with a letter to the Passport Authority clearly stating that the seized passport deserves to be impounded for one of the reasons mentioned in Section 10(3) of the Act. It is thereafter for the Passport Authority to decide whether to impound the passport or not. Since impounding of a passport has civil consequences, the Passport Authority must give an opportunity of hearing to the person concerned before impounding his passport. It is well settled that any order which has civil consequences must be passed after giving opportunity of hearing to a party. (Paras 12, 14 and 16)

There is a difference between seizing of a document and impounding a document. A seizure is made at a particular moment when a person or authority takes into his possession some property which was earlier not in his possession. Thus, seizure is done at a particular moment of time. However, if after seizing of a property or document the said property or document is retained for some period of time, then such retention amounts to impounding of the property or document. (Para 15)

In the present case, neither the Passport Authority passed any order of impounding nor was any opportunity of hearing given to the appellant by the Passport Authority for impounding the document. It was only the CBI authority which has retained possession of the passport (which in substance amounts to impounding it) from October 2006. This was clearly illegal. Under Section 10-A of the Act retention by the Central Government can only be for four weeks. Thereafter it can only be retained by an order of the Passport Authority under Section 10(3). (Para 17)

For the aforesaid reasons, the impugned order of the High Court is set aside and the respondent is directed to hand over the passport to the appellant within a week from today. However, it shall be open to the respondent to approach the Passport Authorities under Section 10 or the autho- rities under Section 10-A of the Act for impounding the passport of the appellant in accordance with law. (Para 19). Suresh Nanda v. CBI, (2008) 3 SCC 674: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 121: AIR 2008 SC 1414: 2008 Cri LJ 1599: (2008) 147 DLT 397.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2008]

Damji Valji Shah v. LIC, AIR 1966 SC 135; Gobind Sugar Mills Ltd. v. State of Bihar, (1999) 7 SCC 76; Belsund Sugar Co. Ltd. v. State of Bihar, (1999) 9 SCC 620, followed

State of Orissa v. Binapani Dei, AIR 1967 SC 1269, relied on

—S. 105 See S. 1(2) proviso and Ss. 93- 105

[318] — Ch. VII-A (S. 105-A to S. 105-L) and Ss. 166-A & 166-B — Inapplicability of Ch. VII-A to local offences or properties earned therefrom — Held, said provisions are not ordinary law of land, and are applicable only to offences which have international ramifications — They impose stringent measures for attachment and forfeiture of properties earned by offences, by way of reciprocal arrangement in contracting countries

— Provisions thereunder are supplemental to special provisions contained in Ss. 166-A & 166-B, and have nothing to do with investigation into offences in general — In the instant case, offences alleged were local, and even properties were not shown to be connected with crimes mentioned in Statement of Objects and Reasons of amending Act 40 of 1993, which had inserted Ch. VII-A — Further, no connection was established between alleged crimes and properties — Hence, impugned order quashing forfeiture proceedings of such properties calls for no interference (Paras 5 to 10, 14, 16, 18 and 19). State of M.P. v. Balram Mihani, (2010) 2 SCC 602.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2010]

[319] — Ss. 105-B, 156, 157 and 166-B — CBI — Its role as National Central Bureau (NCB) of Interpol — Held, this role is independent of its role under the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 — CBI as NCB derives its authority from constitution of Interpol and not from DSPE Act — CBI can therefore perform functions under the Extradition Act, 1962 despite non-existence of any specific provision to this effect in DSPE Act — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), S. 5 — Extradition Act, 1962, Ss. 5 to 10 and 34-B. Bhavesh Jayanti Lakhani v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 9 SCC 551.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[320] — Ss. 105-B and 105-C — Where language of a statute is extremely general and not clear, contextual background has to be taken into consideration for arriving at clear interpretation — S. 105-B(2) CrPC, 1973, though starts with a non obstante clause, when read in entirety refers to person in "contracting State", while Ss. 105-B & 105-C CrPC, start with words "where a court in India" — Thus, if Ch. VII-A was meant for general offences and properties earned therefrom, such a phraseology would not have been used — Hence, Ch. VII-A is a specific chapter relating to specified offences therein and has nothing to do with local offences or properties earned therefrom (Para 17). State of M.P. v. Balram Mihani, (2010) 2 SCC 602.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2010]

— S. 106 See also S. 106, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 976 in Vol. 2

[321] — Ss. 106 and 107 — Appellant ordered by lower court to execute bond for observing good conduct for two years — Operation of order stayed by Supreme Court on admission of appeal — Disposal of appeal after six years — Held, the appellant need not execute the bond as he had not attracted any complaint of any untoward behaviour or misconduct — As the observance of good conduct would now, if at all, have to be in future, the operation of the order need not be revived at this distance of time, though the appeal has to be dismissed otherwise — Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 — S. 19. Brij Gopal Chaturvedi v. State of M.P., 1997 SCC (Cri) 569: 1995 Cri LJ 2117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1995]

— S. 107 See also S. 107, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 976 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 107 See Ss. 21, 20 and 107

See also Ss. 106 and 107

See also Ss. 145 and 107

[322] — S. 107 — Applicability — Nature of proceedings under

The nature of proceedings under S. 107 'is of preventive justice'. It is to be invoked when any person is likely to commit a breach of peace or disturb public tranquillity. The proceedings under S. 107 are for public peace and tranquillity whereas those under S. 145 relate to disputes regarding possession between parties concerning any land or water or boundaries thereof. Prakash Chand Sachdeva v. State, (1994) 1 SCC 471: 1994 SCC (Cri) 438: AIR 1994 SC 1436: 1994 Cri LJ 2117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-1993]

[323] — S. 107 — Evidentiary value of statement recorded under — Held on facts, trial court committed an error of law in treating the statement recorded in proceedings under S. 107 of a court witness not present at the scene and time of occurrence as substantive evidence while rejecting the substantive and reliable testimony of eyewitnesses. Naunidh v. State of U.P., 1981 Supp SCC 62: 1982 SCC (Cri) 138: AIR 1982 SC 1299.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, Baharul Islam and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1981]

[324] — S. 110 — Security of good behaviour from habitual offenders — Wide, vague and generalised words of, must be read down so as to be in conformity with Article 21 — Court must be satisfied that the person kept in custody under S. 110 is sure to commit offences mentioned if he is not so held and should not allow poor and helpless persons to be detained ritualistically — No circumstances placed before the court, justifying keeping the petitioner, a poor and old man above 70 years, longer in custody under S. 110 — Hence, trial Court directed to drop proceedings against him as well as against another such co-prisoner in the interest of justice — Constitution of India — Arts. 14, 19 and 21

Words of wide import, vague amplitude and far too generalised to be safe in the hands of the police cannot be constitutionalised in the context of Article 21 unless read down to be as a fair and reasonable legislation with reverence for human rights. So read, only a narrow signification can be attached to the words in clauses (a) to (g) of S. 110. Expressions like 'by habit', 'habitual', 'desperate', 'dangerous, 'hazardous' cannot be flung in the face of a man with laxity of semantics. The court must insist on specificity of facts and a consistent course of conduct convincing enough to draw the rigorous inference that by confirmed habit, the counter-petitioner is sure to commit the offences mentioned if he is not kept captive. The exercise of power under S. 110 should not be an idle ritual deprived of reality. The trial Magistrates must discharge their duties, when trying cases under S. 110, with great responsibility and whenever the counter-petitioner is a prisoner, must give him the facility of being defended by counsel now that Article 21 has been reinforced by Article 39-A. Otherwise the order to bind over will be bad, and void. If men can be whisked away by the police and imprisoned for long months and the court can keep the cases pending without thought to the fact that an old man is lying in cellular confinement without hope of his case being disposed of, Article 21, read with Articles 14 and 19 of the Constitution, remain symbolic and scriptural rather than a shield against unjust deprivation. Gopalanachari v. State of Kerala, 1980 Supp SCC 649: 1981 SCC (Cri) 546: AIR 1981 SC 674: 1981 Cri LJ 337.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, R.S. Pathak and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-11-1980]

— S. 117 See Ss. 151/117

Sections 125 to 128 — Maintenance

— Ss. 125 to 128 See also Ss. 488 to 490, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1260 et seq. in Vol. 2

See also under FAMILY AND PERSONAL LAWS

Synopsis

(1) Generally 134
(2) Relevance of personal law 139
(3) Applicability to Muslim women 142
(4) Matters to be established for entitlement to maintenance under 142
(5) Second marriage, desertion, previous wife, refusal to live with husband 148
(6) Second wife 156
(7) Maintenance in case of live-in relationship/Presumed marriage/De facto marriage/Cohabitation 159
(8) Maintenance in case of divorce (including divorced Muslim women) 160
(9) Maintenance of children 170
(10) Maintenance of parents 175
(11) Territorial jurisdiction 178
(12) Quantum of maintenance 180
(13) Interim maintenance 184
(14) Date of entitlement to maintenance 186
(15) Cancellation or modification of maintenance order 187
(16) Practice and Procedure 188
(17) Enforcement of maintenance order/Payment in instalments 189
(18) Interference by High Court/Supreme Court 190

— S. 125 See Ss. 126(1) and 125
See also Ss. 127 and 125
See also Ss. 127(3) and 125
See also Ss. 127(3)(b) and 125
See also Ss. 397 and 125
See also Ss. 397(3) and 125
See also Ss. 397(3), 401, 482 and 125 & 126(2)
See also Ss. 399 and 125
See also Ss. 401 and 125
See also Ss. 438 and 125

See also Ss. 482 & 125
See also Ss. 484(2)(b), 125 and 127
— S. 125(1)(c) See Ss. 125(1)(b) and (c)
— S. 125(4) See Ss. 125(1), (4) and (5)
— S. 125(4) second proviso See Ss. 125(3) second proviso and (4)
— S. 125(5) See Ss. 125(1), (4) and (5)
— S. 126(2) See Ss. 397(3), 401, 482 and 125 & 126(2)
— S. 127 See Ss. 125 and 127
See also S. 406 and S. 127
See also Ss. 484(2)(b), 125 and 127
— S. 127(2) See Ss. 362 and 127(2)
— S. 127(3)(b) See Ss. 125 and 127(3)(b)
— S. 128 See Ss. 125(3) and 128

Section/Sub-section wise research of Sections 125 to 128:

Section 125
§[325]-§[342], §[344]-§[348], §[350]-§[367], §[373], §[381]-§[386], §[389]-§[397], §[401]-§[406], §[408]-§[417], §[421]-§[426], §[428]-§[436], §[438]-§[439], §[446]-§[457], §[459], §[461], §[463]-§[468], §[470]-§[472], §[476]-§[487], §[489], §[492]-§[496]
Section 125(1)
§[368], §[387]
Section 125(1)(b)
§[398]-§[400], §[418]-§[420], §[427], §[437], §[458]
Section 125(1)(c)
§[427]
Section 125(1)(d)
§[440]-§[441]
Section 125(2)
§[473]-§[475]
Section 125(3)
§[343], §[369]-§[372], §[374]-§[380], §[388], §[469], §[488], §[490]
Section 125(4)
§[387], §[400], §[407]
Section 125(5)
§[387]
Section 126
§[326]
Section 126(1)
§[330], §[442]-§[443], §[445], §[448]
Section 126(1)(a)
§[444]
Section 127
§[326], §[338], §[386], §[406], §[460]-§[461]
Section 127(3)
§[477]
Section 127(3)(b)
§[349]-§[350], §[397], §[462], §[478]
Section 128
§[326], §[491]

(1) Generally

See also Ss. 125 to 128, '(2) Relevance of personal law',
'(4) Matters to be established for entitlement to maintenance under', and
'(16) Practice and Procedure', below

[325] — S. 125 CrPC, held, is a measure of social legislation and is to be construed liberally for the welfare and benefit of the wife and the children (Para 8). Shantha v. B.G. Shivananjappa, (2005) 4 SCC 468: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1089: AIR 2005 SC 2410: 2005 Cri LJ 2615.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2005]

[326] — Ch. IX (Ss. 125 to 128) — Jurisdiction of Family Courts under Family Courts Act, 1984 in matters relating to proceedings under Ch. IX CrPC — Preamble and Prefatory Note — Statement of Objects and Reasons — Objects of the Act, restated — The Act, inter alia, seeks to exclusively provide within jurisdiction of Family Courts the matters relating to maintenance, including proceedings under Ch. IX CrPC — Family Courts Act, 1984, Preamble and Prefatory Note (Para 13). Shabana Bano v. Imran Khan, (2010) 1 SCC 666.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2009]

[327] — S. 125 — Provision under — Object of — Approach while construction of said provision — Constitution of India — Arts. 15(3) & 39

Section 125 CrPC is enacted for social justice and specially to protect women and children as also old and infirm poor parents and falls within the constitutional sweep of Article 15(3) reinforced by Article 39 of the Constitution. The provision gives effect to the natural and fundamental duty of a man to maintain his wife, children and parents so long as they are unable to maintain themselves. (Para 9)

The sections of statutes calling for construction by courts are not petrified print but vibrant words with social functions to fulfil. The brooding presence of the constitutional empathy for the weaker sections like women and children must inform interpretation if it has to have social relevance. So viewed, it is possible to be selective in picking out that interpretation out of two alternatives which advances the cause — the cause of the derelicts. (Para 14). Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2005 SC 1809: 2005 Cri LJ 2141: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2005]

Captain Ramesh Chander Kaushal v. Veena Kaushal, (1978) 4 SCC 70, 1978 SCC (Cri) 508, relied on [328] — S. 125 — Maintenance proceedings — Scope and object — Held, S. 125 is a measure of social justice specially enacted to protect women and children and falls within constitutional sweep of Art. 15(3) reinforced by Art. 39 — Object is to prevent vagrancy and destitution — It provides a speedy remedy for supply of food, clothing and shelter to the deserted wife — It gives effect to fundamental rights and natural duties of a man to maintain his wife, children and parents when they are unable to maintain themselves — Constitution of India — Arts. 15(3) and 39 (Para 6). Chaturbhuj v. Sita Bai, (2008) 2 SCC 316: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 356: AIR 2008 SC 530: (2008) 1 KLT 41: 2008 Cri LJ 727: (2008) 105 Cut LT 729: (2008) 2 Guj LR 1159.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-2007]

Captain Ramesh Chander Kaushal v. Veena Kaushal, (1978) 4 SCC 70: 1978 SCC (Cri) 508; Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787, relied on [329] — S. 125 — Maintenance of wives, children and parents — Purpose — Measure of social justice to prevent vagrancy and destitution — CrPC, 1898, S. 488 (Paras 18 to 25). Chanmuniya v. Virendra Kumar Singh Kushwaha, (2011) 1 SCC 141.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-2010]

Jagir Kaur v. Jaswant Singh, AIR 1963 SC 1521: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 413; Nanak Chand v. Chandra Kishore Aggarwal, (1969) 3 SCC 802: 1970 SCC (Cri) 127; Capt. Ramesh Chander Kaushal v. Veena Kaushal, (1978) 4 SCC 70: 1978 SCC (Cri) 508; Vimala v. Veeraswamy, (1991) 2 SCC 375: 1991 SCC (Cri) 442; Mohd. Ahmed Khan v. Shah Bano Begum, (1985) 2 SCC 556: 1985 SCC (Cri) 245, relied on [330] — Ss. 125, 126(1) and Ch. IX — Family Courts Act, 1984 — Ss. 7(2)(a) and 8(b) — Maintenance petition — Jurisdiction — Petition filed in Family Court of the district concerned — Respondent residing in same district but in territorial jurisdiction of another Magistrate — Dismissal of maintenance petition on ground of territorial jurisdiction — Held, an application under S. 125 has to be taken against any person in any district where the person is residing — So jurisdiction for filing any proceeding under S. 125 would be in the district itself where the Family Court for the district is situated — Hence, petition had been rightly filed before Family Court, since under S. 8(b) Magistrate's jurisdiction under Ch. IX CrPC has been excluded — Matter therefore remanded to Family Court for fresh consideration (Paras 11 and 14 to 16). Dawalsab v. Khajasab, (2009) 14 SCC 660: (2009) 80 AIC 71 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-7-2009]

[331] — S. 125 — Obligation of husband and son or daughter to maintain his wife or his/her mother — Nature of — Plea of inability due to financial constraints not acceptable — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — Ss. 18 and 20

According to the Law of the Land with regard to maintenance, there is an obligation of the husband to maintain his wife which does not arise by reason of any contract — express or implied — but out of jural relationship of husband and wife consequent to the performance of marriage. Such an obligation of the husband to maintain his wife arises irrespective of the fact whether he has or has no property, as it is considered an imperative duty and a solemn obligation of the husband to maintain his wife. The husband cannot be heard saying that he is unable to maintain due to financial constraints so long as he is capable of earning. Similarly, it is obligatory on the part of a son to maintain his aged father and mother by reason of personal obligation. Under the old Hindu law, this obligation was imposed on the son alone, but now the present-day Hindu law extends this obligation both on sons and daughters. In this connection, it is relevant to point out that according to sub-section (1) of Section 18 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, a Hindu wife is entitled to the maintenance from her husband during her lifetime. She is entitled to claim maintenance from her husband so long as she is chaste subject to the conditions laid down in sub-section (2) of Section 18 of the said Act. Under the present law, as said earlier, both son and daughter are liable to maintain aged or infirm parents including childless stepmother, when the latter is unable to maintain herself. It is well settled that a son has to maintain his mother irrespective of the fact whether he inherits any property or not from his father, as on the basis of the relationship alone he owes a duty and an obligation, legal and moral, to maintain his mother who has given birth to him. Further, according to Section 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, a Hindu is under a legal obligation to maintain his wife, minor sons, unmarried daughters and aged or infirm parents. The obligation to maintain them is personal, legal and absolute in character and arises from the very existence of the relationship between the parties. Kirtikant D. Vadodaria v. State of Gujarat, (1996) 4 SCC 479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1996]

[332] — S. 125 — Constitutionality of — Challenged on ground of unreasonably limiting the maintenance to Rs 500 — Nature of S. 125 pointed out — It does not provide for determination of civil liabilities of parties — No case for issuing rule nisi made out. Inderjit Kaur v. Union of India, (1990) 1 SCC 344: 1990 SCC (Cri) 132.

(1) Generally (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jagannatha Shetty and K.N. Saikia, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-1-1989]

[333] — S. 125 — Held, proceedings under, are of a civil nature (Para 14). Vijay Kumar Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2004) 5 SCC 196: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1576: AIR 2004 SC 2123: (2004) 2 KLT 435: (2004) 3 Mah LJ 1101: (2004) 3 MPLJ 560: 2004 Cri LJ 2047.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-2004]

[334] — S. 125 — Maintenance proceedings — Object of — "Unable to maintain herself" — Meaning of — Held, is not to punish a person for his past neglect, but to prevent vagrancy by compelling those who can provide support to those who are unable to support themselves and who have a moral claim to support — "Unable to maintain herself" — Meaning of — Means inability of wife to maintain herself in the way she was used to in the place of her husband

The respondent wife had filed an application before the trial court under Section 125 CrPC claiming maintenance from the appellant husband. The appellant and the respondent had entered into marital knot about four decades back and for more than two decades they were living separately. In the application it was claimed that she was unemployed and unable to maintain herself.

Considering the evidence on record, the trial court found that the respondent applicant had no sufficient means to maintain herself and hence direction to pay her Rs 1500 p.m. was given. Revision filed thereagainst was dismissed. Application was filed by the appellant in the High Court under Section 482 CrPC. The High Court noticed that the conclusions had been arrived at on appreciation of evidence and, therefore, there was no scope for any interference. Hence the present appeal.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The object of the maintenance proceedings is not to punish a person for his past neglect, but to prevent vagrancy by compelling those who can provide support to those who are unable to support themselves and who have a moral claim to support. The phrase "unable to maintain herself" in the instant case would mean that means available to the deserted wife while she was living with her husband and would not take within itself the efforts made by the wife after desertion to survive somehow. (Para 6). Chaturbhuj v. Sita Bai, (2008) 2 SCC 316: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 356: AIR 2008 SC 530: (2008) 1 KLT 41: 2008 Cri LJ 727: (2008) 105 Cut LT 729: (2008) 2 Guj LR 1159.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-2007]

[335] — S. 125 — Nature and scope of jurisdiction of Magistrate under — Power to pass interim order based on prima facie satisfaction — Held, magistrate has implied power under, on being prima facie satisfied on the basis of an affidavit filed by the applicant for maintenance, to pass interim order directing the person from whom the maintenance is claimed to pay a reasonable sum by way of maintenance to the applicant pending final disposal of the application

The jurisdiction of a magistrate under Chap. IX of the Code is not strictly a criminal jurisdiction. While passing an order for maintenance under it, the magistrate does not impose any punishment on such person for a crime committed by him. It does not really create any serious new obligation unknown to Indian social life. It contains a summary remedy for securing some reasonable sum by way of maintenance, subject to a decree, if any, which may be made in a civil court in a given case provided the Personal Law applicable to the person concerned authorises the enforcement of any such right to maintenance. The Code, however, provides a quick remedy to protect the applicant against starvation and to tide over immediate difficulties. It is, therefore, the duty of the court to interpret the provisions in Chap. IX in such a way that the construction placed on them may not defeat the very object of the legislation. In absence of any express prohibition under S. 125 and having regard to the nature of jurisdiction exercised by a magistrate thereunder, as also the provisions of S. 7(2)(a) of the Family Courts Act, 1984 passed recently by Parliament proposing to transfer the jurisdiction exercisable by magistrate under S. 125 of the Code to the Family Courts, S. 125 should be interpreted as conferring power by necessary implication on the magistrate to pass an order directing a person against whom an application is made under it to pay a reasonable sum by way of interim maintenance subject to the other conditions referred to therein pending final disposal of the application. A contrary view is likely to result in grave hardship to the applicant, who may have no means to subsist until the final order is passed. The recognition of such implied power may lead to passing of interim orders in few cases where liability to pay maintenance may not exist, but the prejudice caused thereby to the person against whom it is made is minimal as it can be set right quickly after hearing both the parties. The magistrate may, however, insist upon an affidavit being filed by or on behalf of the applicant concerned stating the grounds in support of the claim for interim maintenance to satisfy himself that there is a prima facie case for making such an order. Such an order may also be made in an appropriate case ex parte pending service of notice of the application subject to any modification or even an order of cancellation that may be passed after the respondent is heard. If a civil court can pass such interim orders on affidavits, there is no reason why a magistrate should not rely on them for the purpose of issuing directions regarding payment of interim maintenance. The affidavit may be treated as supplying prima facie proof of the case of the applicant. If the allegations in the application or the affidavit are not true, it is always open to the person against whom such an order is made to show that the order is unsustainable. Savitri v. Govind Singh Rawat, (1985) 4 SCC 337: 1985 SCC (Cri) 556: AIR 1986 SC 984.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: E.S. Venkataramiah and R.B. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-1985]

[336] — S. 125 — Role of Magistrate and advocate in proceedings under

The role of the court is not that of silent spectator or of a passive agency. When a dispute is brought before the court, particularly where maintenance of a neglected wife or a minor child is in issue, the court must take genuine interest to find out the truth of the matter. The Magistrate should ask proper questions to the witnesses so as to elicit relevant evidence. The lawyer's duty is also to pay his role properly so as to save wastage of time where the wife is being unjustifiably deprived of maintenance. Sumitra Devi v. Bhikan Choudhary, (1985) 1 SCC 637: 1985 SCC (Cri) 145: AIR 1985 SC 765: 1985 Cri LJ 528.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-1985]

[337] — S. 125 — Summary remedy — Order under S. 125 does not finally determine the status, rights and obligations of the parties — The section only provides for maintenance of indigent wives, children and parents

An order passed in an application under Section 125 CrPC does not finally determine the rights and obligations of the parties and the said section is enacted with a view to provide a summary remedy for providing maintenance to a wife, children and parents. After not disputing the paternity of the child and after accepting the fact that the marriage ceremony was performed, though not legally perfect as contended, it would hardly lie in the mouth of the appellant to contend in proceedings under Section 125 CrPC that there was no valid marriage as essential rites were not performed at the time of the said marriage. The provision under Section 125 is not to be utilised for defeating the rights conferred by the legislature on the destitute women, children or parents who are victims of the social environment. (Paras 9 and 10). Dwarika Prasad Satpathy v. Bidyut Prava Dixit, (1999) 7 SCC 675: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1345: AIR 1999 SC 3348.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-1999]

[338] — Ss. 125 and 127 — Scope — Right of wife to residence, held, is a part and parcel of wife's right to maintenance — Scope of said right discussed — Further held, divorced wife was also entitled to said right, but circumscribed by provisions of Ss. 25 and 24 of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 or any divorce settlement arrived at by mutual consent — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — S. 18 r/w S. 3(b) — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Ss. 25, 24 and 27 — Divorce Act, 1869 — S. 37 — Parsi Marriage and Divorce Act, 1936 — Ss. 40, 39 and 42 — Special Marriage Act, 1954 — Ss. 37 and 36 — Family Courts Act, 1984 — S. 7(1) Expln. (f)

The right of a wife to reside in the matrimonial home under personal laws is the following: a Hindu wife is entitled to be maintained by her husband. She is entitled to remain under his roof and protection. She is also entitled to separate residence if by reason of the husband's conduct or by his refusal to maintain her in his own place of residence or for other just cause she is compelled to live apart from him. Right to residence is a part and parcel of wife's right to maintenance. The right to maintenance cannot be defeated by the husband executing a Will to defeat such a right. The right has come to be statutorily recognised with the enactment of Section 18 read with Section 3(b) of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956. For the purpose of maintenance the term "wife" includes a divorced wife. However, on the status of wife being terminated by a decree of divorce under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 the rights of the divorced wife seem to be cribbed, confined and cabined by the provisions of the Hindu Marriage Act and to the rights available under Sections 25 and 27 of the Act. (Paras 12, 29 and 36). B.P. Achala Anand v. S. Appi Reddy, (2005) 3 SCC 313: AIR 2005 SC 986: (2005) 117 DLT 354: (2005) 1 KLT 904.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-2005]

(1) Generally (contd.)

[339] — S. 125 — Limited/restricted estate given to female Hindu towards her maintenance under a compromise entered in proceedings under S. 488 CrPC, 1898 after commencement of Hindu Succession Act, 1956 — Held, as soon as the property came in her possession, the limited estate was transformed into absolute estate by operation of sub-s. (1) of S. 14, HSA, 1956 notwithstanding the fact the property was acquired under an instrument of compromise containing limitations or restrictions — Sub-s. (2) of S. 14, HSA, 1956 is not attracted when property is acquired in lieu of right of maintenance — CrPC, 1898 — S. 488 — Hindu Succession Act, 1956 — S. 14. Nazar Singh v. Jagjit Kaur, (1996) 1 SCC 35: AIR 1996 SC 855.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Jeevan Reddy and S.B. Majmudar and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-1995]

[340] — S. 125 — Application for medical expenses by wife under S. 151 CPC in a proceedings initiated under S. 27 of the Special Marriage Act there being no provision for such expenses — Maintainability — Held, provisions of CPC would apply to courts exercising power under the Act — Relief can be claimed under one statute relying on the provisions of the other statute — The contention that the Special Marriage Act, 1954 does not provide for medical expenses, therefore, not tenable — CPC, 1908, S. 151 — Special Marriage Act, 1954 — Ss. 36, 37 and 27

The relationship between the respondent wife and the appellant husband was not cordial and friendly. On 16-6-2001 at about 1.30 a.m., the wife quarrelled with the husband regarding his late coming. The husband in order to avoid the quarrel came out to proceed downstairs. The wife accompanied him to stop him from going down and accidentally fell from the stairs and got severely injured. The wife was twice operated for the injuries. After the first operation, the wife lodged an FIR against her husband and in-laws and the husband had to face a criminal trial. The husband's mother died of heart attack due to shock. On 1-7-2001, the wife filed a suit for dissolution of marriage under Section 27 of the Special Marriage Act, 1954. In the suit for dissolution of marriage, prayers were also made for permanent alimony pendente lite, return of wife's goods lying with the husband and costs, etc. The wife also made a claim for reimbursement of medical expenses of Rs 3,82,262.75p. under an application under S. 151 CPC. The trial court after deducting a sum of Rs 76,181 for insurance money which was reimbursed awarded a sum of Rs 3,06,181 to the respondent wife. The High Court after deducting a sum of Rs 83,723 towards airfare which had been incurred and added by the wife in her claim, modified the order of award.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The preliminary objection as to the jurisdiction of the trial court as to maintainability of application for medical expenses filed by the wife has no substance and must be rejected. Although proceedings had been initiated in accordance with the provisions of the Special Marriage Act, 1954 and matrimonial suit was pending, it was open to the applicant wife to institute an application under Section 151 CPC for her medical expenses. Even otherwise, looking to the scheme of the Special Marriage Act, 1954, it is clear that provisions of CPC would apply to courts exercising power under the Act. Therefore, no interference is called for against the order passed by the trial court and modified by the High Court. (Para 19)

Apart from the provisions of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 or the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, the two expressions, "maintenance" and "support" in the Special Marriage Act, 1954 are comprehensive and of wide amplitude and they would take within their sweep medical expenses. The contention that no relief can be claimed under one statute relying on the provisions of the other statute as the Special Marriage Act, 1954 does not provide for medical expenses is not tenable. Reading the scheme of the Special Marriage Act, 1954, it is clear that a wife is entitled to "maintenance and support". The two terms "maintenance" and "support" are comprehensive in nature and of wide amplitude. (Paras 31 and 21 to 25)

The right of the wife to claim interim maintenance has attained finality. On the basis of material on record, the trial court, after hearing the parties, held that the wife was entitled to medical expenses which order was slightly modified by the High Court upholding her right to get medical reimbursement from her husband. There is no infirmity in the decision or reasoning of the courts below which calls for any interference in exercise of discretionary and equitable jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution. The appeal, therefore, has no substance and must be dismissed. The prayer for extension of time for payment of the amount fixed by the High Court, on the facts and in the circumstances of the case and in the ends of justice is granted till 31-12-2008. (Paras 31, 32 and 34). Rajesh Burman v. Mitul Chatterjee, (2009) 1 SCC 398.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2008]

Pradeep Kumar Kapoor v. Shailja Kapoor, AIR 1989 Del 10; Atul Sashikant Mude v. Niranjana Atul Mude, AIR 1998 Bom 234; R. Suresh v. Chandra, AIR 2003 Kant 183; Ajay Saxena v. Rachna Saxena, AIR 2007 Del 39; Mangat Mal v. Punni Devi, (1995) 6 SCC 88, relied on

Black's Law Dictionary, 6th Edn., pp. 953-54, relied on

Chand Dhawan v. Jawaharlal Dhawan, (1993) 3 SCC 406: 1993 SCC (Cri) 915; MSCO. (P) Ltd. v. Union of India, (1985) 1 SCC 51: 1985 SCC (Tax) 19, distinguished

(2) Relevance of personal law

See also under Ss. 125 to 128, '(3) Applicability to Muslim women', below

See also FAMILY AND PERSONAL LAWS

[341] — S. 125 — Secular in nature and not in conflict with any personal law — Muslim Personal Law (Shariat) Application Act, 1937 — S. 2 — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — Parsi Marriage and Divorce Act, 1936

Section 125 is a part of the Code of Criminal Procedure, not of the civil laws which define and govern the rights and obligations of the parties belonging to particular religions, like the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, the Shariat, or the Parsi Matrimonial Act. S. 125 was enacted in order to provide a quick and summary remedy to a class of persons who are unable to maintain themselves.

Neglect by a person of sufficient means to maintain these and the inability of those persons to maintain themselves are the objective criteria which determine the applicability of S. 125. Such provisions, which are essentially of a prophylactic nature, cut across the barriers of religion. True, that they do not supplant the personal law of the parties but, equally, the religion professed by the parties or the state of the personal law by which they are governed, cannot have any repercussion on the applicability of such laws unless, within the framework of the Constitution, their application is restricted to a defined category of religious groups or classes. The liability imposed by S. 125 to maintain close relatives who are indigent is founded upon the individual's obligation to the society to prevent vagrancy and destitution. That is the moral edict of the law and morality cannot be clubbed with religion. Clause (b) of the Explanation to S. 125(1), which defines 'wife' as including a divorced wife, contains no words of limitation to justify the exclusion of Muslim women from its scope. Section 125 is truly secular in character. Mohd. Ahmed Khan v. Shah Bano Begum, (1985) 2 SCC 556: 1985 SCC (Cri) 245: AIR 1985 SC 945: 1985 Cri LJ 875.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and D.A. Desai, O. Chinnappa Reddy, E.S. Venkataramiah and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1985]

[342] — S. 125 — There is no conflict between S. 125 and the provisions of Muslim personal law on the liability of Muslim husband to provide for maintenance of his divorced wife who is unable to maintain herself

The Quran imposes an obligation on the Muslim husband to make provision for or to provide maintenance to the divorced wife. Mahr is a mark of respect to the wife. The sum settled by way of Mahr is generally expected to take care of the ordinary requirements of the wife, during the marriage and after. But the statements contained in text books on Muslim personal law are inadequate to establish the proposition that the Muslim husband is not under an obligation to provide for the maintenance of his divorced wife, who is unable to maintain herself. The application of those statements of law must be restricted to that class of cases, in which there is no possibility of vagrancy or destitution arising out of the indigence of the divorced wife. The argument that, according to the Muslim personal law, a husband's liability to provide for the maintenance of his divorced wife is limited to the period of iddat, despite the fact that she is unable to maintain herself, has therefore to be rejected. If she is unable to maintain herself, she is entitled to take recourse to S. 125 of the Code. Mohd. Ahmed Khan v. Shah Bano Begum, (1985) 2 SCC 556: 1985 SCC (Cri) 245: AIR 1985 SC 945: 1985 Cri LJ 875.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and D.A. Desai, O. Chinnappa Reddy, E.S. Venkataramiah and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1985]

[343] — S. 125(3) second proviso, Expln. — Indicates that S. 125 operates irrespective of personal law of the parties

The right conferred by S. 125 can be exercised irrespective of the personal law of the parties. This is fortified especially in regard to Muslims, by the provision contained in the Explanation to the second proviso to S. 125(3) of the Code. The Explanation confers upon the wife the right to refuse to live with her husband if he contracts another marriage, leave alone 3 or 4 other marriages. It shows, unmistakably, that S. 125 overrides the personal law, if there is any conflict between the two. Mohd. Ahmed Khan v. Shah Bano Begum, (1985) 2 SCC 556: 1985 SCC (Cri) 245: AIR 1985 SC 945: 1985 Cri LJ 875.

(2) Relevance of personal law (contd.)

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and D.A. Desai, O. Chinnappa Reddy, E.S. Venkataramiah and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1985]

[344] — S. 125 — Maintenance proceedings — Personal law applicable to the parties cannot be wholly excluded from consideration. Kirtikant D. Vadodaria v. State of Gujarat, (1996) 4 SCC 479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1996]

[345] — S. 125 — Applicant must prove her/his status under her/his personal law before the application for maintenance can be maintained

The attempt to exclude altogether the personal law applicable to the parties from consideration has to be repelled. The section has been enacted in the interest of a wife, and one who intends to take benefit under sub-section (1)(a) has to establish the necessary condition, namely, that she is the wife of the person concerned. This issue can be decided only by a reference to the law applicable to the parties. It is only where an applicant establishes her status on relationship with reference to the personal law that an application for maintenance can be maintained. Once the right under the section is established by proof of necessary conditions mentioned therein, it cannot be defeated by further reference to the personal law. The issue whether the section is attracted or not cannot be answered except by the reference to the appropriate law governing the parties. Yamunabai Anantrao Adhav v. Anantrao Shivram Adhav, (1988) 1 SCC 530: 1988 SCC (Cri) 182: AIR 1988 SC 644: 1988 Cri LJ 793: 1988 Mah LJ 335: (1988) 1 KLT 416.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-1-1988]

Mohd. Ahmed Khan v. Shah Bano Begum, (1985) 2 SCC 556: 1985 SCC (Cri) 245, distinguished [346] — S. 125 — Benefit of personal law to award maintenance — Benefit of personal law for awarding or continuing maintenance can be given to the applicant, ineligible under S. 125, to avoid multiplicity of proceedings. Jagdish Jugtawat v. Manju Lata, (2002) 5 SCC 422: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1147.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra, Brijesh Kumar and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-2002]

[347] — S. 125 — Comparison between S. 125 CrPC and S. 18, Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act — Held, there is no inconsistency between S. 125 and the provisions in the 1956 Act — The scope of the two laws is different — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — S. 18 (Para 10). Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2005 SC 1809: 2005 Cri LJ 2141: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2005]

[348] — S. 125 — Maintenance — Claim of, by wife — Adjudication upon — Relevance of personal law by which parties concerned are governed — Extent of — Held, provisions of S. 125 are applicable and enforceable whatever may be the personal law of the parties — But, S. 125 requires the claimant taking benefit under sub-s. (1)(a) thereof to establish that she is the wife of the person concerned and the said issue can be decided only by reference to the law applicable to the parties — Hence, personal law is relevant for deciding the validity of the marriage and therefore cannot be altogether excluded from consideration — Thus, issue whether the section is attracted or not cannot be answered except by reference to the appropriate law governing the parties — Once the right under S. 125 is established by proof of necessary conditions mentioned therein, it cannot be defeated by further reference to the personal law (Paras 9 and 15). Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2005 SC 1809: 2005 Cri LJ 2141: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2005]

Nanak Chand v. Chandra Kishore Aggarwal, (1969) 3 SCC 802: 1970 SCC (Cri) 127; Yamunabai Anantrao Adhav v. Anantrao Shivram Adhav, (1988) 1 SCC 530: 1988 SCC (Cri) 182, relied on

[349] — S. 127(3)(b) — Scheme and object — Sum received by a divorced woman under any customary or personal law must be sufficient for her maintenance under the prevailing circumstances — Payment of Mahr (Dower) is different from maintenance allowance paid on divorce — Payment of Rs 500 by way of Mahr as recompense for divorce, held, insufficient and therefore, husband not absolved under S. 127(3)(b) from payment of maintenance

The respondent, a Muslim, married the appellant and had a son. His monthly earning was well above Rs 1000. He gave talaq to the appellant and paid Rs 500 by way of Mahr and Rs 750 towards maintenance for period of iddat. The appellant prayed for maintenance allowance for herself and her son under S. 125, CrPC and the Magistrate granted payment of a monthly sum of Rs 250 to her and Rs 150 to the child. The additional first class Magistrate, however, vacated the grant of maintenance on the score of divorce coupled with discharge of Mahr and iddat dues.

Held:

Section 127(3)(b) has a setting, scheme and a purpose and no talaq of the purpose different from the sense is permissible in statutory construction. It takes care to avoid double payment — One under custom at the time of divorce and another under S. 125. However, neither personal law nor other salvationary plea will hold against the policy of public law pervading S. 127(3)(b) as much as it does S. 125.

Sections 125-127 form a secular code deliberately designed to protect destitute women, who are victims of neglect during marriage and after divorce. It is rooted in the State's responsibility for the welfare of the weaker sections of women and children and is not confined to members of one religion or region, but the whole community of womanhood. Whatever the facts of a particular case, the Code, by enacting Ss. 125-127 charges the court with the humane obligation of enforcing maintenance or its just equivalent to ill-used wives and castaway ex-wives, unless the woman has received voluntarily a sum, at the time of divorce, sufficient to keep her going according to the circumstances of the parties. The payment of an amount, customary or other, contemplated by the measure must inset the intent of preventing destitution and providing a sum which is more or less the present worth of the monthly maintenance allowances the divorcee may need until death or remarriage overtake her.

Section 127(3)(b) requires that payment of the sum and the divorce should be essentially parts of the same transaction so as to make one consideration for the other. At any rate the payment of money contemplated by S. 127(3)(b) should be so linked with the divorce as to become payable only in the event of the divorce. Mahr as understood in Mohammadan law cannot, under any circumstances be considered as consideration for divorce or a payment made in lieu of loss of connubial relationship. Muslim law shows its reverence for the wife in the institution of mahr (dower). The quintessence of mahr whether it is prompt or deferred is clearly not a contemplated quantification of a sum of money in lieu of maintenance upon divorce. Indeed, dower focusses on marital happiness and is an incident of connubial joy. Divorce is farthest from the thought of the bride and the bridegroom when mahr is promised. Moreover, dower may be prompt and is payable during marriage and cannot, therefore, be a recompense for divorce too distant and unpleasant for the bride and bridegroom to envision on the nuptial bed.

In the present case the mahr paid is Rs 500 and the income therefrom may well be Rs 5 a month, too ludicrous to mention as maintenance. The amount earlier awarded is the minimum. Fuzlunbi v. K. Khader Vali, (1980) 4 SCC 125: 1980 SCC (Cri) 916: AIR 1980 SC 1730: 1980 Cri LJ 1249.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, O. Chinnappa Reddy and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-1980]

[350] — Ss. 127(3)(b) and 125 — Payment of mahr or dower by Muslim husband to wife does not attract S. 127(3)(b) and order of maintenance under S. 125 is not liable to be cancelled on such payment — Mahr or dower is not payable on divorce but is payable on marriage

Mahr is an amount payable by the husband to the wife on marriage and not on divorce. Since S. 127(3)(b) speaks of sum 'payable on such divorce' it is inapplicable in case of payment of Mahr. Even assuming that, in a given case, the entire amount of Mahr is of the deferred variety payable on the dissolution of marriage by divorce, it cannot be said that it is an amount which is payable on divorce. Divorce may be a convenient or identifiable point of time at which the deferred amount has to be paid by the husband to the wife. But, the payment of the amount is not occasioned by the divorce, which is what is meant by the expression 'on divorce', which occurs in S. 127(3)(b). The alternative premise that Mahr is an obligation imposed upon the husband as a mark of respect for the wife, is wholly detrimental to the stance that it is an amount payable to the wife on divorce. S. 127(3)(b) may have been introduced because of the misconception that dower is an amount payable "on divorce". But, that cannot convert an amount payable as a mark of respect for the wife into an amount payable on divorce.

However, the statement made in Bai Tahira case that "payment of Mahr money, as a customary discharge, is within the cognizance of that provision" [viz. S. 127(3)(b)] is incorrect. Mohd. Ahmed Khan v. Shah Bano Begum, (1985) 2 SCC 556: 1985 SCC (Cri) 245: AIR 1985 SC 945: 1985 Cri LJ 875.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and D.A. Desai, O. Chinnappa Reddy, E.S. Venkataramiah and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1985]

Bai Tahira v. Ali Hussain Fidaalli Chothia, (1979) 2 SCC 316: 1979 SCC (Cri) 473, partly affirmed

Fuzlunhi v. K. Khader Vali, (1980) 4 SCC 125: 1980 SCC (Cri) 916, affirmed

(3) Applicability to Muslim women

See also Ss. 125 to 128, '(2) Relevance of personal law', above, and

'(8) Maintenance in case of divorce (including divorced Muslim women)', below

See also generally under all headings

[351] — S. 125 — Muslim women not barred from filing petition under — Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986, held, applies only to divorced women and not to women who are not divorced — Furthermore, since the proceedings under S. 125 CrPC and the 1986 Act are tried before the same court, and given the beneficial nature of the 1986 Act, even if a divorced Muslim woman applies under S. 125 CrPC, it is open to the court to treat it as an application under the 1986 Act — Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986

The view expressed by the First Revisional Court that no Muslim woman can maintain a petition under Section 125 CrPC is clearly unsustainable. The Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986 only applies to divorced women and not to a woman who is not divorced. Furthermore, proceedings under Section 125 CrPC are civil in nature. Even if the court noticed that there was a divorced Muslim woman who had made an application under Section 125 CrPC, it was open to the court to treat the same as a petition under the 1986 Act considering the beneficial nature of the legislation, especially since proceedings under Section 125 CrPC and claims made under the Muslim Women Act are tried by the same court. (Paras 6 and 3). Iqbal Bano v. State of U.P., (2007) 6 SCC 785: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 258: AIR 2007 SC 2215: (2007) 3 KLT 63: (2007) 4 All LJ 587: (2007) 55 AIC 4 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-6-2007]

Vijay Kumar Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2004) 5 SCC 196: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1576, relied on [352] — S. 125 — Nature and interpretation of — Held, it is beneficial legislation — Hence, its benefit must accrue even to divorced Muslim wife (Para 23). Shabana Bano v. Imran Khan, (2010) 1 SCC 666.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2009]

(4) Matters to be established for entitlement to maintenance under

See also Ss. 125 to 128, '(1) Generally', and

'(2) Relevance of personal law', above

'(5) Second marriage, desertion, previous wife, refusal to live with husband',

'(6) Second wife', and

'(8) Maintenance in case of divorce (including divorced Muslim women)', below

[353] — S. 125 — Obligation of husband and son or daughter to maintain his wife or his/her mother — Nature of — Plea of inability due to financial constraints not acceptable — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — Ss. 18 and 20

According to the Law of the Land with regard to maintenance, there is an obligation of the husband to maintain his wife which does not arise by reason of any contract — express or implied — but out of jural relationship of husband and wife consequent to the performance of marriage. Such an obligation of the husband to maintain his wife arises irrespective of the fact whether he has or has no property, as it is considered an imperative duty and a solemn obligation of the husband to maintain his wife. The husband cannot be heard saying that he is unable to maintain due to financial constraints so long as he is capable of earning. Similarly, it is obligatory on the part of a son to maintain his aged father and mother by reason of personal obligation. Under the old Hindu law, this obligation was imposed on the son alone, but now the present-day Hindu law extends this obligation both on sons and daughters. In this connection, it is relevant to point out that according to sub-section (1) of Section 18 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, a Hindu wife is entitled to the maintenance from her husband during her lifetime. She is entitled to claim maintenance from her husband so long as she is chaste subject to the conditions laid down in sub-section (2) of Section 18 of the said Act. Under the present law, as said earlier, both son and daughter are liable to maintain aged or infirm parents including childless stepmother, when the latter is unable to maintain herself. It is well settled that a son has to maintain his mother irrespective of the fact whether he inherits any property or not from his father, as on the basis of the relationship alone he owes a duty and an obligation, legal and moral, to maintain his mother who has given birth to him. Further, according to Section 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, a Hindu is under a legal obligation to maintain his wife, minor sons, unmarried daughters and aged or infirm parents. The obligation to maintain them is personal, legal and absolute in character and arises from the very existence of the relationship between the parties. Kirtikant D. Vadodaria v. State of Gujarat, (1996) 4 SCC 479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1996]

[354] — S. 125 — Order for maintenance of wives, children and parents — "Wife" — Meaning of — Held, expression "wife" as per S. 125 refers to only legally married wife (Paras 8 and 18). Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2005 SC 1809: 2005 Cri LJ 2141: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2005]

[355] — S. 125 — Rights of destitute women and children under — Where paternity not disputed and fact accepted that marriage ceremony performed, held, appellant cannot contend in S. 125 proceedings that there was no valid marriage because essential rites were not performed — Provisions of S. 125 cannot be used to defeat the rights of destitute women and children

After not disputing the paternity of the child and after accepting the fact that the marriage ceremony was performed, though not legally perfect as contended, it would hardly lie in the mouth of the appellant to contend in proceedings under Section 125 CrPC that there was no valid marriage as essential rites were not performed at the time of the said marriage. The provision under Section 125 is not to be utilised for defeating the rights conferred by the legislature on the destitute women, children or parents who are victims of the social environment. (Paras 9 and 10). Dwarika Prasad Satpathy v. Bidyut Prava Dixit, (1999) 7 SCC 675: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1345: AIR 1999 SC 3348.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-1999]

[356] — S. 125 — Claim of maintenance by wife from husband — Requirement of proof of marriage between the parties — Finding recorded by the Magistrate in another case under S. 494 IPC, which was filed by the respondent who is alleging to be the wife of appellant, that the respondent had failed to establish her marriage with appellant or an alleged second marriage by the appellant — Held, in view of the said finding, respondent cannot claim maintenance under S. 125 from appellant. Samir Mandal v. State of Bihar, (2001) 10 SCC 50.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, U.C. Banerjee and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-2-2001]

[357] — S. 125 — Maintenance — Claim of, by wife — Validity of marriage — Determination of — Standard of proof required for — Law in respect of — Dwarika Prasad Satpathy v. Bidyut Prava Dixit, (1999) 7 SCC 675, reiterated — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 103, 102, 50 & 3 (Para 13). Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2005 SC 1809: 2005 Cri LJ 2141: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2005]

Dwarika Prasad Satpathy v. Bidyut Prava Dixit, (1999) 7 SCC 675: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1345, followed [358] — S. 125 — Marriage — Standard of proof — Where claimant establishes that she and alleged husband lived together as husband and wife, held, a rebuttable presumption arises that they are legally married — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 50 and 114. Dwarika Prasad Satpathy v. Bidyut Prava Dixit, (1999) 7 SCC 675: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1345: AIR 1999 SC 3348.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-1999]

[359] — S. 125 — Marriage — Proof of — Held, standard of proof in respect of, is not as strict as is required in a trial for offence of bigamy under S. 494 IPC — Once it is admitted that a marriage procedure was followed, held, it is not necessary to prove that procedure was complete as per relevant rites — Appellant husband denying validity of marriage claiming that he underwent ceremony under duress (at knifepoint) — Held, on facts, High Court rightly dismissed the appellant's revision application holding that according to the standard of proof required under S. 125 CrPC, Respondent 1 had succeeded in proving the marriage — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 103, 102

Respondent 1, B, filed an application under Section 125 CrPC for maintenance on behalf of herself and her daughter, Respondent 2. She contended that she and the appellant, D, underwent a marriage ceremony at the temple of Lord Jagannath at Nayagarh, in the presence of witnesses. After the ceremony, B was persuaded to continue staying at her parental home, because of the fear that the father of D may not accept her as his daughter-in-law. She was already in an advanced stage of pregnancy. She contended that D had taken a vow in the name of Lord Nilambhadhab Bije that he would marry her. Only then had she agreed to enter into a sexual relationship with him. However, after her pregnancy became known, D went back on his word. Ultimately she went on hunger strike in front of D's office. Upon the intervention of various people, including the SDO, the marriage ceremony was arranged and held. Within 3 or 4 days she gave birth to a girl child, Respondent 2. B and D continued to live separately.

(4) Matters to be established for entitlement to maintenance under (contd.)

The appellant, D, contended that he had been forced to undergo the marriage ceremony at knifepoint. The trial court allowed the application under Section 125 CrPC and granted Rs 400 per month as maintenance to B and Rs 200 to the daughter. In revision the Sessions Court set aside the maintenance awarded to B on the finding that D had been forced to undergo the marriage ceremony as contended by him; that thus there was no valid marriage. The Sessions Court, however, accepted that Respondent 2 had been born as a result of relations between B and D and upheld the maintenance awarded to her.

Both parties filed revision applications before the High Court, which dismissed that of the appellant and allowed that of Respondent 1. Relying on the evidence on record, the High Court found that the marriage had been solemnised at the temple as contended and negatived the contention that D had been forced to go through the ceremony at knifepoint. The High Court also accepted that the child had been born as a result of the relations between B and D.

In appeal before the Supreme Court it was contended on behalf of the appellant that there was no valid marriage between him and B. Dismissing the appeal with costs,

Held :

The validity of the marriage for the purpose of summary proceedings under Section 125 CrPC is to be determined on the basis of the evidence brought on record by the parties. The standard of proof of marriage in such proceedings is not as strict as is required in a trial of offence under Section 494 IPC. If the claimant in proceedings under Section 125 of the Code succeeds in showing that she and the respondent have lived together as husband and wife, the court can presume that they are legally wedded spouses, and in such a situation, the party who denies the marital status can rebut the presumption. The appellant contended before the learned Magistrate that the said marriage was performed under duress and at the point of a knife, he was required to exchange garlands. That contention is not proved by leading necessary evidence. Once it is admitted that the marriage procedure was followed then it is not necessary to further probe into whether the said procedure was complete as per the Hindu rites in the proceedings under Section 125 CrPC. (Para 6)

An order passed in an application under Section 125 CrPC does not finally determine the rights and obligations of the parties and the said section is enacted with a view to provide a summary remedy for providing maintenance to a wife, children and parents. After not disputing the paternity of the child and after accepting the fact that the marriage ceremony was performed, though not legally perfect as contended, it would hardly lie in the mouth of the appellant to contend in proceedings under Section 125 CrPC that there was no valid marriage as essential rites were not performed at the time of the said marriage. The provision under Section 125 is not to be utilised for defeating the rights conferred by the legislature on the destitute women, children or parents who are victims of the social environment. (Paras 9 and 10)

From the evidence which is led if the Magistrate is prima facie satisfied with regard to the performance of marriage in proceedings under Section 125 CrPC which are of a summary nature, strict proof of performance of essential rites is not required. Either of the parties aggrieved by the order of maintenance under Section 125 CrPC can approach the civil court for declaration of status as the order passed under Section 125 does not finally determine the rights and obligations of the parties. (Para 13). Dwarika Prasad Satpathy v. Bidyut Prava Dixit, (1999) 7 SCC 675: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1345: AIR 1999 SC 3348.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-1999]

Yamunabai Anantrao Adhav v. Anantrao Shivram Adhav, (1988) 1 SCC 530: 1988 SCC (Cri) 182; Bhaurao Shankar Lokhande v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1564: (1965) 2 SCR 837, distinguished

S. Sethurathinam Pillai v. Barbara, (1971) 3 SCC 923: 1972 SCC (Cri) 171; Ramesh Chander Kaushal v. Veena Kaushal, (1978) 4 SCC 70: 1978 SCC (Cri) 508; Vimala (K.) v. Veeraswamy (K.), (1991) 2 SCC 375: 1991 SCC (Cri) 442; Santosh v. Naresh Pal, (1998) 8 SCC 447, relied on

See also (1985) 1 SCC 637

[360] — S. 125 — Marital status of parties — Prima facie satisfaction of Magistrate sufficient — Decision of Magistrate on marital status of parties is subject to final order in civil proceedings, if any — High Court not justified in interfering with pure finding of fact reached by the Magistrate. Santosh v. Naresh Pal, (1998) 8 SCC 447.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Majmudar and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1998]

[361] — S. 125 — Maintenance claim by appellant-wife — Factum of marriage disputed by respondent-husband — Factors to be considered for determining nature of relationship between the two — Fact that the two were living as husband and wife for decades relevant — But respondent denying performance of essential Hindu religious rites such as Saptapadi — In absence of any findings in that regard, on facts, matter remitted to the Magistrate for fresh inquiry regarding the factum of marriage — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — S. 7 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 114

Although invoking the fire and performing Saptapadi around the sacred fire have been considered to be basic requirements for a traditional Hindu marriage, there can be marriage acceptable in law according to customs which do not insist on performance of such rites and marriages of this type give rise to legal relationships which law accepts. The facts that for about a decade the parties had lived together, that public records including voters' lists described them as husband and wife and competent witnesses of the village of the wife as also the husband had supported the factum of the marriage and that the witnesses had also spoken about the reputation of the appellant being known in the locality as the wife of the respondent, should not be overlooked while considering the case of marriage. Since the form of marriage has not been found, it would be proper in the peculiar facts of the case to remit the matter to the Magistrate for a fresh inquiry at which apart from the evidence already on record both sides should be entitled to lead further evidence particularly in support of their respective stands relating to the factum of marriage. The Magistrate must keep in mind that even if the fact of marriage is discarded, the minor child being found to be an illegitimate daughter of the respondent would be entitled to maintenance. Sumitra Devi v. Bhikan Choudhary, (1985) 1 SCC 637: 1985 SCC (Cri) 145: AIR 1985 SC 765: 1985 Cri LJ 528.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-1985]

[362] — S. 125 — Maintenance proceedings — Object of — "Unable to maintain herself" — Meaning of — Held, is not to punish a person for his past neglect, but to prevent vagrancy by compelling those who can provide support to those who are unable to support themselves and who have a moral claim to support — "Unable to maintain herself" — Meaning of — Means inability of wife to maintain herself in the way she was used to in the place of her husband

The respondent wife had filed an application before the trial court under Section 125 CrPC claiming maintenance from the appellant husband. The appellant and the respondent had entered into marital knot about four decades back and for more than two decades they were living separately. In the application it was claimed that she was unemployed and unable to maintain herself.

Considering the evidence on record, the trial court found that the respondent applicant had no sufficient means to maintain herself and hence direction to pay her Rs 1500 p.m. was given. Revision filed thereagainst was dismissed. Application was filed by the appellant in the High Court under Section 482 CrPC. The High Court noticed that the conclusions had been arrived at on appreciation of evidence and, therefore, there was no scope for any interference. Hence the present appeal.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The object of the maintenance proceedings is not to punish a person for his past neglect, but to prevent vagrancy by compelling those who can provide support to those who are unable to support themselves and who have a moral claim to support. The phrase "unable to maintain herself" in the instant case would mean that means available to the deserted wife while she was living with her husband and would not take within itself the efforts made by the wife after desertion to survive somehow. (Para 6). Chaturbhuj v. Sita Bai, (2008) 2 SCC 316: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 356: AIR 2008 SC 530: (2008) 1 KLT 41: 2008 Cri LJ 727: (2008) 105 Cut LT 729: (2008) 2 Guj LR 1159.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-2007]

[363] — S. 125 — Maintenance — Claim of, by wife — Requisites for maintaining proceedings — Condition to establish that wife unable to maintain herself — Basis of and test required, considered

Where the wife was surviving by begging, it would not amount to her ability to maintain herself. It can also be not said that the wife has been capable of earning but she was not making an effort to earn. Whether the deserted wife was unable to maintain herself, has to be decided on the basis of the material placed on record. Where the personal income of the wife is insufficient she can claim maintenance under Section 125 CrPC. The test is whether the wife is in a position to maintain herself in the way she was used to in the place of her husband. The wife should be in a position to maintain a standard of living which is neither luxurious nor penurious but what is consistent with status of a family. The expression "unable to maintain herself" does not mean that the wife must be absolutely destitute before she can apply for maintenance under Section 125 CrPC. (Para 8). Chaturbhuj v. Sita Bai, (2008) 2 SCC 316: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 356: AIR 2008 SC 530: (2008) 1 KLT 41: 2008 Cri LJ 727: (2008) 105 Cut LT 729: (2008) 2 Guj LR 1159.

(4) Matters to be established for entitlement to maintenance under (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-2007]

Bhagwan Dutt v. Kamla Devi, (1975) 2 SCC 386: 1975 SCC (Cri) 563, relied on

[364] — S. 125 — Expression "unable to maintain herself" — Held, covers means available to the wife while she was living with her husband and not after her desertion — Burden lies on the husband to prove that he has no sufficient means to discharge his obligation or he did not neglect or refuse to maintain her — Statement by wife that she was unable to maintain herself, held, would be enough — It would be for the husband to prove otherwise

It was a case where the husband neglected or refused to maintain his wife. The High Court did not consider the question if the husband was having sufficient means. It rather unnecessarily put the burden on the wife to prove that she was unable to maintain herself. The words "unable to maintain herself" would mean the means available to the deserted wife while she was living with her husband and would not take within itself the efforts made by the wife after the desertion to survive somehow. Section 125 is enacted on the premise that it is the obligation of the husband to maintain his wife, children and parents. It will, therefore, be for him to show that he has no sufficient means to discharge his obligation and that he did not neglect or refuse to maintain them or any one of them. The High Court also observed that the wife did not plead as to since when she was living separately. This is not quite a relevant consideration. Even though the wife was unable to prove that the husband had remarried, yet the fact remained that the husband was living with another woman. That would entitle the wife to live separately and would amount to neglect or refusal by the husband to maintain her. The statement of the wife that she was unable to maintain herself would be enough and it would be for the husband to prove otherwise. (Para 7). Rajathi v. C. Ganesan, (1999) 6 SCC 326: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1118: AIR 1999 SC 2374: 1999 Cri LJ 3668.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-1999]

[365] — S. 125 — Expression 'unable to maintain itself' — CrPC, 1898 — S. 488

A comparative study of the old and new provisions would show that while in S. 488 the condition "unable to maintain itself" apparently attached only to the child and not to the wife, in S. 125, this condition has been expressly made applicable to the case of wife. Bhagwan Dutt v. Kamla Devi, (1975) 2 SCC 386: 1975 SCC (Cri) 563: AIR 1975 SC 83: (1975) 2 SCR 483: (1975) MLJ (Cri) 81.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, R.S. Sarkaria and A.C. Gupta, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-1974]

[366] — Ss. 125 and 397 — Proof of valid marriage and paternity of child; interference in revision — Held, where Magistrate finds marriage not proved and also dismisses claim of paternity, High Court should entertain applicant's revision petition, re-evaluate the evidence and then come to its own decision as to whether Magistrate's findings and conclusions are legally sustainable or not, while at the same time bearing in mind the differences in approach necessary for a revision and an appeal — Emphasised that such an approach is imperative in view of the purpose of S. 125, which is to curtail destitution and prevent orphanhood being imposed on children — High Court erred in dismissing appellant's revision petition summarily — Matter remitted to High Court for disposal afresh

Section 125 CrPC is intended to curtail destitution and also to ameliorate orphancy. The High Courts should be slow to interfere with a positive finding in favour of marriage and paternity of a child. Hence in such instances the Supreme Court has pointed out that High Courts shall not interfere with such fact findings. But that principle cannot be imported in the present case where a child happened to be bastardised as a consequence of the order passed by the Magistrate and the claimant was in effect found to be a woman of unvirtuous morality. In such a situation the High Court should have entertained revision and re-evaluated the evidence and come to a conclusion whether the findings or conclusions reached by the Magistrate are legally sustainable or not. While maintaining the difference in the overall approach between an appeal and a revision, the jurisdiction of the court has to be exercised by the High Court in revision. (Para 5). Pravati Rani Sahoo v. Bishnupada Sahoo, (2002) 10 SCC 510.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2001]

Pathumma v. Muhammad, (1986) 2 SCC 585: 1986 SCC (Cri) 212; Santosh v. Naresh Pal, (1998) 8 SCC 447, explained and distinguished

[367] — S. 125 — Muslim woman (appellant) five months' pregnant at the time of her marriage — Claiming maintenance for herself and for the child born just four months after the marriage — Denial of maintenance by respondent husband challenging validity of marriage on ground of concealment of fact of pregnancy by the appellant at the time of marriage — Considering the advanced stage of the pregnancy and the conduct of the respondent subsequent to the marriage, held on facts, it could not be said that the pregnancy was concealed by the appellant from the respondent — Such marriage was valid — Hence, order of Judicial Magistrate allowing maintenance to the appellant and refusing the same to the child as she was not fathered by the respondent, held, liable to be restored

It is very difficult to believe that a woman who is five months' pregnant will be able to conceal the pregnancy from the husband. Such an advanced stage of pregnancy cannot be concealed as the pregnancy starts showing by that time. In any case, the pregnancy could not have been concealed from the husband. A husband will at least know for sure that the wife is pregnant specially when the pregnancy is five months' old. Therefore, it cannot be accepted that the respondent did not know at the time of marriage that the appellant was already pregnant. (Para 4)

Also, the conduct of the respondent at the relevant time is to be considered. He went through the marriage. He did not raise any objection even after the marriage. He was present at the time of delivery of the child. Presumably he gave his own name as the name of the father of the child for the official record. Even thereafter, for nearly four years he went along with the marriage and brought up the child while treating the appellant as his wife. Any person who learns that his newly married wife is already pregnant for five months and who does not accept that marriage or pregnancy, will not behave in the manner in which the respondent did. Thus, the facts on record show that the husband was aware of the pregnancy of the wife at the time of the marriage. Therefore, such a marriage cannot be said to be invalid. (Paras 5 and 7)

The judgment of the learned Magistrate holding the marriage to be valid and allowing maintenance to the appellant, is restored. Liberty to the appellant to seek enhancement of the rate of maintenance in accordance with law. (Para 8). Amina v. Hassn Koya, (2003) 6 SCC 93: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1276: (2003) 2 KLT 738: 2003 Cri LJ 2540.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2003]

Kulsumbi v. Abdul Kadir, ILR (1921) 45 Bom 151: AIR 1921 Bom 205, considered

Abdullah v. Beepathu, ILR (1967) 1 Ker 361, approved

[368] — S. 125(1), Expln. (b) — "Wife" in S. 125(1), held, means legally wedded wife — S. 125(1) does not protect a woman who unwittingly marries a man who is already married — As against this, S. 2(f) of 2005 Act, embraces a wider concept by affording protection not only to legally wedded wife but also to a woman who is having domestic relationship which may not strictly be marriage but is "in the nature of marriage" — This is a recognition of live-in relationship (subject to conditions laid down herein) — Conventional family law in India provides for alimony only when a legally wedded wife is deserted but 2005 Act expands the scope by providing protection in the case of live-in relationship also — Words and Phrases — "Live-in Relationship", "wife" — Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005, S. 2(f)

The respondent claimed maintenance from the appellant under Section 125 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973. The appellant however asserted that the respondent was not his legally wedded wife because he was already married to a woman called L. The Family Court and the High Court accepted the respondent's claim treating the respondent to be the appellant's legally wedded wife. L was not put to notice and therefore it was not clear whether the respondent could be treated as the appellant's legally wedded wife. The Supreme Court in this context examined the provisions of the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005

Allowing the appeal and remanding the matter to the Family Court,

Held :

The expression "domestic relationship" in Section 2(f) of the Domestic Violence Act, 2005 includes not only the relationship of marriage but also a relationship in the nature of marriage. Parliament has drawn a distinction between the relationship of marriage and a relationship in the marriage, and has provided that in either case, the person who enters into either relationship is entitled to the benefit of the Act. Parliament has taken notice of a new social phenomenon which has emerged in India known as live-in relationship. This new relationship is still rare in India, and is sometimes found in big urban cities in India, but it is very common in North America and Europe. (Paras 10, 14 and 20)

(4) Matters to be established for entitlement to maintenance under (contd.)

When a wife is deserted, in most countries the law provides for maintenance to her by her husband, which is called alimony. However, earlier there was no law providing for maintenance to a woman who was having a live-in relationship with a man without being married to him and was then deserted by him. (Para 22)

A "relationship in the nature of marriage" is akin to a common law marriage. Common law marriages require that although not being formally married: (a) The couple must hold themselves out to society as being akin to spouses. (b) They must be of legal age to marry. (c) They must be otherwise qualified to enter into a legal marriage, including being unmarried. (d) They must have voluntarily cohabited and held themselves out to the world as being akin to spouses for a significant period of time. A "relationship in the nature of marriage" under the 2005 Act must also fulfil the above requirements, and in addition the parties must have lived together in a "shared household" as defined in Section 2(s) of the Act. Merely spending weekends together or one night would not make it a "domestic relationship". (Para 31)

Not all live-in relationships will amount to a relationship in the nature of marriage to get the benefit of the Act of 2005. To get such benefit the conditions mentioned above must be satisfied, and this has to be proved by evidence. If a man has a "keep" whom he maintains financially and uses mainly for sexual purposes and/or as a servant, it would not be a relationship in the nature of marriage.

No doubt the view being taken in this case would exclude many women who have had a live-in relationship from the benefit of the 2005 Act, but then it is not for the Supreme Court to legislate or amend the law. Parliament has used the expression "relationship in the nature of marriage" and not "live-in relationship". The Court in the garb of interpretation cannot change the language of the statute. (Para 33)

There is no finding in the judgment of the Family Court Judge on the question whether the appellant and the respondent had lived together for a reasonably long period of time in a relationship which was in the nature of marriage. Such findings were essential to decide this case. The matter is remanded to the Family Judge for decision on this issue. (Para 37). D. Velusamy v. D. Patchaiammal, (2010) 10 SCC 469: (2010) 6 CTC 216: (2010) 4 KLT 384: (2010) 4 UPLJ 138 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Markandey Katju and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-10-2010]

Vimala v. Veeraswamy, (1991) 2 SCC 375: 1991 SCC (Cri) 442; Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787; S. Khushboo v. Kanniammal, (2010) 5 SCC 600: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1299, relied on

(5) Second marriage, desertion, previous wife, refusal to live with husband

See also Ss. 125 to 128, '(4) Matters to be established for entitlement', above

'(6) Second wife', and

'(8) Maintenance in case of divorce (including divorced Muslim women)', below

[369] — S. 125(3) Expln. — Wife filing application for maintenance on ground that her husband contracted a second marriage — Cl. (3) of S. 488 justifies wife's refusal to live with her husband in such a case — Held — Husband is under legal obligation to maintain her — CrPC, 1898 — S. 488(3) Deochand v. State of Maharashtra, (1974) 4 SCC 610: 1974 SCC (Cri) 646: AIR 1974 SC 1488.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.N. Ray, C.J. and Y.V. Chandrachud and V.R. Krishna Iyer, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-4-1974]

[370] — S. 125(3) Expln. — Husband contracting another marriage — Maintenance to previous wife payable from the date of the other marriage. Begum Subanu v. A.M. Abdul Gafoor, (1987) 2 SCC 285: 1987 SCC (Cri) 300: AIR 1987 SC 1103: 1987 Cri LJ 980.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-1987]

[371] — S. 125(3) Expln. — Muslim husband contracting another marriage held, equally liable to pay maintenance to previous wife who thereby had a right to live separately — That Muslim law permits polygamy irrelevant to the injury to the previous wife — Husband therefore liable to maintain previous wife and her children

The appellant Muslim wife married the respondent on May 11, 1980 and a daughter was delivered by her on May 9, 1981. On ground of neglect and failure to provide maintenance, she filed a petition under S. 125, CrPC seeking maintenance for herself and the child. The Magistrate dismissed the petition on the ground that she failed to establish adequate justification for living separately. While the revision was pending before the Sessions Judge, the respondent married another woman on October 18, 1984. The appellant in revision urged the second marriage to be by itself sufficient ground for grant of maintenance. The Sessions Judge disallowed her claim on the ground that the respondent took a second wife on her failing to rejoin him and in any case he was willing to take her back after the second marriage. He therefore allowed maintenance only for the child at Rs 100 per month. The High Court refused to interfere under S. 482 CrPC.

Held :

Insofar as a Muslim wife is concerned there cannot be discrimination between the two situations contemplated by the Explanation in S. 125(3), CrPC, namely, of the husbands contracting another marriage or of taking a mistress. The Explanation places a second wife and a mistress on the same footing and does not make any differentiation between them on the basis of their status under matrimonial law. And the reason is clear. From the point of view of the neglected wife, for whose benefit the Explanation has been provided, it will make no difference whether the woman intruding into her matrimonial life and taking her place in the matrimonial bed is another wife permitted under law to be married and not a mistress. The legal status of the woman to whom a husband has transferred his affections cannot lessen her distress or her feelings of neglect. In fact from one point of view the taking of another wife portends a more permanent destruction of her matrimonial life than the taking of a mistress by the husband.

It will undoubtedly lead to a strange situation if it were to be held that a wife will be entitled to refuse to live with her husband if he has taken a mistress but she cannot refuse likewise if he has married a second wife. The Explanation has to be construed from the point of view of the injury to the matrimonial rights of the wife and not with reference to the husband's right to marry again. The Explanation has, therefore, to be seen in its full perspective and not disjunctively. Otherwise it will lead to discriminatory treatment between wives whose husbands have lawfully married again and wives whose husbands have taken mistresses. In the present situation therefore one need not resort to a comparison of Muslim wives with Hindu wives or Christian wives but can restrict the comparison to Muslim wives themselves who stand affected under one or the other of the two contingencies envisaged in the Explanation and notice the discrimination.

The same conclusion is reached if the Explanation is viewed in the larger context of the avowed object of S. 125. So read a right has been conferred on the wife under the Explanation to live separately and claim maintenance from the husband if he breaks his vows of fidelity and marries another woman or takes a mistress. Therefore, the respondent's contention that his taking another wife will not entitled the appellant to claim separate residence and maintenance cannot be sustained. The Explanation is of uniform application to all wives including Muslim wives whose husbands have either married another woman or taken a mistress. Begum Subanu v. A.M. Abdul Gafoor, (1987) 2 SCC 285: 1987 SCC (Cri) 300: AIR 1987 SC 1103: 1987 Cri LJ 980.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-1987]

Mohd. A. Khan v. Shah Bano Begum, (1985) 2 SCC 556: 1985 SCC (Cri) 245, relied on

Bayanna v. Devamma, 1953 Mad WN (Cri) 243: AIR 1954 Mad 226 ; Kandaswami v. Nachammal, AIR 1963 Mad 263: 76 Mad LW 161: 1963 (2) Cri LJ 166 ; Syed Ahmad v. N.P. Taj Begum, AIR 1958 Mys 128: 1958 Mad LJ (Cri) 496: 1958 Cri LJ 1201 ; Shambu v. Ghalamma, AIR 1966 Mys 311: 1966 Cri LJ 1291 ; Tejabai v. Shankarrao, AIR 1966 Bom 48: 67 Bom LR 478: 1966 Cri LJ 131 ; Mohammed Haneefa v. Mariam Bi, AIR 1969 Mad 414: (1969) 1 Mad LJ 97: 1969 Mad LJ (Cri) 162: 1969 Cri LJ 1412 ; Shahulameedu v. Subaida Beevi, 1970 Ker LT 4 and Chand Begum v. Hyderbaig, 1972 Cri LJ 1270, approved

Bela Rani v. Bhupal Chandra, AIR 1956 Cal 134: 60 Cal WN 212: 1956 Cri LJ 526: 97 Cal LJ 189 ; Rupchand v. Charubala, AIR 1966 Cal 83: 70 Cal WN 53: 1966 Cri LJ 143 ; Ishar v. Soma Devi, AIR 1959 Punj 295: ILR 1958 Punj 1353: 1959 Cri LJ 767 ; Dhan Kaur v. Niranjan Singh, AIR 1960 Punj 595: 1960 Cri LJ 1494 and Ramji Malviya v. Munni Devi, AIR 1959 All 767: 1959 Cri LJ 1386, overruled

[372] — S. 125(3) Expln. — On husband contracting another marriage or taking a mistress, held, wife entitled to live separately and claim maintenance — Rule applies irrespective of religion of the parties — Husband not absolved of his liability by offering to take back previous wife and maintaining her — Only acceptable offer could be one of separate residence maintained for her by husband — Previous wife cannot be compelled to share conjugal home with another woman

It is no defence for the respondent to say that in view of his offer to take back the appellant and maintain her he stands absolved of his liability to pay maintenance. The offer had been made after the second marriage and was not to the effect that he would set up a separate residence for the appellant so as to enable her to live in peace and with dignity. A husband who marries again cannot compel the first wife to share the conjugal home with the co-wife and as such unless he offers to set up a separate residence for the first wife, any offer to take her back cannot be considered bona fide. On the basis of such an insincere offer the appellant's rights cannot be negated or defeated. Begum Subanu v. A.M. Abdul Gafoor, (1987) 2 SCC 285: 1987 SCC (Cri) 300: AIR 1987 SC 1103: 1987 Cri LJ 980.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-1987]

Chand Begum v. Hyderbaig, 1972 Cri LJ 1270, 1273, approved

(5) Second marriage, desertion, previous wife, refusal to live with husband (contd.)

[373] — S. 125 — Marital status — Determination of — Natural justice — Notice to affected party — Held on facts, woman whose status as legally wedded wife of appellant was affected, ought to have been put to notice before declaring that respondent was entitled to maintenance under S. 125, CrPC, 1973 — Specific Relief Act, 1963, S. 34 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, Ss. 11 and 13

Since L was not made a party to the proceedings before the Family Court Judge or before the High Court and no notice was issued to her hence any declaration about her marital status vis-à-vis the appellant is wholly null and void as it will be violative of the rules of natural justice. Without giving a hearing to L no such declaration could have validly be given by the courts below that she had not married the appellant herein since such as a finding would seriously affect her rights. And if no such declaration could have been given obviously no declaration could validly have been given that the appellant was validly married to the respondent, because if L was the wife of the appellant then without divorcing her the appellant could not have validly married the respondent. (Para 9)

The High Court and the Family Court Judge erred in law in holding that the appellant was not married to L without even issuing notice to L. Hence this finding has to be set aside and the matter remanded to the Family Court which may issue notice to L and after hearing her give a fresh finding in accordance with law. The question whether the appellant was married to the respondent or not can be decided only after the aforesaid finding. (Para 36). D. Velusamy v. D. Patchaiammal, (2010) 10 SCC 469: (2010) 6 CTC 216 (SC): (2010) 4 KLT 384: (2010) 4 UPLJ 138 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Markandey Katju and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-10-2010]

[374] — S. 125(3) Expln. — Scope of — Held, makes no distinction between husband taking another wife or a mistress — Concern is for previous wife — To her the distress and neglect is the same in either case — Object of S. 125 to be kept in view. Begrm Subanu v. A.M. Abdul Gafoor, (1987) 2 SCC 285: 1987 SCC (Cri) 300: AIR 1987 SC 1103: 1987 Cri LJ 980.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-1987]

[375] — Ss. 125(3) second proviso and (4) — Grant of maintenance to a wife refusing to live with her husband under duress — Husband, a Muslim, writing to wife to come back otherwise the letter would be treated as a divorce — Letter having sought to obtain her consent to live with him under duress, held, constituted sufficient reason for the wife to refuse to live with her husband — Sessions Court therefore, justified in granting maintenance under S. 125 to his wife and children — High Court not justified in interfering with pure findings of fact by setting aside the maintenance granted to the wife while maintaining it for the children. Khatoon v. Mohd. Yamin, (1982) 2 SCC 373: 1982 SCC (Cri) 439: AIR 1982 SC 853: 1982 MLJ (Cri) 421.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, D.A. Desai and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-1-1982]

[376] — S. 125(3) Expln. — Husband living with another woman — Wife held entitled to live separately and claim maintenance even if she failed to prove her allegation of second marriage by the husband u/s 494 IPC — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — S. 18(2) — Provisions of, apposite and so kept in view in such situation

The wife presented a petition under Section 125 IPC against her husband. It was alleged that her husband having sufficient means neglected or refused to maintain her and that she was unable to maintain herself. The Magistrate granted her maintenance at the rate of Rs 200 per month. The husband went in revision to the Court of Session. The Sessions Judge dismissed the revision and confirmed the order of the Magistrate. Still feeling aggrieved the husband filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC in the High Court. This was allowed by a Single Judge, who by the impugned order, set aside the orders both of the Judicial Magistrate and the Sessions Judge and dismissed the petition of the wife for maintenance. Allowing the appeal by special leave,

Held :

In the present case the wife alleged that her husband had contracted a second marriage. She filed a complaint under Section 494 IPC which was dismissed and the husband was acquitted. The High Court took this circumstance against the wife and adversely commented on her refusal to live with her husband. The High Court lost sight of the fact how it would be difficult for the wife to prove the second marriage. To prove the second marriage as a fact essential ceremonies constituting it must be proved and if the second marriage is not proved to have been validly performed by observing essential ceremonies and customs in the community conviction under Section 494 IPC ought not to be made. The fact, however, remains in the present case that the husband is living with another woman. The proviso to sub-section (3) would squarely apply and justify refusal of the wife to live with her husband. There can be, however, other grounds for the wife to refuse to live with her husband, e.g., if she is subjected to cruelty by him. (Para 7). Rajathi v. C. Ganesan, (1999) 6 SCC 326: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1118: AIR 1999 SC 2374: 1999 Cri LJ 3668.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-1999]

[377] — S. 125(3) Expln. — Wife living separately — In her petition wife not required to plead since when she was living separately — That is not a relevant consideration. Rajathi v. C. Ganesan, (1999) 6 SCC 326: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1118: AIR 1999 SC 2374: 1999 Cri LJ 3668.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-1999]

[378] — S. 125(3) second proviso and Expln. — Claim for maintenance by wife — First wife if abandoned by husband or a case of desertion by her — Determination of — Appellant wife thrown out of her matrimonial house by respondent husband on account of his second marriage — Her refusal to join company of her husband therefor — Held, appellant specifically stated that after marriage, till children were born, her relationship with her husband was cordial — But after he brought home a second wife, he declared that he would not keep appellant and started ill-treating her and threw her out of the house along with children — She also stated in her cross-examination that her children were with her but for last one year they were with respondent — She further admitted very fairly that respondent was educating the children — She asserted that for last 4 years, her entry to house of her husband was stopped — Courts below committed serious error in holding that appellant had abandoned her husband and desisted from joining him for 4-5 years and, therefore, respondent was justified in getting married again — In wake of admitted second marriage of respondent, appellant would be entitled to claim maintenance and her earlier refusal to join company of respondent would be of no consequence whatsoever — It was very clear that she was thrown out on account of respondent having contracted second marriage — It was nowhere on record that she had left house without any rhyme or reason — Hence, claim of appellant for maintenance tenable — Appellant, in her evidence, gave average earnings of her husband, which went unchallenged — Hence, considering overall situation, maintenance @ Rs 1500 p.m. granted (Paras 11 to 18). Saygo Bai v. Chueeru Bajrangi, (2010) 13 SCC 762.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-2010]

[379] — S. 125(3) second proviso and Expln. — 'Just ground' — Meaning of — Impotency of husband amounts to cruelty on wife which constitutes "just ground" for wife's refusal to live with her husband, and claim maintenance — Explanation to the proviso is illustrative and not exhaustive — Concept of cruelty is the same in civil as criminal cases — Denial or breach of conjugal relationship would justify separate living by the wife and her claim to maintenance

The respondent wife within two months of her marriage to the appellant left her matrimonial home finding her husband impotent and refused to live with him on the ground that he being impotent was incapable of discharging his marital obligations. The question was whether the husband's impotency is a 'just ground' within the second proviso to S. 125(3) on the basis of which the Magistrate could make an order for maintenance notwithstanding the husband's offer to maintain his wife.

Held :

Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the court that a husband is impotent and is unable to discharge his marital obligations, this would amount to both legal and mental cruelty which would undoubtedly be a 'just ground' as contemplated by the Second Proviso to S. 125(3) for the wife's refusal to live with husband and the wife would be entitled to maintenance from her husband according to his means. The concept of cruelty remains the same whether it is a civil case or a criminal case or a case under any other similar Act. The general principles governing acts constituting cruelty — Legal or mental — ill treatment or indifference cannot vary from case to case though the facts may be different.

The object of introducing the Explanation to the Second Proviso was to widen the scope and ambit of the term 'just ground' so as to give a clear instance of circumstances which may be treated as 'just ground' for refusal of the wife to live with her husband. The provision is not exhaustive but purely illustrative and self-explanatory and takes within its fold not only the two instances mentioned therein but all other circumstances similar to the contingencies contemplated in the Explanation as also other instances of physical, mental or legal cruelty not excluding the impotence of the husband. The grounds on which the wife refuses to live with her husband should be just and reasonable as contemplated by the proviso.

(5) Second marriage, desertion, previous wife, refusal to live with husband (contd.)

In the present case the respondent wife is forced or compelled to live a life of celibacy while staying with her husband who is unable to have sexual relationship with her. Such a life is one of perpetual torture which is not only mentally or psychologically injurious but even from the medical point of view is detrimental to the health of the woman. If the husband was impotent and unable to discharge his marital obligations, he could not fulfil the main object of marriage more particularly, under the Mohammedan law where marriage is a sacrosanct contract and not a purely religious ceremony as in the case of Hindu Law. Sirajmohmedkhan Janmohamadkhan v. Hafizunnisa Yasinkhan, (1981) 4 SCC 250: 1981 SCC (Cri) 829: AIR 1981 SC 1972: 1981 Cri LJ 1430: (1981) 22 GLR 1175.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-1981]

[Ed.: (1) It is respectfully submitted that in Para 12 reliance on the passage quoted from the judgment of Mahmood, J. in Din Muhammad case, (1885) 5 All 226, 229, is misplaced as "conjugal relation" has been used in a different sense in that case.

The present judgment overrules the stand taken by Burn, J. in Arunachala v. Anandayammal and relied on by Hidayatullah, J. in Emperor v. Daulat Raibhan, that under S. 488, CrPC, 1898, if the husband agrees to provide food, clothing and shelter to the wife, the latter is not justified to live separately and claim maintenance. To the failure of the husband to provide "conjugal relationship" (sexual relationship), it was held, that it was not relevant to S. 488 and so would not justify the wife to live separately and claim maintenance. Under second proviso to S. 125(3), CrPC, 1973 failure of the husband to provide such conjugal relationship has now been held to be a "just ground" for the wife to live separately. In that respect it may be conceded that the statutory provision may be read to say that it is not enough for the husband merely to provide comfort and safety in the form of food, clothing and shelter but it is also necessary to provide 'conjugal relationship'.

The passage quoted from the judgment of Mahmood, J. in Para 12, it is humbly submitted, is not at all referring to the above aspect. What the learned Judge in Din Muhammad, (1885) 5 All 226, held was that if conjugal relation (meaning the bond of marriage) ceases to exist under the personal law of the parties, then the wife cannot maintain an action for maintenance. The words "conjugal relation" in Din Muhammad were used to mean the status of husband and wife under a subsisting marriage while in the above two cases it implied sexual relationship. This is clear from the conclusion in Din Muhammad, namely: "All that the Magistrate has to determine in a case of this kind is whether the woman claiming maintenance is still the wife of the person against whom she advances such a claim".

(2) In a way the rule quoted from Din Muhammad in Para 12 and approved in para 13 stands nullified by Expln. (b) to S. 125 (1) wherein a 'wife' includes a divorced wife so that even though "conjugal relation ceases", that is, the bond of marriage ends, an order for maintenance can be passed and would not "cease to have any enforceable effect" as long as she has not remarried.]

[380] — S. 125(3) second proviso and Expln. thereto — Maintenance by wife — First wife if abandoned by husband or a case of desertion by her — Determination of — Appellant wife thrown out of her matrimonial house by respondent husband on account of his second marriage — Her refusal to join company of her husband therefor — Held, appellant specifically stated that after marriage, till children were born, her relationship with her husband was cordial — But after he brought home a second wife, he declared that he would not keep appellant and started ill-treating her and threw her out of the house along with children — She also stated in her cross-examination that her children were with her but for last one year they were with respondent — She further admitted very fairly that respondent was educating the children — She asserted that for last 4 years, her entry to house of her husband was stopped — Courts below committed serious error in holding that appellant had abandoned her husband and desisted from joining him for 4-5 years and, therefore, respondent was justified in getting married again — In wake of admitted second marriage of respondent, appellant would be entitled to claim maintenance and her earlier refusal to join company of respondent would be of no consequence whatsoever — It was very clear that she was thrown out on account of respondent having contracted second marriage — It was nowhere on record that she had left house without any rhyme or reason — Hence, claim of appellant for maintenance tenable — Appellant, in her evidence, gave average earnings of her husband, which went unchallenged — Hence, considering overall situation, maintenance @ Rs 1500 p.m. granted (Paras 11 to 18). Saygo Bai v. Chueeru Bajrangi, (2010) 13 SCC 762.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-2010]

[381] — S. 125 — Maintenance — That because the wife and children had left the house on their own, held, is no ground to disentitle them to maintenance — In the facts and circumstances of the case the respondent was bound to maintain his wife and children. Mannava Satyawati v. Mannava Malleswara Rao, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 259: 1995 SCC (Cri) 836.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-1-1994]

[382] — S. 125 — Maintenance — Claim of, by deserted wife — Requisites for maintaining proceedings — Held, burden in the first place is upon wife to show that means of her husband are sufficient — Also, an inseparable condition has to be established that wife is unable to maintain herself — These two conditions, held, are in addition to the requirement that husband must have neglected or refused to maintain his wife — In the instant case, there was no dispute that appellant husband had requisite means — He had placed material to show that respondent wife was earning some income — Held, that was not sufficient to rule out application of S. 125 as it had to be established that with the amount she earned she was able to maintain herself — Herein, the trial court, the Revisional Court and the High Court had analysed evidence and held that respondent wife was unable to maintain herself — Conclusions, held, are essentially factual and are not perverse — Hence, there is no scope for interference (Paras 7 and 9). Chaturbhuj v. Sita Bai, (2008) 2 SCC 316: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 356: AIR 2008 SC 530: (2008) 1 KLT 41: 2008 Cri LJ 727: (2008) 105 Cut LT 729: (2008) 2 Guj LR 1159.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-2007]

Bhagwan Dutt v. Kamla Devi, (1975) 2 SCC 386: 1975 SCC (Cri) 563, relied on

[383] — S. 125 — Maintenance — Wife having left her matrimonial home without any justifiable ground — Held, not entitled to maintenance — On facts, two reasons given by respondent wife for her ill-treatment by husband, namely, his greed for dowry and that the respondent was not good-looking, held, were non-existent — Also, no other reason for ill-treatment — Facts indicating that for several years after their marriage they enjoyed normal marital relationship — Hence held, Magistrate rightly rejected wife's claim for maintenance

The findings recorded by the learned Magistrate were fully justified as they were based on the evidence on record and appear to be reasonable. In her application the respondent had given two reasons for her ill-treatment by the appellant, namely, his greed for dowry and that she was not good-looking. So far as the second reason is concerned, in the course of her deposition, the respondent has not said a word about it. So far as the first reason is concerned, on a careful scrutiny of the evidence on record, it is concluded that no dowry was ever demanded either before the marriage or after the marriage. Even PW 2, the mother of the respondent had to admit that the appellant had never demanded any dowry or gift. Of course she added that all this was in his mind. Therefore, the trial court properly appreciated the evidence on record while recording the finding that there was never any demand for dowry by the appellant. There was, therefore, no reason for him to ill-treat his wife for this reason. Thus, both the reasons given in the application for her ill-treatment are non-existent. (Para 18)

Having perused the evidence on record with a view to ascertain whether for any other reason the respondent was ill-treated by the appellant, it is found that the behaviour of the appellant has been throughout normal. It is admitted by the parties that they frequently went during vacations to visit different places. On some occasions they were even accompanied by the relatives of the respondent. The appellant permitted the respondent to continue her studies even after her marriage and that is how she secured her BA degree after marriage. He also arranged an agency of UTI to keep her engaged and also opened a joint account in a bank which she could operate. All these facts go to indicate that for several years after their marriage they enjoyed normal marital relationship. In fact, there is evidence to show that the appellant used to praise his wife in the presence of others by complimenting her and giving her credit for the good performance of their son in his studies. (Para 19)

Further, it is difficult to believe that if the appellant started torturing the respondent within 15 days of the marriage, the respondent would not have reported this matter at least to her mother. According to her mother, she came to know about her ill-treatment 5 to 6 years after marriage. According to the respondent in her complaint, she had mentioned about such happenings to her mother about eight years after her marriage. While there is reference to reports lodged by the respondent to the police regarding torture by the appellant, not one such report has been brought on record which may have been lodged before the respondent left her matrimonial home. The only police report brought on record is one lodged after the respondent left her matrimonial home. This report is of not much importance. There is no contemporaneous document in the form of letters which may have been written by the respondent to her friends or relatives mentioning about her being subjected to torture or harassment by the appellant. The respondent being an educated lady, it is difficult to believe that she would not have written letters to her friends and relatives during the twelve years that she lived with the appellant as husband and wife. Apart from her mother, the respondent has produced no evidence or proof that she was tortured and harassed by the appellant. The learned Magistrate also noticed that though they lived at different places around Calcutta during the period of twelve years after their marriage, not one witness was examined by the respondent to prove that the appellant treated the respondent with cruelty. On the other hand, some witnesses have been examined by the appellant to prove that they lived a normal life and there was no question of the respondent being tortured by the appellant for any reason whatsoever. Even the other facts support the case of the appellant that he had not treated the respondent with cruelty for any reason whatsoever. (Para 19)

(5) Second marriage, desertion, previous wife, refusal to live with husband (contd.)

Thus, the High Court was not justified in setting aside the findings recorded by the learned Judicial Magistrate. (Para 20). Deb Narayan Halder v. Anushree Halder, (2003) 11 SCC 303: 2004 SCC (Cri) 164: AIR 2003 SC 3174.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2003]

[384] — S. 125 — Petition filed by wife having abandoned matrimonial home on ground of neglect and failure of husband to provide sustenance — Burden on husband to prove that he offered to take wife back and maintain her and that she failed to rejoin him. Begum Subanu v. A.M. Abdul Gafoor, (1987) 2 SCC 285: 1987 SCC (Cri) 300: AIR 1987 SC 1103: 1987 Cri LJ 980.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-1987]

[385] — S. 125 — Concept as developed in some jurisdictions in USA — Explained — Contract as basis for grant of palimony — Express or implied contract — Words and Phrases — "Palimony"

In USA the expression "palimony" was coined which means grant of maintenance to a woman who has lived for a substantial period of time with a man without marrying him, and is then deserted by him. The first decision on palimony was the well-known decision of the California Superior Court in Marvin case, (1976) 18 Cal 3d 660 (California SC). The US Supreme Court has not given any decision on whether there is a legal right to palimony, but there are several decisions of the courts in various States in USA. These courts in USA have taken divergent views, some granting palimony, some denying it altogether, and some granting it on certain conditions. Hence in USA the law is still in a state of evolution on the right to palimony. (Para 23)

Although there is no statutory basis for grant of palimony in USA, the courts there which have granted it on a contractual basis. Some courts in USA have held that there must be a written or oral agreement between the man and woman that if they separate, the man will give palimony to the woman, while other courts have held that if a man and woman have lived together for a substantially long period without getting married there would be deemed to be an implied or constructive contract that palimony will be given on their separation. A law has now been passed in 2010 by the State Legislature of New Jersey that there must be a written agreement between the parties to claim palimony. There are widely divergent views of the courts in USA regarding the right to palimony. Some States like Georgia and Tennessee expressly refuse to recognise palimony agreements. (Paras 24 and 27)

Written palimony contracts are rare, but some US courts have found implied contracts when a woman has given up her career, has managed the household, and assisted a man in his business for a lengthy period of time. Even when there is no explicit written or oral contract some US courts have held that the action of the parties make it appear that a constructive or implied contract for grant of palimony existed. However, a meretricious contract exclusively for sexual service is held in all US courts as invalid and unenforceable. (Para 28). D. Velusamy v. D. Patchaiammal, (2010) 10 SCC 469: (2010) 6 CTC 216 (SC): (2010) 4 KLT 384: (2010) 4 UPLJ 138 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Markandey Katju and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-10-2010]

Marvin v. Marvin, (1976) 18 Cal 3d 660 (California SC), relied on

Taylor v. Fields, (1986) 224 Cal Rptr 186 (California CA); Devaney v. L'Esperance, (2008) 195 NJ 247 (New Jersey SC), discussed

[386] — Ss. 125 and 127 — Scope — Right of deserted wife to stay in tenancy premises — Nature and scope — Eviction suit filed against tenant-husband — Right of deserted wife to contest — Restriction of enforceability of said right against husband alone — So long as tenant would have been entitled to stay in tenancy premises by availing benefit of provisions of Transfer of Property Act, 1882 and rent control legislation, held, the wife too can continue to stay in tenancy premises exercising her right to residence as a part of her right to maintenance, subject to compliance with all such obligations, including payment of rent to which tenant is subject — A deserted wife continuing in occupation of such premises, and which were her matrimonial home, occupies a position akin to heir of tenant-husband, if right to residence of such wife has not come to an end — Further held, a deserted wife who has been or is entitled to be in occupation of the matrimonial home is entitled to contest such suit subject to two conditions that: (1) tenant has given up contest or is not interested in contesting suit, and such giving up shall prejudice deserted wife who is residing in the premises, and (2) scope and ambit of defence by wife would not be on a footing higher or larger than that of tenant himself — Clarified that landlord's right to eviction against his tenant was not being subordinated to the wife's right to residence enforceable against her husband — Both rights were to coexist as long as they could — Suitable amendment in legislation called for in respect of above ruling — However, in the meantime, above position of law to remain in force under Art. 142 — On facts, appellant, in status of deserted wife, was rightly permitted by High Court to be joined as party to eviction proceedings pending against her husband and contest suit and deposit rent in court for payment to landlord on behalf of tenant-husband, who had lost interest in defending the said suit — Constitution of India — Art. 142 — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — S. 18 r/w S. 3(b) — Family Courts Act, 1984 — S. 7(1) Expln. (f) — Transfer of Property Act, 1882 — Ss. 108 and 105 — Karnataka Rent Control Act, 1961 (22 of 1961), S. 21

A deserted wife who has been or is entitled to be in occupation of the matrimonial home is entitled to contest the suit for eviction filed against her husband in his capacity as tenant subject to satisfying two conditions: first, that the tenant has given up the contest or is not interested in contesting the suit and such giving up by the tenant-husband shall prejudice the deserted wife who is residing in the premises; and secondly, the scope and ambit of the contest or defence by the wife would not be on a footing higher or larger than that of the tenant himself. Such a wife would be entitled to raise all such pleas and claim trial thereon, as would have been available to the tenant himself and no more. So long as, by availing the benefit of the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act and rent control legislation, the tenant would have been entitled to stay in the tenancy premises, the wife too can continue to stay exercising her right to residence as a part of right to maintenance subject to compliance with all such obligations including the payment of rent to which the tenant is subject. A deserted wife in occupation of the tenanted premises on the other hand cannot be placed in a position worse than that of a sub-tenant contesting a claim for eviction on the ground of sub-letting. Having been deserted by the tenant-husband, she cannot be deprived of the roof over her head where the tenant has conveniently left her to face the peril of eviction attributable to default or neglect of himself. A deserted wife continuing in occupation of the premises obtained on lease by her husband, and which was their matrimonial home, occupies a position akin to that of an heir of the tenant-husband if the right to residence of such wife has not come to an end. The tenant having lost interest in protecting his tenancy rights as available to him under the law, the same right would devolve upon and inhere in the wife so long as she continues in occupation of the premises. A suitable amendment in the legislation is called for to that effect. And, so long as that is not done, the Supreme Court responding to the demands of social and gender justice, needs to mould the relief and do complete justice by exercising its jurisdiction under Article 142 of the Constitution. However, the purpose of the holding as above is to give the wife's right to residence a meaningful efficacy as dictated by the needs of the times. It is neither intended or proposed that the landlord's right to eviction against his tenant be subordinated to the wife's right to residence enforceable against her husband. Let both the rights coexist so long as they can. (Paras 32 and 33)

The appellant, in the status of a deserted wife — in the facts and circumstances of the case — was rightly permitted by the High Court to be joined as a party to the proceedings. She was also rightly allowed to contest the suit and deposit the rent in the court for payment to the landlord for and on behalf of the tenant-husband. (Para 34)

However, it is admitted by the appellant that on 3-12-1998, that is, during the pendency of these proceedings and while the matter was pending in the High Court a decree for dissolution of marriage by divorce based on mutual consent had been passed. The terms and conditions of such settlement have not been brought on record by the appellant which she ought to have done. It is not the case of the appellant that she is entitled to continue her residence in the tenanted premises by virtue of an obligation incurred by her husband to provide residence for her as a part of maintenance. She cannot, therefore, be allowed to prosecute the appeal and defend her right against the claim for eviction made by the landlord. (Para 36). B.P. Achala Anand v. S. Appi Reddy, (2005) 3 SCC 313: AIR 2005 SC 986: (2005) 117 DLT 354: (2005) 1 KLT 904.

(5) Second marriage, desertion, previous wife, refusal to live with husband (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-2005]

[387] — Ss. 125(1), (4) and (5) — High Court's finding that the appellant-wife was living in adultery, held, on facts, unsustainable — But even assuming her to be guilty of adultery, maintenance to minor children cannot be refused on that ground. Milagrinha Gonsalves v. Pedre A. Gonsalves, 1987 Supp SCC 191: 1988 SCC (Cri) 45.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-1987]

[388] — S. 125(3) second proviso — Just ground for refusal of wife to live with her husband — Impotency of husband amounts to cruelty and is a just ground for wife's refusal to live with her husband — Such wife, unable to maintain herself is therefore entitled to claim maintenance under S. 125

The woman goes to the marital home of her husband, with a fond hope and expectation that she would have not only a happy but also peaceful conjugal society of her husband. When the wife found that her husband is unable to perform sexual obligation, which is one of the important factors to cement bondage of affection and cordial relationship in the marital home, it would be a perpetual agony for the wife to continue to live in peace in the conjugal home. Cruelty is a ground for divorce or judicial separation in civil law. Under these circumstances, she would be well-justified to live separately from the husband and at the same time keep maintaining her married status.

In the instant case the respondent-wife had not immediately rushed to sever her marital relations with the appellant. She had sufficiently waited for long time to see whether there would be any improvement in the potency of the appellant. Having found no hope, she chose to live separately from the appellant. Therefore, it could safely be concluded that the respondent having tried all means to sustain the marital relations but having found that it was impossible for the appellant to gain potency, she had chosen to live apart from the appellant. Therefore, there was sufficient ground for the wife to live separately. Major Ashok Kumar Singh v. VIth Addl. Sessions Judge, (1996) 1 SCC 554: 1996 SCC (Cri) 161: AIR 1996 SC 333: 1996 ALJ 81: 1996 Cri LJ 392.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-9-1995]

Sirajmohmedkhan Janmohamadkhan v. Hafizunnisa Yasinkhan, (1981) 4 SCC 250: 1981 SCC (Cri) 829, followed

[Ed.: It may be noted that the Court has relied on its earlier decision in Sirajmohmedkhan Janmohamadkhan v. Hafizunnisa Yasinkhan, (1981) 4 SCC 250, which in turn was decided on what we felt was a mistaken reading of the ratio of Din Mohamed, ILR 5 (1885) All 267 as submitted in our Editorial Note at (1981) 4 SCC 251.

In respect of the present ruling the following questions arise:

1. The order has apparently been made under the second proviso to Section 125(3) which is applicable only on the non-compliance with the order passed under Section 125(1). Here the question of non-compliance did not arise as the order of maintenance under Section 125(1) was itself being disputed as is clear from the fact that the Court has cited Section 125(1) only in para 3 above.

2. To be sure, the failure of the husband to provide 'conjugal relations' does not become a 'just ground' for the wife to live separately while examining the wife's claim for maintenance under Section 125 which aims at prevention of vagrancy by enabling the criminal court to order provision for food, clothing and shelter to the wife.

Din Mohamed, which the Court commanded to its aid in Sirajmohmedkhan Janmohamadkhan clearly declared: "all that the magistrate has to determine in a case of this kind is whether the woman claiming maintenance is still the wife of the person against whom she advances such a claim". It was indeed not the failure of the husband to provide sexual relations which was held determinative of the issue. Instead, the status of the woman as wife was held decisive then.

3. The Court seems to have been influenced by the feeling that since impotency means denial of conjugal rights so essential to a marriage, there is justification for holding that the failure of husband to provide sexual relations should be a ground to the wife to live separately from the husband.

Impotency is not a ground for divorce. But it is a ground for declaring a marriage null and void. And it is pertinent to note that in the event of a decree of nullity ordinarily courts do not order maintenance.]

(6) Second wife

[389] — S. 125 — Hindu woman married after coming into force of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 in accordance with Hindu rites with a Hindu male having a wife living, held, not entitled to maintenance under S. 125 as such marriage is void ipso jure under S. 11, Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — 'Wife' in sub-s. (1)(a) — Interpretation of — Reference to personal law can be made

Section 125 of the Code has been enacted in the interest of a wife, and one who intends to take benefit under sub-section (1)(a) has to establish the necessary condition, namely, that she is the wife of the person concerned. The word 'wife' is not defined in the Code except indicating in the Explanation its inclusive character so as to cover a divorcee. A woman cannot be a divorcee unless there was a marriage in the eye of the law preceding that status. The expression must, therefore, be given the meaning in which it is understood in law applicable to the parties, subject to the Expln. (b), which is not relevant in the present context. It is only where an applicant establishes her status on relationship with reference to the personal law that an application for maintenance can be maintained. Once the right under the section is established by proof of necessary conditions mentioned therein, it cannot be defeated by further reference to the personal law.

The necessary condition for a lawful marriage as laid down under S. 5(1)(i) of the Hindu Marriage Act is that neither party should have a spouse living at the time of the marriage. A marriage in contravention of this condition is, therefore, void ipso jure i.e. void from the very inception by virtue of S. 11 of the Act. Such a marriage has to be ignored as not existing in law at all if and when such a question arises.

Merely because Expln. (b) to S. 125(1) of the Code entitles a divorcee to the benefits of the section, it cannot be said that a woman marrying according to Hindu rites a man who has a wife living should be brought within the sweep of the section by giving an extended meaning. For the purpose of extending the benefit of the section to a divorced woman and an illegitimate child Parliament considered it necessary to include in the section specific provisions to that effect, but has not done so with respect to women not lawfully married.

Even if the second wife, the appellant, was not informed at the time of her marriage with the respondent about the respondent's earlier marriage, her prayer for maintenance under S. 125 of the Code cannot be allowed. The appellant cannot rely on the principle of estoppel so as to defeat the provisions of the Act. So far as the respondent treating her as his wife is concerned, it is again of no avail as the issue has to be settled under the law. It is the intention of the legislature which is relevant and not the attitude of the party. Yamunabai Anantrao Adhav v. Anantrao Shivram Adhav, (1988) 1 SCC 530: 1988 SCC (Cri) 182: AIR 1988 SC 644: 1988 Cri LJ 793: 1988 Mah LJ 335: (1988) 1 KLT 416.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-1-1988]

Followed in (1988) 1 SCC 537

[390] — S. 125 — Hindu woman marrying after commencement of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 a Hindu male having wife or wives already living, held, not entitled to maintenance under S. 125, her marriage being null and void under S. 11 r/w S. 5(1)(i) of the Act — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Ss. 11 and 5(1)(i). Bakulabai v. Gangaram, (1988) 1 SCC 537: 1988 SCC (Cri) 189: (1988) 1 KLT 413: 1988 Mah LJ 330.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-1-1988]

Yamunabai v. Anantrao Shivram Adhav, (1988) 1 SCC 530, followed

[391] — S. 125 — Maintenance — Claim of, by second wife — Second marriage invalid — Effect — Held, marriage of a woman in accordance with Hindu rites with a man having a living spouse is a complete nullity in the eye of the law — Such woman is therefore not entitled to the benefit of S. 125 CrPC or the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Scope of S. 125 cannot be enlarged by introducing any artificial definition to include a woman not lawfully married in the expression "wife" — Evidence showing that the respondent husband was having a living spouse at the time of alleged marriage with the appellant claimant — Thus, marriage with appellant was void — Appellant not entitled to maintenance — Plea that appellant was not informed about the respondent's earlier marriage when she married him, was of no avail — Principle of estoppel cannot be pressed into service to defeat the provision of S. 125 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Ss. 11, 24 & 25 — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — S. 18 (Paras 8, 15, 18, 20, 17 and 21). Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2005 SC 1809: 2005 Cri LJ 2141: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2005]

Yamunabai Anantrao Adhav v. Anantrao Shivram Adhav, (1988) 1 SCC 530: 1988 SCC (Cri) 182; Vimala (K.) v. Veeraswamy (K.), (1991) 2 SCC 375: 1991 SCC (Cri) 442, relied on [392] — S. 125 — Marriage in contravention of S. 5(i), HMA, 1955 — Subsistence of an earlier marriage at the time of solemnising the second marriage — Proof of — Held, when a plea of subsisting marriage is raised by the respondent husband it has to be satisfactorily proved by tendering evidence — On facts, earlier marriage of respondent husband was established — Hence, his second marriage with appellant who was claiming maintenance under S. 125 CrPC was void — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 3 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Ss. 5(i) and 11 (Paras 19, 20 and 15). Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2005 SC 1809: 2005 Cri LJ 2141: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1378.

(6) Second wife (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2005]

Vimala (K.) v. Veeraswamy (K.), (1991) 2 SCC 375: 1991 SCC (Cri) 442, relied on

[393] — S. 125 — Maintenance — Object — Claim of Hindu wife for maintenance — Plea taken by husband that marriage was void due to subsistence of an earlier marriage — Marriage of the claimant in customary form not in dispute — Burden of strict proof of the earlier marriage on husband — Held on facts, husband failed to discharge the burden — Maintenance amount of Rs 400 per mensem awarded by trial Magistrate, justified, the same being commensurate with the means of the husband and the wife having no means to maintain herself

Section 125 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is meant to achieve a social purpose. The object is to prevent vagrancy and destitution. It provides a speedy remedy for the supply of food, clothing and shelter to the deserted wife. When an attempt is made by the husband to negative the claim of the neglected wife depicting her as a kept-mistress on the specious plea that he was already married, the court would insist on strict proof of the earlier marriage. Under the Hindu Law a second wife, whose marriage is void on account of the survival of the first marriage is not a legally wedded wife. She is, therefore, not entitled to maintenance under S. 125. Such a provision in law which disentitles the second wife from receiving maintenance from her husband under S. 125, CrPC. for the sole reason that the marriage ceremony though performed in the customary form lacks legal sanctity can be applied only when the husband satisfactorily proves the subsistence of a legal and valid marriage particularly when S. 125 is a measure of social justice intended to protect women and children. (Para 3)

In this case though the respondent-husband repudiated the marriage of the appellant as void on account of subsistence of an earlier marriage, he failed to discharge the heavy burden by tendering strict proof of the fact that he had earlier married another woman 'V' in the customary form and the marriage was subsisting when the appellant was married to him. In absence of a clear admission of an earlier marriage the statement that the respondent is living with another woman as husband and wife cannot persuade the court to hold that the marriage duly solemnised between the appellant and the respondent suffers from any legal infirmity. The insurance policy indicating that 'V' was the wife of the respondent and the family identity card issued by Road Transport Corporation where respondent was working showing 'V' as his wife, being the documents issued on the basis of what the respondent himself had stated, are not conclusive of the subsistence of a valid marriage between the respondent and 'V' when the admitted marriage with the appellant was solemnised. (Para 2)

There is no dispute that the appellant was married to the respondent in the customary form. They lived together as husband and wife and of late the respondent had neglected to maintain her. The respondent has no case that the appellant has means to maintain herself or that the amount she has claimed is not commensurate with the means of the respondent. The Magistrate was, therefore, justified in awarding an amount of Rs 400 per mensem towards the maintenance of the appellant. That order of the Magistrate has to be restored. (Para 4). Vimala (K.) v. Veeraswamy (K.), (1991) 2 SCC 375: 1991 SCC (Cri) 442: (1991) 2 KLJ 162: (1991) 1 GLH 380.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, V. Ramaswami and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-3-1991]

[394] — S. 125 — Maintenance — Second wife not entitled — Where appellant's first wife was alive and the marriage had not been annulled by decree of divorce or otherwise, held, High Court erred in granting maintenance in favour of second wife — Maintenance awarded to her set aside — However, children of second marriage to continue to get maintenance (Para 2). Khemchand Om Prakash Sharma v. State of Gujarat, (2000) 3 SCC 753: 2000 SCC (Cri) 748.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-2-2000]

[395] — S. 125 — Maintenance — Entitlement to — Muslim husband's marriage with sister of existing wife — Legality of — Such marriage, held, irregular (fasid) and not void (batil) — Therefore, unless terminated in accordance with law, it continues to subsist — Hence, the wife and children of such marriage, held, entitled to maintenance — Case law on void and irregular marriages discussed — Muslim Law — Maintenance — Entitlement to, under S. 125 CrPC

The respondent filed an application against the appellant, claiming maintenance for herself and for her minor daughter under Section 125 CrPC. She stated that she was the legally wedded wife of the appellant and that her minor daughter was born from the wedlock. She added that the appellant had already married her elder sister but had thereafter married the respondent with the consent of his first wife. That gradually, the appellant had started neglecting the respondent and her daughter who had no means to support themselves. She therefore claimed a certain amount as maintenance for each of them.

The appellant herein denied that he had married the respondent. The defence put up by the appellant was not accepted by the trial court which in turn, granted relief to the respondent. The Revisional Court and the High Court upheld the order of the trial court. The appellant then filed the present appeal by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that under the Muslim law, a man could not marry his wife's sister during his wife's lifetime. That since such conjunction was prohibited, even if the marriage had been performed the same was void in law and did not confer any rights either on the respondent or her daughter.

On the other hand, the respondent submitted that in a proceeding under Section 125 CrPC the Court was not required to adjudicate upon the validity of a marriage and on a prima facie view it could pass an order for maintenance of both the wife and her daughter. That till the marriage was not declared to be void by a competent court of law, it continued to subsist and all rights flowing from a valid marriage continued to be available to the respondent and her daughter.

Dismissing the appeal with costs,

Held :

If the marriage which was said to have been performed between the appellant and the respondent is held to be void then, Respondent 1 will not be entitled to maintenance from the appellant under Section 125 CrPC. If, on the other hand, the marriage is held to be irregular, then the marriage will subsist for all purposes, unless declared to be void by a competent court. Till such a declaration is made, along with the respondent, her daughter will also be entitled to maintenance under Section 125 CrPC. (Para 23)

Under the Muslim law a distinction has been drawn between void marriages and irregular marriages. Since a marriage, which is temporarily prohibited may be rendered lawful once the prohibition is removed, such a marriage is irregular (fasid) and not void (batil). (Para 26)

The bar of unlawful conjunction (jama bain-al-mahramain) renders a marriage irregular and not void. Consequently, under the Hanafi law as far as Muslims in India are concerned, an irregular marriage continues to subsist till terminated in accordance with law and the wife and the children of such marriage would be entitled to maintenance under the provisions of Section 125 CrPC. (Para 32)

Therefore, it has to be held that the unlawful conjunction and/or marriage between the appellant and the respondent continues to subsist not having been declared void by any competent forum and that accordingly the respondent and her daughter both will be entitled to maintenance under Section 125 CrPC. (Paras 34 and 35). Chand Patel v. Bismillah Begum, (2008) 4 SCC 774: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 490: AIR 2008 SC 1915: (2008) 2 KLT 1038.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2008]

F.D. Mulla: Principles of Mahomedan Law; Fatwa-i-Alamgiri, referred to

Tajbi v. Mowla Khan, ILR (1917) 41 Bom 485: (1917) 39 IC 603, approved

Kaniza v. Hasan Ahmad Khan, AIR 1926 Oudh 231: (1926) 92 IC 82; Taliamand v. Muhammad Din, AIR 1930 Lah 907: (1931) 129 IC 12; Rahiman Bibi Saheba v. Mahboob Bibi Saheba, ILR 1938 Mad 278, impliedly approved

Aizunnissa Khatoon v. Karimunnissa Khatoon, ILR (1895) 23 Cal 130, impliedly overruled

Rameshchandra Rampratapji Daga v. Rameshwari Rameshchandra Daga, (2005) 2 SCC 33; Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787; Yamunabai Anantrao Adhav v. Anantrao Shivram Adhav, (1988) 1 SCC 530: 1988 SCC (Cri) 182, considered

(7) Maintenance in case of live-in relationship/Presumed marriage/De facto marriage/Cohabitation

See also Ss. 125-128, '(4) Matters to be established for entitlement to maintenance under', '(5) Second marriage, desertion, previous wife, refusal to live with husband' and

'(6) Second wife', above

[396] — S. 125 — "Wife" — Interpretation — Long cohabitation without valid marriage — Entitlement of such woman to maintenance — Considering that there was divergence of judicial opinion on interpretation of word "wife" in S. 125, matter referred to larger Bench in light of Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005, which gave wide interpretation to terms like "domestic abuse" and "domestic relationship" which included live-in relationship and entitles such women to reliefs under 2005 Act — Opinion expressed that a broad and expansive interpretation should be given to term "wife" to include even those cases where a man and woman have been living together as husband and wife for a reasonably long period of time, and strict proof of marriage should not be a precondition for maintenance under S. 125 CrPC, so as to fulfil true spirit and essence of the beneficial provision of maintenance under S. 125 — CrPC, 1898, S. 488 — Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005, S. 3 Expln. 1 cl. (iv), Ss. 21, 22 and 26 — Constitution of India — Art. 141 — Words and Phrases — "Wife" (Paras 26 to 42). Chanmuniya v. Virendra Kumar Singh Kushwaha, (2011) 1 SCC 141.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-2010]

Dwarika Prasad Satpathy v. Bidyut Prava Dixit, (1999) 7 SCC 675: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1345; Yamunabai Anantrao Adhav v. Anantrao Shivram Adhav, (1988) 1 SCC 530: 1988 SCC (Cri) 182; Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787; Marvin v. Marvin, (1976) 18 Cal 3d 660, considered

(8) Maintenance in case of divorce (including divorced Muslim women)

See also Ss. 125 to 128, '(4) Matters to be established for entitlement to maintenance under', and

'(5) Second marriage, desertion, previous wife, refusal to live with husband', above

[397] — Ss. 125 and 127(3)(b) — Applicability, scope and interpretation — Divorced woman's right to maintenance — Showing of element of neglect by husband necessary — Absence of mutual consent under S. 125(4) is apparent, where the parties are Muslim, from divorce by husband and his provision for separate residence for the wife — Payment under customary or personal law as contemplated in S. 127(3)(b) will disentitle the wife to claim maintenance allowance only if the payment is adequate enough for her continuous maintenance — Payment under Muslim law of mehar money of Rs 5000 to wife living in Bombay, held inadequate and hence, her claim for maintenance allowance rightly decreed — Consent decree of 1962 settling all claims of the wife, however, cannot deprive her of the new right under S. 125 of the 1973 Code

Section 125 requires, as a sine qua non for its application, neglect by husband or father. In this generous jurisdiction, a broader perception and appreciation of the facts and their bearing must govern the verdict — not chopping little logic or tinkering with burden of proof.

In the present case, the Magistrate proceeded on neglect to maintain which was nowhere contradicted. So this condition is satisfied as the husband had no case of non-neglect.

The absence of mutual consent to live separately, under S. 125(4), is apparent from the fact of divorce by the husband and his provision of a separate residence for her. Divorce here plainly implied that the husband ordered the wife out of her conjugal home.

No settlement of claims made before the 1973 Code which does not have the special statutory right of the divorcee under new S. 125 can operate to negate that claim. Hence, the contention that the claim for maintenance could not survive in view of the settlement by consent decree whereby all claims had been adjusted, is not acceptable.

Also the purpose of the payment 'under any customary or personal law', in the context of S. 127(3)(b) must be to obviate destitution of the divorcee and to provide her with wherewithal to maintain herself. The whole scheme of S. 127(3)(b) is manifestly to recognise the substitute maintenance arrangement by lump sum payment organised by the custom of the community or the personal law of the parties. There must be a rational relation between the sum so paid and its potential as provision for maintenance; to interpret otherwise is to stultify the project. Law is dynamic and its meaning cannot be pedantic but purposeful. No husband can claim under S. 127(3)(b) absolution from his obligation under S. 125 towards a divorced wife except on proof of payment of a sum stipulated by customary or personal law whose quantum is more or less sufficient to do duty for maintenance allowance. The payment of illusory amounts by way of customary or personal law requirement will be considered in the reduction of maintenance rate but cannot annihilate that rate unless it is a reasonable substitute.

Payment of mehar money, as a customary discharge, is within the cognizance of S. 127. But interest from Rs 5000 is surely not enough in a city like Bombay. Bai Tahira v. Ali Hussain Fidaalli Chothia, (1979) 2 SCC 316: 1979 SCC (Cri) 473: AIR 1979 SC 362: 1979 Cri LJ 151: 1979 Mah LJ 95.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, V.D. Tulzapurkar and R.S. Pathak, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-1978]

[398] — S. 125(1) Expln. (b) — Claim to maintenance by divorced wife, held, maintainable — A woman after divorce is entitled to claim maintenance from former husband if she cannot provide for herself and remains unmarried — Such husband remains under a statutory duty and obligation to provide maintenance to his former wife — That divorce was based on desertion is no ground to deny maintenance — Plea rejected that upon divorce mutual rights, duties and obligation of parties came to an end and so wife would no longer be entitled to maintenance — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Ss. 13(1)(i-b) and 25

Though the marital relations between the petitioner and the respondent came to an end by the divorce granted by the Family Court under Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, the respondent continues to be a "wife" within the meaning of Section 125 CrPC on account of Explanation (b) to sub-section (1). (Para 8)

On account of Explanation (b) a woman who has been divorced by her husband on account of a decree passed by the Family Court under the Hindu Marriage Act, continues to enjoy the status of a wife for the limited purpose of claiming maintenance allowance from her ex-husband. (Para 9)

Claim for maintenance under the first part of Section 125 CrPC is based on the subsistence of marriage while claim for maintenance of a divorced wife is based on the foundation provided by Explanation (b) to sub-section (1) of Section 125 CrPC. If the divorced wife is unable to maintain herself and if she has not remarried, she will be entitled to maintenance allowance. (Para 10)

A woman has two distinct rights for maintenance. As a wife, she is entitled to maintenance unless she suffers from any of the disabilities indicated in Section 125(4). In another capacity, namely, as a divorced woman, she is again entitled to claim maintenance from the person of whom she was once the wife. A woman after divorce becomes a destitute. If she cannot maintain herself or remains unmarried, the man who was once her husband continues to be under a statutory duty and obligation to provide maintenance to her. (Para 11). Rohtash Singh v. Ramendri, (2000) 3 SCC 180: 2000 SCC (Cri) 597: AIR 2000 SC 952: 2000 Cri LJ 1498: 2000 All LJ 629.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-2000]

Capt. Ramesh Chander Kaushal v. Veena Kaushal, (1978) 4 SCC 70: 1978 SCC (Cri) 508, followed

Sukumar Dhibar v. Anjali Dasi, 1983 Cri LJ 36 (Cal), approved

Rohtash Singh v. Ramendri, (1999) 38 All Cri Cases 798 (All), affirmed

[399] — S. 125(1) Expln. (b) — Every divorcee, otherwise eligible, is entitled to the benefit of maintenance allowance and the dissolution of the marriage makes no difference to this right under the 1973 Code. Bai Tahira v. Ali Hussain Fidaalli Chothia, (1979) 2 SCC 316: 1979 SCC (Cri) 473: AIR 1979 SC 362: 1979 Cri LJ 151: 1979 Mah LJ 95.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, V.D. Tulzapurkar and R.S. Pathak, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-1978]

[400] — Ss. 125(1) Expln. (b) and 125(4) — Divorce obtained by mutual consent — Such divorced wife who has not remarried and entitled to maintenance under the Explanation cannot be debarred by invoking S. 125(4) — Expression 'wife' in sub-s. (4) does not include a divorced woman — Words and phrases — 'Wife'

In the instant case the divorced wife had not remarried after the divorce by mutual consent under S. 13-B, Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 and so on a showing that the divorced husband had neglected or refused to maintain her was entitled to maintenance by virtue of S. 125(1) read with clause (b) of its Explanation. The divorced husband however succeeded before the High Court in denying her maintenance by relying on Section 125(4) on the plea that a divorcee woman was not entitled to maintenance once it is found that the divorce was by mutual consent. Allowing the appeal of the divorced wife,

Held :

The expression "wife" in sub-section (4) of Section 125 does not have the extended meaning of including a woman who has been divorced. This is for the obvious reason that unless there is a relationship of husband and wife there can be no question of a divorcee woman living in adultery or without sufficient reason refusing to live with her husband. After divorce where is the occasion for the woman to live with her husband? Similarly there would be no question of the husband and wife living separately by mutual consent because after divorce there is no need for consent to live separately. In the context, therefore, sub-section (4) of Section 125 does not apply to the case of a woman who has been divorced or who has obtained a decree for divorce. Therefore, a wife who obtains divorce by mutual consent cannot be denied maintenance by virtue of Section 125(4). (Para 3). Vanamala v. H.M. Ranganatha Bhatta, (1995) 5 SCC 299: 1995 SCC (Cri) 899.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and S.C. Sen, J. [Date of decision: 27-7-1995]

Kongini Balan v. M. Visalakshy, 1986 Cri LJ 697: 1985 Ker LJ 749: 1985 Ker LT 967 (Ker); Krishan Kumar v. Kiran, (1991) 1 DMC 248 (MP); M. Ramakrishna Reddy v. T. Jayamma, 1992 Cri LJ 1368 (AP), approved

[401] — S. 125 — Maintenance — Divorce petition of husband decreed — Lump sum payment to wife by husband in lieu of maintenance granted by civil and criminal courts in favour of the wife and her child, ordered by Supreme Court having regard to facts and circumstances of the case — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — S. 18 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Ss. 13 and 25

(8) Maintenance in case of divorce (including divorced Muslim women) (contd.)

The appellant had filed an application in the Supreme Court claiming Rs 6000 towards maintenance. A reply has been filed by the respondent stating that the District Judge had directed the respondent to pay Rs 700 per month to the appellant and Rs 500 per month to the son as maintenance as per the provisions contained in Section 25 of the Hindu Marriage Act. In suit filed under the Hindu Adoption and Maintenance Act the trial court has directed the respondent to pay Rs 1000 per month as maintenance for son in addition to the aforesaid amount. Apart from above an ex parte order has also been passed in proceedings under Section 125 of the Criminal Procedure Code wherein the respondent had been directed to pay Rs 1000 per month to the appellant and Rs 800 per month to the son. It was also averred that a criminal case has also been instituted by the appellant against the respondent under Section 494 of the Penal Code. The respondent in his reply offered to give some immovable joint family properties to the appellant and her son in lieu of maintenance. But the offer may not be workable and may create complications, specially in view of the fact that the respondent has asserted the said properties to be the joint family properties and there is no such enforceable document on record by which the consent of the father and other brothers may be clearly and unequivocally accepted. Therefore, it would be proper that the respondent should pay a lump sum amount to the appellant, interest income whereof may be enough for her maintenance and also that of her son. It has come on record that the appellant is living with her father and she is working as a teacher in some school where she is getting Rs 2000 per month. The respondent is working as a Junior Engineer in Municipal Corporation of the city of Jalgaon. In the facts of the case, payment of a lump sum amount of rupees eight lakhs by the respondent to the appellant would meet the ends of justice. The respondent is directed to pay a lump sum amount of rupees eight lakhs to the appellant as maintenance for herself and her son within 6 months. After the entire amount of rupees eight lakhs has been paid by the respondent to the appellant, the proceedings of the cases instituted under Section 125 CrPC and Section 494 IPC shall stand quashed and the proceedings under Section 18 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act shall be abated. If the sum of rupees eight lakhs is not paid by the respondent to the appellant as indicated above, it will be open to the appellant to execute the decree and recover the said amount from the respondent in accordance with law. (Paras 12 to 15). Sujata Uday Patil v. Uday Madhukar Patil, (2006) 13 SCC 272: (2007) 51 AIC 480 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-2006]

Reynold Rajamani v. Union of India, (1982) 2 SCC 474: AIR 1982 SC 1261, relied on [402] — S. 125 — Divorce by mutual consent — Pendency of divorce petition filed by the husband and maintenance proceedings filed by the wife — Parties living separately for a period of more than ten years — Marriage between the parties found to be irretrievably broken down and there being no possibility of reconciliation — Parties mutually agreeing that the marriage should be dissolved subject to the payment of Rs 60,000 by the husband to the wife — In peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, the Supreme Court in exercise of its powers under Art. 142 of the Constitution directed that the marriage between the parties shall stand dissolved by a decree of divorce — All the four daughters shall continue to live with their father who shall maintain and take proper care of them — Wife shall be allowed to meet the children at the residence of the husband on prior arrangement — Constitution of India — Art. 142 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — S. 13-B. Kanchan Devi v. Promod Kumar Mittal, (1996) 8 SCC 90: AIR 1996 SC 3192.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-1996]

[403] — S. 125 — Interim alimony — Maintenance awarded under S. 125 CrPC adjustable against amount awarded in matrimonial proceedings — On the facts and circumstances fresh directions for payment by husband issued — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — S. 24. Sudeep Chaudhary v. Radha Chaudhary, (1997) 11 SCC 286: AIR 1999 SC 536.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.P. Bharucha and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1997]

[404] — S. 125 — Wife's claim for maintenance for herself and children — Maintenance fixed by Civil Court under S. 24, Hindu Marriage Act, 1956, pending divorce proceedings by wife, held, has no relevance for fixation by magistrate of maintenance under S. 125 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — S. 24

Ordinarily the determination of a civil right by a Civil Court must prevail against a like decision by the Criminal Court. But, in the instant case, the direction of the Civil Court is not a final determination under the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance

Act, but an order pendente lite, under S. 24, Hindu Marriage Act, and the amount does not include the maintenance for the children. Capt. Ramesh Chander Kaushal v. Veena Kaushal, (1978) 4 SCC 70: 1978 SCC (Cri) 508: AIR 1978 SC 1807: 1979 Cri LJ 3.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and D.A. Desai, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-1978]

[405] — S. 125 — Alimony — Quantum — Directions for enhanced payment of from the estate of the deceased ex-husband keeping in view the rising cost of living, etc. Nandarani Mazumdar v. Indian Airlines, (1983) 4 SCC 461: 1983 SCC (Cri) 858: AIR 1983 SC 1201.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, A.N. Sen and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-9-1983]

[406] — Ss. 125 and 127 — Maintenance — Scope — Right of divorced wife to stay in tenancy premises — Nature and scope — Eviction suit filed against tenant-husband — Right of divorced wife to contest — Restriction of enforceability of said right against husband alone — Whether or not divorced wife has right of residence in the matrimonial home, held, would depend on terms and conditions of divorce decree/settlement, and provision for maintenance (including residence) that has been made therein — In case provision for residence of divorced wife has been made in the matrimonial home situated in tenanted premises, such divorced wife would be entitled to defend, in eviction proceedings, tenancy rights and rights of occupation thereunder in same manner in which tenant-husband could have done, but certainly not on basis of a right higher or larger than that — She would be liable to be evicted in same manner in which her husband as tenant would have been liable to be evicted — Moreover, onus to bring on record terms of divorce settlement/decree are on divorced wife — On facts, during pendency of eviction proceedings against tenant- husband, to which appellant had been joined and given leave to defend as deserted wife, decree for divorce based on mutual settlement had been passed — Neither were terms and conditions of such settlement brought on record, nor was it the case of appellant that she was entitled to continue her residence in tenanted premises as part of her right to maintenance — Hence, held, appellant cannot be allowed to prosecute the appeal and defend her right against claim for eviction made by the landlord — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — S. 18 r/w S. 3(b) — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Ss. 25, 24 and 27 — Divorce Act, 1869 — S. 37 — Parsi Marriage and Divorce Act, 1936 — Ss. 40, 39 and 42 — Special Marriage Act, 1954 — Ss. 37 and 36 — TP Act, 1882 — Ss. 108 and 105 — Karnataka Rent Control Act, 1961 (22 of 1961) — S. 21

The case of a divorced wife stands on a little different footing from a deserted wife. Divorce is termination of the matrimonial relationship and brings to an end the status of wife as such. Whether or not the divorced wife has the right of residence in the matrimonial home, would depend on the terms and conditions in which the decree of divorce has been granted and provision for maintenance (including residence) has been made. In the event of the provision for residence of a divorced wife having been made by the husband in the matrimonial home situated in the tenanted premises, such divorced wife too would be entitled to defend, in the eviction proceedings, the tenancy rights and rights of occupation thereunder in the same manner in which the tenant-husband could have done and certainly not higher or larger than that. She would be liable to be evicted in the same manner in which her husband as tenant would have been liable to be evicted. (Paras 35 and 21)

However, it is admitted by the appellant that on 3-12-1998, that is, during the pendency of these proceedings and while the matter was pending in the High Court a decree for dissolution of marriage by divorce based on mutual consent had been passed. The terms and conditions of such settlement have not been brought on record by the appellant which she ought to have done. It is not the case of the appellant that she is entitled to continue her residence in the tenanted premises by virtue of an obligation incurred by her husband to provide residence for her as a part of maintenance. She cannot, therefore, be allowed to prosecute the appeal and defend her right against the claim for eviction made by the landlord. (Para 36). B.P. Achala Anand v. S. Appi Reddy, (2005) 3 SCC 313: AIR 2005 SC 986: (2005) 117 DLT 354: (2005) 1 KLT 904.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-2005]

Karam Singh Sobti v. Pratap Chand, (1964) 4 SCR 647: AIR 1964 SC 1305, relied on

Bharat Heavy Plates and Vessels Ltd., Re, AIR 1985 AP 207; V.B. Jaganathan v. A.R. Srividhya, (1997) 2 MLJ 366; Old Gate Estates Ltd. v. Alexander, (1949) 2 All ER 822: (1950) 1 KB 311 (CA); Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, (1947) 2 All ER 792; Brown v. Draper, (1944) 1 All ER 246: 1944 KB 309 (CA); Middleton v. Baldock, (1950) 1 All ER 708: (1950) 1 KB 657 (CA); Vaughan v. Vaughan, (1953) 1 QB 762, approved

National Provincial Bank Ltd. v. Ainsworth, 1965 AC 1175: (1965) 2 All ER 472: (1965) 3 WLR 1 (HL); Harriman v. Harriman, 1909 P 123: (1908-10) All ER Rep 85 (CA); Abdur Rahim Undre (Dr.) v. Padma Abdur Rahim Undre, AIR 1982 Bom 341, considered

(8) Maintenance in case of divorce (including divorced Muslim women) (contd.)

[407] — S. 125(4) — Divorce agreement by mutual consent — Wife not disentitled to claim maintenance so long as she remains unmarried and is unable to maintain herself — Concept of living separately by mutual consent arises only during subsistence of marriage — In the circumstances of the case, mere fact that the wife is having two kanals of land is not a sufficient ground to disentitle her to receive maintenance. Gurmit Kaur v. Surjit Singh, (1996) 1 SCC 39.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-11-1995]

[Ed.: It appears that the parties are governed by Hindu Law where divorce outside the court is not permissible. But in the instant case the parties have not challenged the divorce agreement and the Supreme Court has proceeded on the assumption that it was a valid agreement.]

[408] — S. 125 — Claim of maintenance under — In case of dismissal of petition of husband under any of the provisions of Ss. 9 to 14 of Hindu Marriage Act, no alimony can be granted to wife petitioning under S. 25 of that Act but maintenance be claimed under S. 125 CrPC. Chand Dhawan v. Jawaharlal Dhawan, (1993) 3 SCC 406: 1993 SCC (Cri) 915: 1993 Cri LJ 2930.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-6-1993]

[409] — S. 125 — Divorce proceedings under Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Appellant husband directed by the High Court to pay maintenance pendente lite to his wife and minor daughters — Appeal dismissed and decree of divorce declined but maintenance order continued — Claim of the wife and the children found valid otherwise against the husband under S. 125 — Held, the said maintenance shall be taken to have been awarded under S. 125 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Ss. 13 and 24. Chigurupati Bambasiva Rao v. Chigurupati Vijayalaxmi, (1997) 11 SCC 84: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1063.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1997]

[Ed.: Considerations for awarding maintenance pendente lite under the Hindu Marriage Act and maintenance under Section 125 CrPC are entirely different. In the situation as presented in this case should the husband be denied the opportunity to plead the defences available to him under Section 125, CrPC before passing of an order under that section? Moreover, would it be open to the husband in the present case to seek cancellation of the order under Section 125(5) in case the facts so warrant, or alteration of the order under Section 127?

A similar question arose in Ramesh Chander Kaushal v. Veena Kaushal, (1978) 4 SCC 70 where the Supreme Court pointed out that the direction under Section 24, HMA is not a final determination but an order pendente lite and so would not prevent the Magistrate from exercising his jurisdiction under Section 125, CrPC. In that case the Magistrate had awarded higher maintenance under Section 125, CrPC.]

[410] — S. 125 — Maintenance claim fixed and matrimonial dispute settled — Transfer proceedings — Matrimonial dispute — Disposal in terms of settlement — Petition disposed of on the following terms: on the payment of Rs 5,00,000 by respondent to petitioner the proceeding under Ss. 498-A, 406 and 120-B IPC and under S. 9 of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 shall stand quashed — Joint petition for divorce by mutual consent shall be allowed — Rs 3000 per month shall be paid for the welfare of the son till the boy attains majority — On two consecutive defaults in making said payment, the criminal case shall stand revived — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A, 406 and 120-B — CPC, 1908, S. 25. Navpreet Kaur v. Gurkirat Singh, (2008) 17 SCC 485: (2009) 73 AIC 18 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2008]

[411] — S. 125 — Muslim women not barred from filing petition under — Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986, held, applies only to divorced women and not to women who are not divorced — Furthermore, since the proceedings under S. 125 CrPC and the 1986 Act are tried before the same court, and given the beneficial nature of the 1986 Act, even if a divorced Muslim woman applies under S. 125 CrPC, it is open to the court to treat it as an application under the 1986 Act — Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986

The view expressed by the First Revisional Court that no Muslim woman can maintain a petition under Section 125 CrPC is clearly unsustainable. The Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986 only applies to divorced women and not to a woman who is not divorced. Furthermore, proceedings under Section 125 CrPC are civil in nature. Even if the court noticed that there was a divorced Muslim woman who had made an application under Section 125 CrPC, it was open to the court to treat the same as a petition under the 1986 Act considering the beneficial nature of the legislation, especially since proceedings under Section 125 CrPC and claims made under the Muslim Women Act are tried by the same court. (Paras 6 and 3). Iqbal Bano v. State of U.P., (2007) 6 SCC 785: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 258: AIR 2007 SC 2215: (2007) 3 KLT 63: (2007) 4 All LJ 587: (2007) 55 AIC 4 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-6-2007]

Vijay Kumar Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2004) 5 SCC 196: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1576, relied on

[412] — S. 125 — Muslim divorced wife's maintenance petition against ex-husband filed under S. 125 CrPC before Family Court — Maintainability and temporal extent of maintenance — *Such application till the applicant does not remarry, held, maintainable irrespective of absence of any application under S. 5 of Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986 — Her entitlement to maintenance continues even in post-*iddat period as long as she does not remarry — Hence, orders of courts below restricting the maintenance amount to iddat period set aside and matter remanded for disposal in accordance with law — Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986, Ss. 3, 4 and 5 — Constitution of India — Art. 136 — Family Courts Act, 1984, Ss. 7(1) Expln. (f), 20, 3 and 2(d)

The appellant, a Muslim lady, was married to the respondent. She filed a petition under Section 125 CrPC against the respondent in the Court of Family Judge to claim maintenance allowance for herself and her new-born child. In reply, the respondent contended, inter alia, that he had already divorced the appellant and therefore, under the provisions of the Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986 (the Muslim Act), the appellant was not entitled to any maintenance after the divorce and after the expiry of the iddat period. The parties had not given any joint or separate application under Section 5 of the Muslim Act. The Family Court granted a certain amount per month towards maintenance from the date of institution of the petition till the date of divorce and further from the said date till the expiry of iddat period but denied the amount of maintenance thereafter.

The High Court substantially upheld the order of the Family Court. The appellant then filed the present appeal by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that both the courts below proceeded on a wrong assumption that after divorce of a Muslim wife, a petition under Section 125 CrPC would not be maintainable. That the courts below lost sight of Section 7(1)(f) of the Family Courts Act, 1984 (the Family Act).

The respondent supported the impugned judgment.

Thus, the question before the Supreme Court was whether a Muslim divorced wife would be entitled to receive maintenance from her divorced husband under Section 125 CrPC and, if yes, then through which forum.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Section 20 of the Family Act makes it crystal clear that the provisions of that Act shall have overriding effect on all other enactments in force dealing with the issue of maintenance. (Para 15)

From Sections 7(1)(a), (b) & Explanation (f) and Section 20 of the Family Act it is quite discernible that a Family Court established under the Family Act shall exclusively have jurisdiction to adjudicate upon the applications filed under Section 125 CrPC. (Paras 14 to 16)

The appellant's petition under Section 125 CrPC would be maintainable before the Family Court as long as the appellant does not remarry. The amount of maintenance to be awarded under Section 125 CrPC cannot be restricted for the iddat period only. (Para 21)

Cumulative reading of the relevant portions of the judgments in Danial Latifi, (2001) 7 SCC 740 and Iqbal Bano, (2007) 6 SCC 785 would make it crystal clear that even a divorced Muslim woman would be entitled to claim maintenance from her divorced husband, as long as she does not remarry. This being a beneficial piece of legislation, the benefit thereof must accrue to the divorced Muslim women. (Para 23)

Therefore, the impugned orders are set aside and quashed. It is held that even if a Muslim woman has been divorced, she would be entitled to claim maintenance from her husband under Section 125 CrPC after the expiry of period of iddat also, as long as she does not remarry. As a necessary consequence thereof, the matter is remanded to the Family Court for its disposal on merits at an early date, in accordance with law. The respondent shall bear the costs of litigation of the appellant. Counsel's fees Rs 5000. (Para 24). Shabana Bano v. Imran Khan, (2010) 1 SCC 666.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2009]

Danial Latifi v. Union of India, (2001) 7 SCC 740: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 266; Iqbal Bano v. State of U.P., (2007) 6 SCC 785: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 258, followed

[413] — S. 125 — Scheme of, replaced by another under a later statute for divorced Muslim women — Constitutionality — Discrimination — Held, there is no discrimination where State provides for a particular group (divorced Muslim women in this case) a scheme for maintenance and prevention of vagrancy which is equally or more beneficial than that provided in the earlier general law then prevailing (S. 125 CrPC, 1973 in this case) — Contention that as a result of the Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986 petitioners had lost their right to maintenance, held, is no longer of significance in view of the interpretation placed by the Supreme Court on the Act — Constitution of India — Arts. 14, 15 and 16

(8) Maintenance in case of divorce (including divorced Muslim women) (contd.)

A comparison of Sections 3(1)(a) and 3(3) with Section 125 CrPC will make it clear that requirements provided in Section 125 and the purpose, object and scope thereof being to prevent vagrancy by compelling those who can do so to support those who are unable to support themselves and who have a normal and legitimate claim to support are satisfied. If that is so, the argument of the petitioners that a different scheme being provided under the Act, which is equally or more beneficial on the interpretation placed by the Supreme Court herein than the one provided under the Code of Criminal Procedure, deprives them of their right, loses its significance. (Para 30)

Before the passing of the impugned Act, a Muslim woman who was divorced by her husband was granted a right to maintenance from her husband under the provisions of Section 125 CrPC until she may remarry and such a right, if deprived, would not be reasonable, just and fair. Thus the provisions of the Act depriving the divorced Muslim women of such a right to maintenance from her husband and providing for her maintenance to be paid by the former husband only for the period of iddat and thereafter to make her run from pillar to post in search of her relatives one after the other and ultimately to knock at the doors of the Wakf Board does not appear to be a reasonable and fair substitute of the provisions of Section 125 CrPC. Such deprivation of the divorced Muslim women of their right to maintenance from their former husbands under the beneficial provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure which are otherwise available to all other women in India cannot be stated to have been effected by a reasonable, right, just and fair law and, if these provisions are less beneficial than the provisions of Chapter IX of the Code of Criminal Procedure, a divorced Muslim woman has obviously been unreasonably discriminated against and deprived of the protection of the provisions of the general law as indicated under the Code which are available to Hindu, Buddhist, Jain, Parsi or Christian women or women belonging to any other community. The provisions prima facie, therefore, appear to be violative of Article 14 of the Constitution mandating equality and equal protection of law to all persons otherwise similarly circumstanced and also violative of Article 15 of the Constitution which prohibits any discrimination on the ground of religion as the Act would obviously apply to Muslim divorced women only and solely on the ground of their belonging to the Muslim religion. (Para 33)

If on a rule of construction, a given statute will become "ultra vires" or "unconstitutional" and, therefore, void, whereas on another construction which is permissible, the statute remains effective and operative, the court will prefer the latter on the ground that the legislature does not intend to enact unconstitutional laws. The latter interpretation should be accepted and, therefore, the interpretation placed herein results in upholding the validity of the Act. It is well settled that when by appropriate reading of an enactment the validity of the Act can be upheld, such interpretation is accepted by courts and not the other way round. (Para 33). Danial Latifi v. Union of India, (2001) 7 SCC 740: AIR 2001 SC 3958.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, S. Rajendra Babu, D.P. Mohapatra, Doraiswamy Raju and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-2001]

[414] — S. 125 — Effect additional maintenance available under S. 3(1)(b) of the 1986 Muslim Women Act — Held, said S. 3(1)(b) provides additional maintenance to the divorced mother for maintaining her infant child for the fosterage period of two years from the date of birth of the child and is independent of the right of the minor children unable to maintain themselves to maintenance under S. 125, CrPC — Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986 — S. 3(1)(b). Noor Saba Khatoon v. Mohd. Quasim, (1997) 6 SCC 233: 1997 SCC (Cri) 924: AIR 1997 SC 3280: (1997) 2 KLT 363: 1997 Cri LJ 3972.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-1997]

[415] — S. 125 — State Wakf Board's liability to provide maintenance to a divorced Muslim woman who is unable to maintain herself and has not remarried — Such divorced woman not required to initiate proceedings in the first instance against her children, parents and relatives who have no means to pay her maintenance and obtain negative orders and then proceed against the State Wakf Board — She may direct her claim against the State Wakf Board in the first instance and in that proceeding she can plead and prove inability of her relatives to maintain her — If the State Wakf Board controverts that her relatives have enough means to pay maintenance they may be added as parties to the litigation — Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986 — S. 4

The respondent was a Muslim divorced wife. She filed a petition against the State Wakf Board under Section 4(2) of the Act seeking maintenance. The appellant Wakf Board moved the High Court praying for quashing of proceedings but the High Court declined to do so. The appellants approached the Supreme Court for the same purpose. It was contended that unless sub-section (1) of Section 4 gets exhausted by proper orders, sub-section (2) of Section 4 (in which the liability of the State Wakf Board is to be found) cannot be invoked. In other words, it was contended that in the present set of proceedings, the appellants cannot be made to face or litigate about before the Magistrate trying the matter. Rejecting the contention

Held :

The Drafter's pattern in sub-dividing the provision into sub-sections (1) and (2) evidently was not to cause any split in the legislative theme because the provision, is an integrated whole. One step is dependent on another. It is futile for a divorced woman seeking succour to run after relatives, be it her children, parents, relatives or other relatives, who are not possessed of means to offer her maintenance and in fighting litigations in succession against them, dragging them to courts of law in order to obtain negative orders justificatory to the last resort of moving against the State Wakf Board. She would instead be entitled to plead and prove such relevant facts in one proceeding, as to the inability of her relations in maintaining her and directing her claim against the State Wakf Board in the first instance. It is, however, open for the State Wakf Board to controvert that the relations mentioned in the provision, or some of them, have the means to pay maintenance to her. In that event the Magistrate would perfectly be justified in adding those relatives as parties to the litigation in order to determine as towards whom shall he direct his orders for payment of maintenance. In one and the same proceeding, one or more orders conceivably can be passed in favour of the divorced woman, subject of course to her not remarrying and remaining unable to maintain herself.

The High Court committed no wrong in declining to interfere at the initial stage of the proceedings at the behest of the appellant Wakf Board. They are at liberty to take before the Magistrate hearing the matter, such defences as are open to them on the merit of the matter and within the framework of the legislative scheme embodied in Section 4 of the Act. Secretary, Tamil Nadu Wakf Board v. Syed Fatima Nachi, (1996) 4 SCC 616: 1996 SCC (Cri) 810: AIR 1996 SC 2423.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and Sujata V. Manohar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-7-1996]

[416] — S. 125 — Divorce — Condition precedent for effectiveness of divorce so as to disentitle a Muslim woman to claim maintenance, held, is the pronouncement of the divorce — Such pronouncement has to be proved on evidence — Merely taking a plea in the written statement before the trial court in reply to an application for maintenance, that the non-applicant had divorced the applicant sometime in the past, held, would not have the effect of effectuating a divorce on the date of delivery of the copy of the written statement to the applicant — Nor could a similar statement made in an affidavit by the non-applicant in some other case, to which the applicant was not a party, be of any evidentiary value in this regard — Words and Phrases — "Pronouncement" — Muslim Law — Divorce — Condition precedent for being effective

The appellant and A (Respondent 2 herein) were married in 1968. On 12-4-1979, the appellant, on behalf of herself and her two minor children, filed an application under Section 125 CrPC complaining of desertion and cruelty on the part of Respondent 2 towards her. In his written statement filed before the Family Court, A vaguely made certain generalised accusations against the appellant such as that she was sharp, shrewd, mischievous and had brought disgrace to the family. He added that feeling fed up with such unbecoming activities of her, he had divorced her on 11-7-1987 and that therefore she was not entitled to any maintenance. The particulars of the alleged talaq were not pleaded nor the circumstances under which and the persons, if any, in whose presence talaq was pronounced were stated. Except examining himself, Respondent 2 adduced no evidence in proof of talaq said to have been given by him on 11-7-1987. There were no reasons substantiated in justification of talaq and no plea or proof that any effort at reconciliation preceded the talaq. The plea of Respondent 2 was upheld by the Family Court. The Family Court referred to some affidavit dated 31-8-1988 said to have been filed by Respondent 2 in some civil suit details whereof were not available on the record of the present case but certainly to which litigation the appellant was not a party. In that affidavit it was stated by Respondent 2 that he had divorced the appellant 15 months before. The

(8) Maintenance in case of divorce (including divorced Muslim women) (contd.)

Family Court held that from such affidavit the plea of Respondent 2 found corroboration of his having divorced the appellant. The High Court held that although the alleged divorce had not been communicated to the appellant but the communication stood completed on 5-12-1990 with the filing of the written statement by Respondent 2. Therefore, the High Court concluded that the appellant was entitled to claim maintenance from 1-1-1988 to 5-12-1990. The figure of maintenance was appointed by the High Court at Rs 200. Thereafter, the appellant filed the instant appeal by special leave.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Talaq, in order to be effective has to be pronounced. The term "pronounce" means to proclaim, to utter formally, to utter rhetorically, to declare, to utter, to articulate. There is no proof of talaq having taken place on 11-7-1987. A mere plea taken in the written statement of a divorce having been pronounced sometime in the past cannot by itself be treated as effectuating talaq on the date of delivery of the copy of the written statement to the wife. Respondent 2 ought to have adduced evidence and proved the pronouncement of talaq on 11-7-1987 and if he failed in proving the plea raised in the written statement, the plea ought to have been treated as failed. So also the affidavit dated 31-8-1988, filed in some previous judicial proceedings not inter partes, containing a self-serving statement of Respondent 2, could not have been read in evidence as relevant and of any value. (Para 16)

Therefore, it is held that neither the marriage between the parties stood dissolved on 5-12-1990 nor did the liability of Respondent 2 to pay maintenance come to an end on that day. Respondent 2 shall continue to remain liable for payment of maintenance until the obligation comes to an end in accordance with law. (Para 17). Shamim Ara v. State of U.P., (2002) 7 SCC 518: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1814: AIR 2002 SC 3551.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-10-2002]

Ma Mi v. Kallander Ammal, AIR 1927 PC 15: 100 IC 1: (1927) 54 IA 61: ILR 5 Rang 18; Kalenther Ammal v. Ma Mi, ILR (1924) 2 Rang 400; Asha Bibi v. Kadir Ibrahim Rowther, ILR (1909) 33 Mad 22: 3 IC 730; Wahid Khan v. Zainab Bibi, ILR (1914) 36 All 458: 25 IC 387; Ibrahim v. Syed Bibi, ILR (1888) 12 Mad 63; Ahmad Kasim Molla v. Khatun Bibi, ILR (1932) 59 Cal 833: 141 IC 689: AIR 1933 Cal 27; Ful Chand v. Nazab Ali Chowdhary, ILR (1909) 36 Cal 184: 1 IC 740; Sarabai v. Rabiabai, ILR (1905) 30 Bom 537: 8 Bom LR 35; Furzund Hossein v. Janu Bibee, ILR (1878) 4 Cal 588; Rashid Ahmad v. Anisa Khatun, (1931-32) 59 IA 21: ILR (1932) 54 All 46: 135 IC 762: AIR 1932 PC 25; M.M. Abdul Khader v. Azeeza Bee, (1944) 1 MLJ 17: 214 IC 38: AIR 1944 Mad 227; Kathiyumma v. Urathel Marakkar, (1931) 133 IC 375: AIR 1931 Mad 647, overruled

Mohd. Haneefa v. Pathummal Beevi, 1972 KLT 512; A. Yousuf Rawther v. Sowramma, AIR 1971 Ker 261: 1970 Ker LT 477; Jiauddin Ahmed v. Anwara Begum, (1981) 1 Gau LR 358; Rukia Khatun v. Abdul Khalique Laskar, (1981) 1 Gau LR 375, approved

Bai Tahira v. Ali Hussain Fidaalli Chothia, (1979) 2 SCC 316: 1979 SCC (Cri) 473, relied on

Mulla on Principles of Mahomedan Law (19th Edn., 1990), para 310; Tahir Mahmood: The Muslim Law of India (2nd Edn.), pp. 113-19; Chambers 20th Century Dictionary, New Edition, p. 1030, referred to

Applied in Iqbal Bano v. State of U.P., (2007) 6 SCC 785

[417] — S. 125 — There is no conflict between S. 125 and the provisions of Muslim personal law on the liability of Muslim husband to provide for maintenance of his divorced wife who is unable to maintain herself

The Quran imposes an obligation on the Muslim husband to make provision for or to provide maintenance to the divorced wife. Mahr is a mark of respect to the wife. The sum settled by way of Mahr is generally expected to take care of the ordinary requirements of the wife, during the marriage and after. But the statements contained in text books on Muslim personal law are inadequate to establish the proposition that the Muslim husband is not under an obligation to provide for the maintenance of his divorced wife, who is unable to maintain herself. The application of those statements of law must be restricted to that class of cases, in which there is no possibility of vagrancy or destitution arising out of the indigence of the divorced wife. The argument that, according to the Muslim personal law, a husband's liability to provide for the maintenance of his divorced wife is limited to the period of iddat, despite the fact that she is unable to maintain herself, has therefore to be rejected. If she is unable to maintain herself, she is entitled to take recourse to S. 125 of the Code. Mohd. Ahmed Khan v. Shah Bano Begum, (1985) 2 SCC 556: 1985 SCC (Cri) 245: AIR 1985 SC 945: 1985 Cri LJ 875.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and D.A. Desai, O. Chinnappa Reddy, E.S. Venkataramiah and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1985]

[418] — S. 125(1) Expln. (b) — Muslim wife whose marriage dissolved by a decree of dissolution passed at her instance entitled to maintenance under S. 125 — Hence Rs 100 as maintenance for herself and Rs 40 as maintenance for her child directed to be paid with arrears — She could also apply to Magistrate for increasing the amounts of maintenance under S. 127(1) on ground of increase in cost of living. Zohara Khatoon v. Mohd. Ibrahim, (1986) 1 SCC 398: 1986 SCC (Cri) 72: AIR 1986 SC 587: 1986 Cri LJ 556: 1986 ALJ 281: 1986 BLJR 401.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Madon and G.L. Oza, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-11-1985]

Zohara Khatoon v. Ibrahim, (1981) 2 SCC 509: 1981 SCC (Cri) 517, affirmed

[419] — S. 125(1) Expln. (b) — 'Wife' — Divorced Muslim woman who has not remarried is a 'wife' for the purpose of S. 125. Mohd. Ahmed Khan v. Shah Bano Begum, (1985) 2 SCC 556: 1985 SCC (Cri) 245: AIR 1985 SC 945: 1985 Cri LJ 875.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and D.A. Desai, O. Chinnappa Reddy, E.S. Venkataramiah and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1985]

[420] — S. 125(1) Expln. (b) — "Wife" to include divorced muslim wife — Held, even applies where the dissolution of marriage obtained by a Mohammedan wife under the Dissolution of Muslim Marriages Act, 1939 — Distinction between unilateral divorce by Muslim husband and one under the 1939 Act relevant only to application of Cls. (b) and (c) of S. 127(3)

Per Fazal Ali and Varadarajan, JJ.

Explanation (b) to S. 125(1) applies to a divorced Mohammedan wife by whatever mode the dissolution of marriage is brought about whether she was unilaterally divorced by the husband by talaq or where she obtains divorce either by mutual agreement ('khula' 'mubarat' or 'tawfeez') or through a civil court under the Dissolution of Muslim Marriages Act, 1939.

Regarding S. 488, CrPC, 1898, the predecessor of present S. 125, CrPC, 1973, it has been held that it provided a summary remedy for awarding maintenance to neglected wives irrespective of caste, creed, community or religion to which they belonged. However, where the validity of a marriage or mode of divorce or cessation of marriage under the personal law of a party is concerned that would have to be determined according to the personal law. Section 488 excluded any other Act regarding the quantum of maintenance and the circumstances under which it could be granted.

Regarding Mohammedans under the scheme of Ss. 488 and 489, CrPC, 1898, it was settled that the award of maintenance would cease from the date of divorce given by the husband and the completion of the period of iddat.

Hence before the 1973 Code, the right of maintenance of a Mohammedan wife ceased to exist if she was divorced by her husband and had observed the period of iddat.

The 1973 Code has made a departure in this regard by abrogating this part of the Mahomedan law under which the wife ceased to get maintenance if the conjugal relationship of the husband and wife came to an end. Clause (b) of explanation to S. 125(1) envisages all the three modes of divorce by which a muslim marriage can be dissolved, whether it be unilateral divorce by the husband or where the wife obtains by agreement with her husband or through a civil court under the 1939 Act.

However, a clear distinction is made between talaq by husband and divorce obtained by the wife under the 1939 Act as regards cancellation of the order of maintenance under S. 127, CrPC, 1973. The first two modes of muslim divorce, viz. talaq and one by agreement between parties is governed by Cl. (b) of S. 127(3) while the case of divorce obtained by wife from civil court would be governed by clause (c), S. 127(3). So that while clause (b) of sub-section (3) of S. 127 does provide for cancellation of the maintenance on payment of dower if a woman has been divorced, the said clause does not contemplate cancellation of maintenance where a woman obtains divorce from her husband through a civil court under the provisions of the Act of 1939. Under clause (c) where a woman obtains a divorce from her husband the amount of maintenance cannot be cancelled until she voluntarily relinquishes or surrenders her rights to the same

Per Koshal, J. (concurring)

(1) Divorce is nothing more nor less than another name for dissolution of marriage, whether the same results from act of parties or is a consequence of proceedings at law, and it would be wrong to regard the two terms as not being synonymous with each other, unless the legislature makes a direction to the contrary. And. S. 125, CrPC contains no such direction.

(2) Explanation (b) is not by its very terms restricted to voluntary action of the husband. The word 'obtained' would indicate achievement by exertion in spite of opposition. Hence a dissolution of marriage obtained through the coercive process of civil court would be covered.

(3) Divorce by unilateral act of husband being peculiar to Mahomedan law, the interpretation advanced by the respondent, would limit the application of Explanation (b) to Muslims alone, which per se is an absurd result. Zohara Khatoon v. Mohd. Ibrahim, (1981) 2 SCC 509: 1981 SCC (Cri) 517: AIR 1981 SC 1243: (1981) 2 SCR 910: 1981 Cri LJ 754: 1981 MLJ (Cri) 551.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali[1], A.D. Koshal and A. Varadarajan[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-1981]

[Ed.: Quaere 1. Whether Explanation (b) is not applicable when there is an annulment of a Hindu marriage or a decree of judicial separation is passed. See observations in para 18 (supra).

2. The statement in para 25 that maintenance could be got cancelled by a Mahomedan husband if he has paid dower must be read subject to the recent decision in Fuzlunbi v. K. Khader Vali, (1980) 4 SCC 125: 1980 SCC (Cri) 916, which is at least categorical to the extent that where the dower amount is too low it would not absolve the husband from his obligation to pay maintenance.]

(9) Maintenance of children

See also under FAMILY AND PERSONAL LAWS

[421] — S. 125 — Liability of father to maintain minor children — Medical negligence — Poor lady already having a number of children (seven in this case) offering herself for complete sterilisation operation at government hospital, operated upon and given a certificate to that effect — However, subsequently she conceiving and giving birth to a female child — At this stage it was found that only her right Fallopian tube was operated upon and the left one was left untouched — In such circumstances, the doctor concerned, held, acted most negligently — Hence, in spite of the parents' moral and statutory liability to maintain their minor children, the said lady, held, entitled to damages for medical negligence — Case-law discussed — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — Ss. 20 and 23 — Consumer Protection Act, 1986 — Ss. 2(1)(o) and (g)

It is, no doubt, true that the parents are under an obligation to maintain their minor children. This is a moral, apart from a statutory, liability in view of the provisions contained in Section 125 CrPC. It is also a statutory duty on account of Sections 20 and 23 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act. (Paras 38 and 39)

"Maintenance" would obviously include provision for food, clothing, residence, education of the children and medical attendance or treatment. (Para 39)

Similarly, under the Mohammedan law, a father is bound to maintain his sons until they have attained the age of puberty. He is also bound to maintain his daughters until they are married. But the statutory liability to maintain the children would not operate as a bar in claiming damages on account of tort of medical negligence in not carrying out the sterilisation operation with due care and responsibility. The two situations are based on two different principles. The statutory as well as personal liability of the parents to maintain their children arises on account of the principles that if a person has begotten a child, he is bound to maintain that child. Claim for damages, on the contrary, is based on the principle that if a person has committed a civil wrong, he must pay compensation by way of damages to the person wronged. (Para 40). State of Haryana v. Santra, (2000) 5 SCC 182: AIR 2000 SC 1888.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-2000]

[422] — S. 125 — Paternity — Denial of in claim for maintenance of child — Where purported father denying paternity but refusing to undergo DNA test, held, such a person disentitled from disputing paternity — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 112 and 114 Ill. (g) (Para 5). Dwarika Prasad Satpathy v. Bidyut Prava Dixit, (1999) 7 SCC 675: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1345: AIR 1999 SC 3348.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-1999]

[423] — S. 125 — Right of minor children staying with their divorced mother to claim maintenance under S. 125 from their Muslim father having sufficient means till they attain majority or in case of females till they get married — Held, not affected by S. 3(1)(b) of Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986 — S. 3(1)(b) of the 1986 Act provides additional maintenance to the divorced mother for maintaining her infant child for the fosterage period of two years from the date of birth of the child and is independent of the right of the minor children unable to maintain themselves to maintenance under S. 125 — That right is absolute under S. 125 as well as under Muslim personal law — Benefit of S. 125 is available irrespective of religion and it would be unreasonable, unfair and inequitable to deny this benefit to the children only on ground of their being born of Muslim parents — Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986 — S. 3(1)(b)

The respondent married the appellant in 1980 according to Muslim rites. During the wedlock, three children — two daughters and a son — were born. Later, the respondent allegedly turned the appellant out of the matrimonial home along with the three children then aged 6 years, 3 years and 1-1/2 years and also refused and neglected to maintain her and the children and thereafter took a second wife. Thereupon on 13-2-1992 the appellant filed an application under Section 125 CrPC for maintenance claiming that she had no means to maintain herself and her children and that the respondent had sufficient income and means to maintain them. By its order dated 19-1-1993, the trial court directed the respondent to pay maintenance to the appellant at the rate of Rs 200 per month for herself and at the rate of Rs 150 per month for each of the three minor children, till they attain the age of majority. While the matter rested thus, the respondent divorced the appellant and thereafter filed an application in the trial court seeking modification of the order dated 19-1-1993, in view of the provisions of the Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986. The trial court maintained its order granting maintenance to each of the children but as regards the appellant it held that in view of the provisions of the 1986 Act, she after her divorce was entitled to maintenance only for a period of three months i.e. for the period of iddat. The respondent filed a revision petition which was dismissed in 1994. The respondent thereupon filed a miscellaneous petition under Section 482 CrPC in the High Court. A Single Judge of the High Court accepted the plea of the respondent that vide Section 3(1)(b) of the 1986 Act, a divorced Muslim woman is entitled to claim maintenance from her previous husband for her minor children only for a period of two years from the date of birth of the child concerned and that the minor children were not entitled to claim maintenance under Section 125 CrPC after the coming into force of the 1986 Act. The High Court noticed that the two older children were aged 6 years and 3 years when the application for maintenance was filed on their behalf by their mother, and thus "had completed two years prior to filing of the petition for grant of maintenance" and as such those two children were held not entitled to the grant of any maintenance under Section 125 CrPC and that the third child, who was only 1-1/2 years of age on 19-1-1993, was entitled to receive maintenance till she attained the age of two years i.e. till 19-7-1993 from the date of filing of the application i.e. 13-2-1992.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The 1986 Act aims to protect the rights of Muslim women who have been divorced. It was not enacted to regulate the obligations of a Muslim father to maintain his minor children unable to maintain themselves which continued to be governed by Section 125 CrPC. The children of Muslim parents are entitled to claim maintenance under Section 125 CrPC for the period till they attain majority or are able to maintain themselves, whichever is earlier and in case of females, till they get married, and this right is not restricted, affected or controlled by the divorcee wife's right to claim maintenance for maintaining the infant child/children in her custody for a period of two years from the date of birth of the child concerned under Section 3(1)(b) of the 1986 Act. Section 3(1)(b) of the 1986 Act thus provides an additional maintenance to her, which is granted on the claim of the divorced mother on her own behalf for maintaining the infant/infants for a period of two years from the date of the birth of the child concerned who is/are living with her and presumably is aimed at providing some extra amount to the mother for her nourishment for nursing or taking care of the infant/infants up to a period of two years. It has nothing to do with the right of the child/children to claim maintenance under Section 125 CrPC. So long as the conditions for the grant of maintenance under Section 125 CrPC are satisfied, the rights of the minor children, unable to maintain themselves, are not affected by Section 3(1)(b) of the 1986 Act. Under Section 125 CrPC the maintenance of the children is obligatory on the father (irrespective of his religion) and as long as he is in a position to do so and the children have no independent means of their own, it remains his absolute obligation to provide for them. Insofar as children born of Muslim parents are concerned there is nothing in Section 125 CrPC which exempts a Muslim father from his obligation to maintain the children. Indeed a Muslim father can claim custody of the children born through the divorced wife to fulfil his obligation to maintain them and if he succeeds, he need not suffer an order or direction under Section 125 CrPC but where such custody has not been claimed by him, he cannot refuse and neglect to maintain his minor children on the ground that he has divorced their mother. The right of the children to claim maintenance under Section 125 CrPC is separate, distinct and independent of the right of their divorcee mother to claim maintenance for herself for maintaining the infant children up to the age of 2 years from the date of birth of the child concerned under Section 3(1) of the Act. There is nothing in the 1986 Act which in any manner affects the application of the provisions of Sections 125-128 of the CrPC relating to grant of maintenance insofar as minor children of Muslim parents, unable to maintain themselves, are concerned.

(9) Maintenance of children (contd.)

The non obstante clause with which Section 3(1) of the 1986 Act begins has nothing to do with the independent right or entitlement of the minor children to be maintained by their Muslim father. Section 3(1)(b) of the 1986 Act and Section 125 CrPC apply and cover different situations and there is no conflict, much less a real one, between the two.

It would be unreasonable, unfair, inequitable and even preposterous to deny the benefit of Section 125 CrPC to the children only on the ground that they are born of Muslim parents. The effect of a beneficial legislation like Section 125 CrPC, cannot be allowed to be defeated except through clear provisions of a statute. A Muslim father's obligation, like that of a Hindu father, to maintain his minor children as contained in Section 125 CrPC is absolute and is not at all affected by Section 3(1)(b) of the 1986 Act. Apart from the statutory provisions, even under the Muslim Personal Law, the right of minor children to receive maintenance from their father, till they are able to maintain themselves, is absolute.

Therefore, the trial court was perfectly right in directing the payment of amount of maintenance to each of the three children as per the order dated 19-1-1993 and the Additional Sessions Judge in revision also committed no error in dismissing the revision petition filed by the respondent. The High Court, on the other hand, fell in complete error in holding that the right to claim maintenance of the children under Section 125 CrPC was taken away and superseded by Section 3(1)(b) of the 1986 Act. Noor Saba Khatoon v. Mohd. Quasim, (1997) 6 SCC 233: 1997 SCC (Cri) 924: AIR 1997 SC 3280: (1997) 2 KLT 363: 1997 Cri LJ 3972.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-1997]

Prof. Tahir Mahmood: "Statute-Law Relating to Muslims in India", (1995 Edn.), relied on [424] — S. 125 — Maintenance for child — Father disputing paternity — Blood grouping test to determine parentage — Where purpose of the application was nothing more than to avoid payment of maintenance, without making any ground whatever to have recourse to the test, the application for blood test cannot be accepted. Goutam Kundu v. State of W.B., (1993) 3 SCC 418: 1993 SCC (Cri) 928: AIR 1993 SC 2295: 1993 Cri LJ 3233: 1993 (2) ALT (Cri) 356.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and S. Mohan, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-1993]

[425] — S. 125 — Maintenance allowance — Grant of, in favour of children — Respondent husband persisting with his contention regarding the paternity of those children — Held, the children cannot be made to starve simply because of the said contention of the respondent — From the amount of Rs 2,86,000 deposited by the Union of India with the Registry of the Supreme Court, claim in respect of which is made herein both by appellant Union of India as well as respondent, a sum of Rs 60,000 released in favour of the mother of said children subject to the condition that she would return the said amount if the final decision in the instant appeal goes against the respondent and in favour of Union of India. Union of India v. G.S. Bajwa (Ex Flt. Lt.), (2002) 10 SCC 579.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2000]

[426] — S. 125 — Proof of child's legitimacy — Applicability — Child born during wedlock should be declared to be legitimate unless conclusive and compulsive proof exists to the contrary — Courts should be slow in declaring a child to be illegitimate and mother as an unchaste lady — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 112

The rule of conclusive proof of legitimacy of a child under S. 112 of the Evidence Act which is based on the dictates of justice has always made the courts incline towards upholding the legitimacy of a child unless the facts are so compulsive and clinching as to necessarily warrant a finding that the child could not at all have been begotten to the father and as such a legitimation of the child would result in rank injustice to the father. Courts have always desisted from lightly or hastily rendering a verdict and that too, on the basis of slender materials, which will have the effect of branding a child as a bastard and its mother an unchaste woman. Dukhtar Jahan v. Mohd. Farooq, (1987) 1 SCC 624: 1987 SCC (Cri) 237: AIR 1987 SC 1049: 1987 Cri LJ 849: (1987) 1 HLR 362.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-1987]

[427] — Ss. 125(1)(b) and (c) — Even though bigamous marriage illegal under S. 11 of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 but when after such marriage Hindu male and female living together for a number of years as husband and wife, held, child born as a result of such union acquired legitimate status under S. 16(1) of the Act — Even ignoring the factum of marriage, the child must be treated as legitimate child, hence entitled to maintenance under cls. (b) and (c) of S. 125(1) — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — S. 16(1). Bakulabai v. Gangaram, (1988) 1 SCC 537: 1988 SCC (Cri) 189: (1988) 1 KLT 413: 1988 Mah LJ 330.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-1-1988]

[428] — S. 125 — Even an illegitimate minor child entitled to maintenance. Sumitra Devi v. Bhikan Choudhary, (1985) 1 SCC 637: 1985 SCC (Cri) 145: AIR 1985 SC 765: 1985 Cri LJ 528.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-1985]

[429] — S. 125 — Order for maintenance of wives, children and parents — Word "children" — Connotation of — Held, includes an illegitimate child (Para 18). Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2005 SC 1809: 2005 Cri LJ 2141: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2005]

[430] — S. 125 — Nature of proceedings under — Maintenance to child does not depend upon the child's legitimacy

Proceedings under S. 125, CrPC, are of a summary nature and are intended to enable destitute wives and children, the latter whether they are legitimate or illegitimate, to get maintenance in a speedy manner. Dukhtar Jahan v. Mohd. Farooq, (1987) 1 SCC 624: 1987 SCC (Cri) 237: AIR 1987 SC 1049: 1987 Cri LJ 849: (1987) 1 HLR 362.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-1987]

[431] — S. 125 — Maintenance grant to minor child — Proof of legitimacy of the child — Mature child may be born in seven months' time from the date of marriage — Statement of a rustic and illiterate mother that the child was not born prematurely can be ignored — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 112

On the sole ground that the child had been born in about 7 months' time after the marriage it cannot be concluded that the child should have been conceived even before the respondent had consummated the marriage. Giving birth to a viable child after 28 weeks' duration of pregnancy is not biologically an improbable or impossible event. In "Combined Textbook of Obstetrics and Gynaecology" by Sir Gugald Baird 7th edn. at page 162 it is reported as under:

> "In the case of Clark v. Clark, (1939) p. 228 an extremely small baby, born alive 174 days after last possible date when intercourse with the husband could have taken place, and which survived, was held to be legitimate. While it is most unusual for babies of this weight or gestation period to survive it does occasionally happen."

The learned Judge ought not, therefore, to have rushed to the conclusion that a child born in about 7 months' time after the marriage of the parents should have necessarily been conceived even before the marriage took place.

The wrong statement of a rustic and illiterate mother that her child was not born prematurely can be ignored as her statement can suffer from error of judgment. Dukhtar Jahan v. Mohd. Farooq, (1987) 1 SCC 624: 1987 SCC (Cri) 237: AIR 1987 SC 1049: 1987 Cri LJ 849: (1987) 1 HLR 362.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-1987]

[432] — S. 125 — Illegitimate child — Claim of, if justified on facts — Mother's evidence even if be in the nature of an accomplice, held, was corroborated by other's evidence — Award of maintenance by trial court was adequately supported by evidence and deserves to be upheld (Paras 8 to 10). Dimple Gupta v. Rajiv Gupta, (2007) 10 SCC 30: (2007) 59 AIC 46 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Harjit Singh Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

[433] — S. 125 — Maintenance grant to minor child of a Muslim — Proof of legitimacy of the child — Childbirth taking place in husband's house, husband neither discarding the wife nor disowning the child immediately after the childbirth and divorce taking place ten months after the childbirth — Entry in birth register showing the husband as father of the child — Husband and wife being closely related prior to the marriage, husband's pre-martial access to the wife possible — In the circumstances and in view of conduct of the parties as also S. 112 of Evidence Act, 1872, held, the husband's denial of paternity not acceptable and he therefore liable to pay maintenance — Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986 — S. 3(b) — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 112

If the appellant wife was pregnant even at the time of the marriage she could not have concealed that fact for long and in any event the respondent husband would have come to know of it within two or three months of the marriage and thereupon he would have immediately protested and either discarded the appellant or reported the matter to the village elders and relatives and sought for a divorce. On the contrary the respondent had continued to lead life with the appellant in a normal manner till the birth of the child. Even the confinement appears to have taken place in his house as otherwise the child's birth would not have been registered in his village. The respondent had not disowned the child immediately after its birth or sent away the appellant to her parents' house. Such would not have been his conduct if he had any doubt about the paternity of the child. Moreover, there is an entry in the birth register setting out the respondent as the father of the child. Though the respondent attempted to neutralise the entry in the birth register by examining a witness and making it appear that the entry had been made on the basis of information given by a third party, the lower courts have refused to give credence to the vague and uncorroborated testimony of the witness. It is also significant to note that the respondent had allowed eleven months to pass before effecting a divorce. By his inaction for such a long period the respondent has given room for inference that the divorce may have been effected for other reasons and not on account of the appellant giving birth to a child conceived through someone else. Lastly, even if the child had been born after a full-term pregnancy it has to be borne in mind that the possibility of the respondent having had access to the appellant before marriage cannot be ruled out because they were closely related and would therefore have been moving in close terms. All these factors negate the plea of the respondent that the minor child was not fathered by him. Dukhtar Jahan v. Mohd. Farooq, (1987) 1 SCC 624: 1987 SCC (Cri) 237: AIR 1987 SC 1049: 1987 Cri LJ 849: (1987) 1 HLR 362.

(9) Maintenance of children (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-1987]

[434] — Ss. 125 and 482 — Magistrate granting maintenance to minor child holding the child to be legitimate issue — High Court though in exercise of power under S. 482 though can interfere should have upheld the Magistrate's order of maintenance — Held, High Court erred by not doing so — Proper course for the High Court indicated

The proper course for the High Court, even if entitled to interfere with the concurrent findings of the courts below in exercise of its powers under S. 482, CrPC, should have been to sustain the order of maintenance and direct the respondent to seek an appropriate declaration in the civil court, after a full-fledged trial, that the child was not born to him and as such he is not legally liable to maintain it. Dukhtar Jahan v. Mohd. Farooq, (1987) 1 SCC 624: 1987 SCC (Cri) 237: AIR 1987 SC 1049: 1987 Cri LJ 849: (1987) 1 HLR 362.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-1987]

[435] — S. 125 — Order earlier made by Supreme Court with agreement of the parties for payment of Rs 200 per month by the petitioner-husband as maintenance of his only son and withdrawal of all the cases filed against each other — Criminal case filed by the respondent-wife on allegation of the theft of her articles withdrawn — But subsequent to the order of the Court, suit filed by wife of recovery of the amount of dowry and other articles — Petitioner-husband contending that the suit being in breach of the Court's order, wife be punished for contempt — Held, suit not barred by Court's Order — Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 — S. 2(b). Arvind Kumar v. Arun Lata, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 293.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-1987]

[436] — S. 125 — Maintenance of a girl by parents from the time of attaining majority till marriage — Though S. 125 does not fix liability of parents to maintain children beyond attainment of majority, but right of a minor girl for maintenance from parents after attaining majority till her marriage is recognised under S. 20(3) of Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act — Therefore, on a combined reading of the two provisions held, High Court was justified in upholding the order of Family Court, by which it granted maintenance under S. 125 to the daughter even after her attaining majority but till her marriage, taking the view that it would avoid multiplicity of proceedings as otherwise the party would be forced to file another petition under S. 20(3) for further maintenance — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — S. 20(3). Jagdish Jugtawat v. Manju Lata, (2002) 5 SCC 422: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1147.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra, Brijesh Kumar and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-2002]

Noor Saba Khatoon v. Mohd. Quasim, (1997) 6 SCC 233: 1997 SCC (Cri) 924, applied

[437] — S. 125(1)(b) — Application for grant of maintenance to children after they have attained majority — Maintainability — Held, application for grant of maintenance regarding children is maintainable, till they have not attained majority — Cause of action for grant of maintenance would arise only in the event a person having sufficient means, neglects or refuses to maintain his legitimate or illegitimate minor children, unable to maintain themselves — Hence, once children attain majority, said provision would cease to apply — Herein, it was clear from order of Magistrate that no order of maintenance was passed in favour of children after they had attained majority — Hence, there was no question of recovery of any amount granted towards maintenance of children, after they had attained majority — Majority Act, 1875, S. 3 (Paras 8, 10 and 16). Amarendra Kumar Paul v. Maya Paul, (2009) 8 SCC 359: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 868.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

Shantha v. B.G. Shivananjappa, (2005) 4 SCC 468: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1089, relied on [438] — S. 125 — Maintenance to child — Claim of — Full and final settlement of claim — Maintenance claimed for her child by a woman (appellant) whose marriage with alleged husband (Respondent 2) was void — Respondent 2 agreeing to pay a lump sum amount to settle the dispute — Supreme Court directing him to pay a sum of Rs 2 lakhs to appellant within 4 months by way of bank draft in the name of child — Further direction that the said amount be kept in a fixed deposit with monthly interest payment facility till the child attains majority — Till the said deposit is made, the quantum of maintenance fixed by the Supreme Court i.e. Rs 850 directed to be paid (Para 24). Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2005 SC 1809: 2005 Cri LJ 2141: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2005]

(10) Maintenance of parents

[439] — S. 125 — Obligation of husband and son or daughter to maintain his wife or his/her mother — Nature of — Plea of inability due to financial constraints not acceptable — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — Ss. 18 and 20

According to the Law of the Land with regard to maintenance, there is an obligation of the husband to maintain his wife which does not arise by reason of any contract — express or implied — but out of jural relationship of husband and wife consequent to the performance of marriage. Such an obligation of the husband to maintain his wife arises irrespective of the fact whether he has or has no property, as it is considered an imperative duty and a solemn obligation of the husband to maintain his wife. The husband cannot be heard saying that he is unable to maintain due to financial constraints so long as he is capable of earning. Similarly, it is obligatory on the part of a son to maintain his aged father and mother by reason of personal obligation. Under the old Hindu law, this obligation was imposed on the son alone, but now the present-day Hindu law extends this obligation both on sons and daughters. In this connection, it is relevant to point out that according to sub-section (1) of Section 18 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, a Hindu wife is entitled to the maintenance from her husband during her lifetime. She is entitled to claim maintenance from her husband so long as she is chaste subject to the conditions laid down in sub-section (2) of Section 18 of the said Act. Under the present law, as said earlier, both son and daughter are liable to maintain aged or infirm parents including childless stepmother, when the latter is unable to maintain herself. It is well settled that a son has to maintain his mother irrespective of the fact whether he inherits any property or not from his father, as on the basis of the relationship alone he owes a duty and an obligation, legal and moral, to maintain his mother who has given birth to him. Further, according to Section 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, a Hindu is under a legal obligation to maintain his wife, minor sons, unmarried daughters and aged or infirm parents. The obligation to maintain them is personal, legal and absolute in character and arises from the very existence of the relationship between the parties. Kirtikant D. Vadodaria v. State of Gujarat, (1996) 4 SCC 479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1996]

[440] — S. 125(1)(d) — Daughter, unmarried or married, having sufficient means liable to pay maintenance allowance to her father or mother who is unable to maintain himself or herself — Word 'his' in expression "his father or mother" in Cl. (d) also includes daughter — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 8 read with S. 2(y) Criminal Procedure Code — General Clauses Act, 1897 — S. 13(1)

Section 125(1)(d) has imposed a liability on both the son and the daughter to maintain their father or mother who is unable to maintain himself or herself. The object of S. 125 is to provide a summary remedy to save dependents from destitution and vagrancy and thus to serve a social purpose. It is the moral obligation of a son or a daughter to maintain his or her parents and there is no reason to exclude the daughter from the social obligation to maintain her parents. The expression "his father or mother" in Cl. (d) of S. 125(1) is not confined only to the father or mother of the son but also to the father or mother of the daughter and as such that expression should also be construed as "her father or mother" in view of S. 8, IPC read with S. 2(y) CrPC and S. 13(1) of the General Clauses Act. Pronoun 'his' as used in cl. (d) of S. 125(1) includes both a male and a female. Though in the first part of the report of the Joint Committee on the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973, the word 'son' has been used, in the latter part of the report the use of word 'children' indicates inclusion of both sons and daughters. However, in view of clear statutory provision, it is not necessary to refer to the report.

(10) Maintenance of parents (contd.)

It is not possible to accept the contention that a daughter after her marriage has no obligation to maintain her parents even if they are unable to maintain themselves. A daughter after her marriage does not cease to be a daughter of the father or mother.

Thus, the parents will be entitled to claim maintenance against their daughter, whether married or unmarried, provided however, the other conditions as mentioned in the section are fulfilled. Before ordering maintenance in favour of a father or a mother against their married daughter, the court must be satisfied that the daughter has sufficient means of her own independently of the means or income of her husband, and that the father or the mother, as the case may be, is unable to maintain himself or herself. Vijaya Manohar Arbat v. Kashirao Rajaram Sawai, (1987) 2 SCC 278: 1987 SCC (Cri) 354: AIR 1987 SC 1100: 1987 Cri LJ 977: (1987) 11 ECC 416.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.L. Oza and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-1987]

Bhagwan Dutt v. Kamla Devi, (1975) 2 SCC 386: 1975 SCC (Cri) 563 ; M. Areefa Beevi v. Dr. K.M. Sahib, 1983 Cri LJ 412: 1982 Ker LT 242: 1982 Ker LJ 186 ; Repalli Masthanamma v. Thota Sriramula, 1982 Andh WR 393, approved

Raj Kumari v. Yashodha Devi, 1978 Cri LJ 600: (1977) 79 Punj LR 568: (1977) 4 Cri LJ 292: 1978 Hindu LR 711, overruled

Vijaya Manohar Arbat v. Kashirao Rajaram Sawai, 1978 Cri LJ 1399 (Bom), reversed

[441] — S. 125(1)(d) — Stepmother when entitled to claim maintenance from her stepson — Expression "mother" in S. 125(1)(d) means only real or natural mother and does not include stepmother — Stepmother is a distinct and separate entity and cannot be equated with the natural mother who has given birth to the child — An adoptive mother can be included in the expression "mother" — However, having regard to the purpose behind the benevolent provisions of S. 125 held, a childless stepmother is entitled to claim maintenance from her stepson provided she is a widow or her husband, if living, is also incapable of maintaining her — Whether the stepson is liable to maintain his stepmother out of inherited family estate — Question left open — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 — S. 20 — General Clauses Act, 1897 — S. 3(20)

When the appellant was a child of tender age his mother expired and his father took Respondent 2 as his second wife from whom 5 sons and 2 daughters were born. All of them were major and at least 3 of them were well-to-do and capable of maintaining their mother. The father was also possessed of sufficient means. Respondent 2 claimed maintenance from the stepson, the appellant, leaving out all her natural born sons and husband who were well-to-do. The Magistrate took the view that in spite of Respondent 2 being a stepmother of the appellant, she had a right to claim maintenance from the appellant and awarded a sum of Rs 400 per month as maintenance allowance. This order was upheld by the City Sessions Judge and the High Court. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The expressions 'mother' and 'stepmother' have not been defined either in the Code or in the General Clauses Act, 1897. These expressions have also not been defined by the Hindu law or the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 or by any other law. All that the explanation attached to Section 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 provides is that the expression 'parent' includes a childless stepmother. On a conspectus view of dictionary meaning of the two expressions — 'mother' and 'stepmother' in various dictionaries, it clearly emerges that there is inherent distinction between the status of a 'mother' and 'stepmother' and they are two distinct and separate entities and both could not be assigned the same meaning. The expression 'mother' clearly means only the natural mother who has given birth to the child and not the one who is the wife of one's father by another marriage.

A stepmother is one who is taken as a wife by the father of the child other than the one from whom he is born or who has given birth to him.

This clearly goes to show that the woman who gives birth to a child and another woman who is taken by the father as his 'other' wife are two distinct and separate entities in the eye of the law and who in common parlance are known and recognized as real 'mother' and 'stepmother'. That being so, another woman who is taken as a wife by the father of the child cannot be given the status of a mother to the child born from another woman as there is no blood relation between the two.

Even under the old Hindu law also, the expression 'mother' was referable only to the natural mother who has given birth to the child and not the stepmother. It would be difficult to assume that the legislature was unmindful of the social fabric and the structure of relationship in the families. The existence of various kinds of relatives in our society was not something of which Parliament may be said to be ignorant when it thought to enact the New Code of 1973 and for the first time not only the parents were included amongst the persons entitled to claim maintenance under Section 125(1)(d) but even the divorced woman had been included in the expression 'wife', to be entitled to claim maintenance, who were not so included in Section 488 of the Old Code of 1898.

In the General Clauses Act though the expression 'father' has been defined in clause (20) of Section 3, but the expression 'mother' has not been defined. The expression 'father' as defined in the General Clauses Act, 1897 means in the case of anyone whose personal law permits adoption, "shall include an adoptive father". Applying the said analogy, at best, an adoptive mother may also be included in the expression 'mother' but not a stepmother.

Hence the expression 'mother', in clause (d) of Section 125(1) of the Code, means and is referable only to the real or natural mother, who has actually given birth to the child. It cannot be said that the word 'mother' occurring in clause (d) of Section 125(1) includes a woman who has the status of a 'stepmother' by reason of her lawful marriage with the father of the person sought to be made liable for maintenance under Section 125.

While dealing with the ambit and scope of the provision contained in Section 125 of the Code, it has to be borne in mind that the dominant and primary object is to give social justice to the woman, child and infirm parents etc. and to prevent destitution and vagrancy by compelling those who can support those who are unable to support themselves but have a moral claim for support. The provisions in Section 125 provide a speedy remedy to those women, children and destitute parents who are in distress. The provisions in Section 125 are intended to achieve this special purpose. The dominant purpose behind the benevolent provisions contained in Section 125 clearly is that the wife, child and parents should not be left in a helpless state of distress, destitution and starvation. Having regard to this special object the provisions of Section 125 of the Code have to be given a liberal construction to fulfil and achieve this intention of the legislature. Consequently to achieve this object a childless stepmother may claim maintenance from her stepson provided she is a widow or her husband, if living, is also incapable of supporting and maintaining her. The obligation of the son to maintain his father, who is unable to maintain himself, is unquestionable. When she claims maintenance from her natural born children, she does so in her status as their 'mother'. Such an interpretation would be in accord with the explanation attached to Section 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 because to exclude altogether the personal law applicable to the parties from consideration in matters of maintenance under Section 125 of the Code may not be wholly justified. However, no intention of legislature can be read in Section 125 of the Code that even though a mother has her real and natural born son or sons and a husband capable of maintaining her, she could still proceed against her stepson to claim maintenance.

In the present case the stepmother preferred to claim the maintenance only from the stepson leaving out all her natural born sons and husband who are well-to-do. Prima facie she proceeded against her stepson with a view to punish and cause harassment to her stepson which is wholly unjustified. In the facts and circumstances of the case she is not entitled to claim any maintenance from her stepson. Kirtikant D. Vadodaria v. State of Gujarat, (1996) 4 SCC 479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1996]

*Havaben Karimbhai Belim v. Razakbhai, (1978) 19 Guj LR 237: 1977 Cri LR (Guj) 381; Pitei Bewa v. Laxmidhar Jena, 1985 Cri LJ 1124 (Ori); Ganga Sharan Varshney v. Shakuntala Devi, 1990 Cri LJ 128: 1990 All LJ 34, overruled

Ramabai v. Dinesh, 1976 Mah LJ 565; Rewalal Arjun Babu v. Kamlabai Arjun Babu, 1985 MPLJ 541; Ayyagari Suryanarayana Vara Prasada Rao v. Ayyagari Venkatakrishna Veni, 1989 Cri LJ 673: (1988) 2 Andh LT 26; Bai Daya v. Natha Govindlal, ILR (1885) 9 Bom 279, approved

[Ed.: With respect, the above ruling that only childless stepmother who is a widow is entitled to claim maintenance from her stepson requires some clarification. What if she has to support a minor child or worse an insane or handicapped child? It appears that in such cases she equally deserves sympathy and support.]

[442] — S. 126(1) — Territorial jurisdiction — Parent's claim for maintenance — Place where proceedings under S. 125 may be taken — Crucial words in S. 125 in respect of — Difference in position with respect to claim by wife and children pointed out — Held, benefit given to wife and children to initiate proceedings at place where they reside not given to parents — Parents have to initiate proceedings where person from whom maintenance is sought lives or "is"

An application under Section 125 CrPC, 1973 was filed by Respondent 2, the father, in Siwan. The appellant filed an application for transfer of the case from Siwan to Patna contending inter alia that the court at Siwan had no jurisdiction to entertain the application because the appellant lived in Patna and was practising as a lawyer at the Patna High Court. The High Court rejected the application for transfer primarily on other grounds and the question relating to jurisdiction was not specifically adverted to.

In support of the appeal the appellant submitted that the question relating to jurisdiction was specifically urged before the High Court and it was clearly stated that the appellant resided at Patna and the court at Siwan could not have entertained the application.

Allowing the appeal to the extent below and transferring the case,

Held :

The crucial expression for the purpose of jurisdiction in respect of a petition which is filed under Section 125 CrPC, 1973 by a father is not where "parties reside" and "is". (Para 12)

Sections 126(1)(b) & (c) relate to the maintenance of wife and children under Section 125 of the Code. The benefit given to the wife and the children to initiate proceedings at the place where they reside is not given to the parents. A bare reading of the section makes it clear that the parents cannot be placed on the same pedestal as that of the wife or the children for the purpose of Section 126 of the Code. Unlike Sections 126(1)(b) & (c) an application by the father or the mother claiming maintenance has to be filed where the person from whom maintenance is claimed lives. (Paras 13 and 14)

In the present case, no finding has been recorded by the High Court on this particular aspect which needs a factual adjudication. The stand of the appellant is that he practises in Patna and was not present in Siwan physically when the application was filed for maintenance. Respondent 2, the father has indicated the son practising in the Patna High Court. Obviously, if his son was practising at the time of presentation of the petition in the Patna High Court, he could not have been physically present at Siwan, whatever extended meaning may be given to the expression "is". In view of this the position is clear that the court at Siwan has no jurisdiction to deal with the petition. (Para 15). Vijay Kumar Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2004) 5 SCC 196: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1576: AIR 2004 SC 2123: (2004) 2 KLT 435: (2004) 3 Mah LJ 1101: (2004) 3 MPLJ 560: 2004 Cri LJ 2047.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-2004]

(11) Territorial jurisdiction

[443] — S. 126(1) — "Resides", "is" and "last resided" — CrPC, 1898 — S. 488(8)

The crucial words of the sub-section are "resides", "is" and "where he last resided with his wife". S. 488(8) gives three alternative forums for proceedings under S. 488. This has been designedly done by the Legislature to enable a discarded wife or a helpless child to get the much needed and urgent relief in one or the other three forums convenient to them. Since the proceedings are in the nature of civil proceedings, the remedy is a summary one and the person seeking that remedy is ordinarily a helpless person the words should be liberally construed without doing any violence to the language.

The word "resides" means both a permanent dwelling as well as a temporary living in a place. It is, therefore, capable of different meanings, including domicile in the strictest and the most technical sense and a temporary residence. In any case it does not include a casual stay in, or a flying visit to a particular place. The context and purpose of the present statute certainly do not compel the importation of the concept of domicile in its technical sense. The purpose of the statute would be better served if the word "resides" was understood to include temporary residence. The word "is" confers jurisdiction on the Court on the basis of a casual visit and the expression "last resided" indicates that the Legislature could not have intended to use the word "reside" in the technical sense of domicile. The word "resides" cannot be given a meaning different from the word "resided" in the expression "last resided" and, therefore, the wider meaning fits in the setting in which the word "resides" appears.

The word "reside" is defined thus: a person resides in a place if he through choice makes it his abode permanently or even temporarily and whether a person has chosen to make a particular place his abode depends upon the facts of each case.

The cognate expression "last resided" takes colour from the word "resides" used earlier in the sub-section. The same meaning should be given to the word "resides" and the word "resided", that is to say, if the word "resides" includes temporary residence, the expression "last resided" means the place where the person had his last temporary residence. S. 2(1) of the Code extends the operation of the Code to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir; that is to say, the provisions of the Code, including S. 488(8) thereof, have operation only throughout the territory of India, except the State of Jammu and Kashmir. If so, when sub-section (8) of S. 488 of the Code, prescribing the limits of jurisdiction, speaks of the residence of a person with his wife, it can only mean his last residence with his wife in the territories of India. It cannot obviously mean his residing with her in a foreign country, for an Act cannot confer jurisdiction on a foreign Court. It would, therefore, be a legitimate construction of the said expression that the district where he last resided with his wife must be a district in India.

The expression "is" is inserted between the words "resides" and "last resided". The word, therefore, cannot be given the same meaning as the word "resides" or the expression "last resided" bears. The meaning of the word is apparent if, the relevant part of the sub-section is read. The verb "is" connotes in the context the presence or the existence of the person in the district when the proceedings are taken. It is much wider than the word "resides": it is not limited by the animus manendi of the person or the duration or the nature of his stay. What matters is his physical presence at a particular point of time. This meaning accords with the object of the chapter wherein the concerned section appears. It is intended to reach a person, who deserts a wife or child leaving her or it or both of them helpless in any particular district and goes to a distant place or even to a foreign country, but returns to that district or a neighbouring one on a casual or a flying visit. The wife can take advantage of his visit and file a petition in the district where he is during his stay. So too, if the husband who deserts his wife, has no permanent residence but is always on the move, the wife can catch him at a convenient place and file a petition under S. 488 of the Code. She may accidentally meet him in a place where he happens to come by coincidence and take action against him before he leaves the said place. This is a salutary provision intended to provide for such abnormal cases. Jagir Kaur v. Jaswant Singh, AIR 1963 SC 1521: (1964) 2 SCR 73: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 413.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao, Raghubar Dayal and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-1963]

[444] — S. 126(1)(a) — "Where he is" — Word "is" contained in — Meaning and import of — Held, the true intention has to be contextually culled out — Words and phrases — "Where person resides", "Where person is", "is" — "Is" in the phrase "where person is" implies wider concept than "resides"

The expression "is" in S. 126(1)(a) cannot be given the same meaning as the word "resides" or the expression "he last resided". It connotes, in the context, the presence or the existence of the persons in the district where the proceedings are taken. It is wider in its concept than the word "resides" and what matters is "his" physical presence at the particular point of time. The expression "is" cannot be construed to be a fleeting presence, though it may not necessarily be for a considerable length of time as the expression "resides" may require. Although the expression normally refers to the present, often it has a future meaning. It may also have a past signification as in the sense of "has been". The true intention has to be contextually culled out. (Para 15). Vijay Kumar Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2004) 5 SCC 196: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1576: AIR 2004 SC 2123: (2004) 2 KLT 435: (2004) 3 Mah LJ 1101: (2004) 3 MPLJ 560: 2004 Cri LJ 2047.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-2004]

[445] — S. 126(1) — Territorial jurisdiction — Parent's claim for maintenance — Place where proceedings under S. 125 may be taken — Crucial words in S. 125 in respect of — Difference in position with respect to claim by wife and children pointed out — Held, benefit given to wife and children to initiate proceedings at place where they reside not given to parents — Parents have to initiate proceedings where person from whom maintenance is sought lives or "is"

An application under Section 125 CrPC, 1973 was filed by Respondent 2, the father, in Siwan. The appellant filed an application for transfer of the case from Siwan to Patna contending inter alia that the court at Siwan had no jurisdiction to entertain the application because the appellant lived in Patna and was practising as a lawyer at the Patna High Court. The High Court rejected the application for transfer primarily on other grounds and the question relating to jurisdiction was not specifically adverted to.

In support of the appeal the appellant submitted that the question relating to jurisdiction was specifically urged before the High Court and it was clearly stated that the appellant resided at Patna and the court at Siwan could not have entertained the application.

Allowing the appeal to the extent below and transferring the case,

Held :

The crucial expression for the purpose of jurisdiction in respect of a petition which is filed under Section 125 CrPC, 1973 by a father is not where "parties reside" and "is". (Para 12)

Sections 126(1)(b) & (c) relate to the maintenance of wife and children under Section 125 of the Code. The benefit given to the wife and the children to initiate proceedings at the place where they reside is not given to the parents. A bare reading of the section makes it clear that the parents cannot be placed on the same pedestal as that of the wife or the children for the purpose of Section 126 of the Code. Unlike Sections 126(1)(b) & (c) an application by the father or the mother claiming maintenance has to be filed where the person from whom maintenance is claimed lives. (Paras 13 and 14)

(11) Territorial jurisdiction (contd.)

In the present case, no finding has been recorded by the High Court on this particular aspect which needs a factual adjudication. The stand of the appellant is that he practises in Patna and was not present in Siwan physically when the application was filed for maintenance. Respondent 2, the father has indicated the son practising in the Patna High Court. Obviously, if his son was practising at the time of presentation of the petition in the Patna High Court, he could not have been physically present at Siwan, whatever extended meaning may be given to the expression "is". In view of this the position is clear that the court at Siwan has no jurisdiction to deal with the petition. (Para 15). Vijay Kumar Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2004) 5 SCC 196: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1576: AIR 2004 SC 2123: (2004) 2 KLT 435: (2004) 3 Mah LJ 1101: (2004) 3 MPLJ 560: 2004 Cri LJ 2047.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-2004]

[446] — S. 125 — Appeal relating to jurisdiction of maintenance petition — Allowing the appeal with costs assessed at Rs 25,000 to be paid to appellant (Para 16). Dawalsab v. Khajasab, (2009) 14 SCC 660: (2009) 80 AIC 71 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-7-2009]

[447] — S. 125 — Maintenance petition — Territorial jurisdiction of the Magistrate — Even temporary residence, if not casual, is sufficient to confer jurisdiction on Magistrate at that place or of the District concerned. Darshan Kumari v. Surinder Kumar, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 137: 1996 SCC (Cri) 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-4-1994]

[448] — Ss. 126(1) and 125 — Venue of maintenance proceedings — Petition filed at the place of residence of wife, held, competent — Dismissal of petition by Magistrate on ground that the husband was not residing within his jurisdiction improper. Kumutham v. Kannappan, (1998) 5 SCC 693: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1377: AIR 1999 SC 839.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.C. Agrawal, S. Saghir Ahmad and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-1998]

(12) Quantum of maintenance

See also under FAMILY AND PERSONAL LAWS

[449] — S. 125 — Maintenance — Claim as to enhancement of — Amendment in claim petition in respect of — Necessity — Submission made by respondent that there was no amendment made to the claim petition seeking enhancement — Rejection of, by Supreme Court holding that the said plea was too technical (Para 23). Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2005 SC 1809: 2005 Cri LJ 2141: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2005]

[450] — S. 125 — Quantum of — Assistant Engineer husband obtaining decree of divorce against Assistant Engineer wife and remarrying — Two daughters out of the first marriage and two children out of the second marriage — Elder daughter studying for Engineering and the younger in 12th Class — In such circumstances grant of maintenance of Rs 50 p.m. to each of the two daughters in maintenance suit raised to Rs 1000 p.m. for each daughter w.e.f. 1-1-1995 — Moreover, a sum of Rs 30,000 each directed to be deposited in the name of each daughter separately in fixed deposit for two years — Rs 1,00,000 further directed to be paid on the marriage of each of them — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — Ss. 26 & 25. S. Jayalakshmi (Mrs) v. T. Prakash Rao, (1996) 8 SCC 501.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-4-1995]

[451] — S. 125 — On facts, quantum of maintenance to be awarded to wife and child to be determined afresh by Sessions Judge in relation to husband's income — Meanwhile, husband directed to pay an interim maintenance allowance of Rs 50 per month to the wife. Lilawati v. State of U.P., (1982) 1 SCC 437: 1982 SCC (Cri) 247.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and V.D. Tulzapurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-1980]

[452] — S. 125 — Alimony — Quantum — Directions for enhanced payment of from the estate of the deceased ex-husband keeping in view the rising cost of living, etc. Nandarani Mazumdar v. Indian Airlines, (1983) 4 SCC 461: 1983 SCC (Cri) 858: AIR 1983 SC 1201.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, A.N. Sen and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-9-1983]

[453] — S. 125 — Amount of maintenance raised by Supreme Court for education of the child — CPC, 1908, Or. 32-A, R. 1(2)(d). Abha Astavans v. Suresh Astavans, 1983 SCC (Cri) 426.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar and A.N. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-1981]

[454] — S. 125 — Enhancement of maintenance — Grounds for — Increase in earnings of husband — On divorce, two children being born from wedlock, in custody of husband — Initially maintenance granted to wife by trial court Rs 800 p.m. — In meantime, earnings of husband marginally increasing — In light of facts, maintenance increased to Rs 1500 p.m. (Para 4). Naresh Chandra Singhania v. Deepika, (2005) 10 SCC 299.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ruma Pal and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-2004]

[455] — S. 125 — Quantum of maintenance — Husband an Army Officer having sufficient means to maintain his wife — Held, Rs 500 per month being the maximum provided under the Code awarded by the Magistrate is well-justified. Major Ashok Kumar Singh v. VIth Addl. Sessions Judge, (1996) 1 SCC 554: 1996 SCC (Cri) 161: AIR 1996 SC 333: 1996 ALJ 81: 1996 Cri LJ 392.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-9-1995]

[456] — S. 125 — Quantum of maintenance — Revision of — Efflux of time — Order granting maintenance of Rs 50 to a child becoming final in 1984 — But having regard to devaluation of money due to inflation and the child having grown up in age, amount of maintenance raised to Rs 150 per month. Bakulabai v. Gangaram, (1988) 1 SCC 537: 1988 SCC (Cri) 189: (1988) 1 KLT 413: 1988 Mah LJ 330.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-1-1988]

[457] — Ss. 125, 397 and 401 — Maintenance — Reduction in quantum of, by High Court — Propriety — Wife and child granted Rs 1000 and 500 p.m. respectively by the trial court — In revision, High Court though finding no reason to interfere, still reducing the said amounts to Rs 800 and 400 respectively — Such reduction, held, was absolutely uncalled for — Hence, trial court's order restored (Paras 3 and 4). Ashoka Dutta Gupta v. Sujit Dutta Gupta, (2000) 9 SCC 193: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1201.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2000]

[458] — S. 125(1) and Expln. (b) — Total amount that may be awarded to wife and her children as maintenance under — Expression "in the whole" — Meaning of

What the section plainly means is that the Court cannot grant more than Rs 500 for each one of the claimants. 'In the whole', in the context, means taking all the items of maintenance together, not all the members of the family put together, because, if a woman has a dozen children and if her husband neglects the wife and children and also his parents, it cannot be that if all seek maintenance in one petition, the court cannot award more than Rs 500, while if each filed a separate petition, then it would be a maximum of Rs 500 for each. Capt. Ramesh Chander Kaushal v. Veena Kaushal, (1978) 4 SCC 70: 1978 SCC (Cri) 508: AIR 1978 SC 1807: 1979 Cri LJ 3.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and D.A. Desai, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-1978]

[459] — S. 125 (as amended by Act 50 of 2001 w.e.f. 24-9-2001) — Maintenance amount exceeding Rs 500 as per the amendment — Date of entitlement to — Family Court granting maintenance of Rs 2000 and 1000 p.m. for Appellant 1 wife and Appellant 2 daughter respectively from 21-7-1997 (date of filing application before Magistrate) — High Court granting Rs 750 p.m. for both from 29-11-2006 (date of final disposal by Family Court) — On the one hand wife is naturally entitled to be maintained by husband from the date of marriage but on the other hand maintenance exceeding Rs 500 p.m. could not have been granted prior to Amendment Act, 2001 — Therefore, maintenance exceeding Rs 500 p.m., on facts, held, can only be granted from the date Amendment Act, 2001 came into force i.e. w.e.f. 24-9-2001

The appellants would be entitled to Rs 1000 each p.m. as maintenance from the date the Amendment Act, 2001 came into force i.e. w.e.f. 24-9-2001. The Family Court granted maintenance to the appellants—wife as well as daughter—at the rate of Rs 2000 and Rs 1000 respectively from the date of application i.e. 21-7-1997. The Family Court could not have granted maintenance exceeding Rs 500 p.m. either to Appellant 1 or Appellant 2 from the date of application i.e. 21-7-1997. At the most, such an order could have been made effective from the date the Amendment Act, 2001 came into force. Moreover, duration of litigation is not within the power or in the hands of the applicant and entitlement to maintenance should not be left to the uncertain date of disposal of the case. Maintenance is a right which accrues to a wife against her husband the minute the former gets married to the latter. It is not only a moral obligation but is also a legal duty cast upon the husband to maintain his wife. Hence, whenever a wife does not stay with her husband and claims maintenance, the only question which the court is called upon to consider is whether she was justified to live separately from her husband and still claim maintenance from him? If the reply is in the affirmative, she is entitled to claim maintenance. (Paras 46, 44, 41 and 42). Shail Kumari Devi v. Krishan Bhagwan Pathak, (2008) 9 SCC 632: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 839: AIR 2008 SC 3006: (2008) 3 KLT 576: 2008 Cri LJ 3881.

(12) Quantum of maintenance (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2008]

[460] — S. 127 — Enhanced maintenance — Whether to be allowed from the date of the application or from the date of order is within the discretion of the court — Merely because the husband has incurred liability to pay instalments by obtaining loans is no ground for denying maintenance to the wife and minor child. Sau Suman Narayan Niphade v. Narayan Sitaram Niphade, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 243: 1996 SCC (Cri) 53.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and S.P. Bharucha, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1993]

[461] — Ss. 127 and 125 — Maintenance to wife and a minor child aged about 15 years studying in 9th standard — Gross salary of husband Rs 5388 — Amount of maintenance enhanced from Rs 600 per mensem to Rs 1600 per mensem. Jayanta Kumar Laha v. Kabita Laha, 1994 SCC (Cri) 1749.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-11-1993]

[462] — S. 127(3)(b) — Scheme and object — Sum received by a divorced woman under any customary or personal law must be sufficient for her maintenance under the prevailing circumstances — Payment of Mahr (Dower) is different from maintenance allowance paid on divorce — Payment of Rs 500 by way of Mahr as recompense for divorce, held, insufficient and therefore, husband not absolved under S. 127(3)(b) from payment of maintenance

The respondent, a Muslim, married the appellant and had a son. His monthly earning was well above Rs 1000. He gave talaq to the appellant and paid Rs 500 by way of Mahr and Rs 750 towards maintenance for period of iddat. The appellant prayed for maintenance allowance for herself and her son under S. 125, CrPC and the Magistrate granted payment of a monthly sum of Rs 250 to her and Rs 150 to the child. The additional first class Magistrate, however, vacated the grant of maintenance on the score of divorce coupled with discharge of Mahr and iddat dues.

Held :

Section 127(3)(b) has a setting, scheme and a purpose and no talaq of the purpose different from the sense is permissible in statutory construction. It takes care to avoid double payment — One under custom at the time of divorce and another under S. 125. However, neither personal law nor other salvationary plea will hold against the policy of public law pervading S. 127(3)(b) as much as it does S. 125.

Sections 125-127 form a secular code deliberately designed to protect destitute women, who are victims of neglect during marriage and after divorce. It is rooted in the State's responsibility for the welfare of the weaker sections of women and children and is not confined to members of one religion or region, but the whole community of womanhood. Whatever the facts of a particular case, the Code, by enacting Ss. 125-127 charges the court with the humane obligation of enforcing maintenance or its just equivalent to ill-used wives and castaway ex-wives, unless the woman has received voluntarily a sum, at the time of divorce, sufficient to keep her going according to the circumstances of the parties. The payment of an amount, customary or other, contemplated by the measure must inset the intent of preventing destitution and providing a sum which is more or less the present worth of the monthly maintenance allowances the divorcee may need until death or remarriage overtake her.

Section 127(3)(b) requires that payment of the sum and the divorce should be essentially parts of the same transaction so as to make one consideration for the other. At any rate the payment of money contemplated by S. 127(3)(b) should be so linked with the divorce as to become payable only in the event of the divorce. Mahr as understood in Mohammadan law cannot, under any circumstances be considered as consideration for divorce or a payment made in lieu of loss of connubial relationship. Muslim law shows its reverence for the wife in the institution of mahr (dower). The quintessence of mahr whether it is prompt or deferred is clearly not a contemplated quantification of a sum of money in lieu of maintenance upon divorce. Indeed, dower focusses on marital happiness and is an incident of connubial joy. Divorce is farthest from the thought of the bride and the bridegroom when mahr is promised. Moreover, dower may be prompt and is payable during marriage and cannot, therefore, be a recompense for divorce too distant and unpleasant for the bride and bridegroom to envision on the nuptial bed.

In the present case the mahr paid is Rs 500 and the income therefrom may well be Rs 5 a month, too ludicrous to mention as maintenance. The amount earlier awarded is the minimum. Fuzlunbi v. K. Khader Vali, (1980) 4 SCC 125: 1980 SCC (Cri) 916: AIR 1980 SC 1730: 1980 Cri LJ 1249.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, O. Chinnappa Reddy and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-1980]

[463] — S. 125 (as amended by Act 50 of 2001) — Maintenance of wife and daughter — Quantum — Considerations for — Appellant 1 wife in possession of cultivable land and living in respondent husband's house — Respondent husband an SBI cashier having a gross salary of Rs 18,508.98 and taking home pay packet of Rs 9831.76 — Family Court fixing Rs 2000 for Appellant 1 wife and Rs 1000 for Appellant 2 daughter — High Court reduced the maintenance amount to Rs 750 p.m. for each appellant — Appellant 1 wife in possession of cultivable land and living in respondent husband's house, held, are relevant considerations — Therefore, amount of maintenance for wife fixed by Family Court at Rs 2000 p.m. was not right — On facts, held, the appellants are entitled to an amount of Rs 1000 each p.m. as maintenance

The respondent was working as cashier with State Bank of India and was getting gross salary of Rs 18,508.98. After deduction, his pay packet was of Rs 9831.76. The respondent retired from service in January 2006. On 21-7-1997 Appellant 1 (wife) and Appellant 2 (minor daughter) had made an application for maintenance under Section 125 CrPC before the Magistrate concerned. They also made an application for interim maintenance on 20-11-1999. The Magistrate granted an interim maintenance of Rs 300 p.m. w.e.f. 12-2-1998. On 3-9-2001 after recording of final evidence, the Magistrate adjourned the case for final arguments. In the meantime w.e.f. 24-9-2001 Section 125 CrPC was amended (striking out the maintenance limit of Rs 500) and the case was transferred to the newly established Family Court concerned. On 30-10-2006 the Family Court allowed the application dated 12-9-2006 for arrears of maintenance (which came to Rs 11,600) and on 29-11-2006 finally disposed of the case granting a maintenance of Rs 2000 pm to Appellant 1 and Rs 1000 to Appellant 2 w.e.f. 21-7-1997 (i.e. the date of application for maintenance before the Magistrate). By the impugned order of the High Court, the revision preferred by the respondent against the order dated 29-11-2006 of the Family Court was allowed reducing the maintenance amount to Rs 750 p.m. for each appellant and granting it w.e.f. 29-11-2006 (i.e. the date of final disposal of the case by the Family Court).

Allowing the appeal partly,

Held :

In view of overall facts and circumstance and in the ends of justice the appellants are entitled to an amount of Rs 1000 each p.m. as maintenance. On merits, the Family Court was not right in fixing the amount of maintenance at Rs 2000 p.m. for Appellant 1 and Rs 1000 p.m. for Appellant 2. From the material on record, it is clear that Appellant 1 wife is residing in the house belonging to the respondent husband and such finding has been recorded even by the Family Court. It is also in evidence that she was receiving income from the land in her possession which belonged to her husband, the respondent herein. It is true that the respondent could not state the actual amount received by the wife from the cultivation of the land, but it is also one of the considerations which is relevant and material while fixing the amount of maintenance. Moreover, Appellant 1 has inherited some land from her father. (Paras 46 and 45). Shail Kumari Devi v. Krishan Bhagwan Pathak, (2008) 9 SCC 632: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 839: AIR 2008 SC 3006: (2008) 3 KLT 576: 2008 Cri LJ 3881.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2008]

[464] — S. 125 (as amended by Act 50 of 2001) — Maintenance to child — Quantum of — Adequacy of — Question as to — High Court enhancing quantum from Rs 350 to Rs 500 — No dispute raised regarding enhancement and in fact there was a concession to the prayer for enhancement before the High Court — By amendment of S. 125 in 2001 the maximum limit regarding grant of maintenance prescribed at Rs 500, omitted — Considering the peculiar facts of the case, amount of maintenance enhanced to Rs 850 with effect from the date of judgment of the Supreme Court — Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Act, 2001 — S. 2 (Paras 22 and 23). Savitaben Somabhai Bhatiya v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 636: 2005 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2005 SC 1809: 2005 Cri LJ 2141: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2005]

(13) Interim maintenance

[465] — S. 125 (before amendment by Act 50 of 2001) — Interim maintenance — Grant of, prior to Amendment Act 50 of 2001 without there being any express provision for — Held, Magistrate had implied power to grant interim maintenance even prior to Amendment Act, 2001 — Rationale for, discussed and stated

The Magistrate was right and wholly justified under law in ordering interim maintenance by his order dated 20-11-1998. There is no infirmity in that part of the order which holds that interim maintenance can be granted by the Magistrate even before the amendment of Section 125 CrPC in 2001. It is true that there is no express provision in CrPC which authorises a Magistrate to make an interim order directing payment of maintenance pending disposal of an application for maintenance. CrPC also does not also expressly prohibit the making of such an order. Having regard to the nature of proceedings, the primary object to secure relief to deserted and destitute wives, discarded and neglected children and disabled and helpless parents and to ensure that no wife, child or parent is left beggared and destitute on the scrap-heap of society so as to be tempted to commit crime or to tempt others to commit crime in regard to them, it is held that the Magistrate had "implied power" to make such order. The jurisdiction of the Magistrate under Chapter IX (Order for Maintenance of Wives, Children and Parents) is not strictly criminal in nature. Moreover, the remedy provided by Section 125 CrPC is a summary remedy for securing reasonable sum by way of maintenance subject to a decree passed by a competent civil court. Hence, in absence of any express bar or prohibition, Section 125 could be interpreted as conferring power by necessary implication to make interim order of maintenance subject to final outcome of the application. (Paras 22 to 26 and 41). Shail Kumari Devi v. Krishan Bhagwan Pathak, (2008) 9 SCC 632: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 839: AIR 2008 SC 3006: (2008) 3 KLT 576: 2008 Cri LJ 3881.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2008]

Savitri v. Govind Singh Rawat, (1985) 4 SCC 337: 1985 SCC (Cri) 556, relied on [466] — S. 125 — Interim alimony — Maintenance awarded under S. 125 CrPC adjustable against amount awarded in matrimonial proceedings — On the facts and circumstances fresh directions for payment by husband issued — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — S. 24. Sudeep Chaudhary v. Radha Chaudhary, (1997) 11 SCC 286: AIR 1999 SC 536.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.P. Bharucha and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1997]

[467] — S. 125 — Interim maintenance — Sustainability — Fixed by Addl. District Judge at the rate of Rs 12,000 p.m. from the date of filing application under S. 24, HMA, 1955 — High Court confirmed the same having regard to averments made in the pleadings and other annexures — On perusal of the High Court's order and the annexures and hearing the arguments of both sides, held, impugned order does not suffer from any infirmity — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 — S. 24. Deepak Jain v. Charu Jain, (2007) 10 SCC 229: (2007) 54 AIC 149 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2007]

[468] — S. 125 — Nature and scope of jurisdiction of Magistrate under — Power to pass interim order based on prima facie satisfaction — Held, magistrate has implied power under, on being prima facie satisfied on the basis of an affidavit filed by the applicant for maintenance, to pass interim order directing the person from whom the maintenance is claimed to pay a reasonable sum by way of maintenance to the applicant pending final disposal of the application

The jurisdiction of a magistrate under Chap. IX of the Code is not strictly a criminal jurisdiction. While passing an order for maintenance under it, the magistrate does not impose any punishment on such person for a crime committed by him. It does not really create any serious new obligation unknown to Indian social life. It contains a summary remedy for securing some reasonable sum by way of maintenance, subject to a decree, if any, which may be made in a civil court in a given case provided the Personal Law applicable to the person concerned authorises the enforcement of any such right to maintenance. The Code, however, provides a quick remedy to protect the applicant against starvation and to tide over immediate difficulties. It is, therefore, the duty of the court to interpret the provisions in Chap. IX in such a way that the construction placed on them may not defeat the very object of the legislation. In absence of any express prohibition under S. 125 and having regard to the nature of jurisdiction exercised by a magistrate thereunder, as also the provisions of S. 7(2)(a) of the Family Courts Act, 1984 passed recently by Parliament proposing to transfer the jurisdiction exercisable by magistrate under S. 125 of the Code to the Family Courts, S. 125 should be interpreted as conferring power by necessary implication on the magistrate to pass an order directing a person against whom an application is made under it to pay a reasonable sum by way of interim maintenance subject to the other conditions referred to therein pending final disposal of the application. A contrary view is likely to result in grave hardship to the applicant, who may have no means to subsist until the final order is passed. The recognition of such implied power may lead to passing of interim orders in few cases where liability to pay maintenance may not exist, but the prejudice caused thereby to the person against whom it is made is minimal as it can be set right quickly after hearing both the parties. The magistrate may, however, insist upon an affidavit being filed by or on behalf of the applicant concerned stating the grounds in support of the claim for interim maintenance to satisfy himself that there is a prima facie case for making such an order. Such an order may also be made in an appropriate case ex parte pending service of notice of the application subject to any modification or even an order of cancellation that may be passed after the respondent is heard. If a civil court can pass such interim orders on affidavits, there is no reason why a magistrate should not rely on them for the purpose of issuing directions regarding payment of interim maintenance. The affidavit may be treated as supplying prima facie proof of the case of the applicant. If the allegations in the application or the affidavit are not true, it is always open to the person against whom such an order is made to show that the order is unsustainable. Savitri v. Govind Singh Rawat, (1985) 4 SCC 337: 1985 SCC (Cri) 556: AIR 1986 SC 984.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: E.S. Venkataramiah and R.B. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-1985]

[469] — S. 125(3) first proviso — Limitation of one year to seek recovery of arrears of maintenance — Applicability to the interim application filed in the main petition — Appellant wife and her daughter granted maintenance amounting to Rs 500 and Rs 300 respectively, by the Magistrate on 20-1-1993 — Since the amount was not paid and no warrant issued by the Magistrate, appellant wife filing petition claiming Rs 5365 as arrears of maintenance from 20-1-1993 to 31-8-1993 (date of filing the petition) — Respondent husband's revision against the order of the trial court dismissed by the Sessions Judge as well as the High Court — He failing to pay the amount due — Thereafter, appellant wife filing interim application in the main petition claiming arrears of maintenance amounting to Rs 46,000 from 20-1-1993 to 16-6-1998 (date of filing the IA) — Respondent depositing Rs 5365 but objecting to further claim on ground that the interim application filed on 16-6-1998 was barred by limitation under first proviso to S. 125(3) — Held, the main petition filed in 1993 was pending and kept alive and the subsequent IA was filed only to specify the exact amount accrued up to that date — Such application was only supplementary or incidental to the main petition which was admittedly filed within the period of limitation — Hence bar under S. 125(3) first proviso not applicable to the IA — Further held, insisting on filing successive applications is unreasonable since liability to pay maintenance is a continuing liability (Paras 2, 7 and 8). Shantha v. B.G. Shivananjappa, (2005) 4 SCC 468: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1089: AIR 2005 SC 2410: 2005 Cri LJ 2615.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2005]

[470] — S. 125 — Interim maintenance — Enhancement of — Disposal of application for, in priority over suit for divorce — Need for — Held, court is duty-bound to dispose of pending application for enhancement of maintenance, before suit for divorce is decided — Pending disposal of divorce suit, wife granted interim maintenance of Rs 4000 p.m. by District Judge — Aggrieved, wife filing revision petition before High Court — Meanwhile, she also filing application before District Judge for enhancement of amount of maintenance on ground that her husband's earnings had increased — Disposing the said revision petition High Court directing court below to decide divorce suit within one year and directing the wife not to press for enhancement of maintenance till its disposal — Sustainability — Held, High Court not justified in passing order which virtually rejected wife's application for enhancement of maintenance — Supreme Court enhancing maintenance to Rs 7000 with further directions to trial court to dispose of divorce suit within one year — CPC, 1908, S. 115 — Constitution of India, Art. 227 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, Ss. 24 and 13 (Paras 6 and 7). Sipra Bhattacharyya v. Dr. Apares Bhattacharyya, (2009) 4 SCC 366.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-1-2009]

(13) Interim maintenance (contd.)

[471] — S. 125 (before amendment by Act 50 of 2001) — Grant of Rs 300 p.m. as interim maintenance by Magistrate, held on facts, was justified (Para 46). Shail Kumari Devi v. Krishan Bhagwan Pathak, (2008) 9 SCC 632: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 839: AIR 2008 SC 3006: (2008) 3 KLT 576: 2008 Cri LJ 3881.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2008]

[472] — S. 125 — Interim maintenance — Quantum — Appellant, minor son of the first respondent, represented by his mother — Magistrate directed first respondent to pay interim maintenance of Rs 5000 per month — However, before the Supreme Court, first respondent offered to pay Rs 7500 per month subject to the final decision in the pending proceedings — Held, interim maintenance accordingly increased to Rs 7500 per month (Paras 4 and 9). Manu Khanna v. V.P. Sharma, (2008) 17 SCC 469: (2009) 73 AIC 77 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-2008]

(14) Date of entitlement to maintenance

[473] — S. 125(2) — Date of entitlement to maintenance — Effect of amendment by Act 50 of 2001 — Held, no substantial change has been made re date of payment

There is no substantial change so far as the date of payment is concerned. Under Section 125(2) CrPC as originally enacted, it was provided that such maintenance could be made payable from the date of the order or if so ordered, from the date of application. Even after the amendment of 2001, an order for payment of maintenance can be made by a court either from the date of the order or where an express order is made to pay maintenance from the date of application, then the amount of maintenance can be paid from that date i.e. from the date of application. (Paras 17 and 21). Shail Kumari Devi v. Krishan Bhagwan Pathak, (2008) 9 SCC 632: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 839: AIR 2008 SC 3006: (2008) 3 KLT 576: 2008 Cri LJ 3881.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2008]

[474] — S. 125(2) — Decision of the High Court holding S. 125(2) ultra vires Art. 14 without notice to the Attorney General and without such contention being raised in pleadings not sustainable — In view of the great emphasis placed in judgment upon unconstitutionality of the provision decision on merits also quashed — Matter remitted to the High Court for fresh decision with a direction to the husband to pay to the wife a sum of Rs 500 p.m. as interim maintenance and all arrears thereof. Basant Lal v. State of U.P., (1998) 8 SCC 589: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1548.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.P. Bharucha and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1996]

[475] — S. 125(2) — Date from which maintenance to be allowed — Application by wife under S. 125 for maintenance filed (on 28-5-1993) during pendency of husband's petition for divorce — Decree of divorce passed on ground of desertion (on 15-7-1995) — Application under S. 125 allowed subsequently — Divorce decree becoming final — Contention that wife would not be entitled to maintenance for any period prior to the passing of the decree held to be correct, but Family Court order allowing maintenance from date of application not interfered with "for that short period" — Constitution of India — Art. 136 — Post-divorce maintenance under CrPC, S. 125 (Para 12). Rohtash Singh v. Ramendri, (2000) 3 SCC 180: 2000 SCC (Cri) 597: AIR 2000 SC 952: 2000 Cri LJ 1498: 2000 All LJ 629.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-2000]

[476] — Ss. 125 and 354(6) — Maintenance from the date of application — Need for reasons/justification — Held, though an express order with reasons is necessary but no special reasons are required to be recorded — Rule of granting maintenance only from the date of order, held, would not be correct

For awarding maintenance from the date of the application, express order is necessary. No special reasons, however, are required to be recorded by the court. No such requirement can be read in Section 125(1) CrPC in absence of express provision to that effect. (Paras 43, 40, 42 and 29)

Hence, the High Court was not right in holding that as a normal rule, the Magistrate should grant maintenance only from the date of the order and not from the date of the application for maintenance. (Para 40). Shail Kumari Devi v. Krishan Bhagwan Pathak, (2008) 9 SCC 632: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 839: AIR 2008 SC 3006: (2008) 3 KLT 576: 2008 Cri LJ 3881.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2008]

Mohd. Inaytullah Khan v. Salma Bano, 1983 Jab LJ 55; Rameshwar v. Ramibai, 1987 Cri LJ 1952 (MP); Lachhmani v. Ramu, (1983) 1 Crimes 590 (MP); Qamruddin v. Rashida, (1992) 1 WLC 305 (Raj); Shyamlal v. Mansha Bai, 1998 Cri LJ 2704 (Raj); Mohd. Ismail v. Bilquees Bano, 1998 Cri LJ 2803 (All); Nitha Ranjan Chakraborty v. Kalpana Chakraborty, 2002 Cri LJ 4768 (Cal); Samaydin v. State of U.P., 2001 Cri LJ 2064 (All); Bijay Kapri v. Kanishta Devi, (2000) 2 PLJR 241 (Pat), overruled

Gnanaselvi v. Illavarasan, (1999) 1 Crimes 22 (Mad); Amarjit Kaur v. Sartaz Singh, 1996 Cri LJ 4476 (P&H); Krishna Jain v. Dharam Raj Jain, 1992 Cri LJ 1028 (MP); K. Sivaram v. K. Mangalamba, 1990 Cri LJ 1880 (AP), approved

(2007) 3 Pat LJR 723, reversed

(15) Cancellation or modification of maintenance order

[477] — Ss. 127(3) and 125 — Remarriage by wife — Maintenance allowance to the wife directed to be paid up to the date of her remarriage but the allowance granted to her child directed to be continued to be paid so long as the child remains in her custody. A. Raveendrababu v. Devaki Vijayamma, (1982) 3 SCC 477: 1983 SCC (Cri) 103.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-1982]

[478] — Ss. 127(3)(b) and 125 — Payment of mahr or dower by Muslim husband to wife does not attract S. 127(3)(b) and order of maintenance under S. 125 is not liable to be cancelled on such payment — Mahr or dower is not payable on divorce but is payable on marriage

Mahr is an amount payable by the husband to the wife on marriage and not on divorce. Since S. 127(3)(b) speaks of sum 'payable on such divorce' it is inapplicable in case of payment of Mahr. Even assuming that, in a given case, the entire amount of Mahr is of the deferred variety payable on the dissolution of marriage by divorce, it cannot be said that it is an amount which is payable on divorce. Divorce may be a convenient or identifiable point of time at which the deferred amount has to be paid by the husband to the wife. But, the payment of the amount is not occasioned by the divorce, which is what is meant by the expression 'on divorce', which occurs in S. 127(3)(b). The alternative premise that Mahr is an obligation imposed upon the husband as a mark of respect for the wife, is wholly detrimental to the stance that it is an amount payable to the wife on divorce. S. 127(3)(b) may have been introduced because of the misconception that dower is an amount payable "on divorce". But, that cannot convert an amount payable as a mark of respect for the wife into an amount payable on divorce.

However, the statement made in Bai Tahira case that "payment of Mahr money, as a customary discharge, is within the cognizance of that provision" [viz. S. 127(3)(b)] is incorrect. Mohd. Ahmed Khan v. Shah Bano Begum, (1985) 2 SCC 556: 1985 SCC (Cri) 245: AIR 1985 SC 945: 1985 Cri LJ 875.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and D.A. Desai, O. Chinnappa Reddy, E.S. Venkataramiah and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1985]

Bai Tahira v. Ali Hussain Fidaalli Chothia, (1979) 2 SCC 316: 1979 SCC (Cri) 473, partly affirmed

Fuzlunhi v. K. Khader Vali, (1980) 4 SCC 125: 1980 SCC (Cri) 916, affirmed

[479] — S. 125 — Maintenance — Suspension of order — Revival of the order of — Subsequent to passing of the order of maintenance by the court, parties compromising and starting living together but later falling apart — In such circumstances, during the operation of the compromise, the order of maintenance, held, remained suspended but was not wiped out altogether — Hence, when the compromise failed Supreme Court restoring the position of the wife under the original order of maintenance — However, parties given liberty to claim any other relief by raising a matrimonial dispute before the matrimonial court — Family Courts Act, 1984 — S. 7(1)(a) & Expln. (f)

In a matrimonial dispute the wife had been granted an interim maintenance at a certain rate. Subsequently, the parties reached a compromise whereunder the wife came to live with the husband but could not continue to do so. In such circumstances, the husband's contention that the orders of maintenance could not be revived as there had arisen a fresh cause of action, was upheld by the High Court leaving the wife to approach the criminal court again for appropriate relief. Allowing the wife's appeal and restoring her position under the original order of maintenance,

Held :

The matter can be viewed from either angle. It can be viewed that there was a genuine effort by the wife to rehabilitate herself in her matrimonial home but in vain. The previous orders of maintenance in a manner of speaking could at best be taken to have been suspended but not wiped out altogether. The other view can be that the maintenance order stood exhausted and thus she be left to fight a new litigation on a fresh cause of action. Out of the two courses, the first one is preferable as the second one would lead to injustice. In a given case the wife may then be reluctant to settle with her husband lest she lose the order of maintenance secured on his neglect or refusal. Her husband on the other side, would jump to impromptu devices to demolish the maintenance order in duping the wife to a temporary reconciliation. Thus, in order to do complete justice between the parties, in the facts and circumstances of the case, the wife's claim to maintenance has to be activated and she has to be put in the same position as before. However, it would be open to the parties to claim such other relief as may be due to him/her by raising a matrimonial dispute before the matrimonial court. Mahua Biswas v. Swagata Biswas, (1998) 2 SCC 359.

(15) Cancellation or modification of maintenance order (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and M. Srinivasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-1997]

[480] — S. 125 — Order of trial court for payment of, @ Rs 1000 per month from date of filing of suit — Stay of, in appeal with direction to pay maintenance @ Rs 750 per month from date of filing of appeal — Challenge to — Held, trial court's order would remain stayed if respondent would pay entire arrears from the date of filing of the suit till before the filing of the appeal @ Rs 750 per month within 6 months in 3 equal bimonthly instalments and would continue to pay the current amount of maintenance as directed by the appellate court — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 25 — Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, Ss. 18 and 23(2) (Para 3). Susheelamma v. K. Gaviyanna, (2007) 15 SCC 666.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-11-2005]

[481] — S. 125 — Order for maintenance passed by Magistrate will not be affected by any subsequent compromise or reunion between the husband and the wife — Order must be vacated or altered in terms of the provisions of the Code itself

A statutory order can ordinarily be demolished only in terms of the statute. If an order for maintenance has been made against the deserter it will operate until vacated or altered in terms of the provisions of the Code itself. If the husband has a case under S. 125(4), (5) or S. 127 of the Code it is open to him to initiate appropriate proceedings. But until the original order for maintenance is modified or cancelled by a higher court or is varied or vacated in terms of S. 125(4) or (5) or S. 127, its validity survives. It is enforceable and no plea that there has been cohabitation in the interregnum or that there has been a compromise between the parties can hold good as a valid defence. Bhupinder Singh v. Daljit Kaur, (1979) 1 SCC 352: 1979 SCC (Cri) 302: AIR 1979 SC 442: 1979 Cri LJ 198: 1979 MLJ (Cri) 446: 1979 ALJ 209.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, P.N. Shinghal and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-1978]

[482] — S. 125 — Order of maintenance under, can be revoked only prospectively having regard to the subsequent developments embodied in order of civil court. T.M. Narayanan v. Nishad (Minor), 1990 Supp SCC 163(1): 1990 SCC (Cri) 545.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1987]

Brij Pal Singh v. Sukhbiri Devi, (1962) 1 Cri LJ 681, overruled

(16) Practice and Procedure

See also under Ss. 125 to 128, '(1) Generally', above and

See also '(17) Enforcement of maintenance order/Payment in instalments', below

[483] — S. 125 — Maintenance proceedings — Trial court to take a prima facie view of the matter and need not go into the matrimonial disputes between the parties in detail

It was not necessary for the High Court to examine the whole evidence threadbare to exercise jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code. Rather in a case under Section 125 of the Code the trial court is to take a prima facie view of the matter and it is not necessary for the Court to go into the matrimonial disputes between the parties in detail. (Para 12). Rajathi v. C. Ganesan, (1999) 6 SCC 326: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1118: AIR 1999 SC 2374: 1999 Cri LJ 3668.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-1999]

Krishnan v. Krishnaveni, (1997) 4 SCC 241: 1997 SCC (Cri) 544, relied on [484] — S. 125 — Delay in disposal — High Court directed for expeditious disposal — Matter pending even after one year and five months since said direction — Held, Magistrate is directed to dispose of the matter expeditiously and to deal with any request for adjournment sternly and restrict the parties strictly to the issue at hand (Para 8). Manu Khanna v. V.P. Sharma, (2008) 17 SCC 469: (2009) 73 AIC 77 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-2008]

[485] — S. 125 — Ex parte order — Supreme Court under Art. 136 satisfied that husband was not served with notice — Ex parte order of the Magistrate and of the High Court set aside and matter remanded for being disposed of afresh by the Magistrate — No further notice to husband. Mohd. Naim Siddiqui v. Sultana Khatoon, (1982) 3 SCC 369: 1983 SCC (Cri) 50.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-1981]

[486] — S. 125 — Grant of maintenance to wife by trial Court — Finding of trial court based on proper appreciation of evidence — Interference by High Court in revision not justified. Kamla Devi v. Mool Raj, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 722(1): 1991 SCC (Cri) 230.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-1988]

(17) Enforcement of maintenance order/ Payment in instalments

See also Ss. 125 to 128, '(16) Practice and Procedure', above

[487] — S. 125 — Arrears of maintenance can be directed to be paid in instalments. Begum Subanu v. A.M. Abdul Gafoor, (1987) 2 SCC 285: 1987 SCC (Cri) 300: AIR 1987 SC 1103: 1987 Cri LJ 980.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-1987]

[488] — S. 125(3) — Non-compliance with order of Magistrate to make payment of maintenance — Magistrate has no power to impose sentence for more than one month

The language of sub-section (3) of Section 125 is quite clear and it circumscribes the power of the Magistrate to impose imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month or until the payment, if sooner made. This power of the Magistrate cannot be enlarged and therefore the only remedy would be after expiry of one month, for breach or non-compliance with the order of the Magistrate the wife can approach the Magistrate again for similar relief. By no stretch of imagination can the Magistrate be permitted to impose sentence for more than one month. (Para 1). Shahada Khatoon v. Amjad Ali, (1999) 5 SCC 672: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1029.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-1999]

[489] — S. 125 — Limitation — Applicability to maintenance proceedings under — Execution application under S. 125 CrPC, whether barred by limitation — Held, period of limitation is provided for in terms of S. 125(3) CrPC, first proviso — However, in the instant case, S. 15(1), Limitation Act, would apply, as, on facts, order of stay was granted by Revisional Court as also by High Court in the proceedings — Hence, limitation for filing application for execution would be computed upon excluding the period during which the order of stay was operating — Limitation Act, 1963, S. 15(1) (Paras 8, 11 to 14). Amarendra Kumar Paul v. Maya Paul, (2009) 8 SCC 359: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 868.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

Shantha v. B.G. Shivananjappa, (2005) 4 SCC 468: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1089, relied on

[490] — Ss. 125(3) and 128 — Recovery of arrears of maintenance allowance — Imposition of sentence of imprisonment on defaulting party will not discharge liability to pay maintenance amount

A distinction has to be drawn between a mode of enforcing recovery on the one hand and effecting actual recovery of the amount of monthly allowance which has fallen in arrears on the other. A person ordered to pay monthly allowance can be sent to jail only if he fails to pay monthly allowance "without sufficient cause" to comply with the order. Sentencing a person to jail is a "mode of enforcement". It is not a "mode of satisfaction" of the liability. The liability can be satisfied only by making actual payment of the arrears. Sentencing to jail is the means for achieving the end of enforcing the order by recovering the amount of arrears. Thus a sentence of jail is no substitute for the recovery of the amount of monthly allowance which has fallen in arrears. Kuldip Kaur v. Surinder Singh, (1989) 1 SCC 405: 1989 SCC (Cri) 171: AIR 1989 SC 232: 1989 Cri LJ 794.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-1988]

[491] — S. 128 — Release of detenu on parole — Period of parole to be excluded in reckoning period of detention — COFEPOSA Act, 1974 — S. 12(6)

The objective underlying preventive detention cannot be achieved or fulfilled if the detenu is granted parole and brought out of detention. Even if any conditions are imposed with a view to restrict the movements of the detenu while on parole, the observance of those conditions can never lead to an equation of the period of parole with the period of detention. The observance of the conditions of parole, wherever imposed, such as reporting daily or periodically before a designated authority, residing in a particular town or city, travelling within prescribed limits alone and not going beyond etc. will not prevent the detenu from moving and acting as a free agent during the rest of the time or within the circumscribed limits of travel and having full scope and opportunity to meet people of his choice and have dealings with them, to correspond with one and all and to have easy and effective communication with whomsoever he likes through telephone, telex etc. It will, therefore, be futile to contend that the period of parole of a detenu has all the trappings of actual detention in prison and as such both the periods should find a natural merger and they stand denuded of their distinctive characteristics. Pushpa Devi M. Jatia v. M.L. Wadhawan, (1987) 3 SCC 367: 1987 SCC (Cri) 526: AIR 1987 SC 1748: 1987 Cri LJ 1888: (1987) 12 ECC 356.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1987]

Poonam Lata v. M.L. Wadhawan, (1987) 3 SCC 347, affirmed

overruled in Sunil Fulchand Shah v. Union of India, (2000) 3 SCC 409*

(18) Interference by High Court/ Supreme Court

[492] — Ss. 125, 397 and 401 — High Court in exercise of its revisional jurisdiction not justified in interfering with order of maintenance passed by Magistrate in favour of wife — Reduction of amount of maintenance and making the same payable from date of order instead of date of application held, improper — Order of trial court restored. Premlata Sahai v. Ram Niranjan Sahai, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 731: 1991 SCC (Cri) 236.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-1988]

Kamla Devi v. Mool Raj, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 722(I), followed

[493] — S. 125 — Revision — Dismissal of revision not on merits but because of non-payment of maintenance by appellant husband to respondent wife as directed earlier — Held on facts, not justified — CPC, 1908, S. 115

The appellant husband was liable to pay Rs 4,62,000 as maintenance from March 2003 to September 2008, calculated at the rate of Rs 7000 p.m. Out of this amount Rs 1,86,000 had already been paid by the appellant. On 8-9-2008, when the matter was called for hearing, the appellant handed over a further sum of Rs 2 lakhs to respondent. Thus, a total sum of Rs 3,86,000 had already been paid by the appellant to the respondent and a further sum of Rs 76,000 remained to be paid by him.

Held :

In this situation, the High Court was not justified in rejecting the revision case only on the ground of non-payment of maintenance, as directed by it earlier at the rate of Rs 10,000 per month. Therefore, the impugned order is set aside and the High Court is requested to decide the civil revision case on merits and in accordance with law if, within a period of six weeks from today, the husband pays the balance amount of Rs 76,000 and also goes on paying the wife at the rate of Rs 7000 per month till the final order is passed by the High Court in the civil revision case. (Para 6). Sanjay Narain v. Monika, (2008) 16 SCC 503.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-2008]

[494] — S. 125 — Power of High Court to pass orders under, exercising its jurisdiction of superintendence under Art. 227 — Held, if convinced of genuineness of case that a deserted person, repeatedly knocking at its doors, is on verge of destitution, High Court itself has jurisdiction to direct suitable amount of maintenance and to secure compliance with its directions if subordinate court has failed to grant or to enforce the same relief — While dismissing SLP, petitioner directed to approach the High Court — Constitution of India — Art. 227

If convinced of the genuineness of the averments made by the petitioner and if convinced that a deserted woman, repeatedly knocking at its doors, is on the verge of destitution the High Court itself has jurisdiction to direct suitable amount of maintenance being awarded and to secure compliance with its directions, if the subordinate court has failed to grant or to enforce the same relief. May be that the High Court could have passed such order on the next date of hearing. But the petitioner has approached this Court probably impelled by impatience. (Para 3). Shail v. Manoj Kumar, (2004) 4 SCC 785: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1401: (2004) 3 MPLJ 336: (2004) 3 Mah LJ 503: 2004 All LJ 1876.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, Ashok Bhan and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-2004]

Surya Dev Rai v. Ram Chander Rai, (2003) 6 SCC 675, followed

[495] — S. 125 — SLP against order of maintenance awarded by High Court not to be entertained — Constitution of India — Article 136. Bihari Lal v. Kalyani, (1986) 1 SCC 132: 1986 SCC (Cri) 63.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-12-1985]

[496] — S. 125 — Supreme Court after deciding the law may itself determine the quantum of maintenance instead of remitting matter to trial court

As the record contains evidence regarding the earnings of the respondent the Court is in a position to determine the quantum of maintenance for the appellant in this appeal itself instead of remitting the matter to the trial court or the revisional court. Taking the factor of increase in his income since the emoluments of the husband were recorded four years back, the wife is entitled to Rs 300 per month and the maintenance of the child is increased to Rs 200 per month. Begum Subanu v. A.M. Abdul Gafoor, (1987) 2 SCC 285: 1987 SCC (Cri) 300: AIR 1987 SC 1103: 1987 Cri LJ 980.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-1987]

— Ch. X (Ss. 129 to 148) See S. 133 and Ch. X (Ss. 129 to 148)

See also Ss. 152, 149, 151, 129, 130, 133 and 144, Ch. X (Ss. 129 to 148) and Ch. XI (Ss. 149 to 153)

[497] — Chs. X (Ss. 129 to 148) and XII (Ss. 154 to 176) — Police officer — Reserve Police Officer appointed under Bombay SRPF Act, 1951 is not a police officer within the meaning of S. 25 — Hence a confession made to him is not inadmissible in evidence — He is officer-in-charge of a police station only for the purpose of maintaining public order and tranquillity and not for the purpose of investigation under Ch. XII of the CrPC, 1973 — Bombay State Reserve Police Force Act, 1951 (38 of 1951), Ss. 2(h), 10, 11 and 19 — Bombay Police Act, 1951 (22 of 1951) — CrPC, 1898, Ch. IX — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 25. State of Gujarat v. Anirudhsing, (1997) 6 SCC 514: 1997 SCC (Cri) 946: AIR 1997 SC 2780: 1997 Cri LJ 3397.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-1997]

Balkishan A. Devidayal v. State of Maharashtra, (1980) 4 SCC 600: 1981 SCC (Cri) 62; Ramesh Chandra Mehta v. State of W.B., AIR 1970 SC 940: (1969) 2 SCR 461; K.I. Pavunny v. Asstt. Collector (HQ), Central Excise Collectorate, (1997) 3 SCC 721: 1997 SCC (Cri) 444; Raj Kumar Karwal v. Union of India, (1990) 2 SCC 409: 1990 SCC (Cri) 330, followed

Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899, distinguished

— S. 129 See Ss. 11, 12, 13, 190, 129 and 151

See also Ss. 152, 129, 130, 133 and 144

See also Ss. 152, 149, 151, 129, 130, 133 and 144, Ch. X (Ss. 129 to 148) and Ch. XI (Ss. 149 to 153)

— S. 130 See also Ss. 129 and 130, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 978 in Vol. 2

— S. 130 See Ss. 152, 129, 130, 133 and 144

See also Ss. 152, 149, 151, 129, 130, 133 and 144, Ch. X (Ss. 129 to 148) and Ch. XI (Ss. 149 to 153)

[498] — Ss. 130 and 131 — Held, S. 4 of 1958 Act cannot be challenged on the ground that alternative provisions under general law, viz., Ss. 130 and 131 CrPC being available, more drastic provisions contained in S. 4 of 1958 Act were discriminatory and violative of Art. 14 — Ss. 130 and 131 CrPC deal with individual and isolated cases while S. 4 is concerned with a situation where whole or a part of a State is in a disturbed or dangerous condition — Ss. 130 and 131 CrPC cannot be treated as comparable and adequate to deal with the situation envisaged in S. 4 — Armed Forces (Special Powers) Act, 1958 — S. 4. Naga People's Movement of Human Rights v. Union of India, (1998) 2 SCC 109: 1998 SCC (Cri) 514: AIR 1998 SC 431.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.S. Verma, C.J. and M.M. Punchhi and S.C. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-1997]

— S. 131 See Ss. 130 and 131

— S. 132 See Ss. 197 and 132

See also Ss. 197(2) & (3) and 132

— S. 133 See also S. 133, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 979 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 133 See Ss. 152, 129, 130, 133 and 144

See also Ss. 152, 149, 151, 129, 130, 133 and 144, Ch. X (Ss. 129 to 148) and Ch. XI (Ss. 149 to 153)

See also TORT LAW

[499] — S. 133 — Remedy for public nuisance also lies under tort law apart from S. 133

The dynamics of the judicial process has a new "enforcement" dimension not merely through some of the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code (as here), but also through activated tort consciousness. The officers in charge and even the elected representatives will have to face the penalty of the law if what the Constitution and follow-up legislation direct them to do are defied or denied wrongfully. Municipal Council, Ratlam v. Vardichan, (1980) 4 SCC 162: 1980 SCC (Cri) 933: AIR 1980 SC 1622: 1980 Cri LJ 1075: (1980) 6 ALR 601.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-1980]

[500] — S. 133 and Ch. X (Ss. 129 to 148) — Object of and considerations involved in exercise of power under — Held, provisions of Ch. X should be so worked as not to become themselves a nuisance to the community at large — Balancing of rights of individuals to free and full enjoyment of their property on the one hand, and their right to be free from nuisance on the other, stressed — Held, proceedings under S. 133 are not intended to settle private disputes but are intended to protect the public as a whole against inconvenience (Paras 13 and 10). Kachrulal Bhagirath Agrawal v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 9 SCC 36: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1191: AIR 2004 SC 4818: 2004 Cri LJ 4634: (2005) 4 Mah LJ 963.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2004]

[501] — Ss. 133 to 144 — Nuisance — Remedies for, both civil and criminal, discussed — Penal Code, 1860, Ch. XIV (Ss. 268 to 294-A) — CPC, 1908 — S. 91 — Burden of proof on plaintiff — Held, plaintiffs need not prove that they have sustained any special damage

The term "nuisance" as used in law is not a term capable of exact definition. (Para 12)

Nuisances are of two kinds i.e. (i) public; and (ii) private. "Public nuisance" or "common nuisance" as defined in Section 268 of the Penal Code, 1860 is an offence against the public either by doing a thing which tends to the annoyance of the whole community in general or by neglecting to do anything which the common good requires. It is an act or omission which causes any common injury, danger or annoyance to the public or to the people in general who dwell or occupy property in the vicinity. "Private nuisance" on the other hand, affects some individuals as distinguished from the public at large. (Para 10)

The remedies to nuisance are of two kinds — civil and criminal. The remedies under the civil law are of two kinds. One is under Section 91 CPC. Under it a suit lies and the plaintiffs need not prove that they have sustained any special damage. The second remedy is a suit by a private individual for a special damage suffered by him. There are three remedies under the criminal law. The first relates to the prosecution under Chapter XIV of IPC. The second provides for summary proceedings under Sections 133 to 144 CrPC, and the third relates to remedies under special or local laws. (Para 10). Kachrulal Bhagirath Agrawal v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 9 SCC 36: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1191: AIR 2004 SC 4818: 2004 Cri LJ 4634: (2005) 4 Mah LJ 963.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2004]

Halsbury's Laws of England, referred to [502] — S. 133 — Applicability — Temporal nature of nuisance required for — Held, there must be imminent danger to property and consequential nuisance to the public — It does not deal with all potential nuisance, and applies when the nuisance is in existence (Para 13). Kachrulal Bhagirath Agrawal v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 9 SCC 36: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1191: AIR 2004 SC 4818: 2004 Cri LJ 4634: (2005) 4 Mah LJ 963.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2004]

[503] — S. 133 — Nature of duties of Magistrate under — Held, it is the function of the Magistrate to conduct an enquiry and to decide whether there was reliable evidence or not to come to the conclusion to act under S. 133 (Para 11). Kachrulal Bhagirath Agrawal v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 9 SCC 36: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1191: AIR 2004 SC 4818: 2004 Cri LJ 4634: (2005) 4 Mah LJ 963.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2004]

[504] — S. 133 — Nature of proceedings under — Held, are summary, and are more in the nature of civil rather than criminal proceedings (Para 10). Kachrulal Bhagirath Agrawal v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 9 SCC 36: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1191: AIR 2004 SC 4818: 2004 Cri LJ 4634: (2005) 4 Mah LJ 963.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2004]

[505] — S. 133 — Nuisance — Definition of — Held, "nuisance" as used in law, not a term capable of exact definition — Words and phrases — "Nuisance" (Para 8). State of M.P. v. Kedia Leather & Liquor Ltd., (2003) 7 SCC 389: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1642: AIR 2003 SC 3236.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-2003]

Halsbury's Laws of England, referred to

[506] — S. 133 — Nuisance — Kinds of — Public and private — Meanings of, discussed — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 268 (Para 10). Kachrulal Bhagirath Agrawal v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 9 SCC 36: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1191: AIR 2004 SC 4818: 2004 Cri LJ 4634: (2005) 4 Mah LJ 963.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2004]

[507] — S. 133 — "Nuisance" — Meaning of — Held, the term as used in law is not capable of exact definition — Words and phrases — "Nuisance" — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 268 (Para 12). Kachrulal Bhagirath Agrawal v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 9 SCC 36: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1191: AIR 2004 SC 4818: 2004 Cri LJ 4634: (2005) 4 Mah LJ 963.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2004]

[508] — S. 133 — Nuisance — Meaning of — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 268

Nuisance is an inconvenience which materially interferes with the ordinary physical comfort of human existence. It is not capable of precise definition. It may be public or private nuisance. As defined in Section 268 IPC, public nuisance is an offence against public either by doing a thing which tends to the annoyance of the whole community in general or by neglect to do anything which the common good requires. It is an act or omission which causes any common injury, danger or annoyance to the public or to the people in general who dwell or occupy the property in the vicinity. On the alternative it causes injury, obstruction, danger or annoyance to persons who may have occasion to use public right. It is the quantum of annoyance or discomfort in contra distinction to private nuisance which affects an individual is the decisive factor. (Para 3). Vasant Manga Nikumba v. Baburao Bhikanna Naidu, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 54: 1996 SCC (Cri) 27.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1994]

[509] — S. 133 — Object and purpose of — Applicability of — Nature and imminence of nuisance necessary to attract operation of — Nature of proceedings under

The object and purpose behind Section 133 of the Code is essentially to prevent public nuisance and involves a sense of urgency in the sense that if the Magistrate fails to take recourse immediately irreparable damage would be done to the public. To bring in application of Section 133 of the Code, there must be imminent danger to the property and consequential nuisance to the public. The nuisance is the concomitant act resulting in danger to the life or property due to likely collapse etc. It applies to a condition of the nuisance at the time when the order is passed and it is not intended to apply to future likelihood or what may happen at some later point of time. It does not deal with all potential nuisance, and on the other hand applies when the nuisance is in existence. (Para 8)

The provisions of Section 133 of the Code can be called in aid to remove public nuisance caused by discharge of effluents and air discharge causing hardship to the general public. (Para 12)

It has to be noted that sometimes there is confusion between Section 133 and Section 144 of the Code. While the latter is a more general provision the former is more specific. While the order under the former is conditional, the order under the latter is absolute. The proceedings are more in the nature of civil proceedings than criminal proceedings. One significant factor to be noticed is that the person against whom action is taken is not an accused within the meaning of Section 133 of the Code. He can give evidence on his own behalf and may be examined on oath. Proceedings are not the proceedings in respect of offences. (Paras 8 and 9). State of M.P. v. Kedia Leather & Liquor Ltd., (2003) 7 SCC 389: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1642: AIR 2003 SC 3236.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-2003]

Vasant Manga Nikumba v. Baburao Bhikanna Naidu, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 54: 1996 SCC (Cri) 27, discussed

[510] — S. 133 — Power under — When to be exercised — Condition precedent — Magistrate must exercise judicious discretion — Proceedings not intended to settle private disputes or a substitute for civil proceedings — In the circumstances of the case held, there was no imminent danger as to require the building to be demolished immediately

The object and public purpose behind Section 133 is to prevent public nuisance that if the Magistrate fails to take immediate recourse to Section 133 irreparable damage would be done to the public. The exercise of the power should be one of judicious discretions objectively exercised on pragmatic consideration of the given facts and circumstances from evidence on record. The proceedings under Section 133 is not intended to settle private disputes or a substitute to settle civil disputes though the proceeding under Section 133 is more in the nature of civil proceedings in a summary nature. (Para 3)

Two options are open to the Executive Magistrate on considering whether structure, building etc. is in such a dilapidated condition which requires to be demolished immediately which brooks no delay to avert danger to the life and property of the neighbourhood or passers-by unless they could be suitably repaired or supported so as to avert danger to the public or have it removed, etc. The condition precedent to exercise the power under Section 133 is the imminent danger to the property and consequential nuisance to the public. The removal of the building is so urgently required as it is likely to fall and cause injury to persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood or passers-by. The nuisance is the concomitant act resulting in danger to the life or property due to likely collapse etc. The dangerous condition of the building is in praesenti but not in future. The section is limited to injuries likely to be caused to the passers-by or persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood. Each case has to be considered in the light of the facts and circumstances obtained in each case. (Para 4). Vasant Manga Nikumba v. Baburao Bhikanna Naidu, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 54: 1996 SCC (Cri) 27.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1994]

T.K.S.M. Kalyanasundaram v. Kalyani Ammal, 1975 Cri LJ 1717: (1975) 2 MLJ 93 (Mad), approved

[511] — S. 133 — Applicability — Maintenance of public order and tranquillity — Removal of encroachment — Religious bookshop run by appellants in tin shed — Complaint filed by respondent for removal of — Conditional order of Sub-Divisional Magistrate for removal of nuisance — Contention of appellants that orders for removal were without jurisdiction — Rejected by High Court — Sustainability — Upholding High Court's order, held, no interference warranted

The appellants are tenants on a Plot No. 3/1120 since last 15-20 years where they had erected a tin shed and running a religious bookshop known as "R.K. Kitab Ghar". Shop licence and electric connection were obtained for the said shop. The Municipal Council has also recognised the shop of the appellants and had allowed the appellants to run the said shop for last many years. At the instigation of Respondent 2 i.e. JK, the Municipal Council tried to remove the shop of appellants and they filed a suit. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate issued a conditional order to remove the shop of the appellants on the basis of the complaint filed by the respondent. The appellants appeared before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate and made a request for dismissal of application filed by Respondent 2. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate directed the present appellants to remove the shop named as "R.K. Kitab Ghar". The appellants being aggrieved by the said order, filed criminal revision application before the Additional Sessions Judge, which was dismissed.

A writ petition was filed by the appellants against such order. The stand of the appellants was that Section 133 CrPC had no application to the facts of the present case. The High Court did not accept the plea. The High Court's directions for removal of the encroachment was stated to be without jurisdiction. The High Court did not accept the stand and dismissed the writ petition.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

In the background facts the order passed by the High Court does not suffer from any infirmity to warrant any interference. (Para 9). Suhelkhan Khudyarkhan v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 5 SCC 586.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, L.S. Panta and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

Vasant Manga Nikumba v. Baburao Bhikanna Naidu, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 54: 1996 SCC (Cri) 27; State of M.P. v. Kedia Leather and Liquor Ltd., (2003) 7 SCC 389: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1642; Kachrulal Bhagirath Agrawal v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 9 SCC 36: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1191, relied on

Halsbury's Laws of England, 3rd Edn., Vol. 28, Para 152, referred to [512] — S. 133 — Public nuisance created by industries by water and air pollution — Action taken under S. 133 by SDM held invalid by High Court on the ground that provisions of Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974 and Air (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1981 impliedly repeal the provisions of S. 133 CrPC so far as allegations of public nuisance by air and water pollution by industries or persons covered by the two Acts are concerned — No action taken by SDM despite High Court's order having been stayed as the matter was pending before Supreme Court — M.P. State Pollution Control Board and Central Pollution Control Board directed to inspect the premises and site of the units concerned so as to submit their report and take appropriate action under the Act. State of M.P. v. Kedia Leather & Liquor Ltd., (2002) 10 SCC 382.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-2000]

[513] — S. 133 — Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974 — Ch. V and Ss. 30, 32 & 33 — Air (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1981 — Ch. IV and Ss. 18, 20 & 22-A — Whether S. 133 CrPC impliedly repealed by the Water Act, 1974 and the Air Act, 1981 — As S. 133 of the Code and the two Acts were mutually exclusive and there was no impediment to their existence side by side, held, the two Acts did not impliedly overrule S. 133 of the Code

The Sub-Divisional Magistrate (the SDM) of the area concerned served orders in terms of Section 133 Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 directing the respondents, who owned industrial units, to close their industries on the allegation that serious pollution was being created by discharge of effluents from their respective factories and thereby a public nuisance was being caused. The preliminary issues and the proceedings initiated by the SDM were questioned by the respondents before the High Court under Section 397 CrPC. The main question arising in these appeals was whether, after the introduction of the Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974 (the Water Act) and the Air (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1981 (the Air Act), there was an implied repeal of Section 133 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (the Code).

Partly allowing the appeals,

Held :

The area of operation in the Code and the pollution laws in question are different with wholly different aims and objects, and though they alleviate nuisance, that is not of identical nature. They operate in their respective fields and there is no impediment for their existence side by side. While the provisions of Section 133 of the Code are in the nature of preventive measures, the provisions contained in the two Acts are not only curative but also preventive and penal. The provisions appear to be mutually exclusive and the question of one replacing the other does not arise. (Paras 15 and 16). State of M.P. v. Kedia Leather & Liquor Ltd., (2003) 7 SCC 389: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1642: AIR 2003 SC 3236.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-2003]

[514] — S. 133 — Magistrate can compel municipality to make drains and improve sewerage affecting the health and convenience of the residents — Financial stringency of the municipal body, held, is no defence — Order to abate the nuisance by affirmative action on a time-bound basis, held, justified — Tort action also possible — CrPC, 1898 — S. 133

Section 133, CrPC, permits enforcement of civic rights under the municipal law where neglect has led to a public nuisance. The section permits affirmative action to abate the nuisance on a time-bound basis by issuing specific directives.

Judicial discretion, when facts for its exercise are present, has a mandatory import. Section 133, CrPC is categoric although reads discretionary. So when the Magistrate has before him information and evidence, which disclose the existence of a public nuisance and, on the materials placed, he considers that such unlawful obstruction or nuisance should be removed from any public place which may be lawfully used by the public, he shall act under S. 133, CrPC and order removal of such nuisance within a time to be fixed in the order. Failure to comply with the direction will be visited with a punishment contemplated by S. 188, IPC. The offence is aggravated if the disobedience tends to cause danger to human health or safety.

Providing drainage system in a working condition sufficient to meet the needs of the people, cannot be evaded by the municipality on ground of financial inability. Such a plea has no juridical basis.

The Magistrate must estimate the cost of the scheme, fix reasonable time-limits for its execution and even oversee the actual execution of the scheme.

In the present case, while upholding the Magistrate's order under S. 133, the Supreme Court tailored the Magistrate's directions to make it workable by giving certain pragmatic directions to the municipal council in this regard. Municipal Council, Ratlam v. Vardichan, (1980) 4 SCC 162: 1980 SCC (Cri) 933: AIR 1980 SC 1622: 1980 Cri LJ 1075: (1980) 6 ALR 601.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-1980]

[515] — S. 133 and Art. 21, Constitution of India — Health and Health care, right to — Hygienic, clean and safe environment, right to — Noise pollution, Right to freedom from — Held, said right is a fundamental right protected by Art. 21, and noise pollution beyond permissible limits is an inroad into that right — Scope of said right discussed in detail — Deleterious effects of noise and its ubiquitousness in modern life, highlighted — Noise constitutes a real and present danger to people's health — Existing statutory scheme for controlling noise pollution and in law of tort, explained — Standards for permissible levels of noise pollution, laid down — Held, level of noise pollution is relative and depends upon a person and a particular place — The law will not take care of a super sensitive person but the standard is of an average and rational human being in society — Detailed directions given as to (1) need for framing a single specific and detailed legislation to deal with issue of noise pollution; (2) creation of civic awareness of the hazardous effects of sound, especially amongst children, the youth, civil administration, police and NGOs; (3) creation of effective mechanism and infrastructure for implementing laws relating to control of noise pollution; and (4) the taking of effective preventive measures to control noise pollution — Noise Pollution (Regulation and Control) Rules, 2000 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 268, 290 and 291 — Air (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1981 — S. 2(a) [as amended by Act 47 of 1987, w.e.f. 1-4-1988] — Environment (Protection) Act, 1986 — S. 2(c) — Central Motor Vehicles Rules, 1989, Rr. 119 and 120 — Constitution of India — Art. 21

Freedom from noise pollution is part of right to life under Art. 21 — Statutory protection

Treatment of the problem of noise pollution can be dealt with under the law of crimes and civil law. The civil law can be divided under two heads (i) the law of tort (ii) the general civil law. Cases regarding noise have not come before the law courts in large numbers. The reason behind this is that many people in India do not consider noise as a sort of pollution and they are not very conscious of the evil consequences of noise pollution. The level of noise pollution is relative and depends upon a person and a particular place. The law will not take care of a super sensitive person but the standard is of an average and rational human being in society. Careful reading of Section 95 IPC shows that only that harm is excused which is not expected to be complained of by a person of ordinary temper and sense. (Paras 93, 97 and 107)

Noise is defined as unwanted sound. Sound which pleases the listeners is music and that which causes pain and annoyance is noise. At times, what is music for some can be noise for others. The disturbance produced in our environment by undesirable sound of various kinds is called "noise pollution". Although there is no specific provision in the Environment (Protection) Act, 1986 to deal with noise pollution, the Act confers powers on Government of India to take measures to deal with various types of pollution including noise pollution, as noise was included in the definition of air pollutant in Section 2(a) of Air (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act in 1987. Other statutory provisions dealing with noise pollution include the Noise Pollution (Regulation and Control) Rules, 2000, Sections 268, 290 and 291 IPC, Section 133 CrPC, 1973, Sections 89, 90 r/w Sch. III, Factories Act, 1948 and Rules 119 and 120 of the Central Motor Vehicles Rules, 1989. (Paras 14, 104, 103, 94 and 101). Noise Pollution (V), In re, (2005) 5 SCC 733: AIR 2005 SC 3136: (2005) 121 DLT 547.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and Ashok Bhan, J. [Date of decision: 18-7-2005]

[516] — S. 133 — Noise — When actionable as a nuisance — Held, any noise which has the effect of materially interfering with ordinary comforts of life, judged by the standards of a reasonable man, is nuisance — Nuisance created by noise becomes actionable depending on its degree, surrounding circumstances, the place and the time — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 268, 290 and 291

Quietness and freedom from noise are indispensable to the full and free enjoyment of a dwelling-house. No proprietor has an absolute right to create noises upon his own land, because any right which the law gives is qualified by the condition that it must not be exercised to the nuisance of his neighbours or of the public. Any noise which has the effect of materially interfering with the ordinary comforts of life, judged by the standard of a reasonable man is nuisance. How and when a nuisance created by noise becomes actionable has to be answered by reference to its degree and the surrounding circumstances, the place and the time. Noise will create an actionable nuisance only if it materially interferes with the ordinary comfort of life, judged by ordinary, plain and simple notions, and having regard to the locality: the question being one of degree in each case. (Paras 102 and 10). Noise Pollution (V), In re, (2005) 5 SCC 733: AIR 2005 SC 3136: (2005) 121 DLT 547.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and Ashok Bhan, J. [Date of decision: 18-7-2005]

[Ed.: See also 1994 Supp (2) SCC 689 and 1959 Supp (1) SCR 904: AIR 1959 SC 544.]

[517] — S. 133 — Public nuisance — Noise pollution — Manufacturing of brass utensils by appellants — Creation of noise pollution due to, affecting the schools and the people of the area concerned and causing nuisance — Notice issued by Superintendent of Police directing appellants to stop their business — Dismissal of challenge thereto by High Court — Sustainability — Willingness of appellants to take ameliorative measures — Effect — Before the Supreme Court, appellants submitting that they should be given an opportunity to reduce the noise level and take remedial measures — In these circumstances, appellants directed to submit a concrete proposal before the authorities concerned stating how they would stick to the norms — The said proposal must be dealt with a decision to be taken within three months — The request, if any, made by appellants for making available an alternative site will be duly considered by the authorities — Noise Pollution (Regulation and Control) Rules, 2000, Rr. 3, 4 & 6 — Environment (Protection) Rules, 1986, R. 5 — Environment (Protection) Act, 1986 — Ss. 6(2)(b) & 3(2)(iii) — Noise pollution (Paras 11 to 13). Sk. Ikram Sheikh Israil v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 4 SCC 217.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2007]

[518] — Ss. 133 and 138 — Non-compliance with the mandatory requirement of drawing up a preliminary order before proceeding under S. 133 — Effect — Held, vitiates the entire proceedings

The omission on the part of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate to draw up a preliminary order, which is a sine qua non for initiating proceedings under Section 133 CrPC and without following the procedure provided for by Section 138 CrPC, the order made by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate directing the appellant to permanently close the quarry operations is unsustainable and is vitiated. C.A. Avarachan v. C.V. Sreenivasan, (1996) 7 SCC 71: 1996 SCC (Cri) 174.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-1995]

[519] — Ss. 133 and 144 — Compared

It has to be noted that sometimes there is confusion between Section 133 and Section 144 of the Code. While the latter is a more general provision the former is more specific. While the order under the former is conditional, the order under the latter is absolute. (Para 9). State of M.P. v. Kedia Leather & Liquor Ltd., (2003) 7 SCC 389: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1642: AIR 2003 SC 3236.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-2003]

[520] — Ss. 133 and 144 — Relative scope — Former is more specific and the latter more general — Moreover order under S. 133 is conditional while that under S. 144 is absolute — Nature of proceedings also different

A proceeding under Section 133 CrPC is of a summary nature. The proceedings under Section 133 are more in the nature of civil proceedings than of a criminal nature. (Para 10)

The object and purpose behind Section 133 CrPC is essentially to prevent public nuisance which involves a sense of urgency in the sense that if the Magistrate fails to take recourse immediately irreparable danger would be done to the public. The provisions of Chapter X CrPC should be so worked as not to become themselves a nuisance to the community at large. Although every person is bound to so use his property that it may not work legal damage or harm to his neighbour, yet on the other hand, no one has a right to interfere with the free and full enjoyment by such person of his property, except on clear and absolute proof that such use of it by him is producing such legal damage or harm. Therefore, a lawful and necessary trade ought not to be interfered with unless it is proved to be injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community. Proceedings under Section 133 are not intended to settle private disputes between different members of the public. They are in fact intended to protect the public as a whole against inconvenience. (Paras 13 and 10)

To bring in application of Section 133 CrPC, there must be imminent danger to property and consequential nuisance to the public. The nuisance is the concomitant act resulting in danger to life or property due to likely collapse etc. It applies to a condition of the nuisance at the time when the order is passed and it is not intended to apply to future likelihood or what may happen at some later point of time. It does not deal with all potential nuisances and on the other hand applies when the nuisance is in existence. (Para 13)

The public power of the Magistrate under the Code of Criminal Procedure is a public duty to the members of the public who are victims of the nuisance, and so he shall exercise it when the jurisdictional facts are present. "All power is a trust — that we are accountable for its exercise — that, from the people, and for the people, all springs and all must exist." A conjoint reading of Sections 133 and 138 CrPC discloses that it is the function of the Magistrate to conduct an enquiry and to decide as to whether there was reliable evidence or not to come to the conclusion to act under Section 133 CrPC. (Para 11)

A comparison between the provisions of Sections 133 and 144 CrPC shows that while the former is more specific, the latter is more general. Therefore, nuisance specially provided for in the former section is taken out of the general provisions of the latter section. Moreover, while the order under the former is conditional, the order under the latter is absolute. (Paras 10 and 13). Kachrulal Bhagirath Agrawal v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 9 SCC 36: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1191: AIR 2004 SC 4818: 2004 Cri LJ 4634: (2005) 4 Mah LJ 963.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2004]

[521] — S. 133(1)(b) — Applicability — Temporal nature of nuisance required for — Held, the conduct of the trade concerned must be injurious in praesenti to the health or physical comfort of the community — There must at any rate be an imminent danger

The conduct of the trade must be injurious in praesenti to the health or physical comfort of the community. There must, at any rate, be an imminent danger to the health or the physical comfort of the community in the locality in which the trade or occupation is conducted. Unless there is such imminent danger to the health or physical comfort of that community or the conduct of the trade and occupation is in fact injurious to the health or the physical comfort of that community, an order under Section 133 CrPC cannot be passed. (Para 11). Kachrulal Bhagirath Agrawal v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 9 SCC 36: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1191: AIR 2004 SC 4818: 2004 Cri LJ 4634: (2005) 4 Mah LJ 963.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2004]

[522] — S. 133(1)(b) — Applicability — Word "community" occurring in — Connotation of — Held, said provision deals with physical comfort of the community, and not with those acts which are not in themselves a nuisance, but in the course of which public nuisance is committed — In order to bring a trade or occupation within the operation of the said provision it must be shown that the interference with public comfort was considerable and a large section of the public was affected — The word "community" cannot be taken to mean residents of a particular house — It means something wider, that is, the public at large or the residents of an entire locality — It would however depend on the facts of each case and it would be hazardous to lay down any strait-jacket formula — Operation of godown for storage of dry chillies — Loading and unloading of said chillies affecting health and physical comfort of residents in the locality — Order under S. 133, upon consideration of evidence of witnesses, passed by SDM — High Court restoring order of SDM on it having been set aside by revisional court below — Supreme Court declining to interfere; however, allowing appellant to make any suggestion as to alternative arrangement to SDM, as was contemplated by S. 133 itself

Appellant 1 being a wholesale dealer in dry chillies, everyday trucks loaded with dry chillies come to his godown and then the same were unloaded and stored in the godown. Similarly, loading of dry chillies also went on for distributing the same to his customers. This had been going on for several years and had become a routine thing. The applicants however made a grievance that on account of storing of dry chillies in the godown as well as the work of loading and unloading thereof the health and physical comfort of the residents in that locality were affected and it had become practically impossible for them to bear it any further. According to them, the loading and unloading of chillies cause pollution with the result that many residents in the locality suffer from sneezing, coughing, asthma, irritation of skin and burning sensation. The applicants, therefore, moved the Municipal Council for taking necessary action in this behalf. However, since the Municipal Council did not give any response, the applicants moved SDM, Gondia, under Section 133 of the Code. The SDM, after finding that there was a prima facie case against the appellants issued a conditional order dated 12-3-1985 under Section 133(1)(b) of the Code with a notice to him to show cause as to why the same should not be confirmed and made absolute. Pursuant to the said notice, the appellants appeared before learned SDM, Gondia, and filed reply.

SDM, Gondia, allowed the parties to lead evidence in support of their respective contentions. He recorded part of the evidence and thereafter the case was transferred to SDM, Sakoli, who completed the enquiry. SDM, Sakoli, upon consideration of the evidence of the witnesses held that the applicants had proved public nuisance and physical discomfort to them. Consequently, SDM, Sakoli, proceeded to pass an order under Section 133 of the Code.

Feeling aggrieved by this order, the appellants preferred revision application in the Court of the Sessions Judge. The Sessions Judge allowed the revision application. A criminal revision application was filed by some of the original applicants before the High Court, which set aside the order of the revisional court; hence the special leave petition.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Section 133(1)(b) CrPC relates to trade or occupation which is injurious to health or physical comfort. It itself deals with physical comfort to the community and not with those acts which are not in themselves nuisance but in the course of which public nuisance is committed. In order to bring a trade or occupation within the operation of this section, it must be shown that the interference with public comfort was considerable and a large section of the public was affected injuriously. The word "community" in Section 133(1)(b) cannot be taken to mean residents of a particular house. It means something wider, that is, the public at large or the residents of an entire locality. The very fact that the provision occurs in a chapter with "public nuisance" is indicative of this aspect. It would, however, depend on the facts situation of each case and it would be hazardous to lay down any straitjacket formula. (Para 10)

Though the appeal is being dismissed, as provided for in Section 133 CrPC itself if any suggestion or alternative arrangement is brought to the notice of SDM, it shall be considered in its proper perspective in accordance with law. (Para 15). Kachrulal Bhagirath Agrawal v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 9 SCC 36: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1191: AIR 2004 SC 4818: 2004 Cri LJ 4634: (2005) 4 Mah LJ 963.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2004]

— Ss. 134 to 143 See Ss. 133 to 144

[523] — S. 143 — Agitations, bandhs, hartals, etc. — Measures to prevent resultant large-scale destruction of public and private properties — Recommendation of Thomas Committee for (i) amending Prevention of Damage to Public Property Act, 1984 to incorporate provisions: (a) for drawing a rebuttable presumption of guilt against the accused person and accused leaders, (b) for restricting the court's discretion to grant bail only to cases in which it feels that there are reasonable grounds to presume that the accused is not guilty, (c) to empower the court to impose a fine equivalent to the market value of the property damaged, and (ii) its recommendation for not diluting the requirement of recording of "special reasons" for reducing the minimum sentence, approved — Detailed guidelines to effectuate the modalities for preventive action and to make the enquiry/investigation in such cases more effective, laid down — The said guidelines to cease to be operative on enactment of appropriate legislation consistent therewith or creation of any fast track mechanism by statute(s) — Public Property — Prevention of Damage to Public Property Act, 1984, Ss. 3, 4 and 5 — Amendments to the Act suggested by Thomas Committee, approved — Detailed guidelines laid down to be observed till enactment of appropriate legislation consistent therewith or creation of any fast track mechanism by statute(s) — Constitution of India, Arts. 19(1)(a) to (c) & (2) to (4) and 32 — CPC, 1908, S. 91 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 268, 290, 291 and 425 — Civil Defence Act, 1968, Ss. 2 and 3

Taking a serious note of various instances of large-scale destruction of public and private properties in the name of agitations, bandhs, hartals and the like, suo motu proceedings were initiated by the Supreme Court in Destruction of Public & Private Properties, In re case, (2007) 4 SCC 474. After perusing the various reports filed, two committees were appointed; one headed by a retired Supreme Court Judge, Justice K.T. Thomas (K.T. Thomas Committee), and the other, headed by Mr F.S. Nariman, a senior member of the legal profession (Nariman Committee). Both the Committees submitted their reports separately (see paras 5 to 10 for recommendations of the Thomas Committee and paras 13 and 14 for recommendations of the Nariman Committee).

The K.T. Thomas Committee made the following recommendations:

(i) The Prevention of Damage to Public Property Act, 1984 (PDPP Act) should be amended to incorporate a rebuttable presumption (after the prosecution proved that public property was damaged in a direct action called by an organisation and that the accused also participated in such direct action) to the effect that the accused was guilty of the offence.

(ii) & (iii) The PDPP Act should contain an additional provision to the effect that specified categories of leaders of the organisation which had called for direct actions resulting in damage to public property, should be deemed to be guilty of abetment of the offence. However, the accused leader should not be liable to conviction if he proves that (i) he was in no way connected with the action called by his political party, or (ii) he had taken all reasonable measures to prevent causing damage to public property.

(iv) Specific measures (as given in para 10 of the judgment) should be adopted to enable the police officers to arrange videography of the activities damaging public property.

(v) Section 5 of the PDPP Act should be amended to restrict the discretion of the Court to grant bail to the offenders arrested for damaging public property, to cases where the court feels that there are reasonable grounds to presume that the accused was not guilty of the offence.

(vi) The discretion to reduce the minimum sentence on condition of recording special reasons need not be diluted.

(vii) Apart from the penalty of imprisonment, the court should be empowered to impose a fine equivalent to the market value of the property damaged on the day of the incident. In default of payment of fine, the offender should undergo imprisonment for a further period which should be sufficient enough to deter him from opting in favour of the alternative imprisonment.

After considering the reports of the two Committees and hearing the matter,

Held :

The recommendations of the Thomas Committee are wholesome and need to be accepted. (Paras 5 to 11)

To effectuate the modalities for preventive action and adding teeth to the enquiry/investigation, the following guidelines are to be observed:

As soon as there is a demonstration organised:

(I) The organiser should meet the police to review and revise the route to be taken and to lay down conditions for a peaceful march or protest;

(II) All weapons, including knives, lathis and the like should be prohibited;

(III) An undertaking should be provided by the organisers to ensure a peaceful march with marshals at each relevant junction;

(IV) The police and the State Government should ensure videography of such protests to the maximum extent possible;

(V) The person-in-charge to supervise the demonstration should be SP (if the situation is confined to the district) and the highest police officer in the State, where the situation stretches beyond one district;

(VI) In the event the demonstrations turn violent, the officer-in-charge should ensure that the events are videographed through private operators and also request such further information from the media and others on the incidents in question;

(VII) The police should immediately inform the State Government with reports on the events, including damage, if any, caused by the police; and

(VIII) The State Government should prepare a report on the police reports and other information that may be available to it and should file a petition including its report in the High Court or the Supreme Court as the case may be for the Court in question to take suo motu action. (Para 12)

The present case is one in which guidelines are necessary:

(i) to the police to enforce statutory duties under the Police Act, 1861 and CrPC, and (ii) to create a special purpose vehicle in respect of damages for riot cases. (Paras 28, 29 and 33). Destruction of Public & Private Properties v. State of A.P., (2009) 5 SCC 212.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, L.S. Panta and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-4-2009]

Destruction of Public & Private Properties, In re, (2007) 4 SCC 474: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 351; Vishaka v. State of Rajasthan, (1997) 6 SCC 241: 1997 SCC (Cri) 932, referred to

— S. 144 See also S. 144, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 980 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 144 See Ss. 20 and 144

See also Ss. 133 to 144

See also Ss. 133 and 144

See also Ss. 145, 144 and 5 & 482

See also Ss. 152, 129, 130, 133 and 144

See also Ss. 152, 149, 151, 129, 130, 133 and 144, Ch. X (Ss. 129 to 148) and Ch. XI (Ss. 149 to 153)

See also Ss. 176(3) and 144

See also Ss. 482, 144 and 145

[524] — S. 144 — Scope of

Section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, confers jurisdiction to direct any person to abstain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in his possession or under his management with the object, inter alia, of preventing a disturbance of the public tranquillity or a riot or an affray. Section 144(3) specifically lays down that the order under this section may be directed to a particular individual or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place. The kind of orders mentioned here are obviously intended to prevent dangers to life, health, safety or peace and tranquillity of the members of the public. They are only temporary orders which cannot last beyond two months from the making thereof. Questions of title cannot be decided here at all. It is the duty of the authorities to aid and protect those who are performing completely legal acts in a reasonably and perfectly legal manner or in accordance with what the law permits them to do. It is only where it is not practical to allow them to do something which is quite legal, having regard to state of excited feelings of persons living in an area or frequenting the locality, that action may be taken under the section which may interfere with what are otherwise completely legal and permissible conduct and speech. The Magistrate is not concerned with individual rights in performing his duty under the section but he has to determine what may be reasonably necessary or expedient in a situation of which he is the best judge. If any community or sect is disposed to transgress the rights of another in a particular property habitually, the remedy lies by way of a civil suit for an injunction. It is impossible to decide conflicting assertions on such questions for the first time either on a writ petition or in a proceeding under S. 144. If public peace and tranquillity or other objects mentioned there are not in danger, the Magistrate cannot act under the section. On the other hand, if the public safety, peace or tranquillity are in danger, it is left to him to take proper action under the section. No hard and fast rule can be laid down for guidance in exercising the power. It has to be judged on facts and circumstances existing at a particular place at a particular time. Mohd. Gulam Abbas v. Mohd. Ibrahim, (1978) 1 SCC 226: 1978 SCC (Cri) 106: AIR 1978 SC 422: 1978 Cri LJ 496: 1978 MLJ (Cri) 248: (1978) 2 SCR 419.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.H. Beg, C.J. and P.N. Bhagwati and Jaswant Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-1977]

[525] — S. 144 — Object of

The legislative intention to preserve public peace and tranquillity without lapse of time, acting emergently, if warranted, giving thereby paramount importance to societal needs by even overriding temporarily private rights keeping in view public interest, is patently inbuilt in Section 144 of the Code. (Para 10). State of Karnataka v. Dr. Praveen Bhai Thogadia, (2004) 4 SCC 684: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1387: AIR 2004 SC 2081: (2004) 2 KLT 342: 2004 Cri LJ 1825.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2004]

[526] — S. 144 — Order under, must be in aid of lawful exercise of established rights and against unauthorised interference with such exercise which may lead to breach of public peace — General guidelines for proper exercise of power under, given

The Shia Muslims of Varanasi, a religious minority, claimed their customary rights to perform religious ceremonies and functions on certain plots and structures. The entitlement of the Shias to such rights has been established and is the subject-matter of a judicial pronouncement and decree of civil court of competent jurisdiction as also by reason of these properties having been registered as Shia Wakfs for performance of their religious ceremonies and functions. Their customary rights having partaken of the character of fundamental rights under Arts. 25 and 26, they are desirous of freely practising their religious faith and perform their rites, practices, observances and functions without let or hindrance by members belonging to the majority sect of the community viz. Sunni Muslims. They filed the present petition under Art. 32 complaining that the power under S. 144 is being exercised in utter disregard of the lawful exercise of their legal rights and every time instead of exercising the power in aid of their rights it is being exercised in suppressing their rights under the pretext of imminent danger to peace and tranquillity of the locality.

Held :

The entire basis of action under S. 144 is provided by the urgency of the situation and power thereunder is intended to be availed of for preventing disorders, obstructions and annoyances with a view to secure the public weal by maintaining public peace and tranquillity. As such it may become necessary for the Executive Magistrate to override temporarily private rights and in a given situation the power must extend to restraining individuals from doing acts perfectly lawful in themselves, for, when there is a conflict between the public interest and private rights the former must prevail. Further, the section does not confer any power on the Executive Magistrate to adjudicate or decide disputes of civil nature or questions of title to properties or entitlements to rights but at the same time in cases where such disputes or titles or entitlements to rights have already been adjudicated and have become the subject matter of judicial pronouncements and decrees of civil courts of competent jurisdiction then in the exercise of his power under S. 144 the Executive Magistrate must have due regard to such established rights and subject of course to the paramount consideration of maintenance of public peace and tranquillity the exercise of power must be in aid of those rights and against those who interfere with the lawful exercise thereof and even in cases where there are no declared or established rights the power should not be exercised in a manner that would give material advantage to one party to the dispute over the other but in a fair manner ordinarily in defence of legal rights, if there be such and the lawful exercise thereof rather than in suppressing them. In other words, the magistrate's action should be directed against the wrong-doer rather than the wronged. Furthermore, it would not be a proper exercise of discretion on the part of the Executive Magistrate to interfere with the lawful exercise of the right by a party on a consideration than those who threaten to interfere constitute a large majority and it would be more convenient for the administration to impose restrictions which would affect only a minor section of the community rather than prevent a larger section more vociferous and militant.

In the circumstances of the present case the power under S. 144 must be exercised by the executive magistracy in defençe of such established rights of the petitioners and the Shia community and instead of prohibiting or suspending the exercise of such rights on concerned occasions on the facile ground of imminent danger to public peace and tranquillity of the locality the authorities must make a positive approach to the situation. If they are satisfied that the exercise of the rights is likely to create a riot or breach of peace it would be their duty to take from those from whom disturbance is apprehended security to keep the peace. It is only in an extremely extraordinary situation, when other measures are bound to fail, that a total prohibition or suspension of their rights may be resorted to as a last measure. Gulam Abbas v. State of U.P., (1982) 1 SCC 71: 1982 SCC (Cri) 82: AIR 1981 SC 2198: (1982) 1 SCR 1077.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar, D.A. Desai and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-1981]

[527] — S. 144 — Condition of making "a written order stating the material facts of the case" — Whether mandatory so that its non-compliance would render the order invalid — Question not decided. Acharya Jagdishwaranand Avadhuta v. Commr. of Police, (1983) 4 SCC 522: 1984 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1984 SC 51.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, A.N. Sen and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-1983]

[528] — S. 144 — Ex parte intervention by High Court — Propriety — Actus curiae neminem gravabit — Limits of the extraordinary jurisdiction of High Court under Art. 226 — Private dispute — Single Judge of High Court interfering with proceeding under S. 144 CrPC initiated in connection with a private dispute between landlord and tenant and issuing mandatory ex parte order on the basis of which tenant got evicted with police help by landlord without going through normal landlord-tenant proceedings in appropriate forum — Held, Single Judge exceeded jurisdiction under Art. 226 — Appeal court while setting aside the order of the Single Judge ought to have granted relief of putting back the tenant into possession — Principle of actus curiae neminem gravabit applicable — In absence of such relief matter remanded to the appeal court — Constitution of India — Art. 226

In connection with a private dispute between landlord and tenant, the landlord after instituting proceedings under Section 144 CrPC in the Court of Executive Magistrate, moved the High Court by a writ petition under Article 226. A Single Judge of the High Court passed an ex parte order on 13-8-1993 without notice to the tenant directing the officer-in-charge of the police station to make an inquiry into the complaint and submit a report. The police report was submitted on 19-8-1993 and on that basis the writ petition was disposed of on 30-8-1993. The police authorities were directed to ensure that the free egress and ingress of the landlord to and from the disputed flat was not interfered with by the tenant. If necessary, the police authorities were directed to remove the obstruction to such free egress and ingress. All parties including the officer-in-charge of the police station, were directed to act on a signed copy of the minutes of the order. As a result of the order of the Court, the police evicted the tenant from the disputed premises and the landlord was able to resume possession immediately with police help. The appeal court on 14-10-1993 set aside the order of the Single Judge but did not grant any relief to the tenant to get back possession of the premises. A further application to the appeal court for necessary relief was also rejected on ground that the appeal having already been disposed of, the court had become functus officio. Allowing the appeal with costs,

Held :

A private dispute between a landlord and a tenant was taken up in writ jurisdiction and mandatory orders were passed directing the State and the police authorities on the basis of which the landlord with the help of police authorities evicted the tenant from his flat. Thus the landlord was able to get back possession of tenanted premises without having to go through the usual landlord and tenant proceedings before appropriate forum in accordance with law. The scope of writ jurisdiction of the court was lost sight of by the learned Judge and an extraordinary situation was brought about by an improper and unjust order passed without any affidavit in less than three weeks' time. No proper hearing was given to the respondents. A copy of the police report was not given to the respondents. No direction was given for filing of affidavits even to the State. There was no explanation why the proceedings were not allowed to be continued in the Court of the Executive Magistrate in accordance with law. It was most unfortunate that the court intervened in a proceeding under Section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code which was actually being heard and a drastic order of this nature was passed by the court in such a manner without issuing a rule nisi and without any proper hearing. A procedure unknown to law was adopted for disposing of a landlord-tenant dispute.

The orders of the appeal court did not give any relief to the appellant, even though his appeal was allowed and the order under appeal was set aside. If the appellant was ejected from the disputed premises with police help pursuant to the order which was set aside, the possession should have been restored to him with police help, if necessary. Otherwise, even after succeeding in the appeal, the appellant will remain without remedy and out of possession as a result of the order passed by the trial court. Actus curiae neminem gravabit — An act of the court shall prejudice no man. It was the duty of the appeal court to restore status quo ante to passing of the order on 30-8-1993. It is not necessary to go into the contention that the appeal was being conducted in the name of the appellant who was not an interested party any more.

Accordingly the order passed by the appeal court is set aside and the case is remanded back to the appeal court, which will direct an inquiry as to whether the appellant was the person who was actually evicted from possession on the order passed on 30-8-1993 and if so, restore him back into the possession of the disputed premises. Before passing any order the Court must satisfy itself as to the true identity and the wish of the appellant. Prasanna Kumar Roy Karmakar v. State of W.B., (1996) 3 SCC 403: AIR 1996 SC 1517.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.P. Singh and S.C. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1996]

[529] — S. 144 — Order under, held, executive in nature and therefore, amenable to writ jurisdiction under Art. 32 — Having regard to the fact that unlike the old Code of Criminal Procedure, under the new Code the scheme of separation between the judicial functions and executive or administrative functions of magistrates as recommended by the Law Commission, has been implemented to a great extent, and on a comparison of relevant sections of the present Code with those of the old Code it is clear that an order issued under S. 144 of the new Code is an executive order passed in performance of an executive function where no lis as to any rights between rival parties is adjudicated but merely an order for preserving public peace is made and as such it will be amenable to writ jurisdiction under Art. 32 of the Constitution. The fact that the parties and particularly the aggrieved party are heard before such an order is made merely ensures fair play and observance of audi alteram partem rule which are regarded as essential in the performance of any executive or administrative function and the further fact that a revision lies against the order of the Executive Magistrate either to the Sessions Court or to the High Court removes the vice of arbitrariness, if any, pertaining to the section. These aspects cannot make the order a judicial or quasi-judicial order. The power conferred upon S. 144, CrPC, 1973 is comparable to that conferred on the Bombay Police under S. 37 of the Bombay Police Act, 1951. Gulam Abbas v. State of U.P., (1982) 1 SCC 71: 1982 SCC (Cri) 82: AIR 1981 SC 2198: (1982) 1 SCR 1077.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar, D.A. Desai and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-1981]

[530] — S. 144 — Judicial review of orders passed under — Scope of — Law and order — Maintenance of — Scope of judicial review — Held, courts normally not to interfere with matters relating to law and order — Administrative authorities are in best position to assess and handle the situation and their decision may involve to some extent an element of subjectivity — Since different fact situations warrant different approaches, no hard-and-fast guidelines which can have universal application can be laid down or envisaged — Interposition of courts justified only on the usual grounds for review of administrative action — Interference by courts as a matter of course and as though adjudicating an appeal, will defeat the very purpose of legislation and legislative intent — Moreover, scheme underlying the very provisions of CrPC, the avenue of remedies available under CrPC, and by way of judicial review, carry sufficient inbuilt safeguards to control and check any unwarranted exercise or abuse in any given case

Courts should not normally interfere with matters relating to law and order which is primarily the domain of the administrative authorities concerned. They are by and large the best to assess and to handle the situation depending upon the peculiar needs and necessities within their special knowledge. Their decision may involve to some extent an element of subjectivity on the basis of materials before them. Past conduct and antecedents of a person or group or an organisation may certainly provide sufficient material or basis for the action contemplated on a reasonable expectation of possible turn of events, which may need to be avoided in public interest and maintenance of law and order. (Para 6)

At some such grave situation at least the decision as to the need and necessity to take prohibitory actions must be left to the discretion of those entrusted with the duty of maintaining law and order, and interposition of courts — unless a concrete case of abuse or exercise of such sweeping powers for extraneous considerations by the authority concerned or that such authority was shown to act at the behest of those in power, and interference as a matter of course and as though adjudicating an appeal, will defeat the very purpose of legislation and legislative intent. (Para 7)

The Court was not acting as an appellate authority over the decision of the official concerned. Unless the order passed is patently illegal and without jurisdiction or with ulterior motives and on extraneous considerations of political victimisation by those in power, normally interference should be the exception and not the rule. The court cannot in such matters substitute its view for that of the competent authority. (Para 8)

Since different fact situations warrant different approaches, no hard-and-fast guidelines which can have universal application can be laid down or envisaged. The situation peculiar to a particular place or locality vis-à-vis a particular individual or group behaving or expecting to behave in a particular manner at a particular point of time may not be the same in all such or other eventualities in another part of the country or locality or place even in the same State. The scheme underlying the very provisions carries sufficient inbuilt safeguards and the avenue of remedies available under the Code itself as well as by way of judicial review are sufficient safeguards to control and check any unwarranted exercise or abuse in any given case and courts should ordinarily give utmost importance and primacy to the view of the competent authority, expressed objectively also, in this case without approaching the issue, as though considering the same on an appeal, as of routine, keeping in view the fact that orders of the nature are more preventive in nature and not punitive in their effect and consequences. (Para 16)

The High Court should not have glossed over the basic requirements of interference discussed above, by saying that the people of the locality where the meeting was to be organised were sensible and not fickle-minded, to be swayed by the presence of any person in their midst or by his speeches. Such presumptive and wishful approaches at times may do greater damage than any real benefit to individual rights as also the need to protect and preserve law and order. (Para 8). State of Karnataka v. Praveen Bhai Thogadia (Dr.), (2004) 4 SCC 684: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1387: AIR 2004 SC 2081: (2004) 2 KLT 342: 2004 Cri LJ 1825.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2004]

[531] — S. 144 — Passing of prohibitory orders under, to preserve communal harmony — Imperativeness of — Preservation of communal harmony and public order — Duty of State in regard to — Curbing of freedom of speech and expression in interest of — Speeches or actions likely to trigger communal antagonism and hatred — Held, authorities in charge of law and order, on finding that a person's speeches are of such a nature, to necessarily pass prohibitory orders to effectively avert such untoward happenings — Prohibitory orders to be passed irrespective of position assumed or claimed in public life by person(s) concerned — Constitution of India — Arts. 25 and 19(2)

The valuable and cherished right of freedom of expression and speech may at times have to be subjected to reasonable subordination to social interests, needs and necessities to preserve the very core of democratic life — preservation of public order and rule of law. (Para 7)

It is imperative that if any individual or group of persons, by their action or caustic and inflammatory speech are bent upon sowing seeds of mutual hatred, and their proposed activities are likely to create disharmony and disturb the equilibrium, sacrificing public peace and tranquillity, strong action, and more so preventive actions are essentially and vitally needed to be taken. Any speech or action which would result in ostracisation of communal harmony would destroy all those high values which the Constitution aims at. Therefore, whenever the authorities concerned in charge of law and order find that a person's speeches or actions are likely to trigger communal antagonism and hatred resulting in fissiparous tendencies gaining a foothold, undermining and affecting communal harmony, prohibitory orders need necessarily to be passed, to effectively avert such untoward happenings. (Paras 9 and 6)

No person, however big he may assume or claim to be, should be allowed, irrespective of the position he may assume or claim to hold in public life, to either act in a manner or make speeches which would destroy secularism recognised by the Constitution. Communal harmony should not be made to suffer and be made dependent upon the will of an individual or a group of individuals, whatever be their religion, be it of a minority or that of the majority. Persons belonging to different religions must feel assured that they can live in peace with persons belonging to other religions. (Paras 6 and 7). State of Karnataka v. Praveen Bhai Thogadia (Dr.), (2004) 4 SCC 684: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1387: AIR 2004 SC 2081: (2004) 2 KLT 342: 2004 Cri LJ 1825.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2004]

Praveen Bhai Thogadia (Dr.) v. State of Karnataka, 2003 Cri LJ 1769 (Kant), reversed

[Ed.: See also Art. 19(2), '(c)(3)(x) Public order and religious sentiment' in Vol. 6, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, pp. 134 et seq.]

[532] — S. 144 — Presumption regarding existence of written order authorising the police to take action under, when can be drawn

In an appropriate case, a presumption may well be drawn as to the existence of an executive order if it is found that the police are generally acting systematically according to a set and uniform pattern or are otherwise engaged in a large scale operation of any similar or sinister kind. But where there is want of acceptable evidence, Court would hesitate to draw such a presumption. Rupinder Singh Sodhi v. Union of India, (1983) 1 SCC 140: 1983 SCC (Cri) 136: AIR 1983 SC 65.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and A.N. Sen, J. [Date of decision: 18-11-1982]

[533] — S. 144 — Repetitive orders under beyond the period of two months, held, invalid

Section 144 intends to meet an emergency. This postulates a situation temporary in character and, therefore, the duration of an order under S. 144 is not intended to be either permanent or semi-permanent in character. It is clear from the proviso to sub-section (4) of S. 144 that the life of an order under S. 144 should not remain in force beyond two months when made by a Magistrate. The scheme of S. 144 does not contemplate repetitive orders and in case the situation so warrants steps have to be taken under other provisions of the law such as S. 107 or S. 145 of the Code when individual disputes are raised and to meet a situation such as here, there are provisions to be found in the Police Act. If repetitive orders are made it would clearly amount to abuse of the power conferred by S. 144 of the Code. But it was not necessary on that ground to quash the impugned order of March 1982 as by efflux of time it had already ceased to be effective. Acharya Jagdishwaranand Avadhuta v. Commr. of Police, (1983) 4 SCC 522: 1984 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1984 SC 51.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, A.N. Sen and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-1983]

[Certain observations in Gulam Abbas v. State of A.P., (1982) 1 SCC 71: 1982 SCC (Cri) 82 regarding the nature of the order under S. 144 of the Code — Judicial or executive — to the extent they run counter to the decision of the Constitution Bench in Babulal Parate case, may require reconsideration]

[534] — S. 144 — Rival questions regarding rights to property and religious practices and celebrations raised in the context of order made under S. 144 can be decided only by suit and not in writ petition — Constitution of India — Article 226. Mohd. Ibrahim v. City Magistrate, Varanasi, (1983) 2 SCC 153: 1983 SCC (Cri) 365.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.N. Ray, C.J. and M.H. Beg and Jaswant Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-1976]

[535] — S. 144 — Regulation of acts in furtherance and practise of religion — Manner of exercise of power in respect of — Power of authorities concerned to determine integral and essential parts or practices of religion concerned — Freedom to act in furtherance of and practise religion — Scope and regulation of — Manner of exercise of said regulatory power — Power of authorities concerned to determine integral and essential parts or practices of religion concerned — Held (per Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, J.), in every case said power of regulation must be exercised with the consciousness that the subject of regulation is the fundamental right of religion, and so as not to unduly infringe the protection given by the Constitution — Moreover, in exercise of said power, the authorities cannot sit in judgment over the professed views of the adherents of the religion concerned and determine whether the practice is warranted by the religion or not — That is not their function — To allow any authority to judge the truth or falsity of a religious belief or practice is to destroy the guarantee of religious freedom in the Constitution — On facts, it was not for the Police Commissioner to have given his disapproval to a practice of a particular sect (Tandava dance in public procession by Ananda Margis) which in his opinion was not well established — Constitution of India — Arts. 25 and 26

The freedom to act in furtherance of and practise religion can be subject to regulations; in our Constitution, subject to public order, health and morality and to other provisions in Part III of the Constitution. The State has got ample powers to regulate the secular activities associated with religious practices. Religious activities are protected under Article 25 of the Constitution. No doubt, such religious freedom is subject to health and subject to laws made for social welfare. However, in every case the power of regulation must be so exercised with the consciousness that the subject of regulation is the fundamental right of religion, and so as not to unduly infringe the protection given by the Constitution. Further, in the exercise of the power to regulate, the authorities cannot sit in judgment over the professed views of the adherents of the religion and to determine whether the practice is warranted by the religion or not. That is not their function. The Police Commissioner answers the charge of discrimination by stating that "activities of Ananda Margis cannot come within the scope of religious functions or practices as compared to well-established practices in festivals of Muslims and Sikhs". It is not for the Police Commissioner to give his disapproval to a practice of a particular sect which is in his opinion not well established. To allow any authority to judge the truth or falsity of a religious belief or practice is to destroy the guarantee of religious freedom in the Constitution. (Paras 57, 62, 60 and 59). Commr. of Police v. Acharya Jagadishwarananda Avadhuta, (2004) 12 SCC 770: AIR 2004 SC 2984.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu[1], Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan[2] and G.P. Mathur[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2004]

[536] — S. 144 — Regulation of secular activities associated with religious practices — Scope of power of — Secular activities associated with religious practices — Held (per Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, J.), State has got ample powers to regulate the same — Constitution of India — Arts. 25 and 26 (Para 88). Commr. of Police v. Acharya Jagadishwarananda Avadhuta, (2004) 12 SCC 770: AIR 2004 SC 2984.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu[1], Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan[2] and G.P. Mathur[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2004]

[537] — S. 144 — Tandava dance in processions or at public places by Ananda Margis carrying lethal weapons and human skulls, held, not essential religious rite and not 'matters of religion' — Hence, order under S. 144, CrPC prohibiting such processions in the interest of 'public order' and 'morality', not open to challenge under Art. 32 — Constitution of India — Arts. 25, 26 & 32

Courts have the power to determine whether a particular rite or observance is regarded as essential by the tenets of a particular religion.

Performance of Tandava dance in procession in the public streets or in gatherings in public places is not an essential religious rite of the followers of the Ananda Marga. Ananda Marga as a religious order is of recent origin and Tandava dance as a part of religious rites of that order is still more recent. Even conceding that Tandava dance has been prescribed as a religious rite for every follower of the Ananda Marga it does not follow as a necessary corollary that Tandava dance to be performed in the public is a matter of religious rite.

The impugned order under S. 144 of the Code did not ban processions or gatherings at public places even by Ananda Margis. The prohibition was with reference to the carrying of daggers, trishuls and skulls. Even performance of Tandava dance in public places, which is not an essential part of religious rites to be observed by Ananda Margis, without these, has not been prohibited.

Therefore, the claim that the petitioner has a fundamental right within the meaning of Art. 25 or 26 to perform Tandava dance in public streets and public places has to be rejected. In view of this finding it is no more necessary to consider whether the prohibitory order was justified in the interest of public order as provided in Art. 25. Acharya Jagdishwaranand Avadhuta v. Commr. of Police, (1983) 4 SCC 522: 1984 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1984 SC 51.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, A.N. Sen and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-1983]

See also Commr. of Police v. Acharya Jagadishwarananda Avadhuta, (2004) 12 SCC 770

[538] — S. 144 — Refusal of permission for performance of religious practice of particular sect in public (Tandava dance of Ananda Margis) — Reason justifying such refusal — Reference to order of Court containing prohibition — Reference to public order or morality — Held (per Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, J.), reason justifying refusal of permission should have appeared in the order refusing permission itself — Only reason given was Supreme Court's order, though said Court had never directed the same — Moreover, the given reason could not be modified or supplemented by way of an affidavit in legal proceedings

Ananda Margis cannot be deprived of their right to practise their religion in the manner prescribed by their religious preceptor, except on the grounds of public order, morality and health. The authorities concerned can step in and take preventive measures in the interest of maintenance of law and order if such religious processions disturb law and order, are not peaceful or offend the religious sentiments of other people, who equally enjoy the fundamental right to exercise their religious freedom. It is not the case of the appellants that the permission for the performance of Tandava dance in public procession has been forbidden on the ground of health. The permission has been refused on the ground of public order and morality. However, in the orders by which the permission had been refused, the Police Authorities have refused permission in terms of the order of the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court had never directed the said authorities not to accede to the performance of the Tandava dance in public procession. It was, therefore, wrong for the State authorities to refuse permission purportedly in terms of the Supreme Court's orders. A close scrutiny of the order refusing permission shows that it does not contain any reference to public order or morality. However, the appellants, at the time of hearing of this appeal, tried to improve their case by affidavits which cannot at all be permitted. The reason justifying refusal of permission should have appeared in the order refusing permission itself.

The only reason given was the Supreme Court's order. These reasons cannot now be modified or supplemented by way of an affidavit in the proceedings. (Paras 46, 84 and 88). Commr. of Police v. Acharya Jagadishwarananda Avadhuta, (2004) 12 SCC 770: AIR 2004 SC 2984.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu[1], Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan[2] and G.P. Mathur[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2004]

[539] — S. 144 — Order passed by court under S. 144 ceasing to be operative e.g. by efflux of time — Held, High Court not justified in dealing with the reference and pronouncing its views on such order as also giving its findings on rights, title, property etc. merely on ground of avoiding future complications. Mohd. Ibrahim v. City Magistrate, Varanasi, (1983) 2 SCC 153: 1983 SCC (Cri) 365.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.N. Ray, C.J. and M.H. Beg and Jaswant Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-1976]

[540] — Ss. 144(1) and (2) — Public meeting likely to disturb public peace, tranquillity and orderliness — Duty of administration — Held, administration has a duty, while permitting such a meeting, to find out who the speakers and participants are, taking into account their past record and antecedents, on basis whereof, prohibitory orders may be passed — Lengthy consideration of pros and cons and prior service of notice to persons concerned may be waived in interests of swift and effective action

While permitting holding of a meeting organised by groups or an individual, which is likely to disturb public peace, tranquillity and orderliness, irrespective of the name, cover and methodology it may assume and adopt, the administration has a duty to find out who the speakers and participants are and also to take into account previous instances and the antecedents involving or concerning those persons. If they feel that the presence or participation of any person in the meeting or congregation would be objectionable, for some patent or latent reasons as well as the past track record of such happenings in other places involving such participants, necessary prohibitory orders can be passed. Quick decisions and swift as well as effective action necessitated in such cases may not justify or permit the authorities to give prior opportunity or consideration at length of the pros and cons. The imminent need to intervene instantly, having regard to the sensitivity and perniciously perilous consequences it may result in if not prevented forthwith, cannot be lost sight of. (Para 7). State of Karnataka v. Praveen Bhai Thogadia (Dr.), (2004) 4 SCC 684: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1387: AIR 2004 SC 2081: (2004) 2 KLT 342: 2004 Cri LJ 1825.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2004]

Madhu Limaye v. Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Monghyr, (1970) 3 SCC 746, relied on

Jagrupa Kumari v. Chotey Narain Singh, (1936) 37 Cri LJ 95 (Pat), approved

— S. 144(2) See Ss. 144(1) and (2)

— S. 145 See also S. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 985 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 145 See Ss. 146 and 145

See also Ss. 482, 144 and 145

[541] — Ss. 145 and 146 — Nature and scope of — Manner for disposal of proceedings indicated

In substance and in effect a proceeding under S. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code is not for the purpose of evicting any person from any land but is primarily concerned with the prevention of the breach of peace by declaring the person found in possession to be entitled to remain in possession until evicted therefrom in due course of law. Section 145(6)(a) treats the party dispossessed within the period provided for in the proviso to sub-section (4) as being in possession of the disputed property on the date of the order under sub-section (1). Restoration of possession to the party wrongfully dispossessed attracting the proviso to sub-section (4) is in substance and in effect, putting back the party in possession for deciding his possession on the date of the preliminary order made under sub-section (1). Although the party who forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed the other party has to be factually and physically evicted from the property, by a legal fiction it is only for the purpose of treating the latter party in possession on the date of the preliminary order.

Therefore, the proceeding in the present case did not abate and it has to be disposed of by Magistrate in accordance with the provisions of law contained in Ss. 145 and 146. The Magistrate, if he is able to declare the possession of either party on consideration of evidence adduced or to be adduced before him, he should do so. In that event, the other party will be forbidden from creating any disturbance of the possession of the party declared in possession. The Magistrate will then have to withdraw the attachment in accordance with the proviso to S. 146(1), because, as per his order declaring a party in possession there would be no longer any likelihood of breach of the peace. If, however, the Magistrate decides that none of the parties was in possession on the date of the order under S. 145(1) or if he is unable to satisfy himself as to which of them was in possession he need not lift the attachment until a competent court had determined the rights of the parties as provided in S. 146(1). Chandu Naik v. Sitaram B. Naik, (1978) 1 SCC 210: 1978 SCC (Cri) 100: AIR 1978 SC 333: 1978 Cri LJ 356: (1978) 2 SCR 353.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-1977]

[542] — S. 145 — Nature and effect of proceedings under — Proceedings under Ss. 192 to 195, Succession Act, 1925 (protection of property of deceased) — Nature and scope of — Held, are interlocutory and summary — An order under S. 194 can be passed only if the conditions embodied in S. 193 are fulfilled — Further held, like proceedings under S. 145 CrPC the said proceedings do not bar a regular suit — In such a summary proceedings there may be some, but not conclusive and detailed, consideration of genuineness of a Will — Succession Act, 1925 — Ss. 192 to 195, 208 and 209. Uma Devi Nambiar v. T.C. Sidhan, (2004) 2 SCC 321: AIR 2004 SC 1772: (2004) 2 KLT 75: (2004) 2 CHN 56.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2003]

Sharp v. Wakefield, 1891 AC 173: (1886-90) All ER Rep 651: 60 LJ MC 73: 64 LT 180 (HL); S.G. Jaisinghani v. Union of India, AIR 1967 SC 1427; Lee v. Bude Rly. Co., (1871) LR 6 CP 576: 24 LT 827; Morgan v. Morgan, (1869) LR 1 P&M 644, relied on

[543] — S. 145 — Dispute concerning house property, whether likely to cause breach of peace or simply a civil dispute in realty — Determination of — Relief — Suit already filed by sons and daughters against their father Respondent 2 for permanent preventive injunction restraining defendant-Respondent 2 (who claimed to have divorced his wife) from dispossessing the plaintiffs from the house in question and also restraining the defendant from entering into any dealing relating to the property — Respondent 2 initiating proceedings under S. 145 complaining of apprehension of breach of peace occasioned by dispute as to possession over the house property — Held, a civil dispute, pure and simple, has been given colour of a criminal case — Proceedings under S. 145 quashed — Parties granted liberty to approach the civil court for interim relief, which may exercise its powers under Ss. 94 and 151 CPC and grant appropriate ad interim relief without being embarrassed by the limited scope of the suit which was for preventive injunction — CPC, 1908 — Ss. 94 and 151

The house property, which is the subject-matter of these criminal proceedings is also the subject-matter of the civil suit pending in the civil court. The question as to possession over the property or entitlement to possession would be determined by the civil court. The criminal proceedings have remained pending for about a decade. There is no propriety behind allowing these proceedings to continue in view of the parties having already approached the civil court. Whichever way proceedings under Section 145 CrPC may terminate, the order of the criminal court would always be subject to decision by the civil court. Inasmuch as the parties are already before the civil court, it is proper to let the civil suit be decided and therein appropriate interim order be passed taking care of the grievances of the parties by making such arrangement as may remain in operation during the hearing of the civil suit. (Para 4)

Therefore, the criminal proceedings initiated under Section 145 CrPC are directed to be quashed. The parties are allowed liberty of approaching the civil court and of filing any application for interim relief therein although the suit is only for issuance of permanent injunction. The civil court would be the most appropriate forum to take care of the grievances of the parties and pass such interim order as would reasonably protect the interests of both the parties. The civil court may issue an ad interim injunction, may appoint a Commissioner or Receiver or may make any other interim arrangement as to possession or user of the property which is the subject-matter of proceedings in the civil court exercising the power conferred on it by Sections 94 and 151 of the CPC. Looking to the relationship of the parties, the civil court shall feel free to make such ad interim order as it deems fit consistently with the facts and circumstances of the case without feeling embarrassed by the limited scope of the suit which is a suit for permanent injunction and without regard to the fact whether the application for that purpose is moved by the plaintiffs or the defendant. Such an application as and when made, shall be heard and decided expeditiously. (Paras 5, 7 to 9). Mahar Jahan v. State of Delhi, (2004) 13 SCC 421.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2004]

Distinguished in P. Swaroopa Rani v. M. Hari Narayana, (2008) 5 SCC 765*

[544] — Ss. 145 and 144 — Joint family property — Dispute between co-sharers in relation to their respective shares — Sale of certain share by some co-sharers to third party — Threat to other co-sharers regarding their dispossession at the hands of vendor co-sharers or third party — Remedy available — Maintainability of proceedings under Ss. 144 and 145 CrPC — CPC, 1908, S. 9 and Or. 39 Rr. 1 & 2 — Specific Relief Act, 1963, Ss. 5, 6, 37 & 38

One S had five sons i.e. G, N, B, R and H. Appellants 1 and 2 were grandsons of G. Legal proceedings were initiated by son of H i.e. L claiming partition of his 1/3rd share in the suit property. The said suit was decreed by the Additional Sub-Divisional Officer. However, aggrieved thereby L challenged that decision in an appeal before the Commissioner. Aggrieved by the order of the Commissioner, son of R filed an appeal before the Board of Revenue, which set aside the order passed by the Commissioner and affirmed the order of the Additional Sub-Divisional Officer. Aggrieved thereby, L preferred a writ petition before the High Court wherein Appellants 1 and 2 were not impleaded. The High Court, while issuing notice, stayed the operation of the order passed by the Board of Revenue.

Thereafter, a sale deed was executed by Appellants 1 and 2 in favour of Appellants 3 and 4 stating therein that they had one-third share in the joint property although, according to the respondent co-sharer, they were not entitled therefor. Subsequent thereto, the respondent co-sharer filed a suit for cancellation of the said deed. He also lodged an FIR against the appellants.

The appellants filed an application under Section 482 CrPC for quashing of FIR. The High Court, while dismissing the said application, directed the investigating officer to conclude the investigation within three months. After conclusion of the investigation, a charge-sheet was submitted before the Chief Judicial Magistrate concerned. The said Magistrate took cognizance of the offence. Questioning the legality of the said order, the appellants filed another application under Section 482 CrPC, which by reason of the impugned judgment had been dismissed. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It is now well settled that the High Court ordinarily would exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC if the allegations made in the first information report, even if given face value and taken to be correct in their entirety, do not make out any offence. When the allegations made in the first information report or the evidences collected during investigation do not satisfy the ingredients of an offence, the superior courts would not encourage harassment of a person in a criminal court for nothing. (Para 24)

A distinction must be made between a civil wrong and a criminal wrong. When dispute between the parties constitute only a civil wrong and not a criminal wrong, the courts would not permit a person to be harassed although no case for taking cognizance of the offence has been made out. (Para 27)

The fact that the appellants are co-sharers is not in dispute. The dispute between the parties is confined to the extent of their respective shares. It must be determined only in a civil suit. (Para 11)

If Appellants 1 and 2 had executed a deed of sale in favour of a third party stating that they have one-third share in the entire properties, the same would not be binding on the respondent complainant. If any cause of action arose by reason of a threat of dispossession at the hands of the co-sharer or at the hands of the third party, as was contended, recourse to legal action could always be taken. Even for that purpose, a proceeding under Sections 144 and 145 CrPC would be maintainable. The decision of a criminal court in a case of this nature would not be binding on the civil court. (Paras 11). Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; Kamaladevi Agarwal v. State of W.B., (2002) 1 SCC 555: 2002 SCC (Cri) 200; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 332, considered

Shanti Kumar Panda v. Shakuntala Devi, (2004) 1 SCC 438: 2004 SCC (Cri) 320, relied on [545] — S. 145 — Civil court passing injunction against order of eviction passed under S. 145 CrPC clarifying that it was against respondent from obtaining possession and not against Executive Magistrate — Legality — Held, even where a court or a statutory authority may not be subjected to an order of injunction, a party can be injuncted from proceeding in the matter — CPC, 1908, Or. 39 Rr. 1 and 2. M.P. Peter v. State of Kerala, (2009) 12 SCC 785: (2009) 2 KLT 698.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-5-2009]

[546] — S. 145 — Appellant against whom order of eviction passed (but also stayed by higher courts) raising construction over suit land — Remedies open to the other party, stated — Such remedies not availed by Respondent — Effect — Eviction order under S. 145 CrPC against appellant stayed by High Court for six months (not interfered with by Supreme Court) — Appellant in meantime constructing house on suit premises and residing there with his family — Appellant filing title suit in civil court and applying for injunction against dispossession — Trial court not allowing injunction but first appellate court directing status quo — Sustainability — On facts, held, parties should continue to maintain status quo till decision of civil court, subject to specified terms and conditions — CPC, 1908, Or. 39 Rr. 1 and 2 — Specific Relief Act, 1963, Ss. 34, 5 and 6

In certain Section 145 CrPC proceedings, by an order dated 9-10-1997, the Executive Magistrate directed the appellant to restore possession of the suit property to Respondent 3. In a revision filed thereagainst, the High Court maintained the Executive Magistrate's order but stayed its operation for six months. The appellant thereafter, filed a title suit in the Munsiff Court wherein his interim application seeking prohibitory injunction against dispossession was dismissed. An appeal preferred thereagainst was allowed by the first appellate court clarifying that status quo should be maintained and that the order was not against the Executive Magistrate but only against the respondent.

On or about 3-4-2008, the Executive Magistrate directed the appellant to hand over possession of the suit property to Respondent 3 within three days of the receipt of the said notice. The appellant's criminal miscellaneous petition thereagainst was dismissed by reason of the impugned order of the High Court. The appellant was before the Supreme Court thereagainst.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The parties should continue to maintain status quo till the decision of the civil court subject to specified conditions. The appellant should not transfer, alienate or create any third-party interest in the property. The very fact that a triable issue has been raised by the appellant, for the purpose of grant of injunction, was not noticed. It is not denied or disputed that the appellant constructed a house and is in possession of a house and has been residing therein with his family. It would not be practicable to dispossess the appellant upon demolishing the structure. Both balance of convenience as also irreparable injury lie in favour of the appellant-plaintiff. Apart from the fact that the civil court will have primacy over the decision of a criminal court even for the purpose of grant of injunction, it is a case where an exceptional case has been made out. Except at the first instance, the matter has not been considered on merit. The effect of the order refusing to grant injunction has not been considered by the courts below. (Paras 26 to 28, 12 and 20)

The proceeding under Section 145 CrPC indisputably remained pending for a long time. Admittedly during pendency of Section 145 CrPC proceedings, the appellant had constructed a house. Prima facie, when Respondent 3 stood thereby, he could have filed an application for attachment before the Magistrate. He could have also filed an application for appointment of a Receiver. (Paras 9 and 11)

It stands admitted that Respondent 3 is not entitled to the superstructure on the land in the suit. Hence, with a view to give full effect to the order passed by the Executive Magistrate, which provides for handing over of possession only on the land in question, the superstructure would be required to be demolished. Respondent 3 has been kept out of possession for a long time. In a case of this nature, interest of justice would have been subserved if an order of injunction would have been passed in favour of the appellant, subject to such terms as the court might have thought fit and proper to impose. (Paras 12, 13 and 20). M.P. Peter v. State of Kerala, (2009) 12 SCC 785: (2009) 2 KLT 698.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-5-2009]

Vishnu Dutt Sharma v. Daya Sapra, (2009) 13 SCC 729; Seth Ramdayal Jat v. Laxmi Prasad, (2009) 11 SCC 545, relied on

[547] — S. 145 — Eviction on the basis of title conflicting with civil courts status quo order — Effect — Issues of title and possession — Civil court vis-à-vis criminal court — Evidentiary value and prevailing order — Executive Magistrate's order under S. 145 CrPC regarding issues of title and possession, held, is not binding on civil court — It is rather subject to ultimate decision of suit filed in civil court — CPC, 1908, Or. 39 Rr. 1 and 2 — Specific Relief Act, 1963, Ss. 34, 5 and 6

An order passed by an Executive Magistrate in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 145 CrPC is subject to the ultimate decision of the suit filed in the civil court. Executive Magistrate's decision on possession of the parties may have some evidentiary value but the same is not binding on a civil court. Despite an order passed under Section 145 CrPC, the civil court may in a suit pass an order of injunction. The question as to whether the constructions were raised only during pendency of the said proceeding would have to be considered in the suit by the civil court. In a proceeding under Section 145 CrPC, the Executive Magistrate is not entitled to go into a disputed, and in particular, complicated questions of title. (Paras 9 to 11)

If an order of injunction was passed against the respondent-defendant from obtaining possession, the question of Executive Magistrate's executing his own order dated 9-10-1997 would not arise. A clarification was sought for and by an order dated 11-4-2008, it was stated that the order was not against the Executive Magistrate but only against Respondent 3. (Paras 17 and 15)

Even where a court or a statutory authority may not be subjected to an order of injunction, a party can be injuncted from proceeding in the matter. In the suit, the Executive Magistrate was not a party. No order of injunction could have been passed against him but then that would not mean that the civil court could not pass an order of injunction against the respondent-defendant. (Paras 17 and 18). M.P. Peter v. State of Kerala, (2009) 12 SCC 785: (2009) 2 KLT 698.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-5-2009]

Manohar Lal Chopra v. Rai Bahadur Rao Raja Seth Hiralal, (2009) 11 SCC 545, relied on

[548] — S. 145 — Disputes as to immovable property — Applicability of Limitation Act, 1963 — Held, provisions of the Limitation Act are applicable to proceedings under S. 145 CrPC — Hence, application for possession under S. 145(6) CrPC has to be made within 3 years from the date of the order under S. 145(4) CrPC in view of Art. 137 of the Limitation Act — High Court rightly applied Art. 137 of Limitation Act to the facts of the case — Limitation Act, 1963, Art. 137

Article 137 of the Limitation Act is a residuary provision. Since no period of limitation is prescribed for making an application for implementation of the order passed under Section 145(4) CrPC, the same ought to have been filed within a period of three years from the date of the order. In the present case, while the final order in the proceedings under Section 145 CrPC was passed on 7-10-1994, the application for implementation of the same was made on 12-11-1997, which was beyond the period of limitation prescribed under the provisions of Article 137 of the Limitation Act. An application under Section 145(6) cannot be made as and when the person dispossessed chooses to do so. It is for such purpose that Article 137 has been pressed into service since no limitation has been prescribed in Section 145 itself to indicate as to within which time a party found to be entitled to possession can be put back in possession. In the present case, there is also no explanation forthcoming as to the cause of such delay. The bar under Article 137 of the Limitation Act cannot be avoided and the application made by the appellants for being restored to possession in terms of a declaration made more than three years before the making of the application has to be rejected. (Paras 28, 34 and 35)

An application under Section 145(6) cannot be made as and when the person dispossessed chooses to do so. It is for such purpose that Article 137 has been pressed into service since no limitation has been prescribed in Section 145 itself to indicate as to within which time a party found to be entitled to possession can be put back in possession. In the present case there is also no explanation forthcoming as to the cause of such delay. The bar under Article 137 of the Limitation Act cannot be avoided and the application made by the appellants for being restored to possession in terms of a declaration made more than three years before the making of the application has to be rejected. Shakuntala Devi v. Chamru Mahto, (2009) 3 SCC 310.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2009]

Khudiram Mandal v. Jitendra Nath, AIR 1952 Cal 713, impliedly approved

[549] — S. 145 — Disputes as to immovable property under — Provisions of Specific Relief Act, 1963, whether applicable — Held, the 1963 Act has no application to proceedings under S. 145 CrPC — On facts, High Court while setting aside the order passed by Sessions Judge under S. 145 for restoration of dispossessed land holding that appellants should have filed application within 6 months as provided under S. 6 of Specific Relief Act — Sustainability — Held, High Court erred in applying the provisions of the 1963 Act to proceedings under S. 145 CrPC — Specific Relief Act, 1963, Ss. 4 and 6

The provisions of the Specific Relief Act have been misapplied by the High Court in holding that the appellants should have come for an order under Section 145(6) CrPC within six months from the date of dispossession as provided in Section 6 of the 1963 Act, as the Specific Relief Act, 1963 has no application to a proceeding under Section 145 CrPC. (Para 27). Shakuntala Devi v. Chamru Mahto, (2009) 3 SCC 310.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2009]

[550] — S. 145 — Disputed properties attached by the Executive Magistrate and parties directed to go to the civil court and establish their rights — Magistrate justified in passing the order even though suit for injunction had been filed by the appellant — Subsequently civil suit dismissed and appeal against dismissal of suit filed by the respondent in the court of Senior Sub-Judge — Supreme Court would not decide the question as to who was in possession of the disputed property — However, respondent permitted to continue to utilise the machinery in disputed property and run the factory during pendency of appeal — Advocate Commissioner appointed to make inspection of the sealed portion of the property, assess the condition of the machinery and its value and submit his report to the Senior Sub-Judge — CPC, 1908, Or. 39. Badri Prakash Soni v. Prahalad Soni, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 469.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and N. Venkatachala, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-1994]

[551] — S. 145 — Initiation of a parallel proceeding under during pendency of a civil litigation involving the question of possession of the same property, not justified

When a civil litigation is pending for the same property wherein the question of possession is involved and the parties are in a position to approach the civil court for interim orders such as injunction or appointment of receiver for adequate protection of the property during pendency of the dispute, there is no justification for initiating a parallel criminal proceeding under S. 145, CrPC. Multiplicity of litigation is not in the interest of the parties nor should public time be allowed to be wasted over meaningless litigation. Therefore, the parallel proceeding should not continue and the order of the Magistrate directing initiation of such a proceeding under S. 145, CrPC must be quashed. Ram Sumer Puri Mahant v. State of U.P., (1985) 1 SCC 427: 1985 SCC (Cri) 98: AIR 1985 SC 472: 1985 Cri LJ 752.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1984]

[552] — S. 145 — Jurisdiction of Magistrate under S. 145 during pendency of civil suit — Suit for declaration relating to property in question pending before civil court — Interim injunction granted in civil suit — Despite the applicant before the Magistrate having not been arrayed as party-defendant in civil suit, held, any appropriate relief in the matter concerned could be obtained through the civil court itself and the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to entertain the petition under S. 145 — CPC, 1908 — S. 92 — Pendency of suit under — Jurisdiction of Magistrate to entertain petition under S. 145 CrPC. Mahant Ram Saran Dass v. Harish Mohan, (2001) 10 SCC 758.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-2000]

[553] — Ss. 145 and 144 — Decision of criminal court in proceeding under — Not binding on civil court — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 43

One S had five sons i.e. G, N, B, R and H. Appellants 1 and 2 were grandsons of G. Legal proceedings were initiated by son of H i.e. L claiming partition of his 1/3rd share in the suit property. The said suit was decreed by the Additional Sub-Divisional Officer. However, aggrieved thereby L challenged that decision in an appeal before the Commissioner. Aggrieved by the order of the Commissioner, son of R filed an appeal before the Board of Revenue, which set aside the order passed by the Commissioner and affirmed the order of the Additional Sub-Divisional Officer. Aggrieved thereby, L preferred a writ petition before the High Court wherein Appellants 1 and 2 were not impleaded. The High Court, while issuing notice, stayed the operation of the order passed by the Board of Revenue.

Thereafter, a sale deed was executed by Appellants 1 and 2 in favour of Appellants 3 and 4 stating therein that they had one-third share in the joint property although, according to the respondent co-sharer, they were not entitled therefor. Subsequent thereto, the respondent co-sharer filed a suit for cancellation of the said deed. He also lodged an FIR against the appellants.

The appellants filed an application under Section 482 CrPC for quashing of FIR. The High Court, while dismissing the said application, directed the investigating officer to conclude the investigation within three months. After conclusion of the investigation, a charge-sheet was submitted before the Chief Judicial Magistrate concerned. The said Magistrate took cognizance of the offence. Questioning the legality of the said order, the appellants filed another application under Section 482 CrPC, which by reason of the impugned judgment had been dismissed. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It is now well settled that the High Court ordinarily would exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC if the allegations made in the first information report, even if given face value and taken to be correct in their entirety, do not make out any offence. When the allegations made in the first information report or the evidences collected during investigation do not satisfy the ingredients of an offence, the superior courts would not encourage harassment of a person in a criminal court for nothing. (Para 24)

A distinction must be made between a civil wrong and a criminal wrong. When dispute between the parties constitute only a civil wrong and not a criminal wrong, the courts would not permit a person to be harassed although no case for taking cognizance of the offence has been made out. (Para 27)

The fact that the appellants are co-sharers is not in dispute. The dispute between the parties is confined to the extent of their respective shares. It must be determined only in a civil suit. (Para 11)

If Appellants 1 and 2 had executed a deed of sale in favour of a third party stating that they have one-third share in the entire properties, the same would not be binding on the respondent complainant. If any cause of action arose by reason of a threat of dispossession at the hands of the co-sharer or at the hands of the third party, as was contended, recourse to legal action could always be taken. Even for that purpose, a proceeding under Sections 144 and 145 CrPC would be maintainable. The decision of a criminal court in a case of this nature would not be binding on the civil court. (Paras 11). Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; Kamaladevi Agarwal v. State of W.B., (2002) 1 SCC 555: 2002 SCC (Cri) 200; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 332, considered

Shanti Kumar Panda v. Shakuntala Devi, (2004) 1 SCC 438: 2004 SCC (Cri) 320, relied on

[554] — S. 145 — Pendency of proceedings and issuance of order under

Per Mukherji, J.

The pendency of the proceedings under S. 145 of Code of Criminal Procedure and order, if any, passed thereon does not in any way affect the title of the parties to the disputed premises though it reflects the factum of possession. Sadhuram Bansal v. Pulin Behari Sarkar, (1984) 3 SCC 410: AIR 1984 SC 1471.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali[1], A. Varadarajan[2] and Sabyasachi Mukharji[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1984]

[555] — S. 145 — Proceedings under, during pendency of civil suit in respect of the same property when should not be allowed to continue — Pursuant to preliminary order passed by Magistrate under S. 145(1), appellant filing application for dropping the proceedings under S. 145 on ground that a civil suit in respect of the same property was pending wherein order directing maintenance of status quo had already been passed — But respondent taking the stand that the property which formed the subject-matter of the civil suit was different from the property involved in proceedings under S. 145 — Appellant's application dismissed by SDM and revision and review preferred by him also dismissed — When proceedings under S. 145 resumed respondent in his statement admitting that civil suit was for possession and stay and the same was in respect of the same property in respect of which proceedings under S. 145 were adopted — Accordingly appellant filing application before the SDM for discontinuing/dropping the proceedings under S. 145 in view of pendency of civil proceedings in which order for maintenance of status quo had already been passed — Held, SDM was justified in dropping the proceedings under S. 145 — Earlier order of SDM dismissing the appellant's application for dropping the proceedings under S. 145 was an interim order, which even if confirmed by orders of higher courts in revision and review, would not become final, more so when the earlier orders were made on the basis that the civil suit related to different property and was between different parties

In respect of the property concerned, the respondent having dispute with two persons SP and SK, filed a suit on 10-10-1990 for declaration of title, possession and injunction and on the same day an application was made on which an order for maintenance of status quo was passed by the Court. According to the appellant, on that very day SP and SK had executed a sale deed in favour of the appellant's mother and possession of the property was delivered to her. In the suit filed by the respondent, appellant's mother was impleaded as party defendant. While the suit was pending trial, on the basis of a police report that there was a dispute regarding possession of land likely to cause a breach of peace within his jurisdiction and for initiating proceedings under Section 145 CrPC, the SDM passed a preliminary order under Section 145(1). Pursuant to this preliminary order the appellant's mother appeared and filed a written statement stating that there was no dispute likely to cause breach of peace regarding possession of the said property. It was pointed out that the civil suit was pending in the court of civil jurisdiction and an order directing maintenance of status quo had already been passed. The 1st respondent also filed a written statement pursuant to the preliminary order claiming that the property which formed the subject-matter of the civil suit was different from the property in respect of which proceedings under Section 145 CrPC had been adopted. The appellant thereafter made an application that the proceedings under Section 145 be dropped as a civil suit in respect of the same property was pending. That application was rejected by the SDM. A criminal revision filed by the appellant was dismissed by the Addl. Sessions Judge and review application was also dismissed on 11-5-1993. Thereafter proceedings under Section 145 were resumed and statement of the parties were recorded. In the course of her statement the respondent admitted that the land in respect of which the proceedings under Section 145 was adopted were part of the properties in respect of which the civil suit for possession and stay had been filed. Thereupon an application was made by the appellant that the proceedings under Section 145 may be discontinued/dropped in view of the pending civil suit in which an order of maintenance of status quo had already been passed. By an order, the SDM dropped the proceedings under Section 145 by concluding that there was no propriety in continuing such proceedings when the civil court was in seisin of the matter and an order for maintaining status quo had already been passed. A criminal revision filed by the respondent against that order was allowed by the High Court on the ground that earlier an application for dropping the proceedings under Section 145 had been made and dismissed and that the revision against that order had also been dismissed by the Sessions Court by the order dated 11-5-1993 which had become final between the parties and was thus binding and that in view of that order the trial court could not have accepted the contention and should have rejected the application for dropping the proceedings. It was held that in view of that order the only option left to the Magistrate was to decide the proceedings under Section 145 between the parties on merit. It is this order which was assailed in this appeal. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court has committed an error in setting aside the order of the Magistrate on the basis that the earlier order was final and binding. The earlier orders were interim orders. They were passed before any evidence or statements had been recorded. Those orders were passed only on the basis of the contentions of the parties. It is settled law that interim orders, even though they may have been confirmed by the higher courts, never bind and do not prevent passing of contrary order at the stage of final hearing. Moreover, the earlier orders were passed on the footing that the civil proceedings related to different properties and were between different parties. Subsequently, when it became clear that the civil proceedings were in respect of the same properties and between the same parties even the factual position had changed. For that reason also the earlier order would not be binding. (Para 11)

The SDM was right in discontinuing the proceedings under Section 145. It is not that in every case where a civil suit is filed, Section 145 proceedings would never lie. It is only in cases where civil suit is for possession or for declaration of title in respect of the same property and where reliefs regarding protection of the property concerned can be applied for and granted by the civil court that proceedings under Section 145 should not be allowed to continue. This is because the civil court is competent to decide the question of title as well as possession between the parties and the orders of the civil court would be binding on the Magistrate. (Paras 15 and 14)

It is not possible to accept the submission that the principles laid down in Ram Sumer case would only apply if the civil court has already adjudicated on the dispute regarding the property and given a finding. That case is laying down that multiplicity of litigation should be avoided as it is not in the interest of the parties and public time would be wasted over meaningless litigation. On this principle it has been held that when possession is being examined by the civil court and parties are in a position to approach the civil court for adequate protection of the property during the pendency of the dispute, the parallel proceedings i.e. Section 145 proceedings should not continue. (Para 13)

The High Court was not justified in passing strictures against the SDM and directing the District Magistrate to transfer the proceedings from the SDM. It is hoped that in future the High Court would not pass such strictures. Two views are always possible. Merely because the High Court takes a different view it is no ground for passing strictures against the lower court. (Para 16). Amresh Tiwari v. Lalta Prasad Dubey, (2000) 4 SCC 440: 2000 SCC (Cri) 806: AIR 2000 SC 1504: 2000 Cri LJ 2226: 2000 All LJ 1095.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, D.P. Mohapatra and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-4-2000]

Jhummamal v. State of M.P., (1988) 4 SCC 452: 1988 SCC (Cri) 974, distinguished and limited

Ram Sumer Puri Mahant v. State of U.P., (1985) 1 SCC 427: 1985 SCC (Cri) 98 explained

[556] — S. 145 — Order passed under — Validity of — No reasons given by Sub-Divisional Magistrate (SDM) for reaching the conclusion that the property was in possession of the respondent — That apart, the finding of actual possession of the respondent was with reference to the date of preliminary order which is not the relevant date that is contemplated by provisions of S. 145 — Hence, order of SDM not sustainable — Matter remitted to it for consideration afresh (Para 4). Shamim Alam v. Sajjid Hussain, (2005) 10 SCC 551.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2005]

[557] — Ss. 145, 146 and 397 & 401 — Magistrate's orders under Ss. 145(1) and 146(1) — Validity — Decision on title and right to possession of the property in dispute not germane for dealing with the proceedings under S. 145 — Sale of land by power of attorney-holder — Suits filed by both the owner and the purchaser of the land seeking permanent injunction against each other pending before civil court — Petition under S. 145 filed by the purchaser before Magistrate — Preliminary order filed by Magistrate under S. 145 and thereafter order under S. 146(1) passed attaching the land — Held on facts, High Court in revision was justified in setting aside the orders passed under Ss. 145(1) and 146(1) — But while doing so High Court in revision was not justified in going into question of title and right of possession of the land as if it was exercising appellate jurisdiction

The respondent, the owner of the land in dispute, gave a registered power of attorney in favour of his son-in-law K, who executed a sale deed transferring the land in favour of H. The respondent filed a suit seeking a decree of permanent injunction against K and H. The suit was dismissed as withdrawn by the trial court. Thereafter H transferred the land in favour of the appellant under a registered sale deed. On a petition filed by the respondent the order dismissing the suit as withdrawn was recalled and the suit was restored to file. The appellant thereupon filed a suit praying for a decree of permanent injunction against the respondent and on the same day, an order of ad interim injunction was passed in the suit. The appellant then filed a petition before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate seeking initiation of proceedings under Section 145 CrPC alleging that immediately after passing of the order of interim injunction, the respondent and his supporters forcibly dispossessed him (the appellant) and that in the circumstances there was an apprehension of breach of peace. About 3 years after filing of the said petition the Sub-Divisional Magistrate passed a preliminary order under Section 145(1) CrPC and after considering the application of the appellant under Section 146(1) CrPC, the land in dispute was attached and the local SDPO was given charge of the property. The respondent filed an application praying for recall/modification of the preliminary order passed under Section 145(1). That application was stated to be pending for consideration before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate. The respondent moved the High Court in revision by filing application under Section 397 read with Section 401 CrPC for setting aside the order passed by the Magistrate under Section 146(1) attaching the land in dispute. The High Court dealt with the developments in the case relating to the acquisition of title, the allegations of fraudulent transfers made by K and H and the circumstances in which the suit was dismissed as withdrawn. The High Court took the view that the orders under Section 145(1) as well as the proceedings under Section 146(1) were an abuse of the process of law and as such quashed the same. Disposing of the appeal,

Held :

In the context of the facts of this case, the order passed by the High Court setting aside the orders passed under Sections 145(1) and 146(1) CrPC is unassailable. (Para 7)

However, the High Court was in error in dealing with the revision petition as if it was exercising appellate jurisdiction. Keeping in view the limited scope of the proceeding under Section 145 CrPC the matters taken into consideration by the High Court in revision were not material for determination of the main issues in the case. The Court, while dealing with a proceeding under Section 145 CrPC, is mainly concerned with possession of the property in dispute on the date of the preliminary order and dispossession, if any, within two months prior to that date; the court is not required to decide either title to the property or right of possession of the same. The question for determination before the High Court in the present case was one relating to the validity or otherwise of the preliminary order passed by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate under Section 145(1) CrPC and sustainability of the order of attachment passed under Section 146(1) CrPC. For deciding the questions it was neither necessary nor relevant for the High Court to have considered the matters relating to title to and right of possession of the property. Further, both the parties in the case have filed suits seeking decree of permanent injunction against each other and in the suit filed by the appellant an order of interim injunction has been passed and an objection petition has been filed by Respondent 1. The suits and the interim order are pending further consideration before the civil court.

In these circumstances, while maintaining the order of the High Court quashing the preliminary order passed by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate under Section 145(1) and the order of attachment of the property under Section 146(1) CrPC, leave should be granted to the parties to approach the civil court for appropriate interim order and the civil court should deal with the application for interim order without being influenced by the observations made/findings recorded by the High Court in the impugned judgment. (Paras 8 and 9). Ranbir Singh v. Dalbir Singh, (2002) 3 SCC 700: 2002 SCC (Cri) 700: AIR 2002 SC 1500.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-3-2002]

[558] — Ss. 145 and 107 — In equity and justice also appellant having a stronger case — Hence appellant given relief (appellant directed to be placed in possession of the indicated portion of the house) — Constitution of India — Art. 136. Prakash Chand Sachdeva v. State, (1994) 1 SCC 471: 1994 SCC (Cri) 438: AIR 1994 SC 1436: 1994 Cri LJ 2117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-1993]

[559] — Ss. 145 and 107 — Applicability — When dispute involves question of possession and not title of a house by co-owner, which dispute is likely to cause breach of peace, Magistrate empowered to proceed under S. 145, notwithstanding pendency of civil suit for title — Proceedings under S. 145 cannot be dropped merely because of dropping of proceedings under S. 107 — Dispute between appellant-father and respondent-son regarding possession of ancestral house — Both being co-owners, their right and title to the property not in dispute — But when son preventing father from entering into the house, father approaching criminal court under Ss. 107 and 145 apart from filing a civil suit for injunction — Proceedings under S. 107 dropped and on that basis proceedings under S. 145 also dropped — Held, High Court erred in dropping the proceedings under S. 145 taking the view that dropping of proceedings indicated absence of apprehension of breach of peace — In equity and justice also appellant having a stronger case, appellant directed to be placed in possession of the indicated portion of the house — Constitution of India — Article 136

A suit or remedy in civil court for possession and injunction based on title normally prevents a person from invoking jurisdiction of the criminal court. But this normal rule cannot apply where there is no dispute about title. When claim or title are not in dispute and the parties on their own showing are co-owners and there is no partition one cannot be permitted to act forcibly and unlawfully and ask the other to act in accordance with law. Where the dispute is not on the right to possession but on the question of possession the Magistrate is empowered to take cognisance under S. 145 CrPC.

The proceedings under S. 107 are for public peace and tranquillity whereas under S. 145 relate to disputes regarding possession between parties concerning any land or water or boundaries thereof. Therefore, dropping of proceedings under S. 107 could not furnish foundation for dropping the proceedings under S. 145. The proceedings under S. 107 were rightly dropped in the present case as the nature of these proceedings, 'are of preventive justice'. It is to be invoked when any person is likely to commit a breach of peace or disturb public tranquillity.

In equity and justice the appellant has still stronger case. On own showing of the respondent the property is ancestral. The behaviour of the son is cruel and unjust. The counsel for the respondent during arguments stated that the son was willing to keep his father with him. In the light of the averments made by the son in the affidavit filed in this Court and the alleged misbehaviour by him and his family members this appears to be only an excuse for preventing the father from living in peace in the end of his life.

In the circumstances the order passed by the High Court and the Magistrate dismissing the application filed under S. 145 CrPC are set aside and it is directed that the appellant be placed in possession of the indicated portion of the house forthwith. Prakash Chand Sachdeva v. State, (1994) 1 SCC 471: 1994 SCC (Cri) 438: AIR 1994 SC 1436: 1994 Cri LJ 2117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-1993]

Ram Sumer Puri Mahant v. State of U.P., (1985) 1 SCC 427: 1985 SCC (Cri) 98: AIR 1985 SC 472, distinguished [560] — Ss. 145 and 146 — Direction by the High Court to the Survey Department to demarcate the land, localise the same with the assistance of the Inspector of the Survey and Land Records and then the Magistrate to take action in pursuant to the report thereof according to law — No interference by the Supreme Court called for. C.V. Raja Rao v. Mirza Basheer Baig, (1996) 8 SCC 740.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-1996]

[561] — Ss. 145 and 146 — Proceedings against order passed by executive Magistrate under — Held, competent court can pass interim order in the nature of injunction or arrangement, inconsistent with the order of the Magistrate, in suit or proceedings initiated by the party who was unsuccessful before the Magistrate — At the stage of passing an interlocutory order court should keep in mind existence of a prima facie case, balance of convenience and irreparable injury and should have regard to the materials in the shape of affidavits, documents, pleadings and order of the Executive Magistrate — However, such inconsistent interim order should be passed only after recording reasons and only when a strong prima facie case is made out showing the findings of the Magistrate to be without jurisdiction or palpably wrong or self-inconsistent — CPC, 1908, Or. 39 Rr. 1, 2

The appellant lodged a complaint with the police whereupon the police filed a report before SDM who made a preliminary order under Section 145(1) CrPC recording his satisfaction about existence of a dispute between the appellant and one K concerning the shop which was likely to cause breach of peace and requiring the parties to attend his court. The SDM also passed an order under Section 146(1) CrPC on the same day directing the shop to be attached. K appeared and stated that he had nothing to do with the shop and that the owner of the property was the respondent who was also in possession thereof. The respondent on becoming aware of the proceedings moved an application before the SDM praying that she being in peaceful possession of the shop and interested in the subject matter of the dispute, be impleaded as a party to the proceedings and be given an opportunity of being heard. But the SDM without giving her any opportunity to join in the proceedings and to file her own claims as to possession of the shop, finally disposed of the proceedings holding that the appellant was in possession over the disputed shop on the date of the passing of the preliminary order as also in the two months prior thereto. Having made that declaration the SDM directed that until the rights were determined by the competent court, the shop shall be released in favour of the appellant. The revision petitions filed by the respondent and K against the order of the SDM were dismissed.

The respondent then filed a civil suit based on title, seeking a permanent preventive injunction against the appellant and also an ad interim preventive injunction so as to protect possession over the shop. The Civil Judge observed that the proceedings under Sections 145/146 CrPC had proceeded in the absence of the respondent who was not even allowed an opportunity of being heard though she was the real person claiming possession and also title over the shop. The Civil Judge further observed that anti social elements had conspired to grab the shop by forcibly ejecting the respondent in which the administration had fully helped them. Therefore, the Civil Judge allowed the application filed by the respondent and directed the appellant to remain restrained from interfering with the possession of the respondent over the shop. The Civil Judge also directed a court officer to go to the site of the shop and after opening the locks to put the respondent in possession of the shop. However, in appeal the District Judge set aside the order of the Civil Judge, on ground that the proceedings under Section 145 CrPC having terminated in favour of the appellant the trial court was not justified in issuing the order of injunction unless and until the order of the SDM was superseded by a decree of the civil court and that no injunction can be granted when the disputed property is in custodia legis. The respondent preferred a petition under Article 227 of the Constitution. The High Court allowed the petition, set aside the order of the District Judge and restored the order passed by the Civil Judge. In the present appeal it was submitted on behalf of the appellant that an order of temporary injunction inconsistent with the order of the Magistrate under Sections 145/146 of the Code or superseding it cannot be passed by the civil court.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

In the present case, the trial court has felt strongly against the police action taken under Section 145(1) CrPC. The plaintiff, respondent herein was not allowed — in spite of her efforts — to participate in the proceedings under Section 145. The party proceeded against by the Executive Magistrate was not interested in contesting the proceedings. The first appellate court has not recorded any disagreement with the observations made by the Civil Judge but has proceeded on a different reasoning which reasoning has been found to be erroneous by the High Court. The High Court has agreed with the view taken by the Civil Judge. No case for interference with the order of the High Court is made out. (Para 24)

Possession is nine points in law. A dispute relating to any land etc. as defined in Section 145(2), CrPC having arisen, causing a likelihood of a breach of the peace, Section 145 authorizes the Executive Magistrate to take cognizance of the dispute and settle the same by holding an enquiry into possession as distinguished from right to possession or title. The proceedings under Sections 145/146 CrPC have been held to be quasi-civil, quasi-criminal in nature or an executive or police action. The purpose of the provisions is to provide a speedy and summary remedy so as to prevent a breach of the peace by submitting the dispute to the Executive Magistrate for resolution as between the parties disputing the question of possession over the property. (Para 10)

The party unsuccessful before the Magistrate may dispute the correctness of the finding arrived at by the Magistrate and is at liberty to show before the competent court that it had not dispossessed the successful party or that it is the unsuccessful party and not the successful party who was actually in possession and the finding to the contrary arrived at by the Magistrate was wholly or apparently erroneous and unsustainable in law. (Para 17)

A decision given under Section 145 CrPC has relevance and is admissible in evidence to show: (i) that there was a dispute relating to a particular property; (ii) that the dispute was between the particular parties; (iii) that such dispute led to the passing of a preliminary order under Section 145(1) or an attachment under Section 146(1), on the given date; and (iv) that the Magistrate found one of the parties to be in possession or fictional possession of the disputed property on the date of the preliminary order. The reasoning recorded by the Magistrate or other findings arrived at by him have no relevance and are not admissible in evidence before the competent court and the competent court is not bound by the findings arrived at by the Magistrate even on the question of possession though, as between the parties, the order of the Magistrate would be evidence of possession. The finding recorded by the Magistrate does not bind the court. In a civil action between different parties the finding of a criminal court cannot be treated as binding except to the extent of being evidence of the factum of a particular judgment having been delivered by the particular criminal court on a particular date. The competent court has jurisdiction and would be justified in arriving at a finding inconsistent with the one arrived at by the Executive Magistrate even on the question of possession. Sections 145 and 146 CrPC only provide for the order of the Executive Magistrate made under any of the two provisions being superseded by and giving way to the order or decree of a competent court. The effect of the Magistrate's order is that burden is thrown on the unsuccessful party to prove its possession or entitlement to possession before the competent court. (Paras 15 and 20)

At the stage of passing an interlocutory order such as on an application for the grant of ad interim injunction under Rule 1 or 2 of Order 39 CPC, the competent court shall have to form its opinion on the availability of a prima facie case, the balance of convenience and the irreparable injury — the three pillars on which rests the foundation of any order of injunction. At that stage material in the shape of affidavits, documents and pleadings is placed before the court for its consideration. The order of the Executive Magistrate may also be placed before it, who having held an enquiry, though summary in nature, has arrived at a finding on the question of possession which the Code intends to be sustained unless the court of competent jurisdiction by its judicial order supersedes the finding or the effect of such finding and till then all disturbances in possession of the successful party are intended by the Code to be forbidden. (Para 22)

The court will be loath to issue an order of interim injunction or to order an interim arrangement inconsistent with the one made by the Executive Magistrate. However, to say so is merely stating a rule of caution or restraint, on exercise of discretion by court, dictated by prudence and regard for the urgent/emergent executive orders made within jurisdiction by their makers; and certainly not a tab on the power of court. The court does have jurisdiction to make an interim order including an order of ad interim injunction inconsistent with the order of the Executive Magistrate. The jurisdiction is there but the same shall be exercised not as a rule but as an exception. Even at the stage of passing an ad interim order the party unsuccessful before the Executive Magistrate may on material placed before the court succeed in making out a strong prima facie case demonstrating the findings of the Executive Magistrate to be without jurisdiction, palpably wrong or self-inconsistent in which or the like cases the court may, after recording its reasons and satisfaction, make an order inconsistent with, or in departure from, the one made by the Executive Magistrate. The order of the court — final or interlocutory, would have the effect of declaring one of the parties entitled to possession and evicting therefrom the party successful before the Executive Magistrate within the meaning of Section 145(6), CrPC. (Paras 23 and 21). Shanti Kumar Panda v. Shakuntala Devi, (2004) 1 SCC 438: 2004 SCC (Cri) 320: AIR 2004 SC 115: 2004 Cri LJ 1249: 2003 All LJ 2839.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-2003]

Bhinka v. Charan Singh, AIR 1959 SC 960: 1959 Cri LJ 1223; Jhummamal v. State of M.P., (1988) 4 SCC 452: 1988 SCC (Cri) 974; Anil Behari Ghosh v. Latika Bala Dassi, AIR 1955 SC 566, relied on

(1996) 2 AWC 953 (All), affirmed

[562] — Ss. 145 and 146 — Order of executive Magistrate under — Confined only to the factum of possession of the property in dispute — Order is temporary in nature and is subject to determination of rights and title by competent court (Paras 10, 16, 15 and 23). Shanti Kumar Panda v. Shakuntala Devi, (2004) 1 SCC 438: 2004 SCC (Cri) 320: AIR 2004 SC 115: 2004 Cri LJ 1249: 2003 All LJ 2839.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-2003]

Bhinka v. Charan Singh, AIR 1959 SC 960: 1959 Cri LJ 1223; Jhummamal v. State of M.P., (1988) 4 SCC 452: 1988 SCC (Cri) 974; Anil Behari Ghosh v. Latika Bala Dassi, AIR 1955 SC 566, relied on

(1996) 2 AWC 953 (All), affirmed

[563] — Ss. 145 and 146 — Order of Magistrate under — Value of, before the competent court — At the stage of final adjudication by competent court, held, it has value only as a piece of evidence — Competent court is not bound by the findings arrived at by the Magistrate in proceedings under S. 145 — Order or decree passed by the competent court supersedes the order of Magistrate under Ss. 145/146

A decision by a criminal court does not bind the civil court while a decision by the civil court binds the criminal court. An order passed by the Executive Magistrate in proceedings under Sections 145/146 CrPC is an order by a criminal court and that too based on a summary enquiry. The order is entitled to respect and weight before the competent court at the interlocutory stage. At the stage of final adjudication of rights, which would be on the evidence adduced before the court, the order of the Magistrate is only one out of several pieces of evidence. (Para 23). Shanti Kumar Panda v. Shakuntala Devi, (2004) 1 SCC 438: 2004 SCC (Cri) 320: AIR 2004 SC 115: 2004 Cri LJ 1249: 2003 All LJ 2839.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-2003]

Anil Behari Ghosh v. Latika Bala Dassi, AIR 1955 SC 566, relied on

(1996) 2 AWC 953 (All), affirmed

[564] — Ss. 145 and 146(1) — Magistrate after preliminary order under S. 145(1) making emergency attachment under S. 146(1) — Held, the Magistrate is not thereby precluded from proceeding with the enquiry as to possession under S. 145 — Both sections must be read together — Position same as under the 1898 Code prior to its amendment in 1955 — After enquiry order under S. 145(6) to be made and the emergency attachment withdrawn

Sections 145 and 146 together constitute a single scheme and as such S. 146 must be read in the context of S. 145. The scheme of these sections is that the Magistrate on being satisfied about the existence of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, issues a preliminary order stating the grounds of his satisfaction and calling upon the parties to appear before him and submit their written statements. A preliminary order is the basic requirement under S. 145 and it is by making this order that a Magistrate assumes jurisdiction to proceed under Ss. 145 and 146. A proceeding which begins with a preliminary order must be followed up by an enquiry and end with the Magistrate deciding in one of three ways and making consequential orders. Except for the reason that there is no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace as provided by S. 146(5), a proceeding initiated by a preliminary order under S. 145(1) must run its full course. There is no question of stopping midway and leaving the parties to go to the Civil Court. It is, therefore, wrong to hold that the Magistrate's jurisdiction ends as soon as an attachment is made on the ground of emergency under S. 146(1). There is no such express stipulation in S. 146. If there is an emergency, which is the basis of attachment under S. 146(1), it cannot be said that there is no dispute likely to cause a breach of peace. The provisions of Ss. 145 and 146 of the 1973 Code are substantially the same as the corresponding provisions before the 1955 amendment.

In a situation such as in the present case the Magistrate at the termination of the proceeding, on finding that one of the parties was in possession must make an order as provided in S. 145(6) and withdraw the emergency attachment under S. 146(1). Mathuralal v. Bhanwarlal, (1979) 4 SCC 665: 1980 SCC (Cri) 9: AIR 1980 SC 242: 1980 Cri LJ 1: (1979) 16 ACC 325.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1979]

[565] — Ss. 145 and 482 — Abuse of process of court — Rights of the parties in respect of the property in question settled by a compromise decree passed by civil court during pendency of civil proceedings inter-partes — Inspite of civil proceedings having achieved finality, proceedings under S. 145 CrPC initiated — Proceedings under S. 145 CrPC, held, an abuse of process of court — If any party claims to be in possession and seeks its protection, it is for that party to approach the civil court and get an appropriate order — Proceedings under S. 145 CrPC cannot be allowed to continue — High Court not justified in rejecting appellant's petition under S. 482 for quashing the proceedings under S. 145 CrPC. Kunjbihari v. Balram, (2006) 11 SCC 66.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-2005]

[566] — Ss. 145 and 482 — Magistrate need not record a finding regarding continuance or existence of apprehension of breach of peace at the time of passing final order under S. 145 — Contradictory statements regarding apprehension of breach of peace made by the parties in the written statements may itself imply existence of such an apprehension — Even if failure to record such a finding in the final order an error, it is curable and will not vitiate the entire proceedings — Where Magistrate passes final order declaring one of the parties to be in possession of the land in dispute, High Court not justified in interfering with that order under S. 482 on a technical ground of failure by Magistrate to record clear finding in the final order about existence of an apprehension of breach of peace.

On the basis of a police report the Magistrate initiated proceedings under S. 145, CrPC, passed a preliminary order recording reasons for his being satisfied that a breach of peace existed, called upon the parties to file their written statements and then after full enquiry passed a final order declaring the appellant to be in possession of the land in dispute. The High Court, however, in a petition under S. 482 found that as there was no clear finding by the Magistrate in the final order that there was an apprehension of breach of peace the order was bad and accordingly allowed the petition and remitted the case to the Magistrate. Allowing the appeal the Supreme Court

Held :

Once a preliminary order drawn up by the magistrate sets out the reasons for holding that a breach of peace exists, it is not necessary that the breach of peace should continue at every stage of the proceeding. The proceeding has to be carried to its logical end culminating in the final order under S. 145(6), unless there is clear evidence to show that the dispute has ceased to exist so as to bring the case within the ambit of Section 145(5). It is, therefore, manifest that a finding of existence of breach of the peace is not necessary at the time when a final order is passed, though it may be proper for the Magistrate to give such a finding at that time. However, where in the written statements filed by the parties, the parties did not state that no dispute between them existed but took contradictory stands in regard to apprehension of breach of peace, it can be presumed that apprehension of breach of peace existed and if such a finding is implicit in the order of the Magistrate, it is not necessary for the Magistrate to repeat what he had said in the preliminary order and in the final order also. In such a case there is no question of the dispute having ended so as to lead to cancellation of the order under S. 145(5). Further, under S. 145 it is for the Magistrate to be satisfied regarding the existence of a breach of the peace and once he records his satisfaction in the preliminary order, the High Court in revision cannot go into the sufficiency or otherwise of the materials on the basis of which the satisfaction of the Magistrate is based.

Assuming, however, that there was an omission on the part of the Magistrate to mention in his final order that there was breach of the peace, that being an error of procedure would clearly fall within the domain of a curable irregularity which is not sufficient to vitiate the order passed by the Magistrate, particularly when there is nothing to show in the instant case that any prejudice was caused to any of the parties who had the full opportunity to produce their evidence before the court. The High Court, in the present case, was, therefore, not justified in interfering with the order of the Magistrate under Section 482 on a purely technical ground when the aggrieved party had a clear remedy in the civil court. Rajpati v. Bachan, (1980) 4 SCC 116: 1980 SCC (Cri) 927: AIR 1981 SC 18: (1980) 17 ACC 274: 1980 Cri LJ 1276.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-1980]

[567] — Ss. 145 and 482 — Order under, which became final on dismissal of revision filed against it, cannot be quashed merely because the party against whom the order operates initiated a civil proceeding — Order would remain operative till decision of civil court — Nature and effect of order under S. 145 stated — Civil court has jurisdiction to reach a conclusion different from the Magistrate — Rent Control and Eviction

Although the Supreme Court in Ram Sumer case has held that a party should not be permitted to litigate before the criminal court when the civil suit is pending in respect of the same subject-matter, but that does not mean that a concluded order under S. 145, CrPC made by the Magistrate of competent jurisdiction should be set at naught merely because the unsuccessful party has approached the civil court. An order made under S. 145, CrPC deals only with the factum of possession of the party as on a particular day. It confers no title to remain in possession of the disputed property. The order is subject to decision of the civil court. The unsuccessful party therefore must get relief only in the civil court. He may move the civil court with properly constituted suit. He may file a suit for declaration and prove a better right to possession. The civil court has jurisdiction to give a finding different from that which the Magistrate has reached. Jhummamal v. State of M.P., (1988) 4 SCC 452: 1988 SCC (Cri) 974: AIR 1988 SC 1973: (1988) 3 Crimes 288: 1988 BBCJ 134: (1988) 2 Ker LJ 355.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Kania and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-8-1988]

Ram Sumer Puri Mahant v. State of U.P., (1985) 1 SCC 427: 1985 SCC (Cri) 98, explained and distinguished [568] — S. 145 — Authority of court to grant relief to which plaintiff may be entitled, notwithstanding that such relief may not have been asked for — Held, on facts, S. 209 was rightly invoked by Board of Revenue, the second appellate authority — Plaintiff-respondents filing suit for declaration that they were the recorded tenants and for injunction, alternatively for possession, if they were found not in possession — In previous proceedings under S. 145 CrPC appellant-defendants had been found in possession — Trial court and appellate court dismissing suit — In second appeal Board of Revenue holding that plaintiffs were entitled to be recorded as sah-khatedars — Also finding them not in possession, invoking S. 209 and decreeing suit — Held, High Court rightly dismissed writ petition of appellant-defendants — Rajasthan Tenancy Act, 1955 (3 of 1955) — S. 209 (Para 4). Bhura Mogiya v. Satish Pagariya, (2001) 9 SCC 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.N. Khare and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-3-2000]

[569] — S. 145 — Ejectment suit under — Whether defendant-respondents acquired title by adverse possession — During the period when land remained in custody of criminal court as a result of proceedings initiated under S. 145 CrPC, court must be deemed to have been holding possession on behalf of the person eventually found to be entitled to possession — Held on facts, respondents had matured their title by adverse possession and hence entitled to the status of rightful owners — Limitation Act, 1963, Art. 65 — U.P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950 (1 of 1951) — S. 209. Ram Nath v. Director of Consolidation, 1987 Supp SCC 683.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Sabyasachi Mukharji and G.L. Oza, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-1987]

[570] — S. 145 — Writ petition against DM's and Appellate Board's order under S. 8-B PRB Act, 1867 — Relief — Jurisdiction of High Court — Dispute among partners of firm regarding right of one partner against the other to file a declaration under S. 5, PRB Act, 1867 — District Magistrate, in exercise of his powers under S. 8-B, cancelling the declarations filed — Appellate Board upholding that order — Declarant filing a writ petition — High Court setting aside both the said orders and directing the Appellate Board to decide the matter afresh — Subsequently, on a review petition filed by the writ petitioner, High Court directing that the inquiry by District Magistrate should, if an application was filed before him, defer the inquiry till the right to possession of the press was decided by civil court — The conflicting rights of the parties involved in the present case, held, were required to be determined in accordance with law by the statutory authority — Hence, the subsequent direction issued by High Court in the review petition, held, was without jurisdiction — Moreover, such a direction was unsustainable for giving to one party to the lis an unfair advantage over the other in the matter of enforcement of statutory rights — Hence, not sustainable — Constitution of India — Art. 226 — Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867 — Ss. 8-C, 8-B and 5

R s/o D and certain other members of a HUF were partners in D's firm. Taking advantage of D's ill health, R made an attempt to create a lease in relation to the right to publish the firm's newspaper Dainik Bhaskar from Bhopal in favour of a company of which D, R and another were members. D denied to have signed the lease deed dated 13-4-1984 and, in any event, insisted that the same could be applicable only for Bhopal and not for any other place. On 13-4-1985, a partition/family settlement deed was prepared but was not signed by D and one of his brothers. R also took alleged possession of the printing press which had been leased out by D's firm to the said Company. R allegedly assaulted D and his daughters which led to initiation of proceedings under Section 145 CrPC. That proceedings culminated in an order for opening of the locks of the press but D was not permitted to run the press. Under Section 5 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867 (for short "the Act") R and another filed three declarations each before the District Magistrate allegedly accepting the firm as the owner of the newspaper. D filed his objections. The District Magistrate in exercise of his power under Section 8-B of the Act cancelled the said declarations filed by R. The Appellate Board upheld that order. R filed a writ petition against the Appellate Board's order. A Single Judge of the Gwalior Bench of M.P. High Court quashed the order of the District Magistrate and also the appellate order and directed the Appellate Board to consider the case afresh. However, on a review application filed by R, the same Judge directed that the inquiry by the District Magistrate should be deferred if an application was filed before him till the final outcome of the civil litigations by the parties. D alleging his alleged illegal dispossession from the printing press, filed a suit for eviction and permanent injunction, against R and also filed an application for temporary injunction against R restraining him from publishing the newspaper illegally and from taking possession of the printing press. R also filed a cross-suit for a permanent injunction restraining D from interfering with the working of the press at Gwalior and taking possession thereof. He also filed an application for temporary injunction. The civil court disposed of both the applications by a common order: (i) restraining R from interfering with the working of D in the matter of managing the affairs of the Company, and (ii) restraining D from interfering with the printing and publishing of the newspaper Dainik Bhaskar from Gwalior. Both the parties preferred cross-appeals before the High Court. Allowing R's appeal and dismissing D's, the High Court held that the suit for temporary injunction was barred under Section 10 of the Companies Act. D (since dead) had filed the instant appeals challenging the said orders. These appeals raised the following questions:

(1) Whether the order passed by the High Court on R's review application was justified?

(2) Whether the civil court had any jurisdiction to entertain the suit?

Allowing the appeals with costs

Held :

When a disputed question as regards the right of one partner against the other to file a declaration in terms of the provisions of the Act had arisen for consideration, the High Court was not right in issuing a subsequent direction in the review petition. Such a jurisdiction the High Court did not have. The conflicting rights of the parties were required to be determined in accordance with law by the statutory authority. There was no justification in giving to a party to the lis such liberty as to file an application for stay of inquiry by the District Magistrate till the disposal of the civil suit, particularly when the High Court itself was of the opinion that the suit was not maintainable. There was no reason as to why one party to the lis should be given unfair advantage over another in the matter of enforcement of statutory rights under the Act. The impugned orders are, therefore, set aside with a direction to the Appellate Board to hear out and dispose of the appeal as expeditiously as possible but not later than three months from the date of communication of the order passed herein. (Para 17). Dwarka Prasad Agarwal v. Ramesh Chander Agarwal, (2003) 6 SCC 220: AIR 2003 SC 2696.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.N. Khare, C.J. and S.B. Sinha and Dr. AR. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2003]

[571] — S. 145 — Territories of States of Bihar and U.P. — Lands on the borders of the two States — Position of three villages Nainijor 1845, Nainijor Nambrar and Nainijor Diare Paschim — Minutes of meetings dated 19-10-1984 between representatives of the two States and directions contained in proceedings of Board of Revenue, U.P. dated 10-10-1985 and notification dated 26-7-1973 of U.P. Govt. — Held, within jurisdiction of the authorities but did not amount to adjudication on merits of existence of the said three villages or as to whether the land in the three villages was part of the land transferred from Bihar to U.P. under the 1968 Act — That question had to be decided by courts of competent jurisdiction and not by High Court in writ jurisdiction as lot of oral and documentary evidence to be adduced and considered — As regards the notification, held, boundaries have been fixed with reference to the survey of 1881-83 and that if the three villages or survey and physical verification were found to exist, it would have to be ascertained in which village of U.P., according to the survey of 1881-83, they lay — If in the notices/parchis on specific plots, names of persons and villages of both sides were recorded and notices were sent to both sides, there was nothing illegal or contrary in that action inasmuch as these entries were liable to correction, after adjudication, under S. 54(2) of the U.P. Land Revenue Act — When the entries in the records maintained by the U.P. and Bihar officials were conflicting and mistakes and disputes were apparent, they could be corrected and resolved only in the manner prescribed, as the case might be, under Ss. 54, 40, 41, 43 of the U.P. Land Revenue Act, 1901 — Assistant Records Officer could dispose of the matter under S. 54(6) of the said Act — Decision of the said officer was appealable under S. 210 of the U.P. Land Revenue Act, 1901 and there was also a revision to the Board of Revenue, U.P. under S. 219 — High Court also rightly allowed advocates to appear and the Assistant Records Officer to take oral evidence (even in a summary way) and rightly set aside that part of the orders of the Board of Revenue — High Court was also right in directing consolidation of the cases under S. 192-A of the Act to avoid multiplicity of the evidence/hearings and in rejecting the rest of the reliefs — As regards an order passed in proceedings under S. 145 CrPC by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Buxar on 22-8-1928 declaring the second party (the U.P. parties) to be in possession and raising certain doubts about the existence of certain Bihar villages, held, such an adjudication under S. 145 CrPC cannot be treated as equal to an adjudication on title by a civil court — It will be for the appropriate competent court to consider the relevance and admissibility of the observation made in the said order and adjudicate on the question of title after receiving oral and documentary evidence — High Court was right in not deciding issues of title or possession or the dates of changes in the course of River Ganga or on which side the land lay before the 1968 Act and also as to the existence of the three villages or as to whether the three villages stood transferred in 1968 to the State of U.P. — U.P. Land Revenue Act, 1901 (3 of 1901) — Ss. 54, 40, 41, 43 — Constitution of India — Art. 226 — Bihar and Uttar Pradesh (Alteration of Boundaries) Act, 1968 (24 of 1968) — S. 3. Ram Badan Rai v. Union of India, (1999) 1 SCC 705: AIR 1999 SC 166.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Majmudar and M. Jagannadha Rao, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-1998]

[572] — Ss. 145, 144 and 5 & 482 — Applicability to Bihar Tenancy Act, 1885 — Criminal and civil proceedings — Bar on under Bihar Tenancy Act, 1885 (8 of 1885), Ss. 48-E(13) proviso and (1) — Scope and extent — Proceedings covered — Held, if bataidari proceedings under S. 48-E(1) are finalised and rights are declared, criminal court is excluded from exercising its power as to disputes over the property — Further held, even during pendency of proceedings, no civil or criminal proceedings shall lie, except in case of breach of peace — Further, 1885 Act being special Act, in view of savings under S. 5 CrPC, CrPC is inapplicable to matters covered by 1885 Act — In the instant case, bataidari proceedings finalised and appellants declared as bataidars — Proceedings invoked under Ss. 144 and 145 CrPC disturbing rights obtained in bataidari proceedings — High Court refusing to interfere under S. 482 CrPC — Held, High Court did not examine ambit of S. 145 CrPC with reference to 1885 Act in proper perspective — Proceedings under S. 145 CrPC quashed — CPC, 1908, S. 9 (Paras 18 to 23, 25 and 28). Bharat Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2009) 6 SCC 698.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Ajmer Singh v. Union of India, (1987) 3 SCC 340: 1987 SCC (Cri) 499; Maru Ram v. Union of India, (1981) 1 SCC 107: 1981 SCC (Cri) 112, applied

[573] — Ss. 145 and 482 — S. 145 when may be had recourse to — Abuse of process of court — Bataidari proceedings under Bihar Tenancy Act, 1885 (8 of 1885), S. 48 — Rights of appellants as bataidars declared by appropriate authority — Proper forum for agitating disputes — Without exhausting statutory remedy provided under the 1885 Act, initiating criminal proceedings under Ss. 144 and 145 CrPC, held, is abuse of process of court — Once rights of parties over disputed land adjudicated by a forum, proceedings under S. 145 CrPC not to be initiated to disturb the finding — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 145 and 482 — S. 145 when may be had recourse to — Abuse of process of court (Paras 27 and 26). Bharat Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2009) 6 SCC 698.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Kunjbihari v. Balram, (2006) 11 SCC 66: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 376, applied

[574] — S. 145 — Right to reference under S. 29(8), U.P. Wakfs Act, 1960 — S. 29(8), U.P. Wakfs Act, 1960, held, vests in the aggrieved person an independent right to make a reference within the time specified therein — Where the case of the person making the reference that he came to know about the impugned registration in the course of a proceeding under S. 145 CrPC and thereafter referred the dispute to the Tribunal within the statutory time-limit was accepted by the Tribunal, held, such a finding of fact could not be disturbed in an appeal under Art. 136 — Constitution of India — Art. 136 — Findings of fact — General rule of no interference — Applied — U.P. Muslim Wakfs Act, 1960 (16 of 1960) — Ss. 29(8) & (7) and 8(1)

The U.P. Shia Central Board of Wakfs (for short "the Shia Wakf Board") registered the mosque in question, its sehan and Imam Chowk on 30-10-1978. Aggrieved by the said registration, the Sunni Central Board of Wakf (for short "the Sunni Wakf Board") made a reference to the Muslim Wakf Tribunal in 1988 stating that the said property had been registered by it as a Sunni wakf in 1980. It further stated that in a proceeding under Section 145 CrPC initiated in 1988 it came to know about the action of the Shia Wakf Board in the matter and made the reference within 90 days from the date of knowledge about the order of registration. The Tribunal allowed the reference in respect of part of the property in question and dismissed the same in respect of the remaining part. Both the parties filed revision petitions before the High Court which dismissed the revision petition filed by the Shia Wakf Board and allowed that filed by the Sunni Wakf Board and remanded the matter to the Tribunal for fresh trial. The appellants including the Shia Wakf Board contended that: (i) the dispute was beyond the purview of Section 29(8) of the U.P. Muslim Wakfs Act, 1960 (for short "the Act") and, therefore, the reference was not maintainable, (ii) in the absence of any notification by the Commissioner under Section 6(4) of the Act a reference under Section 8(1) was not maintainable, and (iii) under the proviso to Section 8(1), the dispute was barred by limitation. Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

Section 29(8) of the Act vests an independent right in a person aggrieved by an order of the Board under Section 29(7) to make an application to refer the dispute to the Tribunal. Such an application is to be made within 90 days from the date of the order by which the applicant feels aggrieved. The case of the respondents that they came to know about the registration of the mosque, its sehan and the Imam Chowk by the Shia Wakf Board in course of a proceeding under Section 145 CrPC and within 90 days thereafter they filed a dispute before the Tribunal has been accepted by the Tribunal and confirmed by the High Court. There is little scope to disturb the findings of fact in the present appeals. Therefore, the appellant's contention that the dispute raised before the Tribunal under Section 29(8) of the Act was barred by limitation also cannot be accepted. (Paras 19 and 20). U.P. Shia Central Board of Wakf v. U.P. Sunni Central Board of Wakf, (2001) 5 SCC 162: AIR 2001 SC 2086.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

[575] — S. 145(4) proviso — Exercise of power under Art. 142, Constitution of India — When not justified — Petitioner's claim for restoration of possession of disputed premises barred by limitation of two months provided under proviso to S. 145(4) of the CrPC, 1973 — Remedy under ordinary law for recovery of possession available to the petitioner — Held, on facts, there are no special circumstances justifying grant of relief to the petitioner in exercise of power under Art. 142 — Mere fact that the petitioner is an old lady and the respondents have been indulging in similar litigations not sufficient to grant relief to the petitioner — Constitution of India — Art. 142

The petitioner herself permitted the first respondent to temporarily occupy the premises in question and subsequently the first respondent allowed the second respondent to occupy the property claiming that he was her husband and thereafter they constructed a wall dividing the said portion from the other portion occupied by the petitioner. On these facts there are no special circumstances which are different from ordinary cases where a person permits a licensee or a tenant to occupy the premises and upon termination of the licence or the lease, the licensee or the tenant, as the case may be, does not vacate the premises or makes some construction on the property. No doubt the petitioner is an old lady of 75 years and there is some material to show that Respondents have been indulging in similar litigations. But that is not sufficient for exercising power under Article 142. The petitioner has adequate remedies under the law for recovery of possession. R.C. Patuck v. Fatima A. Kindasa, (1997) 5 SCC 334: 1997 SCC (Cri) 679: AIR 1997 SC 2320: 1997 Cri LJ 2756.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Majmudar and M. Jagannadha Rao, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1997]

Union Carbide Corpn. v. Union of India, (1991) 4 SCC 584, distinguished

[576] — S. 145(4) proviso — Dispossession of the petitioner found to be for a period in excess of two months next before the date of preliminary order under S. 145(1) — Held, proviso to S. 145(4) does not apply and, therefore, no order for restoration of possession could be passed in favour of the petitioner — Conditions mentioned in the said proviso cannot be deemed to be satisfied on ground that the dispossession of the petitioner amounted to a continuing wrong

In cases where the proviso to Section 145(4) applied, that is, if it appeared to the Magistrate that any party had been forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed, within two months next before the date on which the report of a police officer or other information was received by the Magistrate, or after that date and before the date of his order under sub-section (1), the Magistrate might treat the party so dispossessed as if the said party had been in possession on the date of his order under sub-section (1). In other words, if the conditions mentioned in the proviso to sub-section (4) were satisfied, the Magistrate could deem a person to be in possession as on the date of the order under Section 145(1) notwithstanding the fact that he was not in fact in possession on that date, but lost possession earlier, within two months next before the order.

In the present case there is no material to show that any report of a police officer or other information was received by the Magistrate within the period contemplated by the proviso. On the other hand, the petitioner's admissions show that she lost possession much before the period mentioned in the said proviso. Therefore, the courts below were right in coming to the conclusion that no order for restoration of possession could be passed in favour of the petitioner under Section 145 of the CrPC. The contention that as the dispossession of the petitioner was continuing, and it amounted to a continuing wrong and, therefore, the proviso to sub-clause (4) must be deemed to be satisfied cannot be accepted. R.C. Patuck v. Fatima A. Kindasa, (1997) 5 SCC 334: 1997 SCC (Cri) 679: AIR 1997 SC 2320: 1997 Cri LJ 2756.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Majmudar and M. Jagannadha Rao, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1997]

[577] — S. 145(6) — Retrieving Company's property wrongfully withheld by officer/employee — Criminal proceedings not barred by interim order in civil proceedings — Where High Court, in a civil suit, directed the defendant Company not to dispossess the legal representatives of the deceased employee, of the flat allotted to the deceased, except by due process of law, held, the remedy available to the Company under S. 630 was nonetheless a proceedings taken in due process of law — High Court erred in holding that being penal in nature such proceedings were not one in due course of law — Words and phrases — "Due process of law", "such officer or employee", "property" — Specific Relief Act, 1963 — S. 6 — Companies Act, 1956 — S. 630

Due process of law in the present context would ordinarily mean such an exercise of power by the parties as the settled principles of law permit and/or a course of legal proceedings, according to those rules and principles which have been established in the country's systems of jurisprudence for the enforcement and protection of private rights. Due process of law would in short mean a procedure established by law, which is a procedure fixed or laid down in law. When the High Court passed an order of injunction, in the aforesaid terms, it meant that the Company should not take forcible possession of the flat in question during the pendency of the suit and the Company was given liberty to take steps for possession as was permissible under law including the provisions of any statute giving right to obtain possession to the company in the facts and circumstances of the case. The company could prove unlawful possession of the property by the employee or his or her legal representative after the demise of the employee or an officer of the company. The company had the remedy to initiate action under Section 630(1) and on conviction by the competent criminal court it could approach the same court for directing delivery of possession which Section 630(2) provides. The remedy is provided in the statute itself and the High Court's order by no stretch of imagination could be read to mean that the Company had to necessarily approach the civil court only for obtaining possession of the flat in question and the remedy available under the Companies Act could not be resorted to. The decision of the High Court that Section 630 of the Companies Act being penal in nature, the proceeding thereunder could not be construed to be a proceeding taken in due process of law, cannot be sustained. Filing of civil suit for possession by the Company did not deprive the Company of the right to institute prosecution under the Companies Act and incidentally get an order for delivery of possession. (Para 17). Shubh Shanti Services Ltd. v. Manjula S. Agarwalla, (2005) 5 SCC 30: 2005 SCC (Cri) 993: AIR 2005 SC 2506: (2005) 125 Comp Cas 477: (2005) 107 FLR 7: (2005) 3 Mah LJ 340.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-5-2005]

Shubh Shanti Services Ltd. v. Manjula S. Agerwalla, 2004 CLC 1438 (Bom), reversed

[578] — S. 145(6) — "Until evicted therefrom in due course of law" — Means eviction of the party successful before the Magistrate consequent upon adjudication of title or right to possession by a competent court but it does not necessarily mean eviction decree — Party unsuccessful before the Magistrate can dispute correctness of the findings before competent court — Burden lies on him to prove before the competent court his possession or entitlement to possession — Relief which the unsuccessful party can seek before the competent court, stated

The words "until evicted therefrom in due course of law" as occurring in Section 145(6), CrPC mean the eviction of the party successful before the Magistrate, consequent upon the adjudication of title or right to possession by a competent court; that does not necessarily mean a decree of eviction. The party unsuccessful before the Magistrate may dispute the correctness of the finding arrived at by the Magistrate and is at liberty to show before the competent court that it had not dispossessed the successful party or that it is the unsuccessful party and not the successful party who was actually in possession and the finding to the contrary arrived at by the Magistrate was wholly or apparently erroneous and unsustainable in law. (Para 17)

A party unsuccessful in an order under Section 145(1) CrPC would initiate proceedings in a competent court to establish its entitlement to possession over the disputed property against the successful party. Ordinarily, a relief of recovery of possession would be appropriate to be sought for. In legal proceedings initiated before a competent court consequent upon attachment under Section 146(1) CrPC it is not necessary to seek relief of recovery of possession. As the property is held custodia legis by the Magistrate for and on behalf of the party who would ultimately succeed from the court, it would suffice if only determination of the rights with regard to the entitlement to the possession is sought for. Such a suit shall not be bad for not asking for the relief of possession. (Para 23)

The effect of the Magistrate's order is that burden is thrown on the unsuccessful party to prove its possession or entitlement to possession before the competent court. (Para 15). Shanti Kumar Panda v. Shakuntala Devi, (2004) 1 SCC 438: 2004 SCC (Cri) 320: AIR 2004 SC 115: 2004 Cri LJ 1249: 2003 All LJ 2839.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-2003]

(1996) 2 AWC 953 (All), affirmed

— S. 146 See also S. 146, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 989 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 146 See Ss. 145 and 146
See also Ss. 145, 146 and 397 & 401

[579] — Ss. 146 and 145 — Attachment order under — Comes to an end as soon as Civil Court passes even an interim order or appoints a receiver and accordingly magistrate must withdraw the attachment order in view of seizure of the matter by civil court — Final determination of rights of the parties by the civil court not essential for cessation of the attachment order and its consequent withdrawal

The determination by a competent court of the rights of the parties spoken of in S. 146(1) has not necessarily to be a final determination. The determination may be even tentative at the interim stage when the competent court passes an order of interim injunction or appoints a receiver in respect of the subject-matter of the dispute pending the final decision in the suit. The moment the competent court does so, even at the interim stage, the order of attachment passed by the Magistrate has to come to an end. Otherwise, there will be inconsistency between the order passed by the civil court and the order of attachment passed by the Magistrate. The proviso to sub-section (1) of S. 146 itself takes cognizance of such a situation. When a civil court passes an order of injunction or receiver, it is the civil court which is seized of the matter and any breach of its order can be punished by it according to law. Hence on the passing of the interlocutory order by the civil court, it can legitimately be said that there is no longer any likelihood of the breach of the peace with regard to the subject of dispute. The 'other incidental or consequential orders as may be just' in proviso (b) to sub-section (2) of S. 146 may include an order of withdrawal of the attachment in view of the seizure of the matter by the civil court and the consequent want of apprehension of breach of the peace. It is, therefore, not correct to say that the property continues to remain under attachment of the Magisterial order till the rights of the parties are decided finally by the competent court of law. The Magistrate can withdraw the order of attachment passed by him even during the pendency of the dispute in the civil court. Dharampal v. Ramshri, (1993) 1 SCC 435: 1993 SCC (Cri) 333: AIR 1993 SC 1361: (1993) 1 Crimes 304: (1993) 1 An WR 60 (SC): (1993) 1 BLJR 361.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-1993]

Ram Sri v. Dhanpat, 1981 All Cri Cases 41, reversed

— S. 146(1) See also Ss. 145 and 146(1)

[580] — S. 146(1) — "Competent court" — Does not necessarily mean civil court — It means court having jurisdictional competence to decide right or title of the parties as regards entitlement to possession of the property in question

The words "competent court" as used in Section 146(1) CrPC do not necessarily mean a civil court only. A competent court is one which has the jurisdictional competence to determine the question of title or the rights of the parties with regard to the entitlement as to possession over the property forming the subject-matter of proceedings before the Executive Magistrate. (Para 23). Shanti Kumar Panda v. Shakuntala Devi, (2004) 1 SCC 438: 2004 SCC (Cri) 320: AIR 2004 SC 115: 2004 Cri LJ 1249: 2003 All LJ 2839.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-2003]

Bhinka v. Charan Singh, AIR 1959 SC 960: 1959 Cri LJ 1223, relied on

(1996) 2 AWC 953 (All), affirmed

— S. 148(3) See Ss. 482, 148(3), 342, 359, 357, 358 and 227

— Ch. XI (Ss. 149 to 153) See Ss. 152, 149, 151, 129, 130, 133 and 144, Ch. X (Ss. 129 to 148) and Ch. XI (Ss. 149 to 153)

— S. 149 See Ss. 152, 149, 151, 129, 130, 133 and 144, Ch. X (Ss. 129 to 148) and Ch. XI (Ss. 149 to 153)

[581] — Ss. 150, 154 and 155 and S. 2(h) — Crime detection and "investigation" of crimes — Distinction — DLaying of trap to ensnare committer of an apprehended crime, if part of 'investigation'HD — Role of citizenry in crime detection and passing on of such information to the authorities concerned — If any information regarding the commission of any crime is known to any person, such information can be passed on to the police or any other competent authority for taking appropriate action and, held, the said collection and passing on of such information would not amount to an "investigation" within the meaning of S. 2(h) — Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954 — S. 12 — Held, collection of samples and the sending of them for public analysis does not amount to "investigation" — Words and phrases — "Investigation"

Every citizen is competent and entitled to detect crimes and report, and if any information regarding the commission of any crime is known to any person, such information can be passed on to the police or any other competent authority for taking appropriate action, for example, under the Food Adulteration Act, an ordinary citizen is competent to collect samples and send them for public analysis, and based on the report of the public analyst, the complaint can be filed before the appropriate authority. The collection of the samples and the analysis by the public analyst do not amount to investigation. If a crime is committed in the presence of any citizen, he can very well ascertain the truth of the fact and make all efforts to bring home the guilt of the accused. (Para 9). State of Rajasthan v. Shambhoogiri, (2004) 8 SCC 169: (2004) 3 KLT 520.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2004]

— S. 151 See also S. 151, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 991 et seq. in Vol. 2

—S. 151 See Ss. 11, 12, 13, 190, 129 and 151

See also Ss. 41, 151, 2(c), 156 and 157(1)

See also Ss. 41, 151, 156 and 157(1)

See also Ss. 41, 151, 157 and 172

See also Ss. 152, 149, 151, 129, 130, 133 and 144, Ch. X (Ss. 129 to 148) and Ch. XI (Ss. 149 to 153)

See also CRIMINAL LAW — 'Preventive Detention'

[582] — S. 151 — Held, not unconstitutional — Power conferred on police authorities to arrest a person without order of Magistrate and without warrant — Conditions and guidelines for exercise of power are provided in the section itself — Those guidelines read with the requirements laid down by Supreme Court in Joginder Kumar v. State of U.P., (1994) 4 SCC 260 and D.K. Basu v. State of W.B., (1997) 1 SCC 416 ensure that power shall not be abused — Merely because the authority concerned may abuse the power, the provision cannot be held to be arbitrary and unreasonable — Constitution of India — Arts. 14, 21 and 22

The provision cannot be said to be either arbitrary or unreasonable or infringing upon the fundamental rights of a citizen under Articles 21 and 22 of the Constitution. (Para 5)

Thus Section 151 CrPC itself makes provision for the circumstances in which an arrest can be made under that section and also places a limitation on the period for which a person so arrested may be detained. The guidelines are inbuilt in the provision itself. Those statutory guidelines have to be read with the requirements laid down in Joginder Kumar and D.K. Basu cases. These requirements are in addition to the constitutional and statutory safeguards and do not detract from various directions given by the courts from time to time in connection with the safeguarding of the rights and dignity of the arrestee. This Court has also cautioned that failure to comply with those requirements, shall apart from rendering the official concerned liable for departmental action, also render him liable to be punished for contempt of court. The guidelines provided under Section 151 read with the requirements laid down in the aforesaid two cases provide an assurance that the power shall not be abused and in case of abuse, the authority concerned shall be adequately punished. Such a provision cannot be held to be unreasonable or arbitrary and, therefore, unconstitutional, merely because the authority vested with the power may abuse his authority. Since several cases of abuse of authority in matters of arrest and detention have come to notice the Supreme Court has laid down the requirements which have to be followed in all cases of arrest and detention. (Paras 10 and 9)

Therefore, there is no substance in the contention that Section 151 CrPC is unconstitutional and ultra vires the constitutional provisions. (Para 11). Ahmed Noormohmed Bhatti v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 647: 2005 SCC (Cri) 794: AIR 2005 SC 2115: (2005) 2 KLT 769: 2005 Cri LJ 2157: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1402.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, B.P. Singh and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-2005]

Joginder Kumar v. State of U.P., (1994) 4 SCC 260: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1172; D.K. Basu v. State of W.B., (1997) 1 SCC 416: 1997 SCC (Cri) 92, applied

[583] — Ss. 151, 155 and 156 — "Arrest" — Meaning and origin, stated — Constitution of India — Arts. 20 to 22

The term "arrest" has neither been defined in CrPC nor in IPC nor in any other enactment dealing with offences. The word "arrest" is derived from the French word "arrater" meaning "to stop or stay". It signifies a restraint of a person. "Arrest" is thus a restraint of a man's person, obliging him to be obedient to law. "Arrest" then may be defined as "the execution of the command of a court of law or of a duly authorised officer". (Para 20). Union of India v. Padam Narain Aggarwal, (2008) 13 SCC 305: (2008) 231 ELT 397.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-10-2008]

[584] — Ss. 151/117 — Preventive Detention — Detention order — Detenu already in jail or custody, Order of detention passed while detenu in jail custody under proceedings under Ss. 151/117, CrPC, held, not improper

The petitioner was in jail custody in proceedings under S. 151, CrPC. That custody was obviously of a short duration. The mere service of the detention order on the petitioner in jail would not therefore invalidate the order. On the basis of the antecedent activities of the petitioner in the proximate past, the detaining authority could reasonably reach its subjective satisfaction about his tendency or inclination to act in a manner prejudicial to the maintenance of public order, after his release on the termination of the security proceedings under the Code. Ramakrishna Rawat (Dr.) v. Distt. Magistrate, (1975) 4 SCC 164: 1975 SCC (Cri) 457: AIR 1975 SC 90: 1975 Cri LJ 46.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and A.C. Gupta, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-1974]

Rameshwar Shaw v. District Magistrate, (1964) 4 SCR 921: AIR 1964 SC 334: 1964 (1) Cri LJ 257 and Makhan Singh Tarsikka v. State of Punjab, (1964) 4 SCR 932: AIR 1964 SC 1120: 1964(2) Cri LJ 217, distinguished.

[Ed.: In both of these cases the petitioners were in jail as undertrial prisoners. That was why it was held that it could not be rationally postulated that if they were not detained they would act in a prejudicial manner.]

[585] — S. 151(2) — Period of detention under S. 151 cannot exceed 24 hours and in absence of anything else, after expiry of that period the detainee must be released — However, if before 24 hours of detention the detainee is found to be required to be detained under any other provision of the Code or under any other law, his detention would continue under that provision or law instead of under S. 151

The conditions under which a police officer may arrest a person without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant, have been laid down in Section 151 CrPC. He can do so only if he has come to know of a design of the person concerned to commit any cognizable offence. A further condition for the exercise of such power, which must also be fulfilled, is that the arrest should be made only if it appears to the police officer concerned that the commission of the offence cannot be otherwise prevented. Section 151, therefore, expressly lays down the requirements for the exercise of the power under it. If these conditions are not fulfilled and a person is arrested under Section 151 CrPC, the arresting authority may be exposed to proceedings under the law. Sub-section (2) lays down the rule that normally a person so arrested shall be detained in custody not for a period exceeding 24 hours. It, therefore, follows that in the absence of anything else, on expiry of 24 hours, he must be released. The release, however, is not insisted upon only when his further detention is required or authorised under any other provision of the Code or of any other law for the time being in force. It, therefore, follows that if before the expiry of 24 hours of detention it is found that the person concerned is required to be detained under any other provision of the Code of Criminal Procedure, or of any other law for the time being in force, he may not be released and his detention may continue under such law or such provision of the Code. The detention thereafter is not under Section 151 but under the relevant provision of the Code or any other law for the time being in force as the case may be. Section 151, therefore, only provides for arrest of a person to prevent the commission of a cognizable offence by him. (Para 5). Ahmed Noormohmed Bhatti v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 647: 2005 SCC (Cri) 794: AIR 2005 SC 2115: (2005) 2 KLT 769: 2005 Cri LJ 2157: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1402.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, B.P. Singh and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-2005]

[586] — Ss. 152, 129, 130, 133 and 144 — Guidelines issued by Supreme Court to police officers to enforce statutory duties under CrPC — Power of Supreme Court, held, extends to laying down directions or orders where the Act or Rules are silent on a particular subject and the authority implementing the same has constitutional or statutory power to implement the same — Albeit, it cannot give any direction for amending the Act or statutory rules — Moreover, it cannot give a direction contrary to the Act and Rules — Case law on situations in which a positive mandamus can be issued, discussed — In the present case, issuance of guidelines to Police to enforce statutory duties under Police Act, 1861 and CrPC, 1973 and to create a special purpose vehicle in respect of damages for riot cases found necessary — Hence, such guidelines issued — However, guidelines to determine the role of media during agitations, bandhs, hartals resulting in destruction of public and private properties not issued at this stage, and the matter left to appropriate authorities — Police Act, 1861, Ss. 30, 30-A and 31

The power of the Supreme Court extends to laying down guidelines. The Supreme Court cannot give any directions for amending the Act or the statutory Rules. It is for Parliament to amend the Act and the Rules. It is also established law that no direction can be given, which would be contrary to the Act and the Rules. However, when the Act or Rules are silent on a particular subject and the authority implementing the same has constitutional or statutory power to implement it, the Supreme Court can necessarily issue directions or orders on the said subject to fill the vacuum or void till the suitable law is enacted. (Para 17)

The Supreme Court has issued directions in a large number of cases to meet urgent situations. (Para 18)

The situations in which a positive mandamus to do a particular act in a particular way, may be broadly classified in the following manner. First are the broad mandamus cases where it has been held that the Court may issue a positive mandamus to enforce the law. Thus, in Vineet Narain case, (1998) 1 SCC 226 detailed orders were passed for the investigation of the Hawala transaction cases. It was laid down that positive directions can be issued where there is a power coupled with a duty. The situations under which this can happen are numerous. In a sense, the guidelines in Vineet Narain case also purported to be to enforce the statute, without more, even though the constitutional right to a corruption-free government under Article 21 was involved. (Paras 19 and 24)

In K.S. Jagannathan case, (1986) 2 SCC 679 the Court explored the need to issue a positive mandamus where a power was coupled with a duty. (Para 21)

In D.K. Basu case, (1997) 1 SCC 416 detention guidelines were issued. The purpose of the said guidelines was to effectuate a constitutional right within the framework of a statute. (Paras 22 and 23)

There are also several cases showing that guidelines may become necessary in the absence of a statutory framework. (Para 25)

The present case is one in which guidelines are necessary:

(i) to the police to enforce statutory duties under the Police Act, 1861 and CrPC, and (ii) to create a special purpose vehicle in respect of damages for riot cases. (Paras 28, 29 and 33). Destruction of Public & Private Properties v. State of A.P., (2009) 5 SCC 212.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, L.S. Panta and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-4-2009]

Union of India v. Assn. for Democratic Reforms, (2002) 5 SCC 294; Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226: 1998 SCC (Cri) 307, reiterated

Lakshmi Kant Pandey v. Union of India, (1984) 2 SCC 244; Vishaka v. State of Rajasthan, (1997) 6 SCC 241: 1997 SCC (Cri) 932; Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226: 1998 SCC (Cri) 307; State of W.B. v. Sampat Lal, (1985) 1 SCC 317: 1985 SCC (Cri) 62; K. Veeraswami v. Union of India, (1991) 3 SCC 655: 1991 SCC (Cri) 734; Union Carbide Corpn. v. Union of India, (1991) 4 SCC 584; Delhi Judicial Service Assn. v. State of Gujarat, (1991) 4 SCC 406; DDA v. Skipper Construction Co. (P) Ltd., (1996) 4 SCC 622; Dinesh Trivedi v. Union of India, (1997) 4 SCC 306; Common Cause v. Union of India, (1996) 1 SCC 753; Supreme Court Advocates-on-Record Assn. v. Union of India, (1993) 4 SCC 441; Comptroller and Auditor-General of India v. K.S. Jagannathan, (1986) 2 SCC 679: 1986 SCC (L&S) 345: (1986) 1 ATC 1; Commr. of Police v. Gordhandas Bhanji, AIR 1952 SC 16; Julius v. Lord Bishop of Oxford, (1880) 5 AC 214: (1874-80) All ER Rep 43 (HL); D.K. Basu v. State of W.B., (1997) 1 SCC 416: 1997 SCC (Cri) 92, relied on

Comyns's Digest, Mandamus (A); Halsbury's Laws of England, 4th Edn., Vol. I, Para 89, referred to

[Ed.: See also Art. 32, '(e)(6)(x) Executive or Legislative action/inaction or gaps — Orders/directions redressing/filling', pp. 579 et seq. in Vol. 7, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn.]

[587] — Ss. 152, 149, 151, 129, 130, 133 and 144, Ch. X (Ss. 129 to 148) and Ch. XI (Ss. 149 to 153) — Preventive action by police — Maintenance of public order and tranquillity — Protection of public and private property — Duty of officers/police authorised under Chs. X and XI — Dereliction of — Suo motu action by Supreme Court — Caste-based rioting and disorder by Gujjars to protest against their non-inclusion in list of Scheduled Tribes leading to large-scale destruction of public and private property — No preventive action taken nor any action taken against the offenders — Supreme Court taking suo motu cognizance on basis of media coverage and directing TV channels concerned to provide footage of the telecasts to the police for appropriate action and Directors General of Police of States of Haryana, Rajasthan and U.P. and Commissioner of Police, Delhi directed to file affidavits in the Supreme Court within ten days of this order, as to what action had been taken or was proposed to be taken against the offenders, including an indication if no action has been taken and the reason therefor — Constitution of India — Arts. 32 and 142

In the last one week there has been large-scale destruction of public and private properties and no preventive action appears to have been taken and unfortunately it does not prima facie appear that any action has been taken against the offenders who were responsible for destruction of such properties. The Directors General of Police of the States of Haryana, Rajasthan and Uttar Pradesh and the Commissioner of Police, Delhi are directed to file affidavits in this Court as to what actions have been taken and/or are proposed to be taken against the offenders. Destruction of Public & Private Properties, In re, (2007) 4 SCC 474: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 351.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-6-2007]

— Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) See S. 6 and Chapter XII

See also Chs. X (Ss. 129 to 148) and XII (Ss. 154 to 176)

See also Ss. 156, 157, 154, 190 and Ch. XII

See also S. 156(3) and Ch. XII

See also Ss. 167, 2(h), 4(2), 26(b) and Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176)

[588] — Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) and Ss. 162 and 174 — Investigation under — Provision of S. 162 mandatory — Applies during inquest under S. 174 — CrPC, 1898, Ch. XIV (Ss. 154 to 176)

While it is true that the receipt and registration of an FIR is not the sine qua non to the setting in motion of the machinery of criminal investigation, the investigating officer must follow the procedure laid down in Part V, Chapter XIV.

Even a statement of a witness recorded by the investigator during the inquest under S. 174 would be within the inhibition of S. 162. Behind this provision is a wholesome rule of public policy that witnesses at the trial should be free to tell the truth, unhampered by anything they might have been made to say to the police. Razik Ram v. Jaswant Singh Chouhan, (1975) 4 SCC 769: AIR 1975 SC 667.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A. Alagiriswami and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1975]

[589] — Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) and S. 173(2) — Where investigation conducted by CBI, Ch. XII would apply — "Police" referred to therein would apply to the officers under Delhi Police Establishment Act — After conclusion of investigation, report has to be filed by CBI under S. 173(2) to Special Judge who takes the place of Magistrate, when offence falls under Prevention of Corruption Act

Though the investigation was conducted by CBI the provisions under Chapter XII of the Code would apply to such investigation. The police referred to in the Chapter, for the purpose of investigation, would apply to the officer/officers of the Delhi Police Establishment Act. On completion of the investigation the report has to be filed by CBI in the manner provided in Section 173(2) of the Code, with the exception that the Magistrate referred to in the section would be understood as a Special Judge when the offence involved is under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. (Para 13). Hemant Dhasmana v. CBI, (2001) 7 SCC 536: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1280: AIR 2001 SC 2721.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2001]

[590] — Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) — Investigation — Powers of police — Held, do not include torturing a person to extract information, be he an accused or a witness — Duty to investigate should be discharged within four corners of law — Constitution of India — Art. 21

It is the duty of the police, when a crime is reported, to collect evidence to be placed during trial to arrive at the truth. That certainly would not include torturing a person, be he an accused or a witness, to extract information. The duty should be done within four corners of law. Law enforcers cannot take the law into their hands in the name of collecting evidence. (Para 10). Munshi Singh Gautam v. State of M.P., (2005) 9 SCC 631: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1269: AIR 2005 SC 402: 2005 Cri LJ 320.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-11-2004]

Sahadevan v. State, (2003) 1 SCC 534, relied on

[591] — Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) — Delay in investigation and trial — Charge of waging war against the State — Investigation involving complex problems of sensitive and political nature — Accused capable of asserting their rights but never raising objections as to the delay before — Held on facts, delay not unreasonable and unfair — Hence Art. 21 not violated — Penal Code, 1860, S. 124-A — Constitution of India — Art. 21

The delay in investigation and trial in this case was the outcome of the nature of the case and the general situation prevailing in the country. If the investigating agency suspected a conspiracy to wage war, it was its bounden duty to search for evidence wherever it could be found and not content itself by reading the letters and examining the recipients of the letters. When the facts are to be discovered or unearthed, particularly in cases of suspected conspiracies bristling with all manner of complexities and complications including those of a sensitive, political nature, where the investigating agency has to tread warily and with circumspection, the investigating agency cannot be blamed for the slow progress that they made in investigating a case of this nature. There was nothing sinister in the lulls in the investigation. Investigation of this case was not the only task of the investigating agency.

There must have been other cases and tasks. The police are also incharge of law and order.

Further, the accused in the present case were capable of asserting their rights whenever and whenever necessary and they did in fact assert their rights as and when necessary, as was evident from the number of petitions filed before the Magistrate, and the Special Judge, from time to time. This does not mean that the ability of the accused to assert their rights should penalise them. But one of the factors to be considered in determining whether as accused persons has been deprived of his right is the responsibility of the accused for asserting his rights. Until the filing of the petitions before the Supreme court, there was no serious protest by the accused about any delay, whereas after the charge-sheet was filed, at least on two occasions the prosecuting agency expressed an anxiety to have the case disposed of as expeditiously as possible.

In the circumstances, a direction that the trial should start soon and proceed from day to day was all that was called for in the instant case. Raghubir Singh v. State of Bihar, (1986) 4 SCC 481: 1986 SCC (Cri) 511: AIR 1987 SC 149.

Bench Strength 2 . Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-1986]

[592] — Chs. XII (Ss. 154 to 176), IV-A (S. 36), V to VII (Ss. 41 to 105) — Crime detection — Scope of — Various steps involved in, enumerated — Delegable and non-delegable steps in, differentiated — The authority responsible for each step, held (per curiam), is the officer in charge of the police station, though he might have delegated some steps

Under CrPC, investigation consists of proceeding to the spot, ascertainment of the facts and circumstances of the case, discovery and arrest of the suspected offender, collection of evidence and formation of the opinion as to whether on the material collected there is a case to place the accused before a Magistrate for trial, and if so, taking the necessary steps for the same by the filing of a charge-sheet under Section 173. The scheme of CrPC shows that while it is permissible for an officer in charge of a police station to depute some subordinate officer to conduct some of these steps in the investigation, the responsibility for each one of the above steps is that of the officer in charge of the police station. The final step in the investigation, namely, the formation of the opinion as to whether or not there is a case to place the accused on trial is to be of the officer in charge of the police station and this function cannot be delegated and can be performed by no other authority. The formation of the opinion of the police on the material collected during the investigation as to whether judicial scrutiny is warranted or not is entirely left to the officer in charge of the police station. There is no provision for delegation of the above function regarding formation of the opinion but only a provision entitling the superior officers to supervise or participate under Section 36 CrPC. (Paras 20, 21 and 31). M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor scam) v. Union of India, (2007) 1 SCC 110: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 264: AIR 2007 SC 1087: (2007) 53 AIC 192 (SC).

Bench Strength 3 . Coram: S.B. Sinha ^{2}, S.H. Kapadia ^{1} and D.K. Jain^{1}, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-2006]

[593] — Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) — Cross-examination — Right of — During investigation or inquiry accused does not have any right to cross-examine the witnesses — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 137 and 138. State of H.P. v. Surinder Mohan, (2000) 2 SCC 396: 2000 SCC (Cri) 400: AIR 2000 SC 1862: 2000 Cri LJ 1429.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-2-2000]

[594] — Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) and Ss. 162 and 174 — Investigation under — Provision of S. 162 mandatory — Applies during inquest under S. 174 — CrPC, 1898, Ch. XIV (Ss. 154 to 176)

While it is true that the receipt and registration of an FIR is not the sine qua non to the setting in motion of the machinery of criminal investigation, the investigating officer must follow the procedure laid down in Part V, Chapter XIV.

Even a statement of a witness recorded by the investigator during the inquest under S. 174 would be within the inhibition of S. 162. Behind this provision is a wholesome rule of public policy that witnesses at the trial should be free to tell the truth, unhampered by anything they might have been made to say to the police. Razik Ram v. Jaswant Singh Chouhan, (1975) 4 SCC 769: AIR 1975 SC 667.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A. Alagiriswami and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1975]

[595] — Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) and S. 173(2) — Where investigation conducted by CBI, Ch. XII would apply — "Police" referred to therein would apply to the officers under Delhi Police Establishment Act — After conclusion of investigation, report has to be filed by CBI under S. 173(2) to Special Judge who takes the place of Magistrate, when offence falls under Prevention of Corruption Act

Though the investigation was conducted by CBI the provisions under Chapter XII of the Code would apply to such investigation. The police referred to in the Chapter, for the purpose of investigation, would apply to the officer/officers of the Delhi Police Establishment Act. On completion of the investigation the report has to be filed by CBI in the manner provided in Section 173(2) of the Code, with the exception that the Magistrate referred to in the section would be understood as a Special Judge when the offence involved is under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. (Para 13). Hemant Dhasmana v. CBI, (2001) 7 SCC 536: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1280: AIR 2001 SC 2721.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2001]

[595-A] — Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) and S. 190 — Officers of Department of Revenue Intelligence (DRI) invested with powers of officer-in-charge of police station under S. 53, NDPS Act, 1985 — Held, are not police officers within the meaning of S. 25, Evidence Act, 1872 — Consequently confessional statement recorded by such officer in the course of investigation of a person accused of an offence under the Act is admissible as evidence. Raj Kumar Karwal v. Union of India, (1990) 2 SCC 409: 1990 SCC (Cri) 330: AIR 1991 SC 45: (1990) 48 ELT 496.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-3-1990]

[Ed.: For complete note see §2927 at p. 987.]

[596] — Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) — Investigation — Powers of police — Held, do not include torturing a person to extract information, be he an accused or a witness — Duty to investigate should be discharged within four corners of law — Constitution of India — Art. 21

It is the duty of the police, when a crime is reported, to collect evidence to be placed during trial to arrive at the truth. That certainly would not include torturing a person, be he an accused or a witness, to extract information. The duty should be done within four corners of law. Law enforcers cannot take the law into their hands in the name of collecting evidence. (Para 10). Munshi Singh Gautam v. State of M.P., (2005) 9 SCC 631: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1269: AIR 2005 SC 402: 2005 Cri LJ 320.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-11-2004]

Sahadevan v. State, (2003) 1 SCC 534, relied on

[597] — Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) — Delay in investigation and trial — Charge of waging war against the State — Investigation involving complex problems of sensitive and political nature — Accused capable of asserting their rights but never raising objections as to the delay before — Held on facts, delay not unreasonable and unfair — Hence Art. 21 not violated — Penal Code, 1860, S. 124-A — Constitution of India — Art. 21

The delay in investigation and trial in this case was the outcome of the nature of the case and the general situation prevailing in the country. If the investigating agency suspected a conspiracy to wage war, it was its bounden duty to search for evidence wherever it could be found and not content itself by reading the letters and examining the recipients of the letters. When the facts are to be discovered or unearthed, particularly in cases of suspected conspiracies bristling with all manner of complexities and complications including those of a sensitive, political nature, where the investigating agency has to tread warily and with circumspection, the investigating agency cannot be blamed for the slow progress that they made in investigating a case of this nature. There was nothing sinister in the lulls in the investigation. Investigation of this case was not the only task of the investigating agency. There must have been other cases and tasks. The police are also incharge of law and order.

Further, the accused in the present case were capable of asserting their rights whenever and whenever necessary and they did in fact assert their rights as and when necessary, as was evident from the number of petitions filed before the Magistrate, and the Special Judge, from time to time. This does not mean that the ability of the accused to assert their rights should penalise them. But one of the factors to be considered in determining whether as accused persons has been deprived of his right is the responsibility of the accused for asserting his rights. Until the filing of the petitions before the Supreme court, there was no serious protest by the accused about any delay, whereas after the charge-sheet was filed, at least on two occasions the prosecuting agency expressed an anxiety to have the case disposed of as expeditiously as possible.

In the circumstances, a direction that the trial should start soon and proceed from day to day was all that was called for in the instant case. Raghubir Singh v. State of Bihar, (1986) 4 SCC 481: 1986 SCC (Cri) 511: AIR 1987 SC 149.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-1986]

[598] — Chs. XII (Ss. 154 to 176), IV-A (S. 36), V to VII (Ss. 41 to 60) — Crime detection — Scope of — Various steps involved in, enumerated — Delegable and non-delegable steps in, differentiated — The authority responsible for each step, held (per curiam), is the officer in charge of the police station, though he might have delegated some steps

Under CrPC, investigation consists of proceeding to the spot, ascertainment of the facts and circumstances of the case, discovery and arrest of the suspected offender, collection of evidence and formation of the opinion as to whether on the material collected there is a case to place the accused before a Magistrate for trial, and if so, taking the necessary steps for the same by the filing of a charge-sheet under Section 173. The scheme of CrPC shows that while it is permissible for an officer in charge of a police station to depute some subordinate officer to conduct some of these steps in the investigation, the responsibility for each one of the above steps is that of the officer in charge of the police station. The final step in the investigation, namely, the formation of the opinion as to whether or not there is a case to place the accused on trial is to be of the officer in charge of the police station and this function cannot be delegated and can be performed by no other authority. The formation of the opinion of the police on the material collected during the investigation as to whether judicial scrutiny is warranted or not is entirely left to the officer in charge of the police station. There is no provision for delegation of the above function regarding formation of the opinion but only a provision entitling the superior officers to supervise or participate under Section 36 CrPC. (Paras 20, 21 and 31). M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor scam) v. Union of India, (2007) 1 SCC 110: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 264: AIR 2007 SC 1087: (2007) 53 AIC 192 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.B. Sinha[2], S.H. Kapadia[1] and D.K. Jain[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-2006]

Section 154 — FIR

— S. 154 See also S. 154, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 991 et seq. in Vol. 2

Bird's eye view

(1) Generally 234
(2) Value, evidentiary value and use of FIR 248
(3) Reliability and Validity of FIR 257
(4) Powers, Role and Duty of police in respect of FIR 376
(5) Interference by court 383
(6) Non-initiation of proceedings after FIR lodged 388
(7) Miscellaneous 388

Synopsis

(1) Generally 234
  (i) Nature, Object and effect of FIR 234
  (ii) What amounts to and requirements of FIR 235
    1. Generally 235
    2. When, where and how FIR to be recorded 238
    3. Who can lodge FIR 239
    4. FIRs in Cross-cases 240
    5. Dying declaration when can be treated as FIR 241
    6. Telephone message if FIR 241
    7. Daily Diary/General Diary entry 244
    8. Information if first information or statement of witness under S. 161, etc. 245
    9. Other 247
  (iii) FIR Book 248
(2) Value, evidentiary value and use of FIR 248
(3) Reliability and Validity of FIR 258
  (i) Anonymous complaint 258
  (ii) Contents of FIR 259
    1. Generally 259
    2. Form and language of FIR 259
    3. Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR 261
    4. Discrepancies/Inconsistencies/Contradictions in or vis-à-vis FIR 283
    5. Corrections/Overwriting/Interpolation in FIR 287

Synopsis (contd.)

(3) Reliability and Validity of FIR (contd.)

(ii) Contents of FIR (contd.)

6. Embellishments/Improvements in FIR 289
7. Inculpative statement in FIR 289

(iii) FIR and other evidence 290
(iv) Doubt regarding lodging of FIR 292
(v) Falsity of/Fabricated FIR 293
(vi) FIR and Time 295

1. Generally 295
2. Ante-timed FIR 296
3. Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate (i.e. the report as required to be sent to Magistrate under S. 157 r/w S. 158) 303
4. Delay in lodging/filing FIR 317
5. Non-mention of time of dispatch in FIR 364
6. Promptness/Haste in filing FIR 365

(vii) FIR not filed/lodged 367
(viii) Mala fides 367
(ix) Multiple FIRs/Cases 369

(4) Powers, Role and Duty of police in respect of FIR 376

(i) Generally 376
(ii) Jurisdiction to lodge FIR 379
(iii) Preliminary enquiry 380
(iv) Refusal to register FIR 380

(5) Interference by court 383

(i) Transfer of FIR 383
(ii) Refusal to file FIR by police/Direction to file FIR 384
(iii) Quashing of FIR 385
(iv) Practice and Procedure 388

(6) Non-initiation of proceedings after FIR lodged 388

(7) Miscellaneous 388

— S. 154 See Ss. 2(c) & (d), 154, 155(2) & 190(1)(a) and (b)
See also Ss. 41 and 154
See also Ss. 150, 154 and 155 and S. 2(h)
See also Ss. 156, 154, 157 and 190
See also Ss. 156, 154, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 156, 157, 154, 190 and Ch. XII
See also Ss. 156(3) and 154
See also Ss. 156(3), 173(2), 154 and 190(1)(a) & (b)
See also Ss. 157 and 154
See also Ss. 157, 154 and 162 & 2(h)
See also Ss. 157, 154 and 482
See also Ss. 157, 156 and 154, 155
See also Ss. 157, 156, 154, 159, 160 and 161
See also Ss. 157, 156, 154 and 190
See also Ss. 161 and 154
See also Ss. 161, 162 and 154
See also Ss. 161, 162(1) and 154
See also Ss. 162 and 154
See also Ss. 162, 154, 157 and 2(h)
See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311
See also Ss. 165, 102, 100(4) and 154
See also Ss. 172 and 154
See also Ss. 173 and 154
See also Ss. 173(8) and 154
See also Ss. 177, 178, 482, 156, 162 and 154
See also Ss. 190, 154, 156 & 157
See also Ss. 190, 154, 173 and 200
See also Ss. 190, 154, 173, 200 and 204
See also Ss. 190 and 200 to 203, 154 and 156
See also Ss. 190, 204, 173(2), 154, 162 and 319
See also Ss. 190(1) and 200 & 154, 156
See also Ss. 197, 154 and 202
See also Ss. 207 and 154
See also Ss. 211 and 154
See also Ss. 319, 154, 156, 173, 190, 204, 209
See also Ss. 378, 386 and 154
See also Ss. 482 and 2(c) & (d), 154
See also Ss. 482 and 2(d), 154, 155 and 190, 200
See also Ss. 482 & 154
See also Ss. 482 and 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170, 173
See also Ss. 482, 154 and 156(2)
See also Ss. 482, 154, 156(3) and 157
See also Ss. 482, 154 and 157
See also Ss. 482 and 154, 211 & 210
See also Ss. 482, 156 & 154
See also Ss. 482, 156, 154 & 157
See also Ss. 482, 156(3) & 154
See also Ss. 482 and 157 & 154
See also Ss. 482, 468, 469(b) & (c), 154 and 473

(1) Generally

(i) Nature, Object and effect of FIR

See also Section 154, '(2) Value, evidentiary value and use of FIR', and

'(3) Reliability and Validity of FIR', below

[599] — S. 154 — FIR — Object of — Held, is only to set the criminal law in motion (Para 13). Bhagwan Singh v. State of M.P., (2002) 4 SCC 85: 2002 SCC (Cri) 736: AIR 2002 SC 1621.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-2002]

[600] — S. 154 — FIR — Object and value of — Denial of, by person by whom lodged — Effect — Reiterated, FIR not a substantive piece of evidence — However, cannot be given a complete go-by — Can be used to corroborate evidence of person lodging it — In present case, due to discrepancies in evidence and no secondary evidence led to ascertain veracity of FIR, the same cannot be wholly relied on — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 145 and 157 (Paras 24 and 25). C. Magesh v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 5 SCC 645.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision : 30-4-2010]

Baldev Singh v. State of Punjab, (1990) 4 SCC 692: 1991 SCC (Cri) 61, relied on

[601] — S. 154 — FIR — Nature, object and contents of

The first information report is a report giving information of the commission of a cognizable crime which may be made by the complainant or by any other person knowing about the commission of such an offence. It is intended to set the criminal law in motion. It is not the requirement of law that the minute details be recorded in the FIR lodged immediately after the occurrence. The fact of the state of mental agony of the person making the FIR who generally is the victim himself, if not dead, or the relations or associates of the deceased victim apparently under the shock of the occurrence reported has always to be kept in mind. The object of insisting upon lodging of the FIR is to obtain the earliest information regarding the circumstance in which the crime was committed. (Para 15). Ravi Kumar v. State of Punjab, (2005) 9 SCC 315: AIR 2005 SC 1929: 2005 Cri LJ 1742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-2005]

[602] — S. 154 — Effect of filing FIR — Held, registration of an FIR involves only the process of entering the substance of the information relating to commission of the cognizable offence in a book kept by the officer in charge of the police station

Any Judicial Magistrate, before taking cognizance of the offence, can order investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC. But if he does so, he is not to examine the complainant on oath because he was not taking cognizance of any offence therein. For the purpose of enabling the police to start investigation it is open to the Magistrate to direct the police to register an FIR. There is nothing illegal in doing so. After all registration of an FIR involves only the process of entering the substance of the information relating to the commission of the cognizable offence in a book kept by the officer in charge of the police station. Even if a Magistrate does not say in so many words while directing investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC that an FIR should be registered, it is the duty of the officer in charge of the police station to register the FIR regarding the cognizable offence disclosed by the complainant because that police officer could take further steps contemplated in Chapter XII CrPC only thereafter. (Para 11). Mohd. Yousuf v. Afaq Jahan, (2006) 1 SCC 627: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 460: AIR 2006 SC 705: (2006) 1 KLT 939: (2006) 2 Guj LR 1742: (2006) 38 AIC 70 (SC): 2006 Cri LJ 788.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-1-2006]

Suresh Chand Jain v. State of M.P., (2001) 2 SCC 628: 2001 SCC (Cri) 377, relied on

Gopal Das Sindhi v. State of Assam, AIR 1961 SC 986: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 39; Narayandas Bhagwandas Madhavdas v. State of W.B., (1960) 1 SCR 93: AIR 1959 SC 1118: 1959 Cri LJ 1368, considered

(ii) What amounts to and requirements of FIR

Synopsis

1. Generally 235
2. When, where and how FIR to be recorded 238
3. Who can lodge FIR 239
4. FIRs in Cross-cases 240
5. Dying declaration when can be treated as FIR 241
6. Telephone message if FIR 241
7. Daily Diary/General Diary entry 244
8. Information if first information or statement of witness under S. 161, etc. 245
9. Other 247

1. Generally

See also Section 154, '(2) Value, evidentiary value and use of FIR', and

'(3) Reliability and Validity of FIR', below

[603] — S. 154 — FIR — Dispute as to which of the two informations recorded in a case is FIR — Held, is a matter which the court trying the accused has jurisdiction to decide

The question as to whether the GD entry, or the FIR formally recorded on 20-10-1990, is the FIR in the case, is a matter which may be agitated before the trial court. Where two informations are recorded and it is contended before the court that the one projected by the prosecution as the FIR is not really the FIR but some other information recorded earlier is the FIR, that is a matter which the court trying the accused has jurisdiction to decide. (Para 23). CBI v. Tapan Kumar Singh, (2003) 6 SCC 175: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1305: AIR 2003 SC 4140: 2003 Cri LJ 2322.

(1)(ii)1. What amounts to and requirements of FIR - Generally (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-2003]

[604] — S. 154 — FIR — Message or communication when qualifies as FIR

In order for a message or communication to be qualified to be an FIR, there must be something in the nature of a complaint or accusation or at least some information of the crime given with the object of setting the police or criminal law into motion. It is true that an FIR need not contain the minutest details as to how the offence had taken place nor it is required to contain the names of the offenders or the witnesses. But it must at least contain some information about the crime committed as also some information about the manner in which the cognizable offence has been committed. A cryptic message recording an occurrence cannot be termed as an FIR. (Para 16). Patai v. State of U.P., (2010) 4 SCC 429.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dr. M.K. Sharma and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision : 30-3-2010]

Ramsinh Bavaji Jadeja v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 2 SCC 685: 1994 SCC (Cri) 609, relied on [605] — S. 154 — FIR — Nature and requirements of — Must disclose the commission of a cognizable offence — But mentioning of all details about the occurrence in FIR, held, not necessary (Para 14). Hem Raj v. State of Punjab, (2003) 12 SCC 241: AIR 2003 SC 4259: 2003 Cri LJ 4987.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-9-2003]

[606] — S. 154 — FIR — What is — Earliest information when not FIR — Held, earliest information in regard to commission of a cognizable offence is to be treated as FIR which sets criminal law in motion and investigation commences on that basis — There can be no second FIR — However, information given to police to rush to place of incident to control the situation, held, need not necessarily amount to the FIR — [Ed.: See Shortnote D in SCC; §[608] herein] (Paras 34 and 38). Pandurang Chandrakant Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 10 SCC 773: (2009) 83 AIC 38 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2009]

T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1048; Ramesh Baburao Devaskar v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 13 SCC 501: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 212, followed

[607] — Ss. 154, 157, 2(h) and 174 — Investigation, inquest and FIR — Validity, authenticity and evidentiary value — Telephonic information being basis of investigation and inquest — Formal FIR being lodged afterwards — Held, investigation and inquest can start with telephonic information even prior to lodging of formal FIR and it would not affect trial and evidence in court — Submission that FIR loses its authenticity if lodged after inquest is a general proposition and cannot be universally applied — Prosecution case cannot be dismissed only because there is discrepancy in inquest report — Neither FIR, nor inquest report nor post-mortem report can be regarded as substantive pieces of evidence — FIR or inquest report may only be used to contradict or corroborate the maker thereof — Non-mention of accused in inquest report, held, may not mean that FIR was non-existent prior to inquest

Submission that FIR loses its authenticity if it is lodged after the inquest report is recorded is a general proposition and cannot be universally applied. No doubt the inquest report was prepared by PW 8 at 9.30 p.m. and the formal FIR was lodged by PW 1 at 11.30 p.m. But it is also relevant that the investigation was started by PW 8 after receipt of telephonic information from PW 3 at 6:30 pm that the deceased was lying in a serious condition. And thereafter inquest report was prepared. (Paras 21 and 20)

The principle of law in Sections 2(h) and 157 CrPC is that when information regarding a cognizable offence is furnished to the police that information will be regarded as the FIR and all enquiries held by the police subsequent thereto would be treated as investigation, even though the formal registration of the FIR takes place only later. (Paras 26 to 31)

Neither FIR, nor inquest report nor post-mortem can be regarded as substantive pieces of evidence. FIR or inquest report may only be used to contradict or corroborate the maker thereof. Therefore, there is no merit in the submission of the counsel for the appellants. Any discrepancy occurring in the inquest report can neither be termed to be fatal nor even a suspicious circumstance which would warrant a benefit to the accused and the resultant dismissal of the prosecution case. Assuming that some report was made on telephone and that was the real first information report, this by itself would not affect the appreciation of evidence made by the Sessions Judge and the conclusions of fact drawn by him. (Paras 31, 23 and 25)

The object of the inquest proceedings under Section 174 CrPC is to ascertain whether a person has died under unnatural circumstances or an unnatural death and if so, what the cause of death is. The question regarding the details as to how the deceased was assaulted or who assaulted him or under what circumstances he was assaulted, is foreign to the ambit and scope of the proceedings under Section 174 CrPC. Mention of the name of the accused and eyewitness in the inquest report is not necessary. Due to non-mentioning of the name of the accused in the inquest report, it cannot be inferred that FIR was not in existence at the time of inquest proceedings. (Paras 22 and 24). Sambhu Das v. State of Assam, (2010) 10 SCC 374: AIR 2010 SC 3300.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-2010]

Maha Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1976) 1 SCC 644: 1976 SCC (Cri) 135; State of U.P. v. Bhagwant Kishore Joshi, AIR 1964 SC 221: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 140; Pedda Narayana v. State of A.P., (1975) 4 SCC 153: 1975 SCC (Cri) 427; George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1232; Suresh Rai v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 84: 2000 SCC (Cri) 764, relied on

Balaka Singh v. State of Punjab, (1975) 4 SCC 511: 1975 SCC (Cri) 601; Ramesh Baburao Devaskar v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 13 SCC 501: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 212, considered

[608] — Ss. 154 and 162 — FIR — Contents of FIR — Information when to be treated as FIR — Earliest information of incident when not FIR — Held, FIR, is not expected to be encyclopaedia of events, but must contain some essential and relevant details of the incident — Cryptic information about commission of a cognizable offence irrespective of the nature and details of such information may not be treated as FIR — In the instant case, information (Ext. 61) given by PW 5 that several persons armed with deadly weapons were attacking members of his political party, was entered in General Diary based on which PW 18 IO immediately left for place of occurrence — No FIR could thus be recorded as first priority of IO was to control the incident since by that time none had died — It would have been rather unusual for IO to insist on taking down entire incident by way of FIR, rather than rushing to place of incident — Moreover, it cannot be said that moment PW 18 left the police station, investigation had commenced — Purpose of information then was only to request officer in charge of police station to reach place of occurrence — Besides, neither was any inquest carried out, nor were any steps towards investigation taken before registering FIR — In such circumstances FIR (A-31) not affected by any legal infirmity (Paras 38 to 41). Pandurang Chandrakant Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 10 SCC 773: (2009) 83 AIC 38 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2009]

Vikram v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 12 SCC 332: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 362, relied on [609] — Ss. 154 and 162 — FIR — What amounts to — Initiation of investigation without recording FIR — Whether a case of — Investigation — What amounts to — Pursuant to very cryptic information regarding death of a person at about 8.30 p.m. to 8.45 p.m. residing within jurisdiction of his police station, PW 21 IO going to place of occurrence without making a GD entry or getting an FIR lodged — Held, merely going to place of occurrence and making some survey would not amount to making an investigation in absence of any evidence to show that at that point of time PW 21 had seized any articles or interrogated any witnesses or took any other action in initiating or in furtherance of investigation — Further held, even assuming that PW 21 could have entered said information in the GD, yet said entry could not be treated as FIR because he had no details about the incident in question then — Besides, place of occurrence was in total darkness, and even complainants were unavailable, therefore bringing them to police station where there was sufficient light and thereafter recording complaint, cannot in any manner cast doubt on veracity of prosecution case — Hence, it cannot be said that FIR was hit by S. 162 (Paras 22 to 27). Satish Narayan Sawant v. State of Goa, (2009) 17 SCC 724: 2009 Cri LJ 4655: (2010) 1 ECrN 464: (2009) 82 AIC 89 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2009]

State of U.P. v. Bhagwant Kishore Joshi, AIR 1964 SC 221: (1964) 3 SCR 71; Animireddy Venkata Ramana v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (2008) 5 SCC 368: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 600, followed

H.N. Rishbud and Inder Singh v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196, cited

[610] — S. 154 — FIR — What is — Purpose and contents of — Evidentiary value — State of mind of complainant or victim making the complaint should be kept in mind — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 161 and 145

The first information report is a report giving information of the commission of a cognizable crime which may be made by the complainant or by any other person knowing about the commission of such an offence. It is intended to set the criminal law in motion. Any information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence is required to be reduced to writing by the officer in charge of the police station which has to be signed by the person giving it and the substance thereof is required to be entered in a book to be kept by such officer in such form as the State Government may prescribe in that behalf. It has been held time and again that the FIR is not a substantive piece of evidence and can only be used to corroborate the statement of the maker under Section 161 of the Evidence Act or to contradict him under Section 145 of that Act. It cannot be used as evidence against the maker at the trial if he himself becomes an accused nor to corroborate or contradict other witnesses. It is not the requirement of law that the minutest details be recorded in the FIR lodged immediately after the occurrence. The fact of the state of mental agony of the person making the FIR who generally is the victim himself, if not dead, or the relations or associates of the deceased victim apparently under the shock of the occurrence reported has always to be kept in mind. (Para 5). Bijoy Singh v. State of Bihar, (2002) 9 SCC 147: AIR 2002 SC 1949: 2002 Cri LJ 2623.

(1)(ii)1. What amounts to and requirements of FIR - Generally (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-4-2002]

Meharaj Singh (L/Nk.) v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391: 1995 Cri LJ 457, relied on

But see Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450

[611] — S. 154 — FIR — Requirements of — Cryptic information from somebody who does not disclose any authentic knowledge about commission of cognizable offence would not be sufficient to register an FIR

Under Section 154 of the Code the information must unmistakably relate to the commission of a cognizable offence and it shall be reduced to writing (if given orally) and shall be signed by its maker. The next requirement is that the substance thereof shall be entered in a book kept in the police station in such form as the State Government has prescribed. First information report (FIR) has to be prepared and it shall be forwarded to the magistrate who is empowered to take cognizance of such offence upon such report. The officer in charge of a police station is not obliged to prepare FIR on any nebulous information received from somebody who does not disclose any authentic knowledge about commission of the cognizable offence. It is open to the officer-in-charge to collect more information containing details about the occurrence, if available, so that he can consider whether a cognizable offence has been committed warranting investigation thereto. Binay Kumar Singh v. State of Bihar, (1997) 1 SCC 283: 1997 SCC (Cri) 333: AIR 1997 SC 322: 1997 Cri LJ 362.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-1996]

Tapinder Singh v. State of Punjab, (1970) 2 SCC 113: 1970 SCC (Cri) 328; Soma Bhai v. State of Gujarat, (1975) 4 SCC 257: 1975 SCC (Cri) 515; State of U.P. v. P.A. Madhu, (1984) 4 SCC 83: 1984 SCC (Cri) 598, relied on

2. When, where and how FIR to be recorded

See also Section 154, '(3)(ii)6. Embellishments/Improvements in FIR', below

[612] — Ss. 154 and 172 — FIR to be recorded first and then entries to be made in daily diary (Para 16). Paramjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2007) 13 SCC 530: AIR 2008 SC 441: (2008) 61 AIC 142 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-2007]

[613] — Ss. 154 and 172 — Provision in Punjab Police Rules for entering substance of FIR in police station daily diary — Effect of, vis-à-vis CrPC — Rules do not override provisions of the Code but are meant for guidance of police officers in the State and supplement provisions of the Code but do not supplant them — Punjab Police Rules, 1934 — If override provisions of CrPC (Para 18). Paramjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2007) 13 SCC 530: AIR 2008 SC 441: (2008) 61 AIC 142 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-2007]

[614] — S. 154 — FIR — When and where to be recorded — Police arriving at place of occurrence soon after its having taken place — PW 1 claiming to have given his statement, but it not being taken note of by police — Not known whether appellant-accused named in this purported first version of the occurrence — No explanation furnished by prosecution as to why police did not record said statement at place of occurrence itself — Held, as police was there, statement given by PW 1 should have been taken by police and forwarded to police station for recording FIR and there could have been no reason for PW 1 to go to police station for lodging FIR — PW 1 naming other persons whom he had informed of the occurrence soon after, and one of them even accompanying him to police station to lodge FIR — None of these persons examined — In light of the above, evidence of PW 1, sole testimony on which conviction was based, vitiated and could not be relied upon — Acquittal ordered (Para 4). Dorai v. State of T.N., (2004) 11 SCC 742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2004]

[615] — S. 154 — FIR — Information about the incident given to Police Patel — FIR thereafter prepared and promptly lodged in police station — On facts held, non-production of a report signed by the complainant and given to the Police Patel would not go against the prosecution case. Patil Hari Meghji v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 2 SCC 270: 1983 SCC (Cri) 378: AIR 1983 SC 488: 1983 MLJ (Cri) 509: 1983 Cri LJ 826.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-1983]

[616] — S. 154 — FIR — Information to the Police Station Officer that there was a bomb attack on a jeep resulting in death of two persons and injuries to others — Police Station Officer not registering the case but sending information to his superior officer — After arrival of that superior officer a written complaint filed by the complainant — Held, on facts, it could not be said that the said written report was not an FIR or that for preparing the same the said police officer had taken any undue interest or monitored the same. Uppari Venkataswamy v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1996) 7 SCC 232: 1996 SCC (Cri) 284.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1995]

[617] — S. 154 — First informant going straight to the Police Station which was 18 kms away for lodging the FIR instead of lodging report to the sarpanch of the local panchayat which was at a distance of only one mile — Held, decision of the first informant cannot be said to be unusual one — Every person reacts in his own way. State of Karnataka v. Moin Patel, (1996) 8 SCC 167: 1996 SCC (Cri) 632: AIR 1996 SC 3041.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-1996]

[618] — S. 154 — Failure of informant to correctly recall the type of paper used for recording the FIR held, on facts, not fatal. Sone Lal v. State of U.P., (1978) 4 SCC 302: 1978 SCC (Cri) 587: AIR 1978 SC 1142: 1978 Cri LJ 1122: 1978 ALJ 530.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-1978]

3. Who can lodge FIR

[619] — Ss. 154, 190 and 200 — Locus standi of complainant irrelevant — Any person can file complaint irrespective of his motive or prejudice

Per Bhagwati, C.J. & Oza, J.

A criminal proceeding is not a proceeding for vindication of a private grievance but it is a proceeding initiated for the purpose of punishment to the offender in the interest of the society. It is for maintaining stability and orderliness in the society that certain acts are constituted offences and the right is given to any citizen to set the machinery of the criminal law in motion for the purpose of bringing the offender to book.

Locus standi of the complainant is a concept foreign to criminal jurisprudence. Any citizen can lodge a first information report or file a complaint and set the machinery of the criminal law in motion and his locus standi to do so cannot be questioned, oppose such withdrawal. If he can be a complainant or initiator of criminal prosecution, he should equally be entitled to oppose withdrawal of the criminal prosecution which has already been initiated at his instance. If the offence for which a prosecution is being launched is an offence against the society and not merely an individual wrong, any member of the society must have locus to initiate a prosecution as also to resist withdrawal of such prosecution, if initiated. Sheonandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, (1987) 1 SCC 288: 1987 SCC (Cri) 82: AIR 1987 SC 877: 1987 Cri LJ 793.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, C.J.[1] and E.S. Venkataramiah[2], V. Khalid[3], G.L. Oza[1] and S. Natarajan[4], JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-1986]

[620] — Ss. 154 and 162 — Complaint details recorded by police at hospital from eyewitness and not the injured who was conscious — Held, not improper — Hence, not a good reason to record acquittal

PW 1, the complainant eyewitness stated that when PW 2, the victim was taken to the hospital, he was in an unconscious state and after admitting the victim in the hospital, while PW 3 was giving PW 2 treatment PW 7 came and at that time, he was informed by PW 1 that PW 2 was not in a position to give statement, since he was unconscious. Even assuming that PW 2 was conscious at that time, the nine serious injuries found on various parts of the body of the victim would clearly show that he could not have given full details to PW 7. Under those circumstances, obtaining of Ext. P-1, complaint from PW 1 is quite proper. (Para 14)

Merely because PW 2 was conscious at that time, it cannot be said that the statement should not have been recorded from PW 1 and the same is doubtful. No law prohibits the police officer from recording complaint relating to the occurrence, that too, from an eyewitness. The ground of acquittal as recorded by the trial court is not at all a proper ground. (Para 15). Murugan v. State, (2008) 16 SCC 40: AIR 2009 SC 72: (2008) 71 AIC 201 (SC).

(1)(ii)3. What amounts to and requirements of FIR - Who can lodge FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-9-2008]

[621] — S. 154 — FIR — Reliability of FIR — FIR if a concocted document because informant PW 1 seriously injured and was not in a position to give statement; and that accused had been implicated falsely at instance of PW 1's group leader who was with PW 1 in PW 1 hospital room — Held, though PW 1 was grievously injured, but on the face of clear, categorical and unambiguous endorsement made by doctor (PW 10) attending him that he was in a fit and proper condition to give statement, and the fact that PW 11 recorded his statement in presence of PW 10, there cannot be even slightest doubt about authenticity of FIR. Annareddy Sambasiva Reddy v. State of A.P., (2009) 12 SCC 546: AIR 2009 SC 2661: (2009) 78 AIC 222 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2009]

[622] — S. 154 — FIR — Who can lodge — Held, person not witnessing the occurrence can also be an informant — But mentioning of all details about the occurrence in FIR, held, not necessary

In the instant case, soon after the occurrence PW 3 rushed to PW 6 (SI), who was then present in front of a cinema hall on routine patrolling duty, and informed him about the assault on deceased T. When the police party reached the hospital, it found that T was lying dead. PW 6 recorded the statement of PW 2 in the hospital and sent that information to police station where on its basis the formal FIR was drawn up. The High Court observed that the first information as to the manner in which the occurrence had taken place was given by PW 2 and not by PW 3, and, therefore, the trial court was not justified in holding that the first information report was really the report made earlier by PW 3.

Held :

Since it is not clear from the record as to what was the nature of information given by PW 3 to PW 6 as the same was not recorded, it is not possible to hold categorically that the information given by PW 3 must be treated as FIR. However, the High Court was not right in holding that unless the manner in which the occurrence took place is stated in the report, the same cannot be treated as FIR. The law is very clear and well settled that a report which discloses the commission of a cognizable offence must be treated as FIR. It does not matter whether the person lodging the report had witnessed the commission of the offence or not, nor is it necessary that all details should be mentioned in the report about the manner of occurrence, the participants in the crime, the time and place of occurrence etc. The requirement of Section 154 CrPC is only this that the report must disclose the commission of a cognizable offence and that is sufficient to set the investigating machinery into action. (Para 21). Hem Raj v. State of Punjab, (2003) 12 SCC 241: AIR 2003 SC 4259: 2003 Cri LJ 4987.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-9-2003]

[623] — S. 154 — FIR lodged by deceased's sister — Considering her inexperience of life, the promptness with which she gave the FIR and the details she mentioned therein, held, contents of the FIR credible. Dudh Nath Pandey v. State of U.P., (1981) 2 SCC 166: 1981 SCC (Cri) 379: AIR 1981 SC 911: (1981) 2 SCR 771: 1981 Cri LJ 618: 1981 ALJ 228.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and A.P. Sen, J. [Date of decision: 11-2-1981]

[624] — S. 154 — Personal knowledge of incident not necessary for lodging FIR

Section 154 does not require that the report must be given by a person who has personal knowledge of the incident reported. The section speaks of an information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence given to an officer in charge of a police station. Hallu v. State of M.P., (1974) 4 SCC 300: 1974 SCC (Cri) 462: AIR 1974 SC 1936: (1974) 3 SCR 652: 1974 Cri LJ 1385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-3-1974]

4. FIRs in Cross-cases

See also Section 154, '3.(ix) Multiple FIRs/Cases', below

[625] — S. 154 — FIR lodged by party of accused earlier than the victims — Immaterial when the cross-case set up by them held untrue. Gajendra Singh v. State of U.P., (1975) 4 SCC 241: 1975 SCC (Cri) 499: AIR 1975 SC 1703: 1975 Cri LJ 1494.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-1975]

[626] — S. 154 — FIR — Cross-version in FIR — Direction to register separate FIR on basis of such cross-version, although earlier FIR having mention of incident as well as retaliation — Propriety — In peculiar circumstances, impugned order modified with direction that complaint case shall be taken to its logical end and court concerned shall deal with the matter on basis of evidence laid before it — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302, 307 r/w S. 34 (Paras 8 and 9). Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 15 SCC 219.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

5. Dying declaration when can be treated as FIR

See also CRIMINAL TRIAL — 'Dying declaration' in Vol. 3

See also under CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, 1973 — 'S. 164', below

[627] — S. 154 — Dying declarations not recorded by the Magistrate — Effect — Held, by itself cannot be a ground to reject the whole prosecution case — It would depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case and no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down therefor — However, where the declaration is wholly inconsistent or contradictory statements are made or if it appears from the records that the dying declaration is not reliable, a question may arise as to why the Magistrate was not called for, but ordinarily the same may not be insisted upon — Further held, statement of the injured, in event of her death may also be treated as FIR — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 32 (Paras 15, 18, 20, 21, 22 and 23). Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 12 SCC 283: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 715: AIR 2006 SC 3221: 2006 Cri LJ 4646: (2006) 47 AIC 600 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-9-2006]

State of Karnataka v. Shariff, (2003) 2 SCC 473: 2003 SCC (Cri) 561; Ram Bihari Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1998) 4 SCC 517: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1085; Laxman v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 6 SCC 710: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1491, relied on

Kamla v. State of Punjab, (1993) 1 SCC 1: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1, considered

[628] — S. 154 — FIR — Admissibility of as dying declaration — Report of occurrence dictated by injured, recorded by police officer at police station — Injured dying thereafter — FIR destroyed not brought on record — Treatment of such report as dying declaration — Conviction on basis of — Legality — Held, the report dictated by the deceased fully satisfied all the ingredients for being made admissible as a dying declaration — It contains a narrative by the deceased as to the cause of his death, completely corroborated from the testimony of eyewitnesses and the medical evidence on record — Despite best efforts, the original FIR could not be produced as the registers relating to non-cognizable offences were destroyed after a lapse of two years — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 32(1) (Paras 16 and 17). Dharam Pal v. State of U.P., (2008) 17 SCC 337: AIR 2008 SC 920: (2008) 62 AIC 65 (SC): (2008) 1 All LJ 721: 2008 Cri LJ 1016.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-1-2008]

State of H.P. v. Mast Ram, (2004) 8 SCC 660, followed

6. Telephone message if FIR

See also Section 154, '(1)(ii)2. When, where and how FIR to be recorded', above

[629] — S. 154 — Telephonic message to police that gunshots were being fired — Such cryptic information sent at the moment of utter chaos and confusion during the occurrence is not an FIR — Non-mention of assailant's name therefore cannot discredit the prosecution case. State of U.P. v. P.A. Madhu, (1984) 4 SCC 83: 1984 SCC (Cri) 598: AIR 1984 SC 1523: 1984 Cri LJ 1438.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, A. Varadarajan and Sabyasachi Mukharji, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-7-1984

[630] — S. 154 — Information about commission of cognizable offence given "in person" at police station and given "on telephone" — Differential treatment — Rationale for — Held, information given on telephone to police is not for purpose of lodging FIR but rather to request police to reach place of occurrence, whereas information given in person is for lodging FIR — Furthermore, merely because information given on phone is prior in time would not mean that same would be treated as FIR (Paras 113 and 114). Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

Ramesh Baburao Devaskar v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 13 SCC 501: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 212, relied on

[631] — S. 154 — FIR — What constitute/does not constitute an FIR, restated — Cryptic telephonic message of a cognizable offence received by the police agency would not constitute an FIR

Where the information is only one which required the police to move to the place of occurrence and as a matter of fact the detailed statement was recorded after going to the place of occurrence, the said statement is to be treated as FIR. But some cryptic or anonymous oral message which did not in terms clearly specify a cognizable offence cannot be treated as FIR. The mere fact that the information was the first in point of time does not by itself clothe it with the character of FIR. A cryptic telephonic message of a cognizable offence received by the police agency would not constitute an FIR. (Para 10). State of A.P. v. V.V. Panduranga Rao, (2009) 15 SCC 211: 2009 Cri LJ 2972: (2009) 2 APLJ 171 (SC).

(1)(ii)6. What amounts to and requirements of FIR - Telephone message if FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-2009]

Ramsinh Bavaji Jadeja v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 2 SCC 685, relied on [632] — S. 154 — FIR — What is — Held, mere information received on phone by a police officer without any details as regards identity of accused or nature of injuries caused by victims as well as the name of the culprits may not be treated as FIR (Para 32). Ravishwar Manjhi v. State of Jharkhand, (2008) 16 SCC 561: AIR 2009 SC 1262.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-2008]

[633] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR — What is — Cryptic telephonic messages — Investigation — When commences — Held, cryptic telephonic messages cannot be treated as FIR as their object is only to get police to scene of offence and not to register FIR — Further held, investigation commences when information relating to offence is given to an officer in charge of a police station and is recorded under S. 154 — Phone call made immediately after occurrence to police constitutes FIR only when it is not vague and cryptic — In instant case, object of persons sending telephonic messages (at around 2.25 a.m.) including PW 70 was only to bring police to scene of offence and not register FIR — FIR was properly lodged as per statement of PW 2 around 3.40 a.m. on basis whereof investigation commenced [Paras 100 to 110 and 303(3)]. Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: 1955 Cri LJ 526: (1955) 1 SCR 1150, applied

State of U.P. v. P.A. Madhu, (1984) 4 SCC 83: 1984 SCC (Cri) 598; Tapinder Singh v. State of Punjab, (1970) 2 SCC 113: 1970 SCC (Cri) 328; Damodar v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 12 SCC 336: 2004 SCC (Cri) Supp 265; Ramsinh Bavaji Jadeja v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 2 SCC 685: 1994 SCC (Cri) 609, relied on

State of U.P. v. Bhagwant Kishore Joshi, AIR 1964 SC 221: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 140; King Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, (1943-44) 71 IA 203: AIR 1945 PC 18; CBI v. Tapan Kumar Singh, (2003) 6 SCC 175: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1305, distinguished on facts

Mehr Vajsi Deva v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1965 Guj 143, overruled

[634] — Ss. 154 and 162 — FIR — Telephonic message — If could be treated as FIR — DD entry showing that an unknown person had given information on telephone about a vehicle hitting the deceased — Said information, held, did not constitute FIR — Hence, written report lodged by eyewitness PW 15, held, was not hit by S. 162 CrPC (Paras 10 to 12). Damodar v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 12 SCC 336: AIR 2003 SC 4414: 2003 Cri LJ 5014.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2003]

Ramsinh Bavaji Jadeja v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 2 SCC 685: 1994 SCC (Cri) 609, followed

[635] — Ss. 154 and 162 — FIR — What is — Telephonic information received by IO — Later FIR recorded — Held, telephonic information not in the nature of FIR

A first information report was recorded at about 3 o'clock in the night. In the aforementioned situation, it cannot be said that the information received by the investigating officer on the telephone was of such a nature and contained such details which would amount to a first information report so as to attract Section 162 CrPC. (Para 12). Animireddy Venkata Ramana v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (2008) 5 SCC 368: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 600: AIR 2008 SC 1603: 2008 Cri LJ 2038.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

[636] — S. 154 — FIR — Telephonic conversation, being a cryptic information received and recorded in the daily diary regarding commission of offence, cannot be treated as an FIR (Para 9). Mundrika Mahto v. State of Bihar, (2002) 9 SCC 183: AIR 2002 SC 2042: 2002 Cri LJ 2810.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Y.K. Sabharwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2002]

[637] — S. 154 — FIR — Telephonic message about murder — Record of information cryptic for which no explanation furnished — In circumstances held, possibility of a design by leaving the report vague to fill in the blanks later not ruled out. Surinder Pal Jain v. Delhi Admn., 1993 Supp (3) SCC 681: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1096: AIR 1993 SC 1723: 1993 Cri LJ 1871.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-1993]

[638] — S. 154 — Investigation, inquest and FIR — Validity, authenticity and evidentiary value — Telephonic information being basis of investigation and inquest — Formal FIR being lodged afterwards — Held, investigation and inquest can start with telephonic information even prior to lodging of formal FIR and it would not affect trial and evidence in court — Submission that FIR loses its authenticity if lodged after inquest is a general proposition and cannot be universally applied — Prosecution case cannot be dismissed only because there is discrepancy in inquest report — Neither FIR, nor inquest report nor post-mortem report can be regarded as substantive pieces of evidence — FIR or inquest report may only be used to contradict or corroborate the maker thereof — Non-mention of accused in inquest report, held, may not mean that FIR was non-existent prior to inquest

Submission that FIR loses its authenticity if it is lodged after the inquest report is recorded is a general proposition and cannot be universally applied. No doubt the inquest report was prepared by PW 8 at 9.30 p.m. and the formal FIR was lodged by PW 1 at 11.30 p.m. But it is also relevant that the investigation was started by PW 8 after receipt of telephonic information from PW 3 at 6:30 pm that the deceased was lying in a serious condition. And thereafter inquest report was prepared. (Paras 21 and 20)

The principle of law in Sections 2(h) and 157 CrPC is that when information regarding a cognizable offence is furnished to the police that information will be regarded as the FIR and all enquiries held by the police subsequent thereto would be treated as investigation, even though the formal registration of the FIR takes place only later. (Paras 26 to 31)

Neither FIR, nor inquest report nor post-mortem can be regarded as substantive pieces of evidence. FIR or inquest report may only be used to contradict or corroborate the maker thereof. Therefore, there is no merit in the submission of the counsel for the appellants. Any discrepancy occurring in the inquest report can neither be termed to be fatal nor even a suspicious circumstance which would warrant a benefit to the accused and the resultant dismissal of the prosecution case. Assuming that some report was made on telephone and that was the real first information report, this by itself would not affect the appreciation of evidence made by the Sessions Judge and the conclusions of fact drawn by him. (Paras 31, 23 and 25)

The object of the inquest proceedings under Section 174 CrPC is to ascertain whether a person has died under unnatural circumstances or an unnatural death and if so, what the cause of death is. The question regarding the details as to how the deceased was assaulted or who assaulted him or under what circumstances he was assaulted, is foreign to the ambit and scope of the proceedings under Section 174 CrPC. Mention of the name of the accused and eyewitness in the inquest report is not necessary. Due to non-mentioning of the name of the accused in the inquest report, it cannot be inferred that FIR was not in existence at the time of inquest proceedings. (Paras 22 and 24). Sambhu Das v. State of Assam, (2010) 10 SCC 374: AIR 2010 SC 3300.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-2010]

Maha Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1976) 1 SCC 644: 1976 SCC (Cri) 135; State of U.P. v. Bhagwant Kishore Joshi, AIR 1964 SC 221: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 140; Pedda Narayana v. State of A.P., (1975) 4 SCC 153: 1975 SCC (Cri) 427; George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1232; Suresh Rai v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 84: 2000 SCC (Cri) 764, relied on

Balaka Singh v. State of Punjab, (1975) 4 SCC 511: 1975 SCC (Cri) 601; Ramesh Baburao Devaskar v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 13 SCC 501: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 212, considered

[639] — S. 154 — Telephonic message — When constitutes an FIR — Cryptic message given on telephone by a Head Constable that in a fight a person had died and his dead body had been brought to the hospital — Police officer having received the said message reaching the hospital and recording the statement of the brother of the deceased — Held; statement of the brother of the deceased and not the telephonic message of the Head Constable constituted the FIR

The question as to at what stage the investigation commences has to be considered and examined on the facts of each case, especially, when the information of a cognizable offence has been given on telephone. Any telephonic information about commission of a cognizable offence irrespective of the nature and details of such information cannot be treated as first information report. So if the telephonic message is cryptic in nature and the officer in charge, proceeds to the place of occurrence on basis of that information to find out the details of the nature of the offence itself, then it cannot be said that the information, which had been received by him on telephone, shall be deemed to be first information report. The object and purpose of giving such telephonic message is not to lodge the first information report, but to request the officer in charge of the police station to reach the place of occurrence. On the other hand, if the information given on telephone is not cryptic and on basis of that information, the officer in charge, is prima facie satisfied about the commission of a cognizable offence and he proceeds from the police station after recording such information, to investigate such offence then any statement made by any person in respect of the said offence including about the participants, shall be deemed to be a statement made by a person to the police officer "in the course of investigation", covered by S. 162 of the Code.

(1)(ii)6. What amounts to and requirements of FIR - Telephone message if FIR (contd.)

In the present case the I.O. having received the telephonic message, immediately reached the hospital and recorded the statement of the brother of the deceased. This statement must be treated as FIR. There is no dispute that in that statement the name of the appellant was mentioned by the brother of the deceased and details of the occurrence as disclosed by him in court were stated by him. This is apparent because during the cross-examination of the brother of the deceased, his attention has not been drawn to his statement recorded by the I.O., saying that he did not name the appellant as the assailant of his brother during his statement to the I.O. As such it has to be held that the witness (brother of the deceased) immediately after the occurrence, made a statement before the I.O. and named the appellant, as the person who gave a knife blow in the chest of the deceased. The Sessions Judge as well as the High Court were in error in treating the cryptic message given on the telephone by the Head Constable to the officer in charge, as FIR. Ramsinh Bavaji Jadeja v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 2 SCC 685: 1994 SCC (Cri) 609: 1994 Cri LJ 3067: (1994) 2 Punj LR 671: (1994) 1 MWN (Cri) 130: (1994) 1 GLH 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1994]

[640] — Ss. 154 and 162 — Vague and indefinite telephonic message making the investigating agency only to rush to the scene of occurrence — Does not constitute FIR — In circumstances of the case statement of mother of the victim recorded by the I.O. after reaching the spot rightly treated as FIR by the prosecution and the trial court. Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1994]

[641] — Ss. 154 and 161 — FIR — Telephonic information recorded in daily diary book — If an FIR — Murder — PW 1, eyewitness and one of the victims, giving details of the incident to PW 3, his nephew, when he arrived at the site soon after the incident — PW 3 reporting the incident to police over phone — On the basis of it police arriving at the scene and recording the statement of PW 1 — Held, the telephonic information given to police by PW 3, though he did not mention the names of the assailants, did disclose a cognizable offence and it was on the basis of such information recorded in the daily diary that the police started the investigation — It must therefore be treated as the FIR in the case and the statement made by PW 1 to police when it arrived at the site of occurrence must be treated as one recorded under S. 161 of CrPC — The High Court erred in treating the latter as the FIR. Sunil Kumar v. State of M.P., (1997) 10 SCC 570: 1997 SCC (Cri) 879: AIR 1997 SC 940: 1997 Cri LJ 1183.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-1997]

[642] — Ss. 154 and 162 — Complainant reaching police station and giving information to PSI, regarding a murder — PSI contacting main police station on phone for seeking instructions — PSI, then recording the FIR — The telephone call to the main police station does not constitute the FIR, so that the FIR, recorded by the PSI, was hit by S. 162 — CrPC, 1898, Ss. 154 and 162

It is true that under S. 154 of the Code the first information is the earliest report made to the police officer with a view to his taking action in the matter. In the instant case, the complainant had made the report regarding the occurrence having taken place to the PSI, who, however, before reducing it into writing, by way of abundant caution, tried to seek further instructions from the main police station. The message given to the main police station was too cryptic to constitute a first information report within the meaning of S. 154 of the Code and was meant to be only for the purpose of getting further instructions. Therefore the FIR was not rendered inadmissible. Soma Bhai v. State of Gujarat, (1975) 4 SCC 257: 1975 SCC (Cri) 515: AIR 1975 SC 1453: 1975 Cri LJ 1201.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-1975]

7. Daily Diary/General Diary entry

[643] — S. 154 — FIR — Daily Diary entry — If an FIR — On receiving telephonic message about the incident SI making entry in daily diary report that after receiving the information he was proceeding to spot along with other constables — Held, that was not an FIR — Hence, non-mentioning of the names of the assailants in that entry, held, could not have any bearing

PW 4 has stated that he gave telephonic message about the incident. The entry in DDR was made by SI that after receiving the aforesaid information he was proceeding to the spot along with some other police constables. This was not a first information report of the incident but merely an entry made regarding the departure of the police personnel to the place of occurrence and, therefore, the non-mention of the names of the assailants in this entry cannot have any bearing. (Para 19). Thaman Kumar v. State of UT, Chandigarh, (2003) 6 SCC 380: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1362: AIR 2003 SC 3975: 2003 Cri LJ 3070.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2003]

[644] — S. 154 — FIR — General Diary entry — Treatment of, as FIR — Held, GD entry may be treated as FIR in an appropriate case, where it discloses the commission of a cognizable offence (Para 16). CBI v. Tapan Kumar Singh, (2003) 6 SCC 175: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1305: AIR 2003 SC 4140: 2003 Cri LJ 2322.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-2003]

[645] — S. 154 — FIR — What is — General diary noting — Held, general diary containing noting of a report regarding cognizable offence, cannot be treated as FIR

Where the IO was informed about commission of a cognizable offence, a report to that effect might have been noted in the general diary but the same could not be treated as FIR. (Para 11). Animireddy Venkata Ramana v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (2008) 5 SCC 368: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 600: AIR 2008 SC 1603: 2008 Cri LJ 2038.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

8. Information if first information or statement of witness under S. 161, etc.

See also Ss. 161 and 162, below

See also Section 154, '(1)(ii)6. Telephone message if FIR', above, and

'(3)(ix) Multiple FIRs/Cases', below

[646] — Ss. 157, 154 and 162 & 2(h) — Investigation when commences — Telephonic FIR

The question as to at what stage the investigation commences has to be considered and examined on the facts of each case, especially, when the information of a cognizable offence has been given on telephone. If the information given on telephone is not cryptic and on basis of that information, the officer in charge, is prima facie satisfied about the commission of a cognizable offence and he proceeds from the police station after recording such information, to investigate such offence then any statement made by any person in respect of the said offence including about the participants, shall be deemed to be a statement made by a person to the police officer "in the course of investigation", covered by S. 162 of the Code. Ramsinh Bavaji Jadeja v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 2 SCC 685: 1994 SCC (Cri) 609: 1994 Cri LJ 3067: (1994) 2 Punj LR 671: (1994) 1 MWN (Cri) 130: (1994) 1 GLH 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1994]

[647] — Ss. 154 and 161 — FIR — Oral statement given to police disclosing cognizable offence — Police starting investigation on its basis — Written report given immediately thereafter cannot be treated as the FIR — It must be treated as a statement recorded under S. 161 and cannot be used for the purpose of corroboration of the evidence of its maker. Golla Jalla Reddy v. State of A.P., (1996) 8 SCC 565: 1996 SCC (Cri) 713: AIR 1996 SC 3244.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-1996]

[648] — Ss. 154 and 162 — Statement furnishing detailed particulars of the accused recorded at police station long after investigation commenced on receipt of telephonic information about the crime — Statement, held, not FIR but one recorded during investigation. Somappa Vamanappa Madar v. State of Mysore, (1980) 1 SCC 479: 1979 SCC (Cri) 910: AIR 1979 SC 1831: 1979 Cri LJ 1358.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-1979]

[649] — Ss. 154 and 162 — On facts and circumstances held, FIR recorded prior to recording of statements of witnesses — Hence, FIR not hit by S. 162. Pattad Amarappa v. State of Karnataka, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 389: 1990 SCC (Cri) 179: AIR 1989 SC 2004: 1989 Cri LJ 2167: (1989) 3 Crimes 39.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-1989]

[650] — S. 154 — More than one FIR — Permissibility — Test of sameness — Two FIRs in respect of same transaction — Subsequent to registration of an FIR, any further complaint in connection with the same or connected offence relating to the same incident or incidents which are parts of the same transaction, reiterated, not permissible — But if two FIRs pertain to two different incidents/crimes, second FIR is permissible

A first information report (FIR) was lodged by the Sub-Inspector of Police concerned, and a case CR No. I-154 of 2008 was registered at 1730 hours in Bavla Police Station regarding an altercation/incident which took place between two communities viz. Bharwad and Koli Patel at Village Dhedhal of District Ahmedabad, Gujarat. According to the SI, by the time he reached the place of occurrence upon receiving information at 10 a.m. the mob had dispersed. However, some of the witnesses stated that the clash was going on when the police arrived and the police resorted to force to disperse the mob. Thereafter, the SI received information that a clash was going on between the said communities in village Dhedhal near a pond.

(1)(ii)8. What amounts to and requirements of FIR - Information if first information or statement of witness under S. 161, etc. (contd.)

He summoned extra police force and reached the place where he found about 2000-3000 persons from both the communities, all with sticks, dhariyas, swords, etc., attacking each other. The police resorted to tear gas shells as well as to lathi charge to disperse the crowd. Several rounds of firing were resorted to in order to disperse the mob. In the incident, more than 20 persons were injured and three houses of members of the Bharwad community were set on fire. One person also died. No person was named in the said FIR. Another FIR being CR No. I-155 of 2008 was registered at Bavla Police Station on the same date at 2235 hours by a person belonging to Koli Patel community, alleging that an incident took place on the same day at 9.15 a.m. near the same pond in village Dhedhal in which two persons belonging to Koli Patel community died and 18 persons were named as accused. On completion of investigation, charge-sheet was filed against 12 accused persons and the case was committed to the Sessions Court. The accused in both the cases filed special criminal applications before the High Court — one for investigation of CR No. I-154 of 2008 by an independent agency like CBI and the other for quashing of CR No. I-154 of 2008 and CR No. I-155 of 2008. During pendency of the applications, three applications were made to quash and set aside the proceedings undertaken by the Sessions Court. The High Court quashed the FIR registered as CR No. I-155 of 2008 and clubbed the investigation of the FIR along with the investigation of the other FIR bearing CR No. I-154 of 2008 to the extent it was feasible. The court transferred the investigation to the State CID Crime Branch and directed the new investigating officer to investigate Bavla Police Station CR No. I-154 of 2008 as it stood prior to the deletion of Section 302 IPC with a further clarification that quashing of the FIR registered by Bavla Police Station i.e. CR No. I-155 of 2008 could not mean that the accused in respect of the said FIR had been discharged of the offences as they would face the charges in CR No. I-154 of 2008 and the accused who stood arrested in connection with CR No. I-155 of 2008 would stand arrested in connection with case CR No. I-154 of 2008. Hence, these appeals.

Disposing of the appeals,

Held :

An FIR under Section 154 CrPC is a very important document. It is the first information of a cognizable offence recorded by the officer in charge of the police station. It sets the machinery of criminal law in motion and marks the commencement of the investigation which ends with the formation of an opinion under Section 169 or 170 CrPC, as the case may be, and forwarding of a police report under Section 173 CrPC. Thus, it is quite possible that more than one piece of information be given to the police officer in charge of the police station in respect of the same incident involving one or more than one cognizable offences. In such a case, he need not enter each piece of information in the diary. All other information given orally or in writing after the commencement of the investigation into the facts mentioned in the first information report will be statements falling under Section 162 CrPC. (Para 20)

In case of a subsequent FIR, the court has to examine the facts and circumstances giving rise to both the FIRs and the test of sameness is to be applied to find out whether both the FIRs relate to the same incident in respect of the same occurrence or are in regard to the incidents which are two or more parts of the same transaction. If the answer is in the affirmative, the second FIR is liable to be quashed. However, in case, the contrary is proved, where the version in the second FIR is different and they are in respect of the two different incidents/crimes, the second FIR is permissible. In case in respect of the same incident the accused in the first FIR comes forward with a different version or counterclaim, investigation on both the FIRs has to be conducted. (Para 21)

In the present case, while comparing both the FIRs there is no doubt that both the incidents had occurred at the same place in close proximity of time. Therefore, they are two parts of the same transaction. More so, the death of one of the deceased persons has been mentioned in both the FIRs. Further, houses of the Bharwads were inside the village in contiguous areas and the offence had spread over the entire area as was evident from the panchnama of the scene of offence drawn in CR No. I-155 of 2008 as well as from the contents of the said FIR. Same situation regarding the place of occurrence appears from the panchnama of the scene of incident in CR No. I-154 of 2008. Panchnama of the scene of incident of CR No. I-154 of 2008 includes the scene of occurrence of CR No. I-155 of 2008 which makes it clear that both the FIRs pertain to the two crimes committed in the same transaction. The scene of offence panchnamas establish clearly that the incidents in both the cases could not be distinct and independent of each other. (Paras 25 and 26)

Therefore, the High Court reached the correct conclusion and the second FIR CR No. I-155 of 2008 was liable to be quashed. (Para 27)

It is further clarified that those persons who were arrested in connection with CR No. I-155 of 2008 would not stand arrested in connection with CR No. I-154 of 2008. However, if during the fresh investigation, any incriminating material against any person is discovered, the investigating authority may proceed in accordance with law. It shall be open to the accused to approach the appropriate forum for any interim relief as per law. (Para 47). Babubhai v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 12 SCC 254.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2010]

Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479; T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1048; Upkar Singh v. Ved Prakash, (2004) 13 SCC 292: 2005 SCC (Cri) 211; Rameshchandra Nandlal Parikh v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 1 SCC 732: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 481; Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 523, relied on

[651] — Ss. 154, 161(3) and 162 — Investigation started by the police on the night — Report of the incident lodged by the witness on the following morning could only be treated as a statement under S. 161(3) and not as an FIR — Such report can be excluded from consideration in view of S. 162 — But on that score alone the evidence of the witness cannot be held to be inadmissible (Paras 37, 38 and 39). Ranbir Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1995) 4 SCC 392: 1995 SCC (Cri) 728: AIR 1995 SC 1219: 1995 Cri LJ 2665.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-3-1995]

[652] — Ss. 154 and 161 — Previous statement of a witness — Use of, for contradicting the maker — FIR not a substantive piece of evidence — It can be used only to corroborate or contradict the maker thereof — But where the witness not confronted with his alleged inconsistent statements contained in the FIR or in his case diary statement under S. 161 CrPC no reliance could be placed on such statements — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 145 and 157. State of U.P. v. Babul Nath, (1994) 6 SCC 29: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-1994]

[653] — Ss. 154 and 162 — Applicability of S. 162 — Complaint (Ext. P-1) recorded in hospital at about 10.35 a.m. at behest of PW 1 — However, requisition (Ext. P-10) received by duty doctor at 9.30 a.m. which showed that information had reached police before — Hence held, complaint (Ext. P-1) which was supposed to be FIR hit by S. 162 — Requisition (Ext. P-10) should become an FIR and not Ext. P-1 (Para 23). Boddella Babul Reddy v. Public Prosecutor, (2010) 3 SCC 648.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : V.S. Sirpurkar and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-1-2010]

[654] — Ss. 154 and 162 — Complaint lodged by a neighbour about occurrence inside house of deceased — Where police already had information about the occurrence, the complaint which was treated as FIR would be hit by S. 162 — But that would not affect the testimony of the inmates of the house, being the material witnesses, who had seen the entire occurrence inside the house — Utility of such FIR explained

Any statement recorded during the investigation is covered by S. 162 CrPC. In the instant case the vague information received by police was about the communal riots and violence. Even if entry to that effect was made, the question is whether the investigation commenced on that basis in the strict sense. However, even assuming that the complaint was hit by S. 162 CrPC that by itself does not make any difference. A statement of that nature can be used to contradict the witness and if any material discrepancies are there they can be taken note of. The complainant was also cross-examined with reference to the contents of his complaint. He was not an eye witness to the occurrence inside the house. Therefore, even assuming that there were some omissions and discrepancies in his evidence, they would not affect the evidence of the material witnesses who were inmates of the house. Paresh Kalyandas Bhavsar v. Sadiq Yakubbhai Jamadar, (1993) 3 SCC 95: 1993 SCC (Cri) 612: AIR 1993 SC 1544: 1993 Cri LJ 1857.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1993]

[655] — Ss. 154 and 174 — FIR — When case diary shows that fardbeyan was recorded earlier than inquest, held the inquest cannot be treated as FIR (Para 9). Mundrika Mahto v. State of Bihar, (2002) 9 SCC 183: AIR 2002 SC 2042: 2002 Cri LJ 2810.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Y.K. Sabharwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2002]

9. Other

[656] — S. 154 — 'Dehati nalish' cannot be read in evidence as a report under S. 154. Baiju v. State of M.P., (1978) 1 SCC 588: 1978 SCC (Cri) 142: AIR 1978 SC 522: 1978 Cri LJ 646: 1978 MLJ (Cri) 300: (1978) 26 BLJR 54.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-1-1978]

[657] — S. 154 — FIR lodged in respect of offence under S. 307 IPC — Death of the victim thereafter in the hospital — Information conveyed by the doctor to the police regarding death of the victim and, therefore, offence under S. 307 IPC converted into an offence under S. 302 IPC — Held, information conveyed by the doctor does not constitute FIR. State of Gujarat v. Anirudhsing, (1997) 6 SCC 514: 1997 SCC (Cri) 946: AIR 1997 SC 2780: 1997 Cri LJ 3397.

(1)(ii)9. What amounts to and requirements of FIR - Other (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-1997]

[658] — Ss. 154 to 157 and 482 — Complaint — Documents accompanying if to be read as part of — Complaint petition — E-mails between couple and parents forming part of — Evidentiary value and importance of — Non-consideration of, by High Court — Effect — Whether correspondence showed any allegation of dowry demand or misappropriation of respondent's wife's stridhan — Held, complaint petition must also be read with several other documents which form part of the complaint petition — In none of them had any allegation with regard to cruelty or breach of trust been made — Allegations made for first time in complaint petition and application for grant of maintenance — Correspondence exchanged between the spouses and between the husband and his in-laws did not disclose any allegation which would amount to criminal misconduct on part of appellants — It was evident that the couple had developed incompatibility — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 3 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A, 406 and 34. Bhaskar Lal Sharma v. Monica, (2009) 10 SCC 604: (2009) 161 DLT 739.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2009]

[659] — S. 154 — Report sent by village sarpanch returned by Head Constable as not being on printed form and not signed by village munsiff — Head Constable giving this information to Sub-Inspector on his arrival — Sub-Inspector proceeding from police station for investigation — Held, the information given to the Sub-Inspector constituted the FIR. Kodali Purnachandra Rao v. Public Prosecutor, (1975) 2 SCC 570: 1975 SCC (Cri) 678: AIR 1975 SC 1925: 1975 Cri LJ 1671.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-1975]

(iii) FIR Book

[660] — S. 154 — An officer in charge of a police station should not carry FIR book with him to the place of occurrence — FIR book is supposed to remain at police station at all times — Even if the police officer is not satisfied with the information given about commission of cognizable offence, he should make an entry in the general diary, proceed to the place of occurrence and record a complaint there from someone who is in a position to give such report about the commission of the offence. Sevi v. State of T.N., 1981 Supp SCC 43: 1981 SCC (Cri) 679: AIR 1981 SC 1230: 1981 Cri LJ 736: (1981) 1 MLJ 7 (SC): 1981 MLJ (Cri) 613.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-1981]

[661] — S. 154 — FIR book — Non-availability of FIR book before court — If testimony of eyewitnesses is corroborated by other evidence, same cannot be ignored merely because FIR book could not be produced

Considering the unprecedented nature of this prosecution, the chaos that it caused in the otherwise peaceful life of the village and the enormousness of the whole affair, the number of persons murdered, the number of witnesses collected and the enormousness of the investigation, the investigating agency and the prosecution cannot be blamed for not being able to trace out the FIR book. There are always wheels within the wheels and, therefore, there can also be possibility of some interested person, secreting the said FIR book, though in the absence of any concrete or positive evidence, the court would not be justified in so holding. The non-availability of the FIR book, by itself, will not persuade the court to throw out the whole prosecution case. The evidence of eyewitnesses, which included injured eyewitnesses, was supported and corroborated by the other witnesses and such evidence could not be disturbed or ignored for the mere reason that the FIR book was not produced or that there was doubt regarding the names of the accused persons, which were to be found in the complaint lodged by PW 1. (Paras 30 and 41). Alagarsamy v. State, (2010) 12 SCC 427: AIR 2010 SC 849: 2010 Cri LJ 29: (2010) 2 ECrN 88: (2009) 84 AIC 192 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2009]

(2) Value, evidentiary value and use of FIR

See also Ss. 161 and 162, below

[662] — S. 154 — FIR — Nature and use of

The FIR is not a substantive piece of evidence and has a limited use. It is also not an encyclopedia of the prosecution case. It is from the nature of the FIR and other surrounding circumstances to be seen whether there was any scope for any confusion at the time when the informant gave it or was it a version which merited explanation at the eventual trial. Ramesh Maruti Patil v. State of Maharashtra, 1995 SCC (Cri) 149: AIR 1994 SC 28: 1994 Cri LJ 8.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.C. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-1992]

[663] — S. 154 — FIR — Nature of — Not a substantive piece of evidence — Useful for corroborating or contradicting the maker

First Information Report is not an encyclopaedia of the entire case and is even not a substantive piece of evidence. It has value, no doubt, but only for the purpose of corroborating or contradicting the maker. Surjit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 208: 1993 SCC (Cri) 161: AIR 1992 SC 1389.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and B.P. Jeevan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-1992]

[664] — S. 154 — FIR — Held, FIR is not substantive evidence and cannot be used for contradicting testimony of the eyewitnesses except that it may be used for the purpose of contradicting maker of the report — Hence, non-naming of one or few of the accused persons in the FIR is no reason to disbelieve the testimony of crucial witnesses — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 145 and 157 (Paras 11 to 12). Kirender Sarkar v. State of Assam, (2009) 12 SCC 342: AIR 2009 SC 2513: (2009) 78 AIC 99 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 3727.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2009]

[Ed.: See also (1972) 4 SCC 773; (1997) 6 SCC 514: 1997 SCC (Cri) 946.]

[665] — S. 154 — FIR — Evidentiary value — Held, FIR is not a substantive piece of evidence and it can be used only to discredit testimony of maker thereof and it cannot be utilised for contradicting or discrediting testimony of other witnesses (Para 38). Pandurang Chandrakant Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 10 SCC 773: (2009) 83 AIC 38 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2009]

Dharma Rama Bhagare v. State of Maharashtra, (1973) 1 SCC 537, followed

[666] — S. 154 — FIR — Nature and purpose — Principles reiterated — Should contain basic prosecution case — Mention of minute details of prosecution case or evidence on which prosecution proposes to rely at trial not necessary — Non-mentioning of motive in FIR not significant, more so where FIR filed by a rustic man and filed promptly, ruling out chances of false implication of accused

The FIR need not be an encyclopaedia of all the facts and circumstances on which the prosecution relies. The main purpose of the FIR is to enable a police officer to satisfy himself as to whether commission of cognizable offences is indicated so that further investigation can be undertaken by him. The purpose of the FIR is to set the criminal law in motion and it is not customary to mention every minute detail of the prosecution case in the FIR. FIR is never treated as a substantive piece of evidence and has a limited use i.e. it can be used for the corroborating or contradicting the maker of it. (Para 66)

The law requires FIR to contain basic prosecution case and not minute details. Even if an accused is not named in the FIR he can be held guilty if prosecution leads reliable and satisfactory evidence which proves his participation in crime. Similarly, the witnesses whose names are not mentioned in the FIR but examined during the course of trial can be relied upon for the purpose of basing conviction against the accused. Non-mentioning of motive in the FIR cannot be regarded as omission to state important and material fact. As a principle, omission to give details in the FIR as to manner in which weapon was used by the accused is not a material omission amounting to contradiction. Further, this is a case wherein FIR was filed by a rustic man and, therefore, non-mentioning of motive in the FIR cannot be attached much importance. Moreover, in this case FIR regarding gruesome murder of six persons was filed promptly and without any avoidable delay and, therefore, false implication of any of the respondent-accused in such a grievous case stands ruled out. There is nothing on the record to show that FIR was the result of deliberation by the first informant with other persons. As the FIR was lodged promptly, the informant's evidence containing minor variations not affecting the substratum of prosecution story cannot be discarded on the ground that motive which prompted the respondents to kill six persons was not mentioned in the FIR. (Paras 67, 69, 72 and 73). State of U.P. v. Krishna Master, (2010) 12 SCC 324: AIR 2010 SC 3071: 2010 Cri LJ 3889: (2010) 94 AIC 257 (SC): (2010) 5 All LJ 423.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-2010]

CBI v. Tapan Kumar Singh, (2003) 6 SCC 175: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1305, relied on

(2) Value, evidentiary value and use of FIR (contd.)

[667] — S. 154 — FIR — Evidentiary value of FIR, discussed

The fundamental object of an FIR is that it acts as a safeguard against embellishment, exaggeration and forgetfulness. True, that it is not the requirement of law that every minute detail of the occurrence needs to be recorded in the FIR but it must disclose the commission of an offence. Though it is trite that the FIR does not constitute substantive evidence and can, strictly speaking, be only used as a previous statement for the purpose of either corroborating or contradicting its maker, yet omission of material facts pertaining to the crime is undoubtedly relevant in judging the veracity of prosecution case. The FIR is a report relating to the commission of an offence, given to the police and recorded by it under Section 154 CrPC. Though, recording of an FIR is not a condition precedent to the setting in motion of the criminal investigation yet from the viewpoint of the investigating authorities it conveys to them earliest information regarding the circumstances in which the crime was committed; the names of the culprits and the role played by them as well as the names of the witnesses present at the scene of occurrence, so vital for effective and meaningful investigation. The information about an occurrence can be given by any person knowing about the commission of such an offence and not necessarily by an eyewitness. (Paras 26 and 24). State of Maharashtra v. Ahmed Shaikh Babajan, (2009) 14 SCC 267: (2009) 73 AIC 178 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 637 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2008]

[668] — S. 154 — FIR — Use of — Held, FIR can be used only for the purpose of corroborating or contradicting the maker thereof. Babu Singh v. State of Punjab, (1996) 8 SCC 699: 1996 SCC (Cri) 730: AIR 1996 SC 3250.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Faizan Uddin and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-1996]

[669] — S. 154 — FIR — Use of — Held, it can be used either to corroborate or for contradiction of its maker — It cannot be used as substantive evidence or corroborating a statement of third party. State of M.P. v. Surbhan, (1996) 9 SCC 46: 1996 SCC (Cri) 919: AIR 1996 SC 3345.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-1996]

[670] — S. 154 — FIR — Use of — Not a substantive piece of evidence — Where version given in FIR is found to be suspicious, evidence of first informant completely falling in line with such a version also becomes suspicious, particularly, in a case arising out of acute enmity — Occurrence taking place in dark night at some distance from lantern — FIR giving minutest detail of occurrence, in the circumstances, becomes suspicious — Consequently evidence of first informant repeating the same in a parrot-like manner also creates some amount of suspicion — In such circumstances evidence of chance-witness does not merit acceptance

No doubt, FIR is not substantive evidence. However, when the author of the report consistently speaks with a version given in FIR, then the Court can look into the evidence as well as the earlier version, not for the purpose of mere scrutiny of the evidence, but to examine whether the very version given by this witness could be accepted and if the Court finds the earliest version given is suspicious and if the witness completely falls in line with such a version, then such evidence also becomes suspicious, particularly, in case of this nature arising out of acute enmity.

In the present case the first informant describes part played by each of the accused as though they attacked one after the other. What is more important is that he also described each blow given by each of the accused on each part of the body and how they happened to inflict these injuries on each of the three deceased. It is rather surprising that he has also mentioned the blows dealt on the hands of the deceased, on the lower limbs of the deceased and other parts of the deceased total numbering to 18-20 blows. First of all the presence of the lantern itself is a doubtful factor. Even assuming there was a lantern, it is highly unbelievable that the witness could have given so many details of the occurrence. When the interested witness falls in line verbatim and repeats the same in a parrot-like manner, naturally that creates some amount of suspicion about his veracity. If first informant's evidence becomes doubtful then the evidence of the chance-witness does not merit acceptance. State of Punjab v. Mohri Ram, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 632: 1994 SCC (Cri) 737.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-1993]

[671] — S. 154 — FIR — Use of — Statement contained in the FIR lodged by the accused cannot be used against the co-accused — It cannot be used against its maker if it is inculpatory in nature — Nor can it be used for the purpose of corroboration or contradiction unless its maker offers himself as a witness — It can be used as an admission under S. 21, Evidence Act unless the admission does not amount to confession — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 145, 157 and 21

A statement in an FIR can normally be used only to contradict its maker as provided in Section 145 of the Evidence Act, 1872 or to corroborate his evidence as envisaged in Section 157 of the Act. Neither is possible in a criminal trial as long as its maker is an accused in the case, unless he offers himself to be examined as a witness.

A statement contained in the FIR furnished by one of the accused in the case cannot, in any manner, be used against another accused. Even as against the accused who made it, the statement cannot be used if it is inculpatory in nature nor can it be used for the purpose of corroboration or contradiction unless its maker offers himself as a witness in the trial. The very limited use of it is as an admission under Section 21 of the Evidence Act against its maker alone unless the admission does not amount to confession. Bandlamuddi Atchuta Ramaiah v. State of A.P., (1996) 11 SCC 133: 1997 SCC (Cri) 128: AIR 1997 SC 496.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-9-1996]

Nisar Ali v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 366: 1957 SCR 657: 1957 Cri LJ 550, followed

[672] — S. 154 — FIR — Value of — It is not a substantive piece of evidence — Absence of minute details immaterial — Non-mention of or vague reference to some facts not fatal — FIR lodged by the deceased's wife soon after the occurrence when she was in a disturbed state of mind — FIR mentioning that one of the accused fired from his pistol which struck deceased's chest while in court she deposing that the shot fired by the accused did not hit the deceased — She did not state in the FIR that the deceased died as a result of pistol shot — Accused dying due to the injuries inflicted by other accused — Held, in the circumstances of the case, there was no contradiction or variation in her deposition in court from what she stated in the FIR — Her statement in the FIR could only be what she inferred

The FIR is not a substantive piece of evidence, it is only relevant in judging the veracity of prosecution case and the value to be attached to it depends on the facts of each case. Only the essential or broad picture need be stated in the FIR and all minute details need not be mentioned therein. It is not a verbatim summary of the prosecution case. It need not contain details of the occurrence as if it were an "encyclopaedia" of the occurrence. It may not be even necessary to catalogue the overt acts therein. Non-mentioning of some facts or vague reference to some others are not fatal. (Para 10). Baldev Singh v. State of Punjab, (1995) 6 SCC 593: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1132: AIR 1996 SC 372.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.S. Paripoornan, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-10-1995]

[673] — S. 154 — FIR is not a substantial evidence. Baldev Singh v. State of Punjab, (1990) 4 SCC 692: AIR 1991 SC 31.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-1990]

[674] — S. 154 — FIR is not substantive evidence — It may be used to corroborate the informant under S. 157 of Evidence Act or contradict him under S. 145 of Evidence Act if the informant appears as a witness. Bheru Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1994) 2 SCC 467: 1994 SCC (Cri) 555: (1994) 1 Crimes 630: (1994) 1 ALT (Cri) 695: (1994) 31 ACC 240.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-2-1994]

[675] — S. 154 — FIR lodged by a person stating that the information was conveyed to him by accused himself — Held, this admission is not only a relevant fact under S. 8 of Evidence Act as res gestae but an important circumstance against the accused — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 8. Ganeshlal v. State of Maharashtra, (1992) 3 SCC 106: 1992 Cri LJ 1545.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.M. Kasliwal and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-1992]

[676] — S. 154 — Use of FIR — Apprehension of the accused on the spot, his identity and name, and being brought by the witnesses given in the FIR — Evidence of the first informant that he brought the accused from the scene of offence and handed him over to the police to record the FIR gets corroboration from the FIR. State of Gujarat v. Anirudhsing, (1997) 6 SCC 514: 1997 SCC (Cri) 946: AIR 1997 SC 2780: 1997 Cri LJ 3397.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-1997]

[677] — S. 154 — Use of FIR — FIR is not a substantial piece of evidence — It can only be used for corroborating or contradicting its maker — It cannot be used to corroborate or contradict other witnesses — Statement of a Reserved Police Officer regarding alleged confession of the accused not allowed to be recorded by the trial court on an erroneous view that such statement was hit by S. 25 Evidence Act — Statement in the FIR lodged by another officer that the accused made a confession to such Reserved Police Officer cannot be used to corroborate the evidence of that Reserved Police Officer — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 25, 145 and 157. State of Gujarat v. Anirudhsing, (1997) 6 SCC 514: 1997 SCC (Cri) 946: AIR 1997 SC 2780: 1997 Cri LJ 3397.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-1997]

Nisar Ali v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 366: 1957 SCR 657; Dharma Rama Bhagare v. State of Maharashtra, (1973) 1 SCC 537: 1973 SCC (Cri) 421, followed

(2) Value, evidentiary value and use of FIR (contd.)

[678] — S. 154 — Use of FIR — Death of informant — Non-examination of the first informant during the trial as he had died — FIR cannot be used as substantive piece of evidence — Contents of the FIR could have been used for the purpose of corroborating or contradicting its maker if he had been examined — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 145 and 154. Harkirat Singh v. State of Punjab, (1997) 11 SCC 215: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1068: AIR 1997 SC 3231.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1997]

[679] — S. 154 — Where FIR is the earliest statement, it is of importance in appreciating evidence of such witnesses, though it is not a substantive evidence — When no overt act attributed by the witnesses to some of the accused persons in a mass attack, held, they would be entitled to benefit of doubt — But when part played by other accused specifically mentioned in FIR and that is the consistent version of the witnesses which is corroborated by medical evidence also, held, prosecution case against them can be safely accepted. Ladha Shamji Dhanani v. State of Gujarat, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 20: 1993 SCC (Cri) 97: AIR 1992 SC 956.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and R.C. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1992]

[680] — S. 154 — Held, FIR being the first version of the incident, statements made therein must be given due weight (Para 15). Kalyan v. State of U.P., (2001) 9 SCC 632: AIR 2001 SC 3976.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-2001]

[681] — S. 154 — FIR — Evidentiary value of — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 145 and 161

The FIR is not a substantive piece of evidence and can only be used to corroborate the statement of the maker under Section 161 of the Evidence Act, 1872 or to contradict him under Section 145 of that Act. It can neither be used as evidence against the maker at the trial if he himself becomes an accused nor to corroborate or contradict other witnesses. (Para 15). Ravi Kumar v. State of Punjab, (2005) 9 SCC 315: AIR 2005 SC 1929: 2005 Cri LJ 1742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-2005]

[682] — S. 154 — FIR — Evidentiary value of — Held, FIR in a criminal case and particularly in murder case is a vital and valuable piece of evidence for the purpose of appreciating evidence led by the prosecution at the trial — It is the earliest information regarding the circumstances under which the crime was committed, including the names of the actual culprits and the part played by them, the weapons, if any, used as also the names of the eyewitnesses, if any — Delay in lodging FIR may result in embellishment, which is a creature of an afterthought (Para 9). Mahmood v. State of U.P., (2007) 14 SCC 16: AIR 2008 SC 515: 2008 Cri LJ 696: (2008) 1 All LJ 248: (2008) 61 AIC 203 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-11-2007]

Budh Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 9 SCC 731: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 377, followed [683] — S. 154 — FIR — Evidentiary value of — Where examination of the first informant dispensed by consent, FIR would become part of prosecution evidence — Pre-existing fact stated in FIR — Relevance of. Malkiat Singh v. State of Punjab, (1991) 4 SCC 341: 1991 SCC (Cri) 976.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, V. Ramaswami and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-1991]

[684] — S. 154 — FIR — Held, by itself cannot be the basis to decide the culpability of the assailants in every case

Five persons were tried for committing murder. The trial Judge relying on the FIR acquitted accused A-2, A-4 and A-5 on the ground that their names were not mentioned therein and convicted accused A-1 and A-3 holding that their names were mentioned in the FIR. The High Court convicted all the five accused who faced the trial. On appeal

Held :

No doubt the FIR is an important document but that by itself cannot be the basis to decide the culpability of the assailants in every case. In the present case the eyewitnesses have deposed that accused A-1, A-2 and A-4 inflicted injuries and to that extent their veracity cannot be doubted. So far as accused A-3 and A-5 are concerned, there is vague allegation and they were also running along with the other accused A-1 pelting stones. It is not safe to convict accused A-3 and A-5 by applying S. 149 IPC. Accordingly conviction of accused A-1, A-2 and A-4 under Ss. 302/149 IPC is confirmed while conviction and sentence of accused A-3 and A-5 are set aside. Shrimant Yankappa Dharamatti v. State of Karnataka, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 332: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1723.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-1993]

[685] — S. 154 — FIR — What is — Purpose and contents of — Evidentiary value — State of mind of complainant or victim making the complaint should be kept in mind — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 161 and 145

The first information report is a report giving information of the commission of a cognizable crime which may be made by the complainant or by any other person knowing about the commission of such an offence. It is intended to set the criminal law in motion. Any information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence is required to be reduced to writing by the officer in charge of the police station which has to be signed by the person giving it and the substance thereof is required to be entered in a book to be kept by such officer in such form as the State Government may prescribe in that behalf. It has been held time and again that the FIR is not a substantive piece of evidence and can only be used to corroborate the statement of the maker under Section 161 of the Evidence Act or to contradict him under Section 145 of that Act. It cannot be used as evidence against the maker at the trial if he himself becomes an accused nor to corroborate or contradict other witnesses. It is not the requirement of law that the minutest details be recorded in the FIR lodged immediately after the occurrence. The fact of the state of mental agony of the person making the FIR who generally is the victim himself, if not dead, or the relations or associates of the deceased victim apparently under the shock of the occurrence reported has always to be kept in mind. (Para 5). Bijoy Singh v. State of Bihar, (2002) 9 SCC 147: AIR 2002 SC 1949: 2002 Cri LJ 2623.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-4-2002]

Meharaj Singh (L/Nk.) v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391: 1995 Cri LJ 457, relied on

But see Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450

[686] — Ss. 154, 157 and 174 — FIR — Value of — Delay in lodging — Effect

FIR in a criminal case and particularly in a murder case is a vital and valuable piece of evidence for the purpose of appreciating the evidence led at the trial. The object of insisting upon prompt lodging of the FIR is to obtain the earliest information regarding the circumstance in which the crime was committed, including the names of the actual culprits and the parts played by them, the weapons, if any, used, as also the names of the eyewitnesses, if any. Delay in lodging the FIR often results in embellishment, which is a creature of an afterthought. On account of delay, the FIR not only gets bereft of the advantage of spontaneity, danger also creeps in of the introduction of a coloured version or exaggerated story. Meharaj Singh (L/Nk.) v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1994]

But see Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450

[687] — S. 154 — Evidentiary value of FIR — Manner in which required to be proved — Held, mere production of documents is not enough — Contents of documentary evidence has to be proved by examining witnesses — Further held, FIR in itself is not an evidence without actual proof of facts stated therein

The purported evidence collected during investigation by the investigating officer against all the accused by itself could not be treated to be evidence in the disciplinary proceeding. No witness was examined to prove the said documents. The management witnesses merely tendered the documents and did not prove the contents thereof. Reliance, inter alia, was placed by the enquiry officer on the FIR which could not have been treated as evidence. (Para 14). Roop Singh Negi v. Punjab National Bank, (2009) 2 SCC 570.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-2008]

[688] — S. 154 — FIR — Value and importance of — Held, FIR is a very vital material as it is the first information about the incident and has less chances of altering the version and improvement (Para 11). Sujoy Sen v. State of W.B., (2007) 6 SCC 32: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 47: (2007) 54 AIC 1 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 3727.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2007]

Manoj v. State of Maharashtra, (1999) 4 SCC 268: 1999 SCC (Cri) 533, distinguished [689] — S. 154 — FIR — Role of — Held, FIR in a criminal case is an extremely vital and valuable piece of evidence for the purpose of corroborating the oral evidence adduced at the time of trial (Para 29). Bathula Nagamalleswara Rao v. State, (2008) 11 SCC 722: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 898.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-2008]

Meharaj Singh v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391; Anil Sharma v. State of Jharkhand, (2004) 5 SCC 679: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1706; Bhimapa Chandappa Hosamani v. State of Karnataka, (2006) 11 SCC 323: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 456; S. Sudershan Reddy v. State of A.P., (2006) 10 SCC 163: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 503; Salim Sahab v. State of M.P., (2007) 1 SCC 699: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 425; State of Punjab v. Jagir Singh, (1974) 3 SCC 277: 1973 SCC (Cri) 886; Lehna v. State of Haryana, (2002) 3 SCC 76: 2002 SCC (Cri) 526; Gangadhar Behera v. State of Orissa, (2002) 8 SCC 381: 2003 SCC (Cri) 32, relied on

(2) Value, evidentiary value and use of FIR (contd.)

[690] — S. 154 — FIR — Meaning and value of — Held, FIR is only a report about information as to commission of an offence — It is not a substantive evidence as the police has yet to investigate the offence — Exaggerated version in FIR — Testimony of informant (PW 2) not believable — Defence contention that in such case whole FIR became doubtful — Held, the said contention was perhaps right if PW 2's was the only testimony in support of the prosecution — Prosecution also relied on two dying declarations — In view of the above, the said contention, held, unacceptable

It is contended that if testimony of PW 2 (informant) is not believable, then the whole of the FIR becomes doubtful and the case against the accused necessarily collapses. This contention cannot be accepted. It may be probable that PW 2 might have given information to the police which was exaggerated and added things which, probably, he did not learn from deceased K on 1-4-1996. It is possible that seeing K in the hospital, after suffering extensive burns to the extent of 80 per cent, PW 2 might have suspected the in-laws of K as having murdered her. (Para 10)

The first information report is only a report about the information as to the commission of an offence; it is not a substantive evidence, as the police has yet to investigate the offence. If PW 2's was the only testimony in support of the prosecution, then perhaps the counsel (raising the said contention) was right. It is found, however, that the prosecution strongly relied on two declarations, one made to Naib Tahsildar (PW 6) on 2-4-1996 as well as the statement made by K under Section 161 CrPC recorded on 7-4-1986 by ASI, both of which can be treated as dying declarations. (Para 10). Sohan Lal v. State of Punjab, (2003) 11 SCC 534: 2004 SCC (Cri) 226: AIR 2003 SC 4466.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-2003]

[691] — S. 154 — FIR — Held, can be utilised for the purposes of corroborating or contradicting only the maker thereof — FIR cannot be used to discredit testimony of any other person — FIR lodged by PW 1 who was not an eyewitness — Testimony of PW 3, the eyewitness, held, cannot be discredited for any statement made in the FIR — There was nothing in the cross-examination of PW 3 to impeach his testimony, which also received corroboration from PW 2 — Held, courts below were therefore, justified in relying upon the testimony of PW 3 to come to the conclusion that the prosecution case had been proved beyond reasonable doubt — Therefore, appellant's conviction under S. 302 upheld — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 145 and 157 — Penal Code, 1860, S. 302. Andrews v. State of Kerala, (2002) 10 SCC 126.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-1999]

[692] — S. 154 — If FIR is not proved — Effect — Held, (per B.N. Agrawal, J.) it would not be a ground for acquittal, but the case would depend upon the evidence led by the prosecution (Para 35). Krishna Mochi v. State of Bihar, (2002) 6 SCC 81: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1220: AIR 2002 SC 1965: 2002 Cri LJ 2645.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah[3], B.N. Agrawal[1] and Arijit Pasayat[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2002]

[693] — S. 154 — FIR — Importance and evidentiary value

The importance of FIR cannot be underestimated as it is first version on the basis of which the investigation proceeds. But FIR is not a be-all and end-all of the matter, even though it is a very important document. In most of the cases, FIR provides corroboration to the evidence of the maker thereof. It provides a direction to the investigating officer and the necessary clues about the crime and the perpetrator thereof. (Paras 20 and 39). Alagarsamy v. State, (2010) 12 SCC 427: AIR 2010 SC 849: 2010 Cri LJ 29: (2010) 2 ECrN 88: (2009) 84 AIC 192.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2009]

[694] — Ss. 154 and 164 — Evidentiary value of FIR — Prosecutrix naming Accused 4 in FIR but neither identifying him in Court nor naming him in her deposition — Held, the allegations, made in FIR are not evidence — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 375 and 376 — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 145 and 9

The prosecutrix, a coolie, was gang raped while on her way back from a movie at about 10.00 p.m. on 20-11-1994. Her brother, P who was slapped, ran for help and when he returned with other villagers, found her sister lying unconscious and naked. FIR was lodged at about 7.00 p.m. on 21-11-1994 after the victim regained her consciousness. The conviction of six accused persons under Section 376(2)(g) IPC was upheld by the High Court.

Allowing the appeal of Accused 4 to 6 and dismissing the appeal of Accused 1 to 3,

Held :

The allegations made in the first information report are not evidence. Naming some of the accused persons in the first information report and not naming them in the course of deposition casts a serious doubt. The prosecutrix might have named four persons, namely, Accused 1 to 4 in the FIR, but, she named only Accused 1 to 3 in her deposition. She neither named nor identified Accused 4 to 6. On what basis, therefore, their guilt is said to have been established is not known. Both, the learned trial Judge as also the High Court, in their judgments did not deal with this aspect of the matter. (Paras 16 and 18). Viswanathan v. State, (2008) 5 SCC 354: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 593: AIR 2008 SC 2222.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2008]

Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185, relied on [695] — S. 154 — FIR — Not substantial evidence and cannot contradict testimony of the eyewitness but may contradict its maker — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 145 (Para 18). Asharam v. State of M.P., (2007) 11 SCC 164: AIR 2007 SC 2594: (2007) 56 AIC 180 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-2007]

Dharma Rama Bhagare v. State of Maharashtra, (1973) 1 SCC 537: 1973 SCC (Cri) 421, relied on [696] — S. 154 — FIR — Evidentiary value of FIR — Held, FIR is not substantive evidence but it can be used for corroboration (Para 32). Sunder Singh v. State of Uttaranchal, (2010) 10 SCC 611.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2010]

[697] — S. 154 — FIR — Evidentiary value — FIR by itself, held, not a substantive piece of evidence — Can be used to contradict or corroborate the maker thereof in the manner provided under the Evidence Act — Hence, conviction for misappropriation of property on the basis of allegations contained in the FIR which were not substantiated by oral evidence, held, not sustainable — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(c) — Penal Code, 1860, S. 477-A — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 155(3) and 145. Madhusudan Singh v. State of Bihar, (1996) 11 SCC 248: 1997 SCC (Cri) 187: AIR 1995 SC 1437.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-1995]

[698] — S. 154 — FIR lodged by accused — Can be used by prosecution to show motive and presence of accused at the scene of occurrence. (Para 6). Thakarda Lalaji Gamaji v. State of Gujarat, (1974) 3 SCC 639: 1974 SCC (Cri) 169: AIR 1974 SC 1351: 1974 Cri LJ 612.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-1973]

[699] — S. 154 — FIR made part of motor vehicles claim petition — Admissibility of — Held, ordinarily Supreme Court would not have entered into realm of appreciation of evidence but as High Court failed and/or neglected to do so, no other option exists — Ordinarily allegations made in FIR not admissible in evidence per se but as the allegation made in FIR had been made a part of the claim petition, Tribunal and the appellate courts entitled to look into the same — Furthermore, an admission made in the pleadings is admissible in evidence proprio vigore — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 58 — Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 — Ss. 147 and 173(1). National Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Rattani, (2009) 2 SCC 75.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2008]

New India Assurance Co. Ltd. v. Asha Rani, (2003) 2 SCC 223: 2003 SCC (Cri) 493, relied on [700] — Ss. 154 and 161 — Previous statement of a witness — Use of, for contradicting the maker — FIR not a substantive piece of evidence — It can be used only to corroborate or contradict the maker thereof — But where the witness not confronted with his alleged inconsistent statements contained in the FIR or in his case diary statement under S. 161 CrPC no reliance could be placed on such statements — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 145 and 157. State of U.P. v. Babul Nath, (1994) 6 SCC 29: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-1994]

[701] — Ss. 154 and 162 — Complaint lodged by a neighbour about occurrence inside house of deceased — Where police already had information about the occurrence, the complaint which was treated as FIR would be hit by S. 162 — But that would not affect the testimony of the inmates of the house, being the material witnesses, who had seen the entire occurrence inside the house — Utility of such FIR explained

Any statement recorded during the investigation is covered by S. 162 CrPC. In the instant case the vague information received by police was about the communal riots and violence. Even if entry to that effect was made, the question is whether the investigation commenced on that basis in the strict sense. However, even assuming that the complaint was hit by S. 162 CrPC that by itself does not make any difference. A statement of that nature can be used to contradict the witness and if any material discrepancies are there they can be taken note of. The complainant was also cross-examined with reference to the contents of his complaint. He was not an eye witness to the occurrence inside the house.

(2) Value, evidentiary value and use of FIR (contd.)

Therefore, even assuming that there were some omissions and discrepancies in his evidence, they would not affect the evidence of the material witnesses who were inmates of the house. Paresh Kalyandas Bhavsar v. Sadiq Yakubbhai Jamadar, (1993) 3 SCC 95: 1993 SCC (Cri) 612: AIR 1993 SC 1544: 1993 Cri LJ 1857.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1993]

[702] — Ss. 154, 161(3) and 162 — Investigation started by the police on the night — Report of the incident lodged by the witness on the following morning could only be treated as a statement under S. 161(3) and not as an FIR — Such report can be excluded from consideration in view of S. 162 — But on that score alone the evidence of the witness cannot be held to be inadmissible (Paras 37, 38 and 39). Ranbir Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1995) 4 SCC 392: 1995 SCC (Cri) 728: AIR 1995 SC 1219: 1995 Cri LJ 2665.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-3-1995]

[703] — Ss. 154 and 162 — FIR — When can be treated as statement under S. 162 — Police Officer deliberately not recording FIR on receipt of information about cognizable offence — FIR prepared after reaching the spot and after due deliberations, consultations and discussion — Held, such a complaint could not be treated as FIR — It would be a statement made during the investigation of a case and hit by S. 162 — Consequently it would be unsafe to rely on such a tainted investigation. State of A.P. v. Punati Ramulu, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 590: 1994 SCC (Cri) 734: AIR 1993 SC 2644: 1993 Cri LJ 3684.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1993]

[704] — S. 154 — Whether accused alone or accused along with other inflicted injuries — Test is whether name of the accused mentioned in the earliest report. Nallamsetty Yanadaiah v. State of A.P., 1993 Supp (3) SCC 177: 1993 SCC (Cri) 892: AIR 1993 SC 1175: 1993 Cri LJ 408.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-1992]

[705] — S. 154 — FIR — Informant turning hostile — Use of such FIR to corroborate or discredit — FIR lodged by a PW who later turning hostile and testifying that he had not made any statement to the police and had rather signed on dotted lines — Such an FIR, held, could not be used to corroborate the first informant or to discredit other prosecution witnesses before whom the deceased had made the dying declaration — Reasons given by trial court for acting to the contrary, on facts, found patently wrong and opposed to principles of criminal justice, therefore evidence adduced by the prosecution to corroborate the dying declaration, reassessed by Supreme Court — S. 32 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 449 & 34 — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 145 and 157

The trial court had given the following reasons for discarding the dying declaration made by the deceased before PW 3 and PW 4: (i) The first informant had stated that the FIR was a suspicious document and that, therefore, the allegation of the dying declaration having been made in the presence of the first informant (PW 1), PWs 3 and 4 was also suspicious, (ii) that the neighbours accompanying PW 4 to the spot had stated the deceased had not spoken when PW 1 (the first informant) addressed the deceased in their presence, and (iii) PW 3 had not disclosed about the deceased's dying declaration to any of the persons who had assembled at the spot. Finding these reasons to be patently wrong and opposed to principles of criminal jurisprudence, the Supreme Court reappraised the evidence and

Held:

The trial court could not rely upon the contents of the FIR lodged by PW 1, and that too for the purpose of discarding the evidence of PWs 3 and 4. PW 1 turned hostile and testified that he did not make any statement before the police but signed on the dotted lines. It is trite that an FIR is not substantive evidence [unless of course it is admitted under Section 32(1) of the Evidence Act] and can be used to corroborate or contradict the maker thereof; and, therefore, the question of corroborating PW 1 by his purported statements, as contained in the FIR could not arise. In spite thereof the trial court observed: "... the first informant's statement is further supported by the evidence of PW 1" and used the statements contained in the FIR as substantive evidence to discredit PWs 3 and 4. It must, therefore, be said that the approach of the trial court in dealing with the FIR was legally impermissible. George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: AIR 1998 SC 1376: 1998 Cri LJ 2034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-3-1998]

[706] — S. 154 — FIR — Mention of name of accused in FIR — Participation of named and unnamed persons — Omnibus allegation made by witnesses against several persons of having participated in the crime — Test to determine who among them actually participated — One of the tests to be applied is whether their names mentioned in FIR. Rajaram v. State of M.P., (1992) 3 SCC 634: 1992 SCC (Cri) 790: AIR 1994 SC 846.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.B. Sawant, K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-7-1992]

[707] — S. 154 — Statement recorded in FIR discarded by court without reason — Effect — Petition seeking transfer of custody of minor children from father (appellant) to mother (respondent) — Mother having sustained burn injuries, admitted in hospital where her statement was recorded by SI police and FIR was registered on that basis — Held, High Court in habeas corpus petition was not justified in directing the Metropolitan Sessions Judge and Secretary of High Court Services Legal Aid Committee to record the statement of the injured and discarding the previous statement as being made under threat — Constitution of India — Art. 226

No reason has been given by the High Court in the order as to why the previous statement recorded by the police officer should be discarded. Since the information about the incident had already reached the police and on getting the said information the police officer visited the hospital and recorded the statement and FIR had already been registered on the basis of that statement, that is to be treated as the FIR in the case and any subsequent statement made by the informant/complainant can only be taken as a statement in course of the investigation. No reason is stated and it is not clear why the High Court felt that the unusual and extraordinary step of asking the Metropolitan Sessions Judge accompanied by another Judicial Officer, the Secretary of the Andhra Pradesh High Court Legal Services Committee, should be directed to record the statement of the injured. The case was one relating to custody of children for disposal of which neither was it necessary for the High Court to take such an unusual step nor was the matter relating to investigation into the criminal case relevant for deciding the case. (Para 12). Syed Saleemuddin v. Dr. Rukhsana, (2001) 5 SCC 247: 2001 SCC (Cri) 841: AIR 2001 SC 2172.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-2001]

[708] — S. 154 — FIR — Withholding the FIR lodged — Incident occurring at about 10 a.m. — Injured admitted in hospital not in a position to give statement — FIR lodged at 7 p.m. on the basis of statement made by PW 1 — Defence contention that according to PW 1 she had first gone to the police station where the victim had made a report of the incident and then they proceeded to the hospital — Trial court holding that the said statement of PW 1, a rustic village woman, appeared to have been made in a state of confusion — Defence failing to ask question regarding the above contention from the police witnesses, especially the one who proved the FIR — Hence, adverse inference cannot be drawn against the prosecution for withholding the FIR lodged by the victim herself

The incident occurred at about 10 a.m. on 8-7-1994. As the injured was not in a position to give a statement, the Head Constable recorded the statement of PW 1 which was sent to the police station and registered as FIR of the incident on 8-7-1994 at 7 p.m. It was submitted on behalf of the appellant that according to PW 1 she had first gone to the police station where the victim had made a report of the incident and then they had proceeded to the hospital and, therefore, an adverse inference ought to be drawn against the prosecution for withholding the FIR lodged by the victim herself. It has been pointed out by the trial court that the witness is a rustic village woman and such a statement appears to have been made by her in a state of confusion. If it was so as is being suggested then the police officers who have appeared as witnesses, especially the one who has proved the FIR, should have been asked whether there was any report of the incident, other than the one originating in the statement of PW 1, made at the police station and that too by the injured herself. (Paras 2, 4 and 9). Pothakamuri Srinivasulu v. State of A.P., (2002) 6 SCC 399: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1337: AIR 2002 SC 2780.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-7-2002]

(3) Reliability and Validity of FIR

Synopsis

(i) Anonymous complaint 258
(ii) Contents of FIR 259
  1. Generally 259
  2. Form and language of FIR 259
  3. Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR 261
  4. Discrepancies/Inconsistencies/Contradictions in or vis-à-vis FIR 283
  5. Corrections/Overwriting/Interpolation in FIR 287
  6. Embellishments/Improvements in FIR 289
  7. Inculpative statement in FIR 289
(iii) FIR and other evidence 290
(iv) Doubt regarding lodging of FIR 292
(v) Falsity of/Fabricated FIR 293
(vi) FIR and Time 295
  1. Generally 295
  2. Ante-timed FIR 296
  3. Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate (i.e. the report as required to be sent to Magistrate under S. 157 r/w S. 158) 303
  4. Delay in lodging/filing FIR 317
  5. Non-mention of time of dispatch in FIR 364
  6. Promptness/Haste in filing FIR 365
(vii) FIR not filed/lodged 367
(viii) Mala fides 367
(ix) Multiple FIRs/Cases 369

(i) Anonymous complaint

[709] — Ss. 154, 156 & 157 — Anonymous complaint — Preliminary inquiry, held, permissible in case of — No need to lodge FIR and initiate investigative process immediately upon receiving complaint — Registration of case is a sine qua non for starting investigation — Question as to whether empowered officer had made investigation or caused the same to be made in a cognizable offence within the meaning of S. 157 CrPC or had not initiated investigation on the basis of an information which would not come within the meaning of S. 154 CrPC has to be determined in the fact situation obtaining in each case — Anonymous complaint made to CBI alleging corrupt practices and financial irregularities on the part of some officers of railway department — In view of the above and considering provisions of CBI manual, held, it was within the province of CBI to commence a preliminary inquiry — CBI did not find any reason to convert the preliminary inquiry into a regular case — It recommended to hold departmental proceedings against the officers concerned — Hence, decision of CBI, held, not liable to be interfered with — CBI Manual, Para 9 — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), S. 2

Although ordinarily in terms of Section 154 CrPC, when a report is received relating to the cognizable offence, a first information report should be lodged, to carry out a preliminary inquiry even under the CrPC is not unknown. When an anonymous complaint is received, no investigating officer would initiate investigative process immediately thereupon. It may for good reasons carry out a preliminary inquiry to find out the truth or otherwise of the allegations contained therein. (Paras 18 and 19)

Registration of a case is a sine qua non for starting investigation. Only when an FIR is lodged, the officer in charge of the police station is statutorily liable to report thereabout to a Magistrate who is empowered to take cognizance in terms of Section 157(1) CrPC. Proviso (b) appended thereto empowers the investigating officer not to investigate where it appears to him that there is no sufficient ground for entering into an investigation. The question, therefore, as to whether an empowered officer had made investigation or caused the same to be made in a cognizable offence within the meaning of Section 157 CrPC or had not initiated an investigation on the basis of an information which would not come within the meaning of Section 154 CrPC is essentially required to be determined in the fact situation obtaining in each case. (Paras 24 and 22)

The CBI Manual provides for a preliminary inquiry. By reason thereof a distinction has been made between a preliminary inquiry and a regular case. A preliminary inquiry in terms of para 9.1 of the CBI Manual may be converted into a regular case as soon as sufficient material becomes available to show that prima facie there has been commission of a cognizable offence. Undisputedly the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code are applicable in relation to the said inquiries. (Para 11)

Only an anonymous complaint was made in June 2004. Evidently it was within the province of CBI to commence a preliminary inquiry. The procedure laid down in the CBI Manual and in particular when it was required to inquire into the allegation of the corruption on the part of some public servants, recourse to the provisions of the Manual cannot be said to be unfair. It did not find any reason to convert the preliminary inquiry into a regular case. (Para 25)

The first respondent (CBI) is a statutory authority. It has a statutory duty to carry out investigation in accordance with law. Ordinarily, it is not within the province of the court to direct the investigative agency to carry out investigation in a particular manner. A writ court ordinarily again would not interfere with the functioning of an investigative agency. Only in exceptional cases, it may do so. No such case has been made out by the appellant herein. (Para 30)

So far as the decision of the first respondent herein, not to register a regular case so as to take up an investigation into the allegation against the officers concerned, is concerned, the appellant may have to pursue his own remedy keeping in view the fact that the first respondent before the Supreme Court has furnished the details of its findings in the preliminary inquiry as also the result of the departmental proceedings initiated against the delinquent officers. (Para 32). Shashikant v. CBI, (2007) 1 SCC 630: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 406: AIR 2007 SC 351: (2007) 49 AIC 292 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 995: (2007) 103 Cut LT 511.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2006]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; P. Sirajuddin v. State of Madras, (1970) 1 SCC 595: 1970 SCC (Cri) 240; Mohindro v. State of Punjab, (2001) 9 SCC 581: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1087; State of U.P. v. Bhagwant Kishore Joshi, (1964) 3 SCR 71: AIR 1964 SC 221: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 140; Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226: 1998 SCC (Cri) 307, relied on Velayudhan v. State of Kerala, (1998) 1 Crimes 510 (Ker); Hemant Dhasmana v. CBI, (2001) 7 SCC 536: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1280, distinguished on facts

(ii) Contents of FIR

Synopsis

1. Generally 259
2. Form and language of FIR 259
3. Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR 261
4. Discrepancies/Inconsistencies/Contradictions in or vis-à-vis FIR 283
5. Corrections/Overwriting/Interpolation in FIR 287
6. Embellishments/Improvements in FIR 289
7. Inculpative statement in FIR 289

1. Generally

[710] — S. 154 — FIR — Held, must be read in its entirety (Para 7). Dhananjay v. State of Bihar, (2007) 14 SCC 768: 2007 Cri LJ 1440: (2007) 2 KLJ 294 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-2-2007]

2. Form and language of FIR

See also Section 154, '(1)(ii)2. When, where and how FIR to be recorded', above, and '(3)(v) Falsity of/Fabricated FIR', below

[711] — S. 154 — FIR — Language of — There is no necessity for employment of any particular language in the FIR. Hari Om v. State of U.P., 1993 Supp (2) SCC 1: 1993 SCC (Cri) 396: 1993 Cri LJ 1383: (1993) 1 Crimes 294.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and S. Mohan, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-1993]

[712] — S. 154 — Neatly written and detailed FIR alleged to have been written within an hour of the murder, held, makes doubtful such fact of early reporting — Absence of entry in FIR, as to when it was sent to Magistrate concerned, held, assumes great significance and supports the defence plea that the FIR was drawn up much later than alleged. Datar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1975) 4 SCC 272: 1975 SCC (Cri) 530: AIR 1974 SC 1193: 1974 Cri LJ 908: (1974) 11 ACC 262.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-1973]

[713] — S. 154 — Very detailed FIR of murder and dacoity lodged soon after by son of one of the deceased — Held, makes it doubtful. Ram Lakhan Singh v. State of U.P., (1977) 3 SCC 268: 1977 SCC (Cri) 474: AIR 1977 SC 1936: 1977 Cri LJ 1566.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.K. Goswami, A.C. Gupta and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1977]

[714] — S. 154 — FIR — Credible/acceptable mode and manner of naming persons in FIR — Names, parentage and complete addresses of unknown accused given in FIR — Effect — Police identifying accused only on the basis of a known co-accused calling four unknown accused by their names during a gun battle in an isolated area on a dark night — Effect — Held, only because SA (the know co-accused) allegedly called the other accused by their names, which appears to be wholly unlikely, they could not have been identified particularly in view of the fact that the incident had taken place in an isolated area and that too on a dark night

(3)(ii)2. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Form and language of FIR (contd.)

During the night intervening 24-12-1999 and 25-12-1999, allegedly on the basis of a secret information regarding five accused/dacoits, policemen went to the place concerned in plain clothes. Allegedly on recognising the policemen, the accused persons opened fire and a gun battle ensued. Accused SA and Constable L died of bullet injuries on the spot. The other accused fled away. PW 2 Constable also received a gunshot injury. PW 10, Inspector who had received the secret information lodged an FIR. All the accused persons were arrested from different places in the month of January 2000. Accused 3, from whom a pistol had been recovered and in respect of whom a different FIR had been lodged, was acquitted of offences under the Arms Act. After completion of the investigation, charge-sheet was filed against A-3, A-2, A-1 (the appellants herein) and A-4. The trial court, after examining a large number of witnesses, convicted the accused for offences under Sections 302, 307 and 353 IPC read with Section 34 IPC. However, A-2 was acquitted in respect of the charge under Section 25 of the Arms Act. Criminal appeals preferred thereagainst were dismissed by the High Court by reason of the impugned judgment.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

Although test identification for the first time in court is permissible in law, the principle should be applied having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case. The accused persons having been identified for the first time in the court, it is difficult for any court to rely upon the same and that too after such a long time. The appellants were not known to the police officers. The appellant-accused were not involved in any other case. (Paras 19 and 21)

Although it is not in dispute that none of the prosecution witnesses or police knew any of the appellant-accused except SA (deceased), it is beyond anybody's comprehension as to how in the FIR, not only their names, but also their parentage and complete addresses were stated. Only because SA allegedly called them by their names, which appears to be wholly unlikely, they could not have been identified particularly in view of the fact that the incident had taken place in an isolated area and that too on a dark night. Even two persons, namely. A-4 and A-2 were called by their first names. How the officer-in-charge could even ascertain their actual names has not been disclosed. In the present case, PWs 1, 2 and 3 in their depositions admitted that they had not been knowing the accused from before. Why despite the same, after their arrest, test identification parade was not held has not been explained. The appellants were identified only in the court. (Paras 12, 18, 17 and 21)

The impugned judgment of the High Court convicting the appellants cannot be upheld. The appellants are directed to be set at liberty unless wanted in connection with any other case. (Para 26). Hem Singh v. State of Haryana, (2009) 6 SCC 748.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[715] — S. 154 — FIR — Genuineness of — Doubt as to — Factors to be considered — Form and language of FIR

The subsequent statement may not be a part of the first information report being a statement under Section 161 of the Code; but the defence is entitled to show that improvements have been made therein vis-à-vis the allegations made in the first information report. That there exists some improvement is not in dispute. Immediately, a purported statement was taken after the first information report was lodged. A further statement was recorded that PW 1, the victim complainant had himself written the first information report. But the contents of the first information report clearly demonstrate that the same has been drafted by a person who is well versed in legal language. A bare perusal of the first information report itself shows that it cannot be in the handwriting of a student studying in Class IX i.e. the victim. It was in very good handwriting. It was written systematically. There was no mistake. There was no hesitation in writing. It was absolutely neat and clean. (Para 23). Gowrishankara Swamigalu v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 14 SCC 411.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

[716] — S. 154 — FIR — Genuineness — Complaint of injured witness, giving graphic details of the incident, recorded in hospital by Police Inspector and without wasting time, sent to police station where FIR was registered on that basis and copy thereof sent to Magistrate immediately — In the circumstances, held, FIR cannot be said to be a bogus or concocted document

The accused persons, belonging to upper caste, were inimical to the deceased persons belonging to a Scheduled Caste community as one of the deceased was elected to the post of Pradhan of the village. It was alleged that while the persons belonging to the SC community including the Pradhan and other office-bearers were returning to their village by a bus, the appellant-accused, fully armed, formed an unlawful assembly, stopped the bus and attacked the deceased party as a result of which six persons including the Pradhan died. The Pradhan was beheaded and his head was carried by Accused 1. PWs 1, 2 and 3, who were also injured in the same incident, managed to reach the hospital on bicycle. They were given first aid and were provided transport for being taken to another government hospital. When the incident came to the knowledge of the Inspector of Police PW 47, he reached the hospital, recorded the statement of PW 1 and on the basis of the same, registered criminal cases against the accused persons. The trial court convicted the appellant-accused under Section 302 read with Section 34 and or Section 149 IPC. The appeals preferred thereagainst were dismissed by the High Court.

On behalf of the appellants, several irregularities in the FIR were pointed out. The defence all through contended that everything was not alright with the FIR. It was the basic contention of the defence before the High Court, as also before the Supreme Court that the FIR in this case was not a genuine document. This was based on the contention that the FIR book was not made available to the defence, though was asked for. The Supreme Court directed the respondent State to place before it FIR diary. However, counsel for the respondent admitted that the FIR book was not available. Question was whether the whole prosecution case should be discarded on the basis of the alleged irregularities in FIR.

Dismissing the appeal of the accused, the Supreme Court held as above.

The fear-stricken witness, who had seen 6 persons being slaughtered ruthlessly, had with great difficulty managed to run away in an injured condition to the hospital and getting the cue of the whole incident, the investigating officer went and recorded his complaint there in the hospital itself barely within one-and-half hours from the incident. That certainly would have taken some time and without wasting any further time, the FIR was sent not only to the police station, but the copies thereof were sent immediately to the Magistrate. It cannot be imagined that in such a short time, a fake FIR can be prepared with graphic description, not only of the incident, but the occurrences which took place prior to the incident and subsequent thereto also, with the names of the accused persons, the weapons handled by them and the role played by them, individually, as well as, collectively. Thus, the witness had certainly written the complaint, duly signed by him, which complaint, without any waste of time, was sent to the police station, on the basis of which the printed FIR was registered and then a copy thereof was sent to the Magistrate instantaneously. It completely rules out the FIR being a bogus document or a doctored document. (Paras 27 and 28). Alagarsamy v. State, (2010) 12 SCC 427: AIR 2010 SC 849: 2010 Cri LJ 29: (2010) 2 ECrN 88: (2009) 84 AIC 192 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2009]

3. Detail required/Details omitted/ Omissions in FIR

See also Section 154, '(3)(ii)4. Discrepancies/Inconsistencies/Contradictions in or vis-à-vis FIR',

'(3)(ii)5. Corrections/Overwriting/Interpolation in FIR', and

'(3)(ii)6. Embellishments/Improvements in FIR', below

[717] — S. 154 — FIR — Contents of FIR — It is not necessary that the FIR must disclose all facts and details relating to the offence reported — What is required is that the information given must disclose the commission of a cognizable offence and must provide a basis for the police officer to suspect the commission of such an offence — If it is so, the police officer is bound to record the information and conduct an investigation — Mentioning of all the ingredients of the offence in the FIR, held, not essential — Where the facts stated in the General Diary entry recorded on the basis of a telephonic information were (i) that the respondent was a corrupt official and was in the habit of accepting illegal gratifications, (ii) that he had demanded and accepted cash to the tune of rupees one lakh approximately, and (iii) that he would be carrying with him the said amount while going to a particular place by a particular mode on a particular date, held, a cognizable offence under S. 13 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 was clearly made out — Hence, the SP, CBI rightly proceeded to intercept the respondent and investigate the case — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13

(3)(ii)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR (contd.)

The parties did not dispute the legal position that a GD entry may be treated as a first information report in an appropriate case, where it discloses the commission of a cognizable offence. (Para 16)

The information recorded in the GD entry does make a categoric assertion that the respondent has accepted a sum of rupees one lakh by way of illegal gratification, and that he was carrying the said amount with him while going to Nagpur by Gitanjali Express on 17-10-1990. If these assertions are accepted on their face value, clearly an offence of criminal misconduct under Section 13 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 is made out. The said offence is a cognizable offence. (Para 18)

A first information report is not an encyclopaedia, which must disclose all facts and details relating to the offence reported. An informant may lodge a report about the commission of an offence though he may not know the name of the victim or his assailant. He may not even know how the occurrence took place. A first informant need not necessarily be an eyewitness so as to be able to disclose in great detail all aspects of the offence committed. What is of significance is that the information given must disclose the commission of a cognizable offence and the information so lodged must provide a basis for the police officer to suspect the commission of a cognizable offence. (Para 20)

The law does not require the mentioning of all the ingredients of the offence in the FIR. It is only after a complete investigation that it may be possible to say whether any offence is made out on the basis of evidence collected by the investigating agency. (Para 22)

The information given disclosing the commission of a cognizable offence only sets in motion the investigative machinery, with a view to collect all necessary evidence, and thereafter to take action in accordance with law. The true test is whether the information furnished provides a reason to suspect the commission of an offence, which the police officer concerned is empowered under Section 156 of the Code to investigate. If it does, he has no option but to record the information and proceed to investigate the case either himself or depute any other competent officer to conduct the investigation. The question as to whether the report is true, whether it discloses full details regarding the manner of occurrence, whether the accused is named, and whether there is sufficient evidence to support the allegations are all matters which are alien to the consideration of the question whether the report discloses the commission of a cognizable offence. Even if the information does not furnish all the details, the police officer concerned must find out those details in the course of investigation and collect all the necessary evidence. (Para 20)

In the instant case, the information received by the Superintendent of Police, CBI clearly spells out the offence of criminal misconduct under Section 13 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. The allegation certainly gives rise to a suspicion that a cognizable offence may have been committed by the respondent, which the Superintendent of Police, CBI was empowered to investigate. Therefore if the Superintendent of Police, CBI proceeded to intercept the respondent and investigate the case, he did only that which he was in law obliged to do. His taking up the investigation, therefore, cannot be faulted. (Para 21). CBI v. Tapan Kumar Singh, (2003) 6 SCC 175: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1305: AIR 2003 SC 4140: 2003 Cri LJ 2322.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-2003]

[718] — S. 154 — FIR — Genuineness of — Factors relevant — Detail required — Held, FIR need not be encyclopaedic — Each and every detail need not be stated — Court has to ascertain about possibility of false implication of accused — Probable physical and mental condition of informant is relevant

In the first information report all the accused persons were named and overt acts on their part were also stated at some length. Each and every detail of the incident was not necessary to be stated. A first information report is not meant to be encyclopaedic. While considering the effect of some omissions in the first information report on the part of the informant, a court cannot fail to take into consideration the probable physical and mental condition of the first informant. One of the important factors which may weigh with the court is as to whether there was a possibility of false implication of the appellants. Only with a view to test the veracity of the correctness of the contents of the report, the court applies certain well-known principles of caution. Once, however, a first information report is found to be truthful, only because names of some accused persons have been mentioned, against whom the prosecution was not able to establish its case, the entire prosecution case would not be thrown away only on the basis thereof. If furthermore the purported entry in the general diary, which had not been produced, is not treated to be a first information report, only because some enquiries have been made, the same by itself would not vitiate the entire trial. Enquiries are required to be made for several reasons; one of them is to ascertain the truth or otherwise of the incident and the second to apprehend the accused persons. Arrest of accused persons, as expeditiously as possible, leads to a better investigation. (Paras 13 and 14). Animireddy Venkata Ramana v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (2008) 5 SCC 368: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 600: AIR 2008 SC 1603: (2008) 65 AIC 136 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 2038.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

[719] — S. 154 — Details of the incident given in FIR — If the informant had not been an eyewitness he could not have given all the particulars in the earliest report. Balram v. State of U.P., 1994 SCC (Cri) 37: (1993) 1 Crimes 1195: 1993 Cri LR (SC) 268.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1993]

[720] — S. 154 — FIR need not be an encyclopaedia of evidence — Basic prosecution case needs to be given in it (Para 4). Manoj v. State of Maharashtra, (1999) 4 SCC 268: 1999 SCC (Cri) 533: AIR 1999 SC 1620: 1999 Cri LJ 2284.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-1999]

[721] — S. 154 — FIR — Contents — Held, FIR is not an encyclopaedia of the facts concerning the crime — But, it must contain some definite information vis-à-vis the crime (Para 13). Gorle S. Naidu v. State of A.P., (2003) 12 SCC 449: AIR 2004 SC 1169: 2004 Cri LJ 924.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-2003]

See also (2003) 11 SCC 271: 2004 SCC (Cri) 135

[722] — S. 154 — FIR — Contents of — Held, though FIR is not intended to be an encyclopaedia of the background scenario, it must disclose the commission of an offence (Para 12). State of A.P. v. Golconda Linga Swamy, (2004) 6 SCC 522: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1805: AIR 2004 SC 3967.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2004]

[723] — S. 154 — FIR — Held, need not be encyclopaedic i.e. need not contain all details of the incident (Paras 34 and 45). Bishna v. State of W.B., (2005) 12 SCC 657.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-10-2005]

[724] — Ss. 154 and 162 — FIR — Contents of FIR — Information when to be treated as FIR — Earliest information of incident when not FIR — Held, FIR, is not expected to be encyclopaedia of events, but must contain some essential and relevant details of the incident — Cryptic information about commission of a cognizable offence irrespective of the nature and details of such information may not be treated as FIR — In the instant case, information (Ext. 61) given by PW 5 that several persons armed with deadly weapons were attacking members of his political party, was entered in General Diary based on which PW 18 IO immediately left for place of occurrence — No FIR could thus be recorded as first priority of IO was to control the incident since by that time none had died — It would have been rather unusual for IO to insist on taking down entire incident by way of FIR, rather than rushing to place of incident — Moreover, it cannot be said that moment PW 18 left the police station, investigation had commenced — Purpose of information then was only to request officer in charge of police station to reach place of occurrence — Besides, neither was any inquest carried out, nor were any steps towards investigation taken before registering FIR — In such circumstances FIR (A-31) not affected by any legal infirmity (Paras 38 to 41). Pandurang Chandrakant Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 10 SCC 773: (2009) 83 AIC 38 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2009]

Vikram v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 12 SCC 332: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 362, relied on [725] — S. 154 — FIR — Scope of FIR — Held, FIR is not supposed to be an encyclopaedia of the entire event and cannot contain the minutest details of the events — In the instant case all essential material facts were disclosed in the first information report (Paras 20 and 21). Budh Singh v. State of M.P., (2007) 10 SCC 496: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 64: (2007) 57 AIC 134 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-5-2007]

[726] — S. 154 — FIR — Contents of — Held, FIR should at least mention the broad story of the prosecution — Not mentioning of material and vital facts may affect credibility of FIR (Para 16). Arulvelu v. State, (2009) 10 SCC 206: (2009) 83 AIC 253 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-2009]

[727] — S. 154 — FIR — Contents of FIR — Held, FIR is not supposed to be encyclopaedia of all details — There can be no hard-and-fast rule that names of witnesses, more particularly,

(3)(ii)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR (contd.)

eyewitnesses should be indicated in FIR — In the instant case, though name of PW 2 was not specifically mentioned in FIR, but it cannot be lost sight of that he is son of deceased and the incident took place in his house — His presence is natural considering the time when the incident took place i.e. about 6.30 a.m. — So mere non-mention of name of PW 2 does not render prosecution version fragile (Paras 9 and 12). Gunnana Pentayya v. State of A.P., (2009) 16 SCC 59.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-2008]

State of M.P. v. Mansingh, (2003) 10 SCC 414: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 390, followed [728] — S. 154 — FIR — It is not always necessary to mention all the accused persons in FIR — FIR may not be encyclopaedic (Para 23). State of Maharashtra v. Mohd. Sajid Husain Mohd. S. Husain, (2008) 1 SCC 213: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 176: AIR 2008 SC 155: (2007) 59 AIC 15(SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-2007]

Vinod G. Asrani v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 3 SCC 633: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 129; State of U.P. v. Pappu, (2005) 3 SCC 594: 2005 SCC (Cri) 780, relied on

[729] — S. 154 — FIR — Purpose, significance and contents of — Although FIR need not be encyclopaedic but it should not be so sketchy as to render initiation of investigation impossible

An information received by the officer in charge of a police station for commission of a cognizable offence must be reduced to writing so as to enable him to start investigation. Lodging of a first information report is necessary for setting the criminal law in motion. It can be lodged by anybody. It, however, should not be too sketchy so as to make initiation of investigation on the basis thereof impossible. Only information in regard to commission of an offence may not for all intent and purport satisfy the requirement of the first information report. When, however, the first information report is lodged by a person who claims himself to be aware of not only the commission of the offence, the name of the deceased and at least one of the accused who had committed the same, could have been recorded on the basis thereof. It may, however, be another thing to say that any information in regard to the commission of an offence is given by way of a telephone or by a person who does not disclose his identity and such message is so cryptic that it may not satisfy the requirement of Section 154 CrPC. (Paras 12 and 15). Ramesh Baburao Devaskar v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 13 SCC 501: 2008 Cri LJ 372: (2007) 59 AIC 54(SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

Om Prakash v. State of Uttaranchal, (2003) 1 SCC 648: 2003 SCC (Cri) 412; Mundrika Mahto v. State of Bihar, (2002) 9 SCC 183: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1163, relied on [730] — S. 154 — Not necessary to state the minutest detail of the crime in the FIR — Enough, if a broad picture presented by the prosecution was revealed in the FIR — Where FIR was lodged soon after the murder by the companion of the victim, minute details could not be expected. Pedda Narayana v. State of A.P., (1975) 4 SCC 153: 1975 SCC (Cri) 427: AIR 1975 SC 1252: 1975 Cri LJ 1062: (1975) 12 ACC 201: 1975 Cr LR (SC) 335.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-1975]

[731] — S. 154 — FIR — Omissions in FIR — Effect — Omission of material facts pertaining to the crime, held, is relevant in judging veracity of prosecution case though FIR does not constitute substantive evidence

The Anand family (the deceased, his brothers, sisters and parents) were staying in the house of the accused under a leave and licence agreement which was to expire on 27-4-1989. About two weeks prior to the date of incident and again on 24 to 26-4-1989, the accused persons (A-1 owner, A-3 estate agent, and A-2) approached PW 4 (the father of the deceased) and demanded delivery of vacant possession of the licensed flat by 27-4-1989 and did not listen to the difficulties explained by PW 4.

On 27-4-1989 at about 7.30 p.m., the deceased was standing in front of the shop of Accused A-3 on the ground floor in the same society, three buildings away from the building in which the deceased resided, waiting for his mother and sister, who were scheduled to return from Hyderabad in the evening. He had the keys of the flat with him. His father (PW 4), who was in the flat till evening later left the house for bringing food for the family, instructing the deceased to wait on the road. PW 1 (a brother of the deceased) also left the house at about 7.00 p.m. for paying obeisance at the gurudwara. While the deceased was standing in front of the shop of Accused A-3, Accused A-1 and A-3 came near him and started beating him. The beating of the deceased was witnessed by his brother, PW 1 who was returning from the gurudwara. He rushed to save his brother, who, by that time had fallen down on the ground and was stifling. The incident drew attention of the public and the two accused were apprehended. PW 2, a police constable (off-duty) and a family friend of the Anands, also happened to be at the spot and he too accosted the two accused. He along with PW 1 took the victim to the clinic of PW 8 (doctor) situated on the ground floor of the same building in which the Anands resided. Finding the victim in a serious condition, PW 8 advised his removal to a bigger hospital. In the meanwhile, he also contacted the police control room. In a short while the police mobile van arrived and the deceased was removed to Cooper Hospital. PW 1 also accompanied him. The deceased was examined by the doctors on duty and was declared brought dead.

High Court by the impugned order affirmed the order passed by the Sessions Judge acquitting Accused A-1 to A-3 of the charge under Section 302 read with Section 34 IPC but the High Court set aside the order of the trial court convicting Accused A-1 to A-3 for offence under Section 456 read with Section 109 IPC. The High Court also set aside the conviction of Respondents 4 and 5 for offences under Section 456 IPC.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held:

The fundamental object of an FIR is that it acts as a safeguard against embellishment, exaggeration and forgetfulness. True, that it is not the requirement of law that every minute detail of the occurrence needs to be recorded in the FIR but it must disclose the commission of an offence. Though it is trite that the FIR does not constitute substantive evidence and can, strictly speaking, be only used as a previous statement for the purpose of either corroborating or contradicting its maker, yet omission of material facts pertaining to the crime is undoubtedly relevant in judging the veracity of prosecution case. The FIR is a report relating to the commission of an offence, given to the police and recorded by it under Section 154 CrPC. Though, recording of an FIR is not a condition precedent to the setting in motion of the criminal investigation yet from the viewpoint of the investigating authorities it conveys to them earliest information regarding the circumstances in which the crime was committed; the names of the culprits and the role played by them as well as the names of the witnesses present at the scene of occurrence, so vital for effective and meaningful investigation. The information about an occurrence can be given by any person knowing about the commission of such an offence and not necessarily by an eyewitness. (Paras 26 and 24). State of Maharashtra v. Ahmed Shaikh Babajan, (2009) 14 SCC 267: (2009) 73 AIC 178 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 637 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2008]

[732] — S. 154 — FIR — Omission in FIR — FIR need not contain exhaustive account of the incident — When PW had given all the essential and relevant details of the incident naming the accused, merely because of non-mention of certain further particulars in FIR which were stated by the PW before the court, deposition of the PW cannot be said to be improvement over the version in the FIR — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 145

It is not possible to accept the contention that the alleged cries of her husband — "Raja, why are you doing this?" did not find mention in the FIR, nor was it mentioned in the FIR that the accused replied to PW 1 saying "you have lodged complaint against me" and that these remarks attributed to the husband of PW 1 and the accused cannot be true, as they were not mentioned in the FIR. The FIR need not contain an exhaustive account of the incident. The report was given to the police within one-and-a-half hours after the incident. PW 8, a known person, had drafted the report that she dictated. She had given all essential and relevant details of the incident naming the accused as culprit. A person injured and overtaken by grief cannot be expected to give better particulars. The possibility of PW 1 inventing a story at that juncture trying to implicate the accused is absolutely ruled out. The contents of the FIR, broadly and in material particulars, conform to the version given by PW 1 in her deposition. (Para 10). Om Prakash v. State of Uttaranchal, (2003) 1 SCC 648.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-2002]

[733] — S. 154 — FIR — Credibility of — PW 1 omitting to state in FIR about obtaining loan from a bank, nature of arms possessed by each accused, and manner in which deceased was hacked to death, and others had sustained injuries — Held, would not affect credibility of his evidence since at the time of recording of FIR he was in grievously injured condition — Hence, it was not expected of him to give a detailed version in that condition, and more so, when many accused were involved —

(3)(ii)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR (contd.)

Despite that he had named all the accused and his testimony was corroborated by PW 3 and medical evidence. Annareddy Sambasiva Reddy v. State of A.P., (2009) 12 SCC 546: AIR 2009 SC 2661: (2009) 78 AIC 222 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2009]

[734] — S. 154 — Scheme of, compared with the scheme of S. 23, Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 — Prosecution — Validity — Name of petitioner not included in approval granted under S. 23(1)(a) but included in the sanction granted under S. 23(2) after his complicity in the activities of the other accused persons as part of an organised crime syndicate was established — In such circumstances, prosecution of the petitioner, held, valid — Non-inclusion of his name in approval under S. 23(1)(a), held, inconsequential — Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 (30 of 1999), Ss. 23(1)(a) & (2)

The petitioner herein and certain others filed writ petitions before the Bombay High Court challenging their prosecution under the Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 (for short "the MCOCA"). The contention of the petitioner herein before the High Court was that his name was not included in the approval granted under Section 23(1)(a) of MCOCA but was subsequently included in the sanction granted by the Commissioner of Police under Section 23(2) thereof. That in the absence of the prior approval the investigating officer could not have proposed to charge-sheet the petitioner. The High Court dismissed all the said writ petitions but only the petitioner herein filed the present SLP.

Reiterating the submissions made by him before the High Court, the petitioner contended before the Supreme Court that if the very initiation of the investigation stood vitiated by the failure to obtain approval under Section 23(1)(a), the subsequent sanction granted under Section 23(2) also stood vitiated and the proceedings before the Special Court on the basis thereof were liable to be quashed.

On the other hand, comparing the complaint under Section 3 of MCOCA, with an information given under Section 154, CrPC, the State submitted that the non-inclusion of the petitioner's name in the approval granted under Section 23(1)(a) was of no consequence since during investigation his complicity was established and thereafter sanction was sought to prosecute him along with the others under Section 23(2).

Dismissing the SLP,

Held :

The non-inclusion of the petitioner's name in the approval under Section 23(1)(a) of MCOCA was not fatal to the investigation. On the other hand, his name was included in the sanction granted under Section 23(2) after the stage of investigation into the complaint where his complicity was established. The offences allegedly committed by the petitioner have a direct bearing and/or link with the activities of the other accused as part of the C gang which was an organised crime syndicate. (Para 8)

The scheme of CrPC makes it clear that once the information of the commission of an offence is received under Section 154 thereof, the investigating authorities take up the investigation and file charge-sheet against whoever is found during the investigation to be involved in the commission of such offence. There is no hard-and -fast rule that the first information report must always contain the names of all persons involved in the commission of an offence. Very often the names of the culprits are not even mentioned in the FIR and they surface only at the stage of the investigation. The scheme under Section 23 of MCOCA is similar and Section 23(1)(a) provides a safeguard that no investigation into an offence under MCOCA should be commenced without the approval of the authorities concerned. Once such approval is obtained, an investigation is commenced. Those who are subsequently found to be involved in the commission of the organised crime can very well be proceeded against once sanction is obtained against them under Section 23(2) of MCOCA. (Para 9). Vinod G. Asrani v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 3 SCC 633: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 129: AIR 2007 SC 1253.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2007]

Kari Choudhary v. Sita Devi, (2002) 1 SCC 714: 2002 SCC (Cri) 269, followed

[735] — S. 154 r/w R. 24.1, Punjab Police Rules — Entry in daily diary — Held, what is required to be mentioned in the daily diary is substance of the information received and not the repository of everything — Factum of murder of deceased by four accused including appellants had been specifically entered — Mere non-disclosure of names of eyewitnesses in the daily diary and mortuary regis- ter — Effect of — Held, not fatal, more so when their names disclosed in FIR itself and there was no other circumstance to otherwise create doubt regarding veracity of the prosecution case — Punjab Police Rules, 1934, R. 24.1 (Para 11). Gurpreet Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 12 SCC 615.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-2005]

[736] — S. 154 — That missing details in FIR later provided by the complainant in her evidence, on facts, held of no consequence. State of Haryana v. Harpal Singh, (1978) 4 SCC 465: 1979 SCC (Cri) 86: AIR 1978 SC 1530: 1978 Cri LJ 1603.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-8-1978]

[737] — S. 154 — S. 161 IPC— Illegal gratification — Trap — FIR — Omission in FIR about time and place of complainant's future meeting with accused for offering the bribe — Where complainant unwilling to give bribe but accused persisting in his demand on threat, question of arrangement for any time and place would not arise — Moreover, accused himself admitting as to when and where the complainant followed by the raiding party met him — In the circumstances, held, the omission in the FIR not significant — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — S. 5. Kishan Chand Mangal v. State of Rajasthan, (1982) 3 SCC 466: 1983 SCC (Cri) 92: AIR 1982 SC 1511.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-1982]

[738] — S. 154 — Minor details not indicated in FIR — Later on elaborated in court — Effect — In such case, criticism that the case originally presented had been abandoned to be substituted by another one, held, not justified — There cannot be exact and precise reproduction in any mathematical manner — What needs to be seen is whether the version presented in the court was substantially similar to what was stated during investigation — It is only when exaggerations fundamentally change the nature of the case, the court has to consider whether the witness was telling the truth or not (Para 10). Sunil Kumar v. State Govt. of (NCT of Delhi), (2003) 11 SCC 367.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-10-2003]

[739] — S. 154 — FIR — When vitiated — Detail required — Informant not expected to disclose all minute details of the occurrence — In FIR informant stated that he had seen accused giving blows with their respective weapons to deceased — How many blows were inflicted by each accused not significant

The trial court also disbelieved the witnesses on the ground that they have made improvements in the course of their deposition with a view to make the prosecution evidence consistent with the medical evidence. There is no basis in support of this conclusion. Even in FIR it was clearly stated that the informant had witnessed Appellants 1 and 2 giving blows with their respective weapons to the deceased. When cross-examined in court, he stated that Appellant 1 gave one or two blows with his weapon. It is not expected of an informant to disclose all minute details of the occurrence in his report. It was implicit in his statement that several blows were given, whether each one of them gave two or more blows is hardly significant. The trial court appears to have unnecessarily suspected the veracity of the eyewitnesses. There is no reason to disbelieve their evidence. (Para 23). Mahadeo Laxman Sarane v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 12 SCC 705: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 791: 2007 Cri LJ 3209: (2007) 56 AIC 140 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2007]

[740] — S. 154 — FIR — Contents — Murder at night — Failure to mention about existence of electric light in the FIR — Held, was not of much consequence and was not fatal to the case of the prosecution particularly when on site inspection an electric bulb was found in front of the gate of the house (Para 9). Chittarmal v. State of Rajasthan, (2003) 2 SCC 266: 2003 SCC (Cri) 514: AIR 2003 SC 796: 2003 Cri LJ 889.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-2003]

[741] — S. 154 — FIR — Fifteen persons named in FIR while 39 persons put on trial — Held, though the FIR need not contain all the details, but in a case of this nature it is expected that the incident would be narrated in some detail as otherwise it will be difficult for the trial Judge to find out the truth particularly having regard to the fact that both the PWs made omnibus statements — PW 1 undoubtedly made improvements in his deposition before the court and attributed overt acts not only to those who were allegedly responsible for causing the death of Deceased 1 but also who had allegedly caused the death of Deceased 2 — If he was an eyewitness and had seen the entire occurrence from a close proximity and indeed suffered an injury himself, there was no reason as to why the first information report would lack the details of the offence involving all the accused persons (Para 16). Sabbi Mallesu v. State of A.P., (2006) 10 SCC 543: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 142: AIR 2006 SC 2747: 2006 Cri LJ 4038.

(3)(ii)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-2006]

[742] — Ss. 154 and 174 — Non-mention of a proved fact in FIR — Effect, if any — Accused injuring the victim and fleeing away leaving behind his vehicle — Victim dying on the spot — Notwithstanding non-mention of the vehicle being left behind by the accused, in the FIR, in view of other evidence, the prosecution charge, held, proved beyond doubt — Accused, held, liable to conviction — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 300 and 302

The accused coming in a tractor, gave a few handle blows to the victim who died on the spot. The accused, leaving the tractor on the spot, fled away. The police seized the tractor from the spot and recovered the blood-stained handle, on the disclosure made by the accused in presence of independent witnesses. The report of serologist and chemical examiner stated that the handle was stained with human blood and the post-mortem report declared the injuries on the person of the deceased, sufficient to cause death in the ordinary course of nature. The High Court of Punjab and Haryana held that the recovery of the tractor was of no help to the prosecution case as in the FIR it was not mentioned that the accused had left the tractor on the spot. It acquitted the accused. Reversing the High Court's decision

Held :

An FIR is not expected to contain all the details. This finding of the appellate court is wholly erroneous inasmuch as it is evident from the inquest report made on the date of the occurrence, that the tractor was seized on that date from the place of the occurrence vide the recovery memo by the Sub-Inspector. There is no room for doubt that the tractor was left at the place of occurrence by the accused while running away with the handle of the tractor.

In view of the facts of the case the prosecution case has been proved beyond reasonable doubt. The judgement and order of acquittal passed by the High Court is therefore, set aside and the order of conviction and sentence passed by the court under S. 302, IPC is being affirmed. Jagtar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1988) 1 SCC 712: 1988 SCC (Cri) 254: AIR 1988 SC 628: 1988 Cri LJ 866.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-1-1988]

[743] — S. 154 — FIR — Evidence of injured eyewitness cannot be rejected merely because his name was not mentioned in the FIR as one of those present during the incident — The condition of the maker of the FIR and whether he was in a position to reproduce the vivid details of the occurrence, should be borne in mind — Appreciation of evidence. State of Rajasthan v. Ani, (1997) 6 SCC 162: 1997 SCC (Cri) 851: AIR 1997 SC 1023: 1997 Cri LJ 1529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-1-1997]

[744] — S. 154 — FIR — Visibility in night — Where direct testimony shows that torchlight was burning at the scene of occurrence, held, mere non-mention of torchlight in FIR or in the statements of the witnesses before police, will not disprove identification of the accused in the torchlight. Shakti Patra v. State of W.B., 1981 Supp SCC 24: 1981 SCC (Cri) 644: AIR 1981 SC 1217: 1981 Cri LJ 645.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, Baharul Islam and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-1981]

[745] — S. 154 — FIR — Lacerated wounds would be the result if spear is used as a lathi — Non-mention of such minute detail regarding wielding of the spear in the FIR, held, not fatal. State of U.P. v. Hari Ram, (1983) 4 SCC 453: 1983 SCC (Cri) 861: AIR 1983 SC 1081: 1983 Cri LJ 1638.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and M.P. Thakkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-9-1983]

[746] — S. 154 — FIR — Detail required — Illegal gratification — Trap — FIR — Failure to mention name of accused in FIR — Held, not fatal where instead, his official designation mentioned, the complainant not being aware of his name — Penal Code, 1860, S. 161 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5. Kishan Chand Mangal v. State of Rajasthan, (1982) 3 SCC 466: 1983 SCC (Cri) 92: AIR 1982 SC 1511.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-1982]

[747] — S. 154 — FIR — Appellant not named in FIR — Plea of false implication — Sustainability — Appellant, resident of another village J which was at a distance of 45 kms from the place of occurrence — No money proved to have passed hands — He arrested after about 11 days of occurrence — Hence, contention that he was falsely implicated — Informant categorically stating in the FIR that he could identify the assailants — In the site plan prepared by the IO their names specifically mentioned — Moreover, Accused 1 to 3 had been residents of village J and appellant and accused B were seen visiting them many times — Presence of PW 3 at place of occurrence not disputed and he categorically stating that he had disclosed the names of the appellant and B to the IO — In such circumstances, held, B and the appellant could not be said to be falsely implicated (Paras 17 and 19). Kulwinder Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 12 SCC 538: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 115: (2007) 51 AIC 614 (SC): (2007) 2 KLJ 304 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 766.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-2006]

[748] — S. 154 — Details to be expected — Conspiracy — Proof of — Starting point of conspiracy — Need to mention precisely in FIR/charge-sheet — Held, the same is not necessary since it is difficult to spell out with exactitude the details relating to the starting point of conspiracy — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 120-B and 120-A

It is difficult to spell out with exactitude the details relating to the starting point of conspiracy. (Para 25)

It cannot be said that if instead of mentioning "the first week of December 2001" the wording "before December 2001" is employed, the prosecution should fail merely for that reason. (Para 25). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Esher Singh v. State of A.P., (2004) 11 SCC 585: 2004 SCC (Cri) Supp 113; H.P. Admn. v. Om Prakash, (1972) 1 SCC 249: 1972 SCC (Cri) 88; Prakash Chand v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 3 SCC 90: 1979 SCC (Cri) 656; H.P. Admn. v. Om Prakash, (1972) 1 SCC 249: 1972 SCC (Cri) 88, relied on [749] — S. 154 — FIR — Absence of details — Submission that non-mention about the source of light in FIR for identification of accused was fatal to prosecution — Held, FIR is not an encyclopaedia of facts concerning the crime and hence non-mention about the source of light therein was inconsequential — Not necessary that minutest details should be stated in FIR — For lodging the FIR, in a criminal case and more particularly in a murder case, the stress must be on prompt lodging of the FIR and it is sufficient if a broad picture is presented and the FIR contains broad features (Para 18). S. Sudershan Reddy v. State of A.P., (2006) 10 SCC 163: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 503: AIR 2006 SC 2716: 2006 Cri LJ 4033.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

Bollavaram Pedda Narsi Reddy v. State of A.P., (1991) 3 SCC 434: 1991 SCC (Cri) 586, distinguished on facts

[750] — S. 154 — FIR — Non-mentioning of the name of a prosecution witness in FIR — Effect of, on the statement made by that witness during the trial — Held, there is no requirement of law for mentioning the names of all the witnesses in the FIR — Hence, the statement made by PW 7 cannot be discarded on the ground that her name was not mentioned in the FIR

Merely because PWs 7, 12 and 22 happen to be the relations of the deceased, cannot be made a ground to discard their evidence. PW 7 had no reason to involve innocent persons in the commission of the crime. On facts, the High Court has rightly found these witnesses to be natural witnesses of the occurrence. (Para 13). Bhagwan Singh v. State of M.P., (2002) 4 SCC 85: 2002 SCC (Cri) 736: AIR 2002 SC 1621.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-2002]

[751] — S. 154 — FIR need not contain minute details of the occurrence — Merely because the informant mentioned in the FIR that the assailants were armed with lathis possibility of kanta (a stick with a knife-like portion at the end) being used by the assailants cannot be ruled out — Criminal Trial — Appreciation of evidence — Contradictions, inconsistencies, exaggerations or embellishments — Effect of discrepancy in FIR on entire evidence

FIR is not a chronicle of the exhaustive details of the occurrence, nor is it a catalogue of everything including minor particulars of the events which took place. Picking out an insignificant discrepancy regarding description of one of the weapons for jettisoning an otherwise sturdy account of the eyewitness is not a commendable approach in the evaluation of evidence. It is understood that kanta without sharp projection at the end would be a mere stick or lathi. If the informant mentioned in the FIR that the assailants were armed with lathis and guns there is no reason to conclude that the informant when he gave first information had ruled out the possibility of kanta being used by the assailants. State of U.P. v. Harban Sahai, (1998) 6 SCC 50: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1412.

(3)(ii)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and K.T. Thomas and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1998]

[752] — S. 154 — FIR — Contents of FIR — Benefit of doubt — Not naming accused in FIR — Effect

PW 2 informant was attacked by the appellant and 3 others with khukries (a sharp-edged weapon) near his college gate. PW 2 suffered five incised injuries from which blood came out, three injuries on head (two muscle deep and one skin deep) and two muscle deep injuries on the left hand fingers. The trial court convicted all the four accused persons. The High Court by the impugned judgment acquitted three of the co-accused by granting benefit of doubt but convicted the appellant.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Although the High Court extended benefit of doubt to three of the co-accused and acquitted them, it does not mean that on the same analogy, a judgment of acquittal should have been recorded in favour of the appellant also. As the other accused had not been named in the FIR and no test identification parade was held, the High Court thought it fit to extend the benefit of doubt. But the appellant was named in the FIR and specific overt act was attributed to him by PW 2 in his deposition. (Paras 15, 16 and 6)

Keeping in view the place of occurrence, it will not be hazardous to presume that the incident had taken place within a very short time. PW 2 in his evidence stated that three persons came from behind. He might not have been able to remember their names at the time when the FIR was lodged. Though PW 1 eyewitness, claimed to have identified the three co-accused, he turned hostile and undisputedly he and one S had brought PW 2, informant to the hospital. (Paras 16 and 7)

The contention that the FIR did not disclose that the appellant was also armed with khukri had not been raised before the courts below. The only suggestion given to the investigating officer was that it was written that all the accused were shown having khukri in their hands and not the appellant alone. (Para 14). Subhash Kumar v. State of Uttarakhand, (2009) 6 SCC 641.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Subhash Kumar v. State, Criminal Appeal No. 150 of 2003 decided on 27-8-2008, affirmed

[753] — S. 154 — Appellant-accused not named in FIR — Held, not by itself sufficient to reject the prosecution case against him when he had been specifically identified and his role narrated by PW (Para 6). Tika Ram v. State of M.P., (2007) 15 SCC 760.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2003]

[754] — S. 154 — FIR — Non-mentioning of names of some accused in FIR — Effect, if any — FIR, nature of — Principles reiterated — Complainant not aware of names of all accused persons — Hence, non-mentioning of appellants' names in FIR, held, not fatal (Paras 24 and 25). Jarnail Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 9 SCC 719.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2009]

Sachchey Lal Tiwari v. State of U.P., (2004) 11 SCC 410: 2004 SCC (Cri) Supp 105; Satbir v. Surat Singh, (1997) 4 SCC 192: 1997 SCC (Cri) 538; Harjinder Singh v. State of Punjab, (2004) 11 SCC 253: 2004 SCC (Cri) Supp 28; Acharaparambath Pradeepan v. State of Kerala, (2006) 13 SCC 643: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 241; Sarvesh Narain Shukla v. Daroga Singh, (2007) 13 SCC 360: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 188; Shankarlal v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 10 SCC 632: 2005 SCC (Cri) 579; Thangaiya v. State of T.N., (2005) 9 SCC 650: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1284, relied on [755] — S. 154 — FIR — Non-naming of accused person(s) — Effect of — Held, FIR is not supposed to be an encyclopaedia of the entire events — It cannot contain the minutest details of the events — When essentially material facts are disclosed, that is sufficient — Importance of naming the accused persons cannot be ignored — But, non-naming of one or few of the accused persons in the FIR is no reason to disbelieve the testimony of crucial witnesses — Yet names of the accused persons have to be named at the earliest possible opportunity — Whether a person was impleaded by way of afterthought or not must be judged having regard to the entire factual scenario in each case (Paras 11 to 13). Kirender Sarkar v. State of Assam, (2009) 12 SCC 342: AIR 2009 SC 2513: (2009) 78 AIC 99 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 3727.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2009]

[Ed.: See also (1972) 4 SCC 773; (1997) 6 SCC 514: 1997 SCC (Cri) 946]

[756] — S. 154 — FIR — When immaterial — Highly disturbed mental state of informant due to ghastliness/shocking nature of incident — Murder trial — Though omission of names of A-2 and A-3 in FIR registered by PW 1 (father of B, one of the murdered victims) is significant, however, held, much importance cannot be given to this omission, as FIR was given by a person who had seen dead body of his young son (B) having been brutally murdered — He had also seen dead body of his brother-in-law and had also come to know that three other members of brother-in-law's family were also seriously injured in the incident — Such a witness is bound to be excited and some scope has to be given to mental state of witness at that time — Herein, courts below rightly did not attach much importance to this omission — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302, 307, 452 and 34 (Para 27). Dilip Premnarayan Tiwari v. State of Maharashtra, (2010) 1 SCC 775.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-2009]

Rampal Pithwa Rahidas v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 73: 1994 SCC (Cri) 851, relied on

[757] — S. 154 — FIR — Contents of FIR — Omission regarding details of incident — Effect — Nature and circumstances of such omission entitling benefit of doubt — Injured informant becoming unconscious after assault and omitting to give details at the earliest point of time — Effect — Injured informant becoming unconscious after attack by four persons and lodging FIR after gaining consciousness in hospital — PW 4 Police SI deposing about the non-recording of informant's statement on the day of assault because of informant again becoming unconscious, because of which, it was recorded the next day — Court below relying on credible evidence by injured informant PW 2 — Proved/Admitted facts that more than one person assaulting informant with a sharp-edged weapon — Effect — Held, although the effect of a statement made in the FIR at the earliest point of time should be given primacy, it would not be proper to accept that all the particulars in regard to commission of offence must be furnished in detail — FIR is not to be treated as an encyclopaedia

FIR, as is well known, is not to be treated as an encyclopaedia. Although the effect of a statement made in the FIR at the earliest point of time should be given primacy, it would not probably be proper to accept that all the particulars in regard to commission of offence must be furnished in detail. (Para 12)

The testimony of PW 2 the informant had been relied upon by both the courts below on the issue as to whether the appellant was also armed with khukri. No case is made out to take a different view. The finding of fact arrived at by both the courts below that the informant received injuries inflicted on him by "khukri(s)" is not in dispute. It also stands admitted that the first informant was assaulted with a sharp-edged weapon by more than one person. The prosecution has brought on record that four persons assaulted the injured. PW 2 felt unconscious because of the serious injuries and regained consciousness for some time. After he was brought to the hospital then he could get the FIR lodged. (Paras 14, 16, 6 and 13)

If the deposition of PW 4 police SI is to be believed, the prosecution must be held to have proved that PW 2 (informant) became unconscious again as a result whereof his statement could not be recorded on 31-1-2000 (the day of assault). From the evidence of PW 4, it appears that he had gone to record the statement of the informant in the hospital on 31-1-2000; when he reached the hospital, the informant had become unconscious and was in a serious condition. His statement could be recorded only on 1-2-2000. It was on that date the other accused persons were named. (Paras 13 and 10). Subhash Kumar v. State of Uttarakhand, (2009) 6 SCC 641.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[758] — S. 154 — FIR — Non-mention of name in the FIR will not justify rejection of the evidence of the eyewitness (Para 7). Chittar Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2003) 6 SCC 397: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1377: AIR 2003 SC 3590: 2003 Cri LJ 3548.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2003]

Shri Bhagwan v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 6 SCC 296: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1095, relied on

[Ed.: See in this context State of U.P. v. Lalla Singh, (1978) 1 SCC 142: 1978 SCC (Cri) 70; Babu Singh v. State of Punjab, (1996) 8 SCC 699.]

[759] — S. 154 — Failure to mention in the FIR that the accused had wrapped a parna around the neck of the deceased and dragged him — But this fact was mentioned in the inquest report which was prepared soon after the occurrence — Medical evidence indicating that the deceased had a circular and horizontal reddish contusion around his neck — Held, in the circumstances of the case, non-mention of this fact in the FIR is of no consequence. State of Haryana v. Jinder Singh, (1997) 4 SCC 180: 1997 SCC (Cri) 532.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-1997]

(3)(ii)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR (contd.)

[760] — S. 154 — FIR — Non-mention of all the persons accompanying the deceased at the time of the attack, held, not fatal. Rameshwar Dayal v. State of U.P., (1978) 2 SCC 518: 1978 SCC (Cri) 311: AIR 1978 SC 1558: 1978 ALJ 1011: (1978) 15 ACC 276.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-1978]

[761] — S. 154 — FIR lodged by widow of the deceased within half an hour of the occurrence — Non-mention of places of residence of each accused separately inconsequential — Omission to give surname of the accused also not material particularly when the same had been given in the dying declaration. Jai Singh v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 SCC (Cri) 672.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-1996]

[762] — S. 154 — FIR — Contents of — Eyewitness' account of incident not incorporated in complaint lodged with police — Whether fatal to prosecution — Held, not fatal since complainant and eyewitness had not talked with each other prior to filing of FIR — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 376(2)(g), 302, 201 and 120-B (Paras 13 to 15). State of Rajasthan v. Hanif Khan, (2009) 3 SCC 549.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-2009]

[763] — S. 154 — Valid FIR — Nature and contents

The appellant filed an FIR under Section 154 CrPC alleging commission of offence punishable under Section 3(1)(xi) of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989. A petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the FIR was filed by the respondent-accused. The basic stand was that in the FIR the caste of the accused was not mentioned and therefore the proceedings could not be continued and deserved to be quashed. The High Court by the impugned order placing reliance on earlier decisions of the High Court allowed the petition of the respondent.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

During investigation or at the time of framing of charge or at the time of trial it is open to the respondent-accused to show that he either belongs to SC or ST so that applicability of S. 3(1)(xi) of the Act is ruled out. It needs no reiteration that the FIR is not expected to be an encyclopdia. After ascertaining the facts during the course of investigation it is open to the IO to record that the accused either belongs to or does not belong to SC or ST. After final opinion is formed, it is open to the court to either accept the same or take cognizance. Even if the charge-sheet is filed at the time of consideration of the charge, it is open to the accused to bring to the notice of the court that the materials do not show that the accused does not belong to Scheduled Caste or Scheduled Tribe. Even if charge is framed at the time of trial, materials can be placed to show that the accused either belongs or does not belong to SC or ST. (Paras 14,10 and 12)

The scope for interference on the basis of an application under Section 482 CrPC is well known. (Paras 8, 9 and 13). Ashabai Machindra Adhagale v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 3 SCC 789.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, Dr. M.K. Sharma and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-2009]

CBI v. Tapan Kumar Singh, (2003) 6 SCC 175: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1305; Masumsha Hasanasha Musalman v. State of Maharashtra, (2000) 3 SCC 557: 2000 SCC (Cri) 722; Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310, relied on [764] — S. 154 — Absence of details about the part played by each accused in commission of the crime — FIR lodged by the Chowkidar who was not an eyewitness — Deceased's father being in a remorseful mood could not give details except to request the Chowkidar to lodge a report — Hence absence of details in the FIR was of no consequence. Mohan Singh v. State of M.P., (1999) 2 SCC 428: 1999 SCC (Cri) 261: AIR 1999 SC 883: 1999 Cri LJ 1334.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and A.P. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-1999]

[765] — S. 154 — Absence of mention of essential facts about certain accused by complainant eyewitness casts doubt about their complicity. Raman Kalia v. State of Gujarat, (1979) 4 SCC 641: 1980 SCC (Cri) 153: AIR 1979 SC 1261: 1979 Cri LJ 1074.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1979]

[766] — S. 154 — Absence of particulars in FIR, lodged immediately after the incident regarding the complicity of the co-accused — Held, raises doubt regarding the story of participation by such co-accused. Jagdip Singh v. State of Haryana, (1975) 3 SCC 133: 1974 SCC (Cri) 757: AIR 1974 SC 1978.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-1974]

[767] — S. 154 — Accused persons not named in FIR although they were known to the informant, for which no explanation furnished by prosecution — Held, on this ground alone these accused entitled to benefit of doubt — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/149 (Para 24). Mallanna v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 8 SCC 523: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 731: (2007) 59 AIC 197 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

[768] — S. 154 — Train robbery — Accused not named in FIR — Held, is insignificant in such cases — Prosecution can prove its case on the basis of recovery of articles which are the subject-matter of offence and identification of culprits in TI parade

The value to be attached to a test identification parade depends on the facts and circumstances of each case and no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down. The court has to examine the facts of the case to find out whether there was sufficient opportunity for the witnesses to identify the accused. The court has also to rule out the possibility of their having been shown to the witnesses before holding a test identification parade. Though it is desirable to hold the test identification parade at the earliest-possible opportunity, no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down in this regard. Where there is an inordinate delay in holding a test identification parade, the court must adopt a cautious approach so as to prevent miscarriage of justice. If the delay is inordinate and there is evidence probabilising the possibility of the accused having been shown to the witnesses, the court may not act on the basis of such evidence. Where the witness had only a fleeting glimpse of the accused at the time of occurrence, delay in holding a test identification parade has to be viewed seriously. Where, however, the court is satisfied that the witnesses had ample opportunity of seeing the accused at the time of the commission of the offence and there is no chance of mistaken identity, delay in holding the test identification parade may not be held to be fatal. It all depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case. Cases where the conviction is based not solely on the basis of identification in court, but on the basis of other corroborative evidence, such as recovery of looted articles, stand on a different footing and the court has to consider the evidence in its entirety. (Paras 28 and 43). Lal Singh v. State of U.P., (2003) 12 SCC 554: AIR 2004 SC 299: 2004 Cri LJ 378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2003]

[769] — S. 154 — Failure to mention some names of known accused in the FIR may justify their acquittal. Juwarsingh v. State of M.P., 1980 Supp SCC 417: 1981 SCC (Cri) 357: AIR 1981 SC 373: 1980 Cri LJ 1418.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-1980]

[770] — S. 154 — FIR — Absence of details — Oral statement reduced to writing as FIR containing no details — Hence detailed version recorded subsequently — In the circumstances lack of details in the FIR not material. State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210: AIR 1990 SC 658: 1990 Cri LJ 889.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1990]

[771] — S. 154 — FIR — Absence of minute details in — Effect on value of testimony of witnesses, if any — Murder case — FIR mentioning only the number of handle blows struck by the accused — Informant's deposition, before the court, of the parts of the victim's body so hit, did not amount to an improvement on the FIR so as to vitiate the deposition — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 300 and 302. Jagtar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1988) 1 SCC 712: 1988 SCC (Cri) 254: AIR 1988 SC 628: 1988 Cri LJ 866.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-1-1988]

[772] — S. 154 — FIR — Absence of names of accused persons in FIR — On facts, did not prove fatal

Though names of A-7 and A-8 do not appear in the first information report, but in the statements of witnesses recorded immediately after occurrence their names were indicated. In the first information report and the clarificatory statement appended thereto, some names were given and it was clearly stated that some other persons were also the assailants. This being the position, mere absence of names of A-7 and A-8 would not make any difference. Merely because the names were not specifically mentioned but were spoken by the witnesses immediately thereafter, that cannot be sufficient by itself to create suspicion. (Para 7). Goura Venkata Reddy v. State of A.P., (2003) 12 SCC 469.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-2003]

(3)(ii)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR (contd.)

[773] — S. 154 — Failure to mention name of accused in the FIR filed by person known to him — Non-examination of the scribe of the FIR — Effect — Defence contending that the appellant was not named in FIR and that if the scribe of the FIR, who knew the complainant PW 1 as well as the appellant, would have been examined by the prosecution, then the appellant would have proved that he was not present at the time of the incident — Since the said scribe was not an eyewitness to the incident and as the PWs could not have named the appellant in the FIR as they did not know him prior to the incident, held, on facts, no prejudice caused to the appellant and no adverse inference could be drawn against the prosecution due to the non-examination of the said scribe (Para 7). Anil Kumar v. State of U.P., (2003) 3 SCC 569: 2003 SCC (Cri) 770: AIR 2003 SC 1596: 2003 Cri LJ 1524.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-2003]

[774] — S. 154 — FIR not mentioning the two persons who acted in exercise of right of private defence on the side of the victims and inflicted injuries on the party of the accused — Held, evidence given by prosecution witnesses in regard to the incident cannot be accepted on its face value — It cannot be relied upon implicitly for the purposes of founding the conviction. Mitter Sen v. State of U.P., (1976) 1 SCC 723: 1976 SCC (Cri) 190: AIR 1976 SC 1156: 1976 Cri LJ 857.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-1975]

[775] — S. 154 — FIR — Eyewitness — Non-inclusion of his name in the FIR does not necessarily lead to the conclusion that he did not witness the murders — The Court can considering the facts and circumstances rely upon him. Nirpal Singh v. State of Haryana, (1977) 2 SCC 131: 1977 SCC (Cri) 262: AIR 1977 SC 1066: (1977) 2 SCR 901: 1977 Cri LJ 642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-1977]

[776] — S. 154 — FIR — Fact that one of the deceased having walked a few yards from the cot on which he fell down after receiving the bullet injuries, was not mentioned in the FIR — Where broad features of the case were mentioned, held, if there was some omission in a matter of detail that, by itself, would not be sufficient to rebut the prosecution case

Much significance could not have been attached by the High Court to the fact that one of the deceased having walked a few yards from the cot had not been mentioned in the FIR. Broad features of the case had been mentioned as to the manner in which the incident took place and who shot dead the two deceased. In fact, if there is some omission in a matter of detail that, by itself, may not be sufficient to rebut the prosecution case. (Para 11). State of Haryana v. Ram Sarup, (2002) 7 SCC 250: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1691: AIR 2002 SC 3114.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-2002]

[777] — S. 154 — FIR — Failure to mention in FIR about the injuries on accused — Where FIR was lodged by PW 6 who was not an eyewitness to the incident and the fact of injuries on accused D was disclosed by the witnesses at the first opportunity to the investigating agency in the statement under S. 161 CrPC, held on facts, there was no question of suppression of the injuries caused to D by the prosecution

It is true that the FIR does not mention about the injuries of D but the fact cannot be lost sight of that the FIR was lodged by PW 6 who was not an eyewitness to the incident. There is no question of suppression of the injuries of D by the prosecution as the said fact was disclosed by the witnesses at the first opportunity to the investigating agency in the statement under Section 161 CrPC. (Para 20). Dharminder v. State of H.P., (2002) 7 SCC 488: 2003 SCC (Cri) 58: AIR 2002 SC 3097.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-9-2002]

[778] — S. 154 — FIR — Failure to mention names of some of the accused in FIR is a circumstance in favour of those accused — Prosecution must explain the failure — But the mere failure would not entitle the accused to acquittal especially where the injured witnesses deposed presence and participation of the accused in the crime and their testimony is corroborated by recovery evidence. Darshan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 2 SCC 411: 1983 SCC (Cri) 523: AIR 1983 SC 554: 1983 Cri LJ 985.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and O. Chinnappa Reddy, J. [Date of decision: 31-3-1983]

[779] — S. 154 — FIR — Failure to report discovery of empty cartridges from the spot — Particular posture of deceased before being shot at also not recorded — Held, falsifies the prosecution case as to place of occurrence and manner of attack.. Ram Narain Singh v. State of Punjab, (1975) 4 SCC 497: 1975 SCC (Cri) 571: AIR 1975 SC 1727: 1975 Cri LJ 1500: (1975) 12 ACC 273.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-7-1975]

[780] — S. 154 — FIR — Fardbeyan — Non-mentioning of crime number on fardbeyan — Effect — IO deposing that he did not think it necessary to write the crime number on fard — Such laxity on the part of IO, held, would not disprove the prosecution case (Para 25). State of U.P. v. Nawab Singh, (2005) 9 SCC 84: 2005 SCC (Cri) 33: AIR 2004 SC 1511: 2004 Cri LJ 1367.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-2004]

[781] — S. 154 — FIR — FIR lodged after knowing about the extra-judicial confession — Omission to mention about this vital fact in FIR — Effect — Held, in a given circumstance, omission to mention about a particular aspect may not render the prosecution version suspicious — But when circumstances in the instant case are taken in their entirety, held, the alleged extra-judicial confession was not believable (Para 20). State of Haryana v. Jagbir Singh, (2003) 11 SCC 261: 2004 SCC (Cri) 126: AIR 2003 SC 4377.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-9-2003]

[782] — S. 154 — FIR — Information by the village chowkidar that there was commotion in the village as firing and brickbatting was going on recorded in police diary — Names of assailants or victims not given — Held, such a cryptic statement cannot be treated to be an FIR — Fard bayan which formed the basis of the formal FIR rightly relied upon by the courts below as an FIR and a piece of corroborative evidence (Para 7). Sk. Ishaque v. State of Bihar, (1995) 3 SCC 392: 1995 SCC (Cri) 534: 1995 Cri LJ 2682.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.S. Paripoornan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-1995]

[783] — S. 154 — FIR — Lack of details — Effect — Testimony of eyewitness for offence under S. 302 IPC — Whether could be rejected merely for non-disclosure of certain details in FIR — Eyewitness himself severely injured and High Court finding that he might not have been in a mood to narrate the incident in great detail — Even otherwise, the FIR containing all material facts relating to the incident — In such circumstances, held, High Court should not have brushed aside the evidence of the said witness exclusively on the ground that the manner of assault had not been mentioned in the FIR

The High Court although accepted the claim of PWs 1 and 2 that they witnessed the incident found it unsafe to rely on their evidence so far as it sought to implicate A-3 to A-6 in the murder of Buchi Reddi principally on the ground that in the FIR, PW 1 had not stated about the manner in which they assaulted the deceased though he had stated about the specific overt acts of A-1 and A-2 in the murder. According to the High Court, non-disclosure of such details led to the irresistible conclusion that either PW 1 had not seen the participation of A-3 to A-6 in the attack or that he had improved his version while tendering evidence in the Court by attributing specific overt acts to A-3 to A-6 as well.

Held :

Some of the observations made by the High Court in that regard stand contradicted by its other observations. For example, having observed that it was quite aware of the fact that PW 1 was severely injured and he might not have been in a mood to narrate the incident in great detail the High Court could not have expected of PW 1 — nor was it necessary — to give the graphic details in the FIR of the roles played by each of the accused in the murder.

Moreover, in the FIR after giving the background of the enmity between their family and that of the accused PW 1 stated that on the date of the incident at or about 5.00 p.m. when he, his father and coolies were in their field the six accused persons came there armed with knives and spears and suddenly attacked his father. A-1 hacked him with a knife on the head and A-2 with a spear on the neck and then the other accused assaulted him (the deceased) with knives and spears indiscriminately. This was followed by a statement as to the manner of assault on him by some of the accused. Lastly he stated that PW 2 witnessed the incident and PW 4 had brought him to the hospital. It would thus be seen that all the material facts relating to the incident find place in the FIR; and, therefore, the High Court was not at all justified in brushing aside the prosecution case regarding participation of A-3 to A-6 in the murder on the sole ground that the manner in which they actually assaulted the deceased was not mentioned therein. Absence of the names of A-3 and A-4 in the FIR should not also have been made one of the grounds to discard their evidence when it was specifically mentioned therein that coolies were working with them in their field at the time of the assault (which necessarily meant that they were witnesses to the incident) and when admittedly PWs 3 and 4 work as coolies. Incidentally, the name of PW 4 does find place in the FIR as the person who took PW 1 to the hospital. Kovvuri Surya Bhaskara Reddy v. State of A.P., (1998) 9 SCC 504: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1047: AIR 1998 SC 1570.

(3)(ii)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-1998]

[784] — S. 154 — FIR — Material omission in FIR remaining unexplained in a case based on circumstantial evidence held against the prosecution. Chandmal v. State of Rajasthan, (1976) 1 SCC 621: 1976 SCC (Cri) 120: AIR 1976 SC 917: 1976 Cri LJ 679.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-1975]

[785] — S. 154 — FIR — Mere absence of name of PW 3 — Not fatal to prosecution case — The mental condition of a person losing a near relative cannot be lost sight of — Held, the evidence of the witness having been closely scrutinized and nothing having been found to be infirm, the trial court and High Court rightly relied upon it (Para 7). Dhirajbhai Gorakhbhai Nayak v. State of Gujarat, (2003) 9 SCC 322: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1809: AIR 2003 SC 2855: 2003 Cri LJ 3723.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-2003]

Shri Bhagwan v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 6 SCC 296: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1095, relied on

[786] — S. 154 — FIR — Minute details — Omission of — Merely because minutest details of the occurrence were not mentioned in FIR, held, the same cannot make the prosecution case doubtful — FIR is not the repository of everything

The High Court has drawn adverse inference against the prosecution for not mentioning in the FIR that as the accused persons were advancing towards them in the bus, they having apprehended danger to their lives, got down from the bus. It may be stated that in the FIR it was enumerated that members of the prosecution party got down from the bus as they apprehended danger to their lives at the hands of the accused persons, who were armed with weapons, but the reason for apprehension that a accused persons were advancing towards them in the bus was not enumerated. But this is a mere omission as it is well settled that a first information report is not the repository of everything and merely because minutest details of the occurrence were not mentioned, the same cannot make the prosecution case doubtful. (Para 11). Kamma Otukunta Ram Naidu v. Chereddy Pedda Subba Reddy, (2003) 11 SCC 293: 2004 SCC (Cri) 155: AIR 2003 SC 3342.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2003]

[787] — S. 154 — FIR — Name of prosecution witness not mentioned in FIR — His alleged eyewitness account, held, not acceptable (Para 12). State of M.P. v. Mishrilal, (2003) 9 SCC 426: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1829: AIR 2003 SC 4089: 2003 Cri LJ 2312.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-2003]

[788] — S. 154 — FIR — Names of witnesses not appearing in FIR — Held, that by itself cannot be a ground to doubt their evidence — There is no requirement of mentioning the names of all the witnesses in FIR (Para 10). Raj Kishore Jha v. State of Bihar, (2003) 11 SCC 519: 2004 SCC (Cri) 212: AIR 2003 SC 4664.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-2003]

Bhagwan Singh v. State of M.P., (2002) 4 SCC 85: 2002 SCC (Cri) 736; Chittar Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2003) 6 SCC 397: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1377, relied on

[789] — S. 154 — FIR — Non-mention of name of a witness in FIR — Effect — Held, there is no hard-and-fast rule that the names of all witnesses, more particularly eyewitnesses, should be indicated in the FIR — On facts, non-mention of name of PW 8 in the FIR, held, was a natural consequence of the events (Para 9)

There can be no hard-and-fast rule that the names of all witnesses, more particularly eyewitnesses, should be indicated in the FIR. (Para 10)

It is nobody's case that PW 8 was an eyewitness. The High Court failed to notice that the evidence of PWs 4 and 7 was to the effect that they left the deceased in an injured condition and rushed to the police station. The arrival of PW 8 near the deceased, according to the prosecution, was thereafter. His presence could not have been noted by PW 4 who lodged the FIR and, therefore, non-mention of his name in the FIR is the natural consequence. (Para 11). State of M.P. v. Mansingh, (2003) 10 SCC 414.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2003]

Chittar Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2003) 6 SCC 397; Shri Bhagwan v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 6 SCC 296: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1095, relied on

[790] — S. 154 — FIR — Non-mention of weapon (knife) in FIR — Effect on testimony of injured witness

The evidence of injured witnesses has greater evidentiary value and unless compelling reasons exist, their statements are not to be discarded lightly. (Para 9)

Merely because there was no mention of a knife in the FIR, that does not wash away the effect of the evidence tendered by the injured witnesses PWs 4 and 7. (Para 9). State of M.P. v. Mansingh, (2003) 10 SCC 414.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2003]

[791] — S. 154 — FIR — Not necessary to give minute details therein — Non-mention of manner of user of weapon (axe) not fatal to the prosecution case (Para 9). Sat Pal v. State of Punjab, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 1: 1996 SCC (Cri) 11.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.S. Paripoornan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-1995]

[792] — S. 154 — FIR — Omission in — Details which emerged at the trial could not be considered as omissions when the part played by each accused had been broadly stated in the FIR

The omissions in the report relied upon by the High Court pertain to minor details and cannot amount to contradictions. The part played by each accused has been broadly stated and it is not expected that all the details of how, and from what distance the assault took place and where the gunshots landed could be mentioned in the FIR. State of U.P. v. Sughar Singh, (1978) 1 SCC 178: 1978 SCC (Cri) 83: AIR 1978 SC 191: 1978 Cri LJ 141: 1978 ALJ 466.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.K. Goswami and V.D. Tulzapurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1977]

[793] — S. 154 — FIR — Omission of names of eyewitnesses in when may not affect its evidentiary value

The omission of the names of these two witnesses from the FIR is not of much significance, as they might have seen the occurrence from a different place, and the third eyewitness, who gave the FIR, might not have noticed them. Ashok Kumar v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1977) 2 SCC 233: 1977 SCC (Cri) 303: AIR 1977 SC 1304: (1977) 3 SCR 143: 1977 Cri LJ 814.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.K. Goswami and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-3-1977]

[794] — S. 154 — FIR — Omission of vital details in FIR — Held on facts, first informant was falsely introduced as an ocular witness. Govind Narain v. State of Rajasthan, 1993 Supp (3) SCC 343: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1012: AIR 1993 SC 2457: 1993 Cri LJ 2598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1993]

[795] — S. 154 — FIR — Omission to give minute details not fatal. Rai Saheb v. State of Haryana, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 74: 1994 SCC (Cri) 239.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-1993]

[796] — S. 154 — FIR — Omission to mention eyewitness who saw the assailant running and who appeared on the site of murder and met the complainant not inconsequential. Badri v. State of Rajasthan, (1976) 1 SCC 442: 1976 SCC (Cri) 60: AIR 1976 SC 560: (1976) 2 SCR 339: 1976 Cri LJ 496.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and P.K. Goswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-1975]

[797] — S. 154 — FIR — Omissions in — FIR lodged within half an hour of the incident by the injured witness who was upset at the incident of killing of his close relation — In such circumstances, omission to mention the fact that the co-accused who were holding the deceased by his arms had let go of them just at the time of firing is of no consequence. Behari Prasad v. State of Bihar, (1996) 2 SCC 317: 1996 SCC (Cri) 271: AIR 1996 SC 2905.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-1996]

[798] — S. 154 — FIR — Omissions in — Incident of murder witnessed by a number of persons — First informant not an eyewitness — FIR lodged after talking to the witnesses present on the spot — Held, in the circumstances, non-mention of name of one of the eyewitnesses in the FIR not fatal. Krishna Pal (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (1996) 7 SCC 194: 1996 SCC (Cri) 249: AIR 1996 SC 733.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-1995]

[799] — S. 154 — FIR — Omissions in FIR — Omission to mention that PW 1 was lying unconscious at the place of occurrence — Held, inconsequential — It was a fact which was found correct — Moreover, it is now well settled that FIR need not be encyclopaedic (Para 32). Umar Mohammad v. State of Rajasthan, (2007) 14 SCC 711: 2008 Cri LJ 816: (2008) 61 AIC 52 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-2007]

Krishna Mochi v. State of Bihar, (2002) 6 SCC 81: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1220, followed

(3)(ii)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR (contd.)

[800] — S. 154 — FIR — Place of occurrence near a tree — Non-mentioning of the said tree in the FIR — Held, was irrelevant for establishing the place of occurrence in view of the fact that bloodstains collected from the said place of occurrence clearly established that the first occurrence had taken place near the said tree (Para 10). Gaya Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2003) 9 SCC 122: AIR 2003 SC 1759: 2003 Cri LJ 1564.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-2003]

[801] — S. 154 — FIR — Presence of assailant established by evidence of eyewitnesses — Non-mention of his name in FIR inconsequential — Information about occurrence and assailants given by an illiterate woman to a Head Constable — Head Constable not fully recording the same nor reading it out to her — He mentioned only one name though several persons participated in the occurrence — Held, FIR cannot be given much importance. Pagoti Sreeramulu v. State of A.P., 1994 Supp (1) SCC 555: 1994 SCC (Cri) 714.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N. Venkatachala, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-1993]

[802] — S. 154 — FIR — Serious omission in naming the assailant — Delayed FIR casting doubt on the prosecution case. Bhagirath Singh v. State of Bihar, (1976) 1 SCC 614: 1976 SCC (Cri) 112: AIR 1976 SC 924: 1976 Cri LJ 685.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-1975]

[803] — S. 154 — FIR Failure of informant, father of deceased, to mention in FIR that his associates resisted the attack and there was a fight — Effect of — Prosecution evidence found reliable — Defence version not believable — Held, the said omission should not be given undue importance — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302, 307 and Ss. 148, 323 and 324 r/w S. 149 (Para 21). Dashrath Singh v. State of U.P., (2004) 7 SCC 408: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1932: 2004 All LJ 3256.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2004]

[804] — S. 154 — FIR given by a rustic laywoman — Mere omission to mention an incidental fact cannot nullify an otherwise prompt and proper report — Such FIR cannot be treated as or equated to the summary of the entire prosecution case. Gurnam Kaur v. Bakshish Singh, 1980 Supp SCC 567: 1981 SCC (Cri) 496: AIR 1981 SC 631: 1981 Cri LJ 34.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-10-1980]

[805] — S. 154 — FIR mentioning names of accused, witnesses, weapons used, place of occurrence, etc. — Omission to give details of some of the overt acts not material. Ch. Madusudhana Reddy v. State of A.P., 1994 SCC (Cri) 275: 1994 Cri LJ 2203: (1994) 1 Crimes 37.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1993]

[806] — S. 154 — FIR need not contain details of the occurrence — Omission in the FIR that the informant, before leaving for police station for lodging the report, informed anybody of the village about the occurrence, held, is an omission of details and not a contradiction — Further, the informant, who witnessed the murder of her close relations (husband and brother-in-law) must have been dazed and could not be expected to give all the details. State of Haryana v. Sher Singh, (1981) 2 SCC 300: 1981 SCC (Cri) 421: AIR 1981 SC 1021: 1981 Cri LJ 714.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-2-1981]

[807] — S. 154 — FIR need not contain every detail of the occurrence — Omitted fact(s) whether never occurred has to be considered along with other evidence — Omission regarding wresting of the gun from the assailant, held, inconsequential when there was overwhelming evidence that the gun was lying near the dead body

Criminal courts should not be fastidious with mere omissions in the first information statement, since such statements cannot be expected to be a chronicle of every detail of what happened, nor to contain an exhaustive catalogue of the events which took place. The person who furnishes first information to authorities might be fresh with the facts but he need not necessarily have the skill or ability to reproduce details of the entire story without anything missing therefrom. Some may miss even important details in a narration. Quite often the police officer, who takes down the first information, would record what the informant conveys to him without resorting to any elicitatory exercise. It is voluntary narrative of the informant without interrogation which usually goes into such statement. So any omission therein has to be considered along with the other evidence to determine whether the fact so omitted never happened at all. Rattan Singh v. State of H.P., (1997) 4 SCC 161: 1997 SCC (Cri) 525: AIR 1997 SC 768: 1997 Cri LJ 833.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-1996]

[808] — S. 154 — Omission to mention vital facts — FIR filed after four hours by father of the deceased — Serious infirmities in FIR, of important facts affecting the probabilities of the case, held, are relevant under S. 11 of Evidence Act in judging the veracity of the prosecution case — Failure to mention persons alleged to be eyewitnesses in the FIR held detrimental — Failure to mention dying declaration also fatal. Ram Kumar Pandey v. State of M.P., (1975) 3 SCC 815: 1975 SCC (Cri) 225: AIR 1975 SC 1026: (1975) 3 SCR 519: 1975 Cri LJ 870.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and A. Alagiriswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1975]

[809] — S. 154 — Informant (PW 2) claiming to have received injuries in the incident but not mentioning it in FIR — Also not stating about injuries on PW 3 — Held, said omissions reflect on the credibility of PW 2 — Fact that said injuries were simple, held, not a ground to discard this omission, particularly when PW 2 remained admitted in hospital for three days and PW 3 for about fifteen days

The fact that PW 2 while lodging the FIR did not mention about the injuries caused to him, even though simple in nature, was certainly a relevant fact to be taken into consideration while appreciating the evidence on record and judging the credibility of the witness. It is difficult to believe that a person injured in the course of the same incident would fail to mention to the police officer in his report that he was also injured. Apart from this omission, he also failed to mention that PW 3 had also suffered injuries. These omissions certainly reflect on the credibility of the witness. The fact that injuries suffered by PWs 2 and 3 were simple in nature is no ground to discard this omission, particularly, when according to PW 2, he had to remain admitted in the hospital for three days while according to PW 3 he had to remain admitted in the hospital for about fifteen days. (Para 24). Hem Raj v. State of Punjab, (2003) 12 SCC 241: AIR 2003 SC 4259: 2003 Cri LJ 4987.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-9-2003]

[810] — S. 154 — Name of one of the accused-appellants included in FIR along with eleven others in an omnibus manner without attributing any particular part to him — Prosecution evidence should not be accepted wholly without examining the case of each of the accused — On facts and in the circumstances held, the accused-appellant must be acquitted — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 149. Ram Manorath v. State of U.P., (1981) 2 SCC 654: 1981 SCC (Cri) 581: (1981) 3 SCR 195.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and A.P. Sen, J. [Date of decision: 10-3-1981]

[811] — S. 154 — Informant, though stating about PW 9 telling him prior to lodging of complaint that PWs 2 and 3 had seen the deceased in the company of accused, but not mentioning the said fact and names of PWs 2 and 3 in FIR — Effect — Held, it was a glaring omission creating doubt as to the said fact (Paras 14 and 18). Mousam Singha Roy v. State of W.B., (2003) 12 SCC 377.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-8-2003]

[812] — S. 154 — Minor omissions reasonably explained — Held, not to affect the conviction. Natthu Singh v. State of U.P., (1977) 4 SCC 293: 1977 SCC (Cri) 571: AIR 1977 SC 2096: 1977 Cri LJ 1578: 1977 Cri LR (SC) 378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.C. Gupta and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-1977]

[813] — S. 154 — Misdescriptions/omissions in FIR regarding name of principal accused bearing an alias and about the number of shots fired explained — On facts, acquittal based on discrepancies in the FIR in the face of direct evidence was improper. Surjit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 208: 1993 SCC (Cri) 161: AIR 1992 SC 1389.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and B.P. Jeevan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-1992]

[814] — S. 154 — Names of all the witnesses not required to be mentioned in FIR — Non-mention of names of all the witnesses by itself cannot be a ground to doubt their evidence (Para 7). State of M.P. v. Dharkole, 2005 SCC (Cri) 225: (2004) 3 KLT 776.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-10-2004]

Bhagwan Singh v. State of M.P., (2002) 4 SCC 85: 2002 SCC (Cri) 736; Chittar Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2003) 6 SCC 397: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1377; State of M.P. v. Mansingh, (2003) 10 SCC 414, relied on

[815] — S. 154 — Names of all the witnesses not required to be mentioned in FIR — Non-mention of names of all the witnesses by itself cannot be a ground to doubt their evidence (Para 7). State of M.P. v. Dharkole, (2004) 13 SCC 308: 2005 SCC (Cri) 225: AIR 2005 SC 44: 2005 Cri LJ 108.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-10-2004]

Bhagwan Singh v. State of M.P., (2002) 4 SCC 85: 2002 SCC (Cri) 736; Chittar Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2003) 6 SCC 397: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1377; State of M.P. v. Mansingh, (2003) 10 SCC 414, relied on

(3)(ii)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR (contd.)

[816] — S. 154 — Non-mention of accused's name in — Effect — Offences under Ss. 302/149 and 148 — Confession — Retracted judicial confession — Reliance on — On facts, held, did not substantiate the said offence — Accused confessing about a conspiracy to commit murder of the deceased but not confessing that he was a party to the murder — Such a confessional statement, held, exculpatory — Hence, in view of his having already been acquitted of the charge under S. 120 IPC, held, there was no substantive evidence to connect him with the said offences — More so, when his name was not mentioned in the FIR — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 24. Shabad Pulla Reddy v. State of A.P., (1997) 8 SCC 495: AIR 1997 SC 3087: 1997 Cri LJ 3753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-1997]

[817] — S. 154 — Non-mention of name of appellant-accused in FIR — FIR lodged by member of the victim family who was accompanied by witness who had last seen the accused with one of the deceased — Held, not material as the relative under severe psychic trauma on murder of five members of his family (Para 7). Shri Bhagwan v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 6 SCC 296: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1095: AIR 2001 SC 2342.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-5-2001]

A. Devendran v. State of T.N., (1997) 11 SCC 720: 1998 SCC (Cri) 220, relied on [818] — S. 154 — Non-mention of names of two eyewitnesses on whose testimony the whole prosecution case rested — Name of assailant not mentioned by these witnesses to the first informant because of serious threats given by the accused and other villagers not to intermeddle in the matter — Hence the witnesses cannot be disbelieved on the mere ground that their names had not been indicated in the FIR. Pralhad v. State of Maharashtra, 1981 Supp SCC 26: 1981 SCC (Cri) 646: AIR 1981 SC 1241: 1981 Cri LJ 752: 1981 MLJ (Cri) 628.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, Baharul Islam and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1981]

[819] — S. 154 — Not necessary that names of all witnesses be mentioned in the FIR — Non-mention of name in the FIR will not justify rejection of the evidence of the eyewitness. State of U.P. v. Lalla Singh, (1978) 1 SCC 142: 1978 SCC (Cri) 70: AIR 1978 SC 368: 1978 Cri LJ 359: 1978 ALJ 147.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.C. Gupta and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-11-1977]

[820] — S. 154 — Omission of accused's name in the FIR in the circumstances of the case, held, fatal. A.R. Singh v. Govt. of Manipur, (1976) 3 SCC 465: 1976 SCC (Cri) 423: AIR 1976 SC 2191: 1976 Cri LJ 1712.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-1976]

[821] — S. 154 — Omission of an important material fact repels the argument that the FIR was written after due deliberation and consultation. Soma Bhai v. State of Gujarat, (1975) 4 SCC 257: 1975 SCC (Cri) 515: AIR 1975 SC 1453: 1975 Cri LJ 1201.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-1975]

[822] — S. 154 — Omission of name of assailant when claimed to have been seen by husband of the deceased — Reasonable explanation of husband having become unconscious owing to shock and injuries — Evidence corroborated — Conviction sustained. Bishan Dass v. State of Punjab, (1975) 3 SCC 700: 1975 SCC (Cri) 145: AIR 1975 SC 573: 1975 Cri LJ 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-1-1975]

[823] — S. 154 — Omission to mention about dying declaration in FIR — Held, cannot by itself make the witness deposing about the dying declaration unbelievable — Evidence of the witness has to be tested on its own strength or weakness — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 32

If there be material departure in the prosecution case as unfolded in the FIR, which would be so if material facts not mentioned in the FIR are deposed to by prosecution witnesses in the court, the same would cause dent to the edifice on which the prosecution case is built, as the substratum of the prosecution case then gets altered. It is apparent that prosecution cannot project two entirely different versions of a case. This is entirely different from thinking that some omission in the FIR would require disbelieving of the witnesses who depose about the fact not mentioned in the FIR. Evidence of witnesses has to be tested on its own strength or weakness. While doing so, if the fact deposed be a material part of prosecution case, about which, however, no mention was made in the FIR, the same would be borne in mind while deciding about the credibility of the evidence given by the witness in question.

Evidence of the witnesses about the dying declaration cannot be disbelieved, only because the FIR has not mentioned about it. It is settled law that FIRs are not taken as encyclopaedia and omission of a fact therein, even if material, cannot by itself make the witness deposing about that fact unbelievable at that point. State of M.P. v. Dhirendra Kumar, (1997) 1 SCC 93: 1997 SCC (Cri) 54: AIR 1997 SC 318.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-11-1996]

Ram Kumar Pandey v. State of M.P., (1975) 3 SCC 815: 1975 SCC (Cri) 225, explained

[824] — S. 154 — Omission to mention dying declaration inconsequential where report lodged by an eyewitness who also carried the deceased to the police station. Bhagwati v. State of U.P., (1976) 3 SCC 235: 1976 SCC (Cri) 388: AIR 1976 SC 1449: 1976 Cri LJ 1171.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-1976]

[825] — S. 154 — Omission to mention names of all the accused by deceased — Effect, if any, on prosecution case — FIR based on dying declaration showing that the deceased had stated the names of some (4 in this case) of the accused persons — However, in the same statement the deceased further mentioning that there was an assembly of 15 to 17 persons — In such circumstances, non-mentioning of the names of the remaining accused by the deceased, held, not fatal to the prosecution case — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 307, 326, 324, 323, 342, 452 and 149 (Para 16). Ramanbhai Naranbhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2000) 1 SCC 358: 2000 SCC (Cri) 113: 1999 Cri LJ 5013.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Majmudar and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-1999]

[826] — S. 154 — Omissions in FIR — FIR not required to contain graphic details — But non-disclosure of names and identities of miscreants who were known to the informant cannot be equated with graphic details — FIR lodged within 3 hours of the incident by the eyewitness but names of appellants not given therein — Interpolation in list of the miscreants submitted by the IO to the Magistrate 2 days after the incident — Held, in the circumstances of the case, the appellants are entitled to the benefit of doubt. K. Ashokan v. State of Kerala, (1998) 3 SCC 570: AIR 1998 SC 1974.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1998]

[827] — S. 154 — Omissions in FIR — First informant not claiming to have seen the culprits — Absence of description of features and particulars of culprits in the FIR is of no consequence (Para 18). Suraj Pal v. State of Haryana, (1995) 2 SCC 64: 1995 SCC (Cri) 313.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-1994]

[828] — S. 154 — Omissions in FIR — Non-mention of details and meticulous particulars not a ground to reject the prosecution case. State of U.P. v. Nahar Singh, (1998) 3 SCC 561: 1998 SCC (Cri) 850: AIR 1998 SC 1328.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-1998]

[829] — S. 154 — Omissions in FIR — Non-mention of name of A-2 in FIR though accused known to the first informant from before — Held, in the circumstances, evidence of the first informant would not come in aid of prosecution to prove complicity of A-2 in the crime — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 155. Raju v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 1 SCC 169: 1998 SCC (Cri) 296: AIR 1998 SC 275: 1998 Cri LJ 493: (1998) 1 GCD 604.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-1997]

[830] — S. 154 — Omissions in FIR — Non-mention of names of the eyewitnesses in FIR — Their evidence cannot be rejected on that ground — However, the fact that their names did not appear in the FIR is a relevant circumstance — Hence their evidence is required to be appreciated on their own merits. State of Bihar v. Ram Padarath Singh, (1998) 6 SCC 240: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1436: AIR 1998 SC 2606.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-1998]

[831] — S. 154 — Omissions in FIR — Omission of reference to burning lamp at the place of incident — Trial court not justified in using the FIR against the witnesses who were not responsible for it. Rajendra Mahton v. State of Bihar, (1998) 9 SCC 315: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1013: AIR 1998 SC 1546: 1998 Cri LJ 1254.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and M. Srinivasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-1997]

Betal Singh v. State of M.P., (1996) 8 SCC 205: 1996 SCC (Cri) 571, relied on [832] — S. 154 — Omissions in FIR — Skeletal facts revealed in FIR found consistent with the detailed narration of the eyewitnesses in the evidence — Held, in the circumstances, non-mention of the details of the occurrence inconsequential. Ram Gopal v. State of Rajasthan, (1998) 6 SCC 441: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1464: AIR 1998 SC 2598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and K.T. Thomas, J. [Date of decision: 28-7-1998]

(3)(ii)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR (contd.)

[833] — S. 154 — Omissions in FIR — Non-mention of name of in the FIR — Evidence of such an eyewitness who is found independent and reliable cannot be discarded on that score. Babu Singh v. State of Punjab, (1996) 8 SCC 699: 1996 SCC (Cri) 730: AIR 1996 SC 3250.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Faizan Uddin and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-1996]

[834] — S. 154 — Omissions in the FIR — Incident taking place in a shop at about 8 p.m. — Non-mention of source of light in the FIR not fatal to the prosecution case. State of Karnataka v. Moin Patel, (1996) 8 SCC 167: 1996 SCC (Cri) 632: AIR 1996 SC 3041.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-1996]

[835] — S. 154 — Omission to mention motives as spoken of by complainant in cross-examination — Held, elaboration of enmity between deceased and accused during cross-examination can hardly be a reason to contend that what is stated in complaint is either different from what is stated in the evidence in regard to the motives or the witness has made improvements in regard to motives of accused to commit the crime (Para 21). Jaishree Yadav v. State of U.P., (2005) 9 SCC 788: AIR 2004 SC 4443: 2004 Cri LJ 4826.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, S.B. Sinha and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2004]

[836] — S. 154 — Parentage of accused not mentioned in FIR but mentioned in General Diary — Held, could have been added after ascertaining it from the informant. Sone Lal v. State of U.P., (1978) 4 SCC 302: 1978 SCC (Cri) 587: AIR 1978 SC 1142: 1978 Cri LJ 1122: 1978 ALJ 530.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-1978]

[837] — S. 154 — Promptly lodged, having regard to entry made in General Diary — FIR mentioning names of most of the accused persons — Held, on facts, High Court erred in rejecting it merely on ground that its contents did not fully accord with the evidence of two of the eyewitnesses regarding the 'sequence' of event — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 35. State of U.P. v. Ranjha Ram, (1986) 4 SCC 99: 1986 SCC (Cri) 374: AIR 1986 SC 1959: 1986 Cri LJ 1906.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-1986]

[838] — Ss. 154 and 161 — Name of the appellant not disclosed in FIR by PW 1 — However, he categorically named by PWs 1 and 6 (mother of the deceased and the accused, as well as an injured witness) in their statements before the police and specific overt act attributed to him by PW 1 before the court — Held, the FIR is not an encyclopaedia of the entire case and need not contain all the details — Though the importance of naming an accused in FIR cannot be ignored, but in the instant case he had been named at the earliest possible opportunity — Question as to whether a person was implicated by way of an afterthought or not must be judged having regard to the entire factual scenario obtaining in the case — However, non-naming of the appellant by PW 1 is no reason to disbelieve the testimony of PW 6 who was a crucial witness (Paras 14, 21, 22 and 23). Rotash v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 12 SCC 64: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 382: (2007) 50 AIC 374 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 758.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2006]

[839] — Ss. 154 and 161 — FIR — Midnight occurrence — Omission to mention about light in the FIR or in the statement of prosecution witnesses recorded under S. 161 — Held on facts, was wholly inconsequential (Para 6). State of U.P. v. Premi, (2003) 9 SCC 12: AIR 2003 SC 1750: 2003 Cri LJ 1554.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-2-2003]

[840] — Ss. 154 and 161 — FIR — Non-mentioning of names of eyewitnesses (PWs 1 and 5) in FIR and delay in examining the said witnesses — Effect of — Complaint not containing the names of the eyewitnesses apart from PW 2, but referring to other unnamed witness as being present — That apart, it was only in the course of investigation that the IO came to know that PWs 1 and 5 were also eyewitnesses — In these circumstances, held, adverse inference could not be drawn merely because the names of PWs 1 and 5 were not mentioned in FIR or their statements were recorded belatedly (Para 5). Pramod Mahto v. State of Bihar, (2003) 9 SCC 215.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-7-2002]

[841] — Ss. 154 and 162 — FIR — Names of assailants not given in FIR — Appellants named in supplementary statement of the first informant recorded during investigation — Held, such supplementary statement was hit by S. 162 and the trial court erred in relying upon the same as a part of the FIR. Husna v. State of Punjab, (1996) 7 SCC 382.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-1996]

4. Discrepancies/Inconsistencies/Contradictions in or vis-à-vis FIR

See also CRIMINAL TRIAL — 'Appreciation of Evidence' — Contradictions, inconsistencies, exaggerations or embellishments, in Vol. 3

See also Section 154, '(3)(ii)3. Detail required/Details omitted/Omissions in FIR', above and

'(3)(ii)5. Corrections/Overwriting/Interpolation in FIR',

'(3)(ii)6. Embellishments/Improvements in FIR',

'(3)(iii) FIR and other evidence', below

[842] — S. 154 — Discrepancies in FIR — When fatal to the prosecution case — Eighteen persons put for trial for offences arising out of murder of two persons — According to prosecution case incident took place on afternoon of May 9, 1966, but three persons lodged FIRs separately on the next morning with different versions — Son of one of the deceased lodged FIR, mentioning names of ten persons who according to him participated in the assault but the names of none of the eighteen accused finding place in that list — Then another information about a minor and totally different incident lodged, without referring to the instant case of murder, by a person who had appeared as eyewitness in the instant case — Kotwar of the village thereafter at 10 a.m. reporting that incident took place on night of May 10, 1966, i.e., in early hours of May 10 and that he did not know who assaulted the deceased persons — Two eyewitnesses claimed to have seen the incident on the supposition that it happened on afternoon of the 9th — Medical evidence falsifying eyewitnesses' account that the two men were attacked with lathis, spears and axes — Held, discrepancies in three reports lodged with Police tend to knock down the prosecution case

The discrepancies in the three reports lodged with the police have a fundamental importance for they tend to falsify the evidence to the eyewitnesses and show that the incident happened under cover of darkness and was in all probability not witnessed by anyone. It is obvious that if the incident had taken place at night the whole prosecution case must fall. Hallu v. State of M.P., (1974) 4 SCC 300: 1974 SCC (Cri) 462: AIR 1974 SC 1936: (1974) 3 SCR 652: 1974 Cri LJ 1385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-3-1974]

[843] — S. 154 — Discrepancy between FIR and evidence given in court — Effect, if any — Appellants' submitting that in the FIR it was mentioned that after the first shot deceased had fallen down there, while evidence given in court was that deceased had first tried to run away and that all accused surrounded him, which is an improvement and so should not be believed — Tenability — Held, an FIR is not a substantive piece of evidence — At the most it can be used to corroborate or contradict the informant — An FIR can never be used to contradict other witnesses — Herein, apart from evidence of informant PW 5, there was also evidence of PWs 1 and 3 (eyewitnesses) — Evidence of PWs 1 and 3 was very categorical on this point, which was believed by both the courts below — Nothing was put to these witnesses that they had made any contradictory statement at any other stage — No reason to disbelieve evidence of these witnesses — Evidence given in court by PW 5 was consistent with that of PWs 1 and 3 — Hence, mere fact that in the FIR it was not so stated, does not cast any doubt or destroy evidence given in court (Paras 8 and 9). Harendra Nath Mishra v. State of Bihar, (2009) 17 SCC 542.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-11-2002]

[844] — S. 154 — Discrepancy as regards time of lodging of FIR — Effect — PW 1 (informant) stating that it was lodged at 9 p.m., doctor treating PW 1 stating that his statement was recorded by IO at 11 p.m., while IO deposing that it was lodged at 11.45 p.m. — PW 1 was an injured witness who had suffered large number of injuries in the occurrence — Hence held, possibility of him as injured losing track of time by reason of sufferance of grave injuries could not be ruled out — Further held, it was also possible that statement of PW 1 was recorded at 11 p.m. but FIR lodged at about 11.45 p.m., which would not mean that the recording of the statement of PW 1 had also started at that point of time — Hence, purported discrepancy in respect of the time of actual lodging of FIR was not such which would prove to be fatal to the entire prosecution case, particularly when the ocular evidence was corroborated by medical evidence (Paras 9 and 10). Santosh v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 13 SCC 457: (2007) 54 AIC 36 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2007]

[845] — S. 154 — FIR not signed by first informant — Effect, if any — FIR not signed by PW 1 (first informant and eyewitness) — It was scribed by one R on his dictation — Fact that report received by SHO and FIR lodged immediately thereafter —

(3)(ii)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Discrepancies/Inconsistencies/Contradictions in or vis-à-vis FIR (contd.)

Relevance — Held, in such circumstances it is of no consequence whether FIR contained first informant's signature or not — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 307 and 147 to 149 (Para 16.4). Surendra Pal v. State of U.P., (2010) 9 SCC 399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2010]

Suresh Rai v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 84: 2000 SCC (Cri) 764; Eqbal Baig v. State of A.P., (1986) 2 SCC 476: 1986 SCC (Cri) 232, relied on [846] — S. 154 — FIR — Controversy as to whether FIR was lodged at 4.45 a.m. or 4.45 p.m. on 16-8-1979 — Typed copy thereof showing that it was lodged at 4.45 p.m. — But IO stating that it was lodged at 9.30 p.m. on that day — FIR scribed by one G who was brother of PW 1 and was not a resident of the village where occurrence had taken place but was residing 10 km away — Prosecution failing to examine him although his son had been examined as an eyewitness — If he was residing at the relevant time in the village where the incident had taken place, it was expected that either he had witnessed the occurrence or had reached the place of occurrence immediately after the accused fled away — PW 3, Head Constable attached to the police station stating in his evidence that FIR was lodged at 4.45 a.m. and the special reports were sent by 6.00 a.m. — Prosecution failing to explain as to why FIR was sent to the Court of the Chief Judicial Magistrate on 17-8-1979 and why the dead body was not sent for post-mortem on 16-8-1979 itself — Moreover, if FIR was lodged early in the morning, there was absolutely no reason as to why investigation did not start immediately thereafter — In such circumstances conviction of appellant unsustainable (Paras 6, 15, 18 and 19). Om Prakash v. State of U.P., (2008) 17 SCC 249: AIR 2009 SC 944: (2009) 1 All LJ 657: (2009) 2 ECrN 14 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 782: (2009) 75 AIC 257 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-2008]

[847] — S. 154 — Change in place and change of version of prosecution story by the first informant — Time and place of incident also changed — Held, in view of the vital omissions and contradictions, the evidence of the first informant cannot be relied upon — Trial court and High Court committed manifest error in relying upon the testimony of first informant as eyewitness — Penal Code, 1860, S. 302 (Paras 8 to 10). Prem Narain v. State of M.P., (2007) 15 SCC 485.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-2006]

[848] — S. 154 — FIR — Contradiction relating to lodging of FIR — Murder — Contradiction regarding the place of lodging of the report — According to eyewitness (PW 3), she had gone to the police station where after making some inquiries from her the FIR was lodged — Investigating officer also stating that complaint was given by PW 3 on the basis of which a case was registered in the police station — But in cross-examination the IO stating that he came straightaway to the village of occurrence where report was written in the house of PW 3 who was present there and the report was forwarded to the police station for registration of the case — Held, though there was a contradiction regarding lodging of FIR but that did not discredit the main prosecution case which was otherwise reliable and trustworthy

The High Court considered the question regarding contradiction about lodging of the FIR in detail taking into account all the discrepancies in regard to this point and came to the conclusion that otherwise reliable statement of the complainant (PW 3) could not be discarded or discredited and that even though there had been any fault or negligence in conducting the investigation, that too by itself, was not sufficient to dislodge the prosecution case as a whole. It observed that for an uneducated village person, it is not unlikely that one may make some embellishment in the statement saying that the FIR was recorded at the police station since normally it is recorded there.

Held :

There is definitely a contradiction about the lodging of the FIR but the effect of such contradiction or discrepancy may have to be viewed in the light of the facts and circumstances of each case. There may be cases where such a discrepancy may prove fatal to the prosecution case whereas in other cases it may not have the same effect. The consequences of such discrepancies or defective or doubtful investigation is not necessarily only one leading to discredit the main prosecution case if the prosecution evidence inspires confidence and circumstances lead to such a conclusion and the prosecution story rings true. No doubt in that event it would be necessary to evaluate as to what extent such faulty investigation or discrepant statement on certain facts relating thereto, shall cause damage to the prosecution case as a whole. The trial court and the High Court have rightly placed implicit reliance upon the statement of PW 3 despite the infirmities which crept in due to careless investigation and contradiction regarding the place of lodging of the report. (Paras 12 and 17). Dharmendrasinh v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 4 SCC 679: AIR 2002 SC 1937.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-4-2002]

[849] — S. 154 — FIR — Discrepancies — Effect — If FIR found to be truthful, merely because case against some of the accused named in it could not be established by prosecution and merely because some enquiries were made to ascertain truth of the incident and to apprehend the accused, held, entire prosecution case cannot be discarded

In the first information report all the accused persons were named and overt acts on their part were also stated at some length. Each and every detail of the incident was not necessary to be stated. A first information report is not meant to be encyclopaedic. While considering the effect of some omissions in the first information report on the part of the informant, a court cannot fail to take into consideration the probable physical and mental condition of the first informant. One of the important factors which may weigh with the court is as to whether there was a possibility of false implication of the appellants. Only with a view to test the veracity of the correctness of the contents of the report, the court applies certain well-known principles of caution. Once, however, a first information report is found to be truthful, only because names of some accused persons have been mentioned, against whom the prosecution was not able to establish its case, the entire prosecution case would not be thrown away only on the basis thereof. If furthermore the purported entry in the general diary, which had not been produced, is not treated to be a first information report, only because some enquiries have been made, the same by itself would not vitiate the entire trial. Enquiries are required to be made for several reasons; one of them is to ascertain the truth or otherwise of the incident and the second to apprehend the accused persons. Arrest of accused persons, as expeditiously as possible, leads to a better investigation. (Paras 13 and 14). Animireddy Venkata Ramana v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (2008) 5 SCC 368: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 600: AIR 2008 SC 1603: (2008) 65 AIC 136 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 2038.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

[850] — S. 154 — FIR — Discrepancies — Dacoity — Acquittal by High Court for offences under S. 396 IPC — Doubts regarding conviction — Deceased's party on inimical terms with named accused persons — First oral information by PW 3 (village chowkidar) only against unknown persons — Later addition of accused persons (inimical to deceased party) in written report of PW 2 (member of deceased party) — No witnesses speaking about A (respondent-Accused 4) — Known inimical accused persons did not try to cover their face during dacoity though unknown persons covered their face — Interference with acquittal of A (respondent-Accused 4) for offences under S. 396 IPC, held, is not warranted (Paras 5 to 12). State of U.P. v. Awdhesh, (2008) 16 SCC 238.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-9-2008]

[851] — S. 154 — Minor in nature — Effect — Held, much importance cannot be given to such minor discrepancies

It was argued by the appellant that there were certain discrepancies in the FIR, like from the FIR, it was suggested as if the incident had taken place near the canal. The use of the word "canal" may be because of the impression of the constable, who wrote the report in vernacular. That, however, will not take the spot of occurrence to near the canal on the northern side. It must be realised that vocabulary and the terms used by the villagers could always be confused by the police when they recorded their statements. Much importance cannot be given to such minor discrepancies. The broad features of the evidence, which are clearly established and enough to sustain conviction of the accused were that the complainant party wanted to irrigate their field and for that they wanted to open the aqueduct for supplying water to their field and it was at that spot that the incident took place. (Paras 27, 18 and 23). Bhagwati Prasad v. State of M.P., (2010) 1 SCC 697.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.V. Raveendran, V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2009]

[852] — S. 154 — FIR — Discrepancies or omissions in FIR — Effect — Description of robbed jewels not given in FIR by PW 1 (son of deceased) — Held, will not in any way affect the identification of the jewellery seized from the accused as those belonging to his mother (Para 12). Krishnamoorthy v. State, (2007) 12 SCC 110: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 248: 2007 Cri LJ 1803: (2007) 52 AIC 83 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-2007]

[853] — Ss. 154 and 482 — FIR alleging that offences were committed by purchase of insurance stamps from outside State for use within the State — FIR also bringing within its ambit purchase of stamps made within the State — Propriety — Held, FIR displays complete

(3)(ii)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Discrepancies/Inconsistencies/Contradictions in or vis-à-vis FIR (contd.)

non-application of mind — Criminal proceedings liable to be quashed (Para 30). V.V.S. Rama Sharma v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 234: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 356: (2009) 77 AIC 24 (SC): (2009) 4 All LJ 309.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

[854] — S. 154 — FIR — Discrepancies or omissions in FIR — Effect — Held, merely because of some contradiction it cannot be said that the FIR was lodged later and that the police had prior information and the same was not recorded — When a witness is examined after a long period it is possible that some mistakes may occur when they give evidence before the court (Para 10). Gonchi Rajashekhar Reddy v. State of A.P., (2006) 9 SCC 535: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 332: 2006 Cri LJ 2378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-2006]

[855] — S. 154 — FIR — Discrepancies/Omissions in FIR — Effect of — Non-mentioning of name of PW 2, son of deceased in FIR as witness — Complainant had apparently not seen him as PW 2 witnessed incident from some distance away — Contradiction regarding site of injury also held immaterial as it was impossible for any witness to make out as to where a bullet had hit after it had been fired (Para 4). Hari Singh v. State of M.P., (2010) 12 SCC 108: AIR 2010 SC 3630.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-2010]

[856] — S. 154 — FIR lodged with great promptitude — Minor omissions or variations in the FIR, which do not distort the substratum of the prosecution story — Effect — Held, the same would not make the prosecution case unreliable. Radhey Shyam Narendra v. State of Orissa, (1980) 1 SCC 585: 1980 SCC (Cri) 293.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-1979]

[857] — S. 154 — FIR — Discrepancies in making later additions, explained — Effect on acquittal of offence under S. 396 IPC, based on other factors — Later addition of accused persons (inimical to deceased party) in written report of PW 2 (member of deceased party) sought to be explained by pointing out that the witnesses on hearing about the dacoity had rushed to police station and had no occasion to know names of accused persons — Explanation of said discrepancies, held, cannot alter the ultimate/prima facie conclusion of doubts regarding conviction (Paras 10 and 11). State of U.P. v. Awdhesh, (2008) 16 SCC 238.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-9-2008]

[858] — S. 154 — FIR — Discrepancies — Not by themselves fatal to prosecution case — Court should weigh all situations including discrepancies as well as other evidence and after carefully appreciating the same come to a correct conclusion — Conviction confirmed under S. 302 r/w Ss. 149/34 IPC — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 r/w Ss. 149/34

The importance of FIR cannot be underestimated as it is first version on the basis of which the investigation proceeds. But FIR is not a be-all and end-all of the matter, even though it is a very important document. In most of the cases, FIR provides corroboration to the evidence of the maker thereof. It provides a direction to the investigating officer and the necessary clues about the crime and the perpetrator thereof. (Paras 20 and 39)

Merely because doubts are raised about the FIR and the nature of prosecution case, that by itself, would not be fatal to the prosecution case. True it is that a concocted FIR, wherein some innocent persons are deliberately introduced as the accused persons, raises a reasonable doubt about the prosecution story, however, a vigilant, competent and searching investigation can despoil all the doubts of the court. It is not a universal rule that once FIR is found to be with discrepancies, the whole prosecution case, as a rule, has to be thrown. Such can never be the law. If the investigating agency is able to collect reasonable evidence against the accused persons and such evidence stands the scrutiny of the Court, then such a discrepancy need not be fatal. (Paras 38, 39 and 41)

If the argument that a suspicious and doubtful FIR would have the effect of throwing out the whole prosecution case is accepted, then there would be no necessity of leading any evidence. The correct view would be to weigh all the situations including the discrepancies found in the FIR, as also the other evidences made available before the Court and after carefully appreciating the same, to come to the correct conclusion. That is precisely what has been done in this case. (Para 42). Alagarsamy v. State, (2010) 12 SCC 427: AIR 2010 SC 849: 2010 Cri LJ 29: (2010) 2 ECrN 88: (2009) 84 AIC 192 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2009]

Nirmal Singh v. State of Bihar, (2005) 9 SCC 725: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1461; Sanganagouda A. Veeranagouda v. State of Karnataka, (2005) 12 SCC 468: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 610; State of Karnataka v. K. Yarappa Reddy, (1999) 8 SCC 715: 2000 SCC (Cri) 61, relied on

Sevi v. State of T.N., 1981 Supp SCC 43: 1981 SCC (Cri) 679, explained and distinguished

[859] — S. 154 — Slight discrepancy in FIR held, to support its authenticity. Ajmer Singh v. State of Punjab, (1977) 1 SCC 659: 1977 SCC (Cri) 140: AIR 1977 SC 1078: 1977 Cri LJ 659.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, A.C. Gupta and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-1976]

[860] — S. 154 — FIR — Suspicious circumstances — Caste rivalry — Names of accused persons mentioned in FIR, did not find place in reports of Tahsildar sent to Collector and that of Collector sent to Secretary, Public (Law and Order) — Held, inconsequential since these officers were not concerned with investigation of offence in question and they had only reported about prevailing law and order situation in the area

The reports of the Tahsildar and the Collector would be of no consequence, as the two officers concerned had nothing to do with the investigation of the offence. The mere fact that in the Tahsildar's report and also the second report, the names of the accused persons did not figure, does not, amount to a very clinching circumstance. Law and order in the village was the prime concern of this Revenue Officer, who sent these two reports. It was not his task to investigate the offence. He was merely reporting the prevailing situation in his village to his superiors as per his duty. Therefore, merely because the names of the accused persons did not figure in his report, would not, matter. It is nobody's case that he was actively assisting or was directly connected or cooperating with the investigating officer. By these reports, he merely did his duty of informing his Collector, the prevalent situation, which was undoubtedly tense. Therefore, the non-mention of those names in the aforementioned reports, would be of no consequence. Similarly, for the report by the Collector to the Secretary, the same comment is applicable. The Collector was not a man on the spot. He was merely acting on the basis of the report sent to him by the local officer. Therefore, his report is also of no consequence. (Paras 35 and 36). Alagarsamy v. State, (2010) 12 SCC 427: AIR 2010 SC 849: 2010 Cri LJ 29: (2010) 2 ECrN 88: (2009) 84 AIC 192 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2009]

Nirmal Singh v. State of Bihar, (2005) 9 SCC 725: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1461; Sanganagouda A. Veeranagouda v. State of Karnataka, (2005) 12 SCC 468: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 610; State of Karnataka v. K. Yarappa Reddy, (1999) 8 SCC 715: 2000 SCC (Cri) 61, relied on

Sevi v. State of T.N., 1981 Supp SCC 43: 1981 SCC (Cri) 679, explained and distinguished

[861] — Ss. 154 and 172 — Inconsistency between FIR and police station daily diary maintained under Punjab Police Rules — Effect — Veracity of contents of FIR cannot in all cases be tested with reference to police station daily diary — Original DDR not filed in court; instead photocopy filed and that too at the instance of accused after 4 years of closure of evidence — Evidence showing that FIR was recorded first and DDR recorded thereafter on the basis of the facts recorded in FIR — In the circumstances, held, a totally different version contained in the photocopy of DDR belatedly filed before court rendered its contents doubtful and no reliance can be placed thereon — Punjab Police Rules, 1934, R. 2 (Paras 16 and 19). Paramjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2007) 13 SCC 530: AIR 2008 SC 441: (2008) 61 AIC 142 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-2007]

5. Corrections/Overwriting/ Interpolation in FIR

See also Section 154, '(3)(ii)4. Discrepancies/Inconsistencies/Contradictions in or vis-à-vis FIR', above

See also CRIMINAL TRIAL — 'Appreciation of Evidence' — Contradictions, inconsistencies, exaggerations or embellishments in Vol. 3

[862] — S. 154 — Correction of date in FIR, by Magistrate — On facts, did not amount to manipulation — Offence under Ss. 302/34 — In the endorsement on the copy of the FIR, the Magistrate mentioning the time and date of receipt as 6 p.m., 5-10-1984 and then correcting and initialling the date as 4-10-1984 — In view of consistency with the entries in the daily diary made by the Constable who took the FIR to the Magistrate, and in absence of any evidence of bias on the part of the Magistrate, held, the High Court erred in holding that the FIR had been recorded later than the time indicated — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34

The deceased was killed on 4-10-1984 by the accused-respondents. The FIR was lodged the same day within 21/2 hours. The copy of the FIR was taken to the Magistrate by a Constable. In the endorsement made by the Magistrate, the time of receipt was mentioned as 6 p.m. and the date, as 5-10-1984 which was then corrected and initialled by the Magistrate as 4-10-1984. On account of this correction, the High Court came to the conclusion that the FIR was recorded at a point of time later than what was indicated.

(3)(ii)5. Reliability and Validity of FIR - Contents of FIR - Corrections/Overwriting/Interpolation in FIR (contd.)

Reversing this finding

Held :

There is no doubt that the figure "5" has been altered to figure "4". The High Court, however, overlooked the fact that the police constable who took the FIR to the Magistrate had made an entry number 14 at 4.25 p.m. in the daily diary on 4-10-1984 to the effect that he was taking the copy of the FIR to be delivered to the Magistrate. In the daily diary there is also the recording of the fact that the police constable, after having delivered the FIR, had come back to the police station the following morning. There is no correction as far as time of 6 p.m. which is recorded. This being so, it is obvious that the report could not have reached the Magistrate at 6 p.m. on 5-10-1984 when the constable had come back, after giving a copy of the report to the Magistrate, on the morning of 5-10-1984. Furthermore, the change in the date has been initialled by the Magistrate. There is no circumstance which will go to show that the Magistrate manipulated the official record and initialled a wrong date solely with a view to help the prosecution. The conclusion arrived at by the High Court with regard to the time when the FIR was lodged is clearly without any basis. S. Kaur v. Baldev Singh, (1997) 11 SCC 292: 1998 SCC (Cri) 161: AIR 1999 SC 1581.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-1997]

[863] — S. 154 — FIR — Corrections made in names of some of the accused in written complaint — False implication alleged — Written complaint prepared within very short time and handed over to officer-in-charge of the police station — Complainant explaining that when the complaint read over to him, he realising that exact names of some of the accused had not been stated, effected the corrections — FIR prepared accordingly — Held, neither the time interval, nor the nature of corrections indicated that corrections were improvements suggestive of deliberation and false involvement of the accused. Golla Pullanna v. State of A.P., (1996) 10 SCC 223: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1235: AIR 1996 SC 2727.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-1996]

[864] — S. 154 — Omissions, inconsistencies and overwriting in FIR — When not material — Female (PW 5) lodging FIR at 2.40 a.m. in the night being carried to police station by an outsider on bicycle and there being overwriting in FIR by police officers (properly explained) — Credibility — Informant wife severely injured stating that she lodged FIR in the above manner as all male members of her family were murdered — Police officers explaining that overwriting of time in FIR and non-mentioning of case number in injury report and enquiry report was on account of their misunderstanding that the FIR was a cross-case of another murder which took place in the adjacent house by the same assailants — Also, distance of PW 5's house (place of crime) being five km from the police station, crime taking place at 1.45 a.m., PW 5 informant lodging FIR at 2.40 a.m. and there being clinching and reliable evidence against the accused persons — On facts, held, FIR cannot be doubted (Paras 22 to 29). Moti Lal v. State of U.P., (2010) 1 SCC 581.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-12-2009]

[865] — S. 154 — FIR — Manipulation in FIR about the time of recording it — Allegation of — Merely because there was some change in time of the lodging of the FIR, held, that does not per se render the prosecution version vulnerable — At the most, the requirement in such case was of a careful analysis of the evidence, which had been done by the trial court (Para 15). State of M.P. v. Mansingh, (2003) 10 SCC 414.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2003]

[866] — S. 154 — FIR — Overwriting on — On facts, held, not on any material part so as to justify acquittal — Penal Code, 1860, S. 304 Part II

The overwriting appearing in the part of FIR pertaining to what was being taken by the deceased to his house is not material so as to sustain the order of acquittal. The document which became the first information report was prepared by PW 1 in the village itself before he went and gave it at the police station. Thus there was no police involvement either in that writing or overwriting. And the overwriting pertained merely to a detail as to what was being carried by the deceased to his house and what was being carried by PW 1. Those were not material particulars insofar as the actual occurrence was concerned. State of U.P. v. Hari Om, (1998) 9 SCC 63: 1998 SCC (Cri) 979.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and M. Srinivasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-12-1997]

[867] — S. 154 — Effect of interpolation — Investigating Officer not examined and therefore circumstances warranting interpolation remaining unexplained — Additional allegation made by way of interpolation disbelieved by High Court to which Supreme Court concurred (Paras 9 and 10). Arvind Singh v. State of Bihar, (2001) 6 SCC 407: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1148: AIR 2001 SC 2124: 2001 Cri LJ 2556.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-2001]

6. Embellishments/Improvements in FIR

See also Section 154, '(3)(ii)4. Discrepancies/Inconsistencies/Contradictions in or vis-à-vis FIR', above

See also CRIMINAL TRIAL — 'Appreciation of Evidence' — Contradictions, inconsistencies, exaggerations or embellishments in Vol. 3

[868] — S. 154 — Embellishments in FIR — If inferable — Statement of the victim recorded by the police officer in the hospital treated as FIR — Contention that FIR was fabricated since the said police officer had admitted that it was prepared after consulting the superior officers and the contents thereof were not made known to the witnesses who had signed it — Held, unsustainable — FIR only incorporated the statement of the victim at the hospital — Fact that superior officials were consulted before formally recording it did not mean that any changes or interpolations were introduced (Paras 16, 9 and 2). Sree Vijayakumar v. State, (2005) 10 SCC 737: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1896: 2005 Cri LJ 3085.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2005]

[869] — S. 154 — FIR — Possibility of embellishment in FIR — Fact that the first informant was in the company of one C, a political rival of the accused-appellant, soon after the incident and before and at the time of lodging of FIR — Held, a possibility of some embellishment having crept into the FIR in view of the political influence wielded by such opponent of the accused-appellant could not be completely ruled out (Para 16). Jayantibhai Bhenkarbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 8 SCC 165: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1873: AIR 2002 SC 3569.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-2002]

[870] — S. 154 — FIR written by eyewitness — Some embellishments in, on facts, held, not sufficient to reject the entire prosecution case. Dukhmochan Pandey v. State of Bihar, (1997) 8 SCC 405: AIR 1998 SC 40.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-1997]

[871] — S. 154 — Very detailed FIR of murder and dacoity lodged soon after by son of one of the deceased — Held, makes it doubtful. Ram Lakhan Singh v. State of U.P., (1977) 3 SCC 268: 1977 SCC (Cri) 474: AIR 1977 SC 1936: 1977 Cri LJ 1566.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.K. Goswami, A.C. Gupta and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1977]

[872] — S. 154 — FIR — Rough notes — Police report prepared on the basis of rough notes made by Police Constable — Rough notes being the first recorded entry were an important document — In absence of production of the same before court, the fair report cannot be given unreserved acceptance — Further the report should have been prepared by the Head Constable who was also present — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 63 and 65. Balbir Singh v. State of Haryana, (1987) 1 SCC 533: 1987 SCC (Cri) 193: AIR 1987 SC 1053: 1987 Cri LJ 853.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-1987]

[873] — S. 154 — FIR — Embellishment — Rioting and murder — In statement of the injured witness initially recorded as dying declaration the accused and some others stated to have inflicted the injuries on him — But in court the witness improving his version stating that the accused alone had inflicted the injuries — In such case one of the tests is whether name of the accused mentioned in the earliest report — Since accused's name was not mentioned in FIR nor during the inquest and there was prevarication in the version of the witness who was a partisan and interested witness, held, possibility of implicating the accused at a subsequent stage annot be ruled out — Hence this particular accused entitled to acquittal — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/149. Nallamsetty Yanadaiah v. State of A.P., 1993 Supp (3) SCC 177: 1993 SCC (Cri) 892: AIR 1993 SC 1175: 1993 Cri LJ 408.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-1992]

7. Inculpative statement in FIR

[874] — S. 154 — FIR given by the accused at police station — Admissibility in evidence — Inculpative statements in, held, would stand excluded from evidence — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 25 (Para 18). State of Karnataka v. K. Yarappa Reddy, (1999) 8 SCC 715: AIR 2000 SC 185.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and A.P. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-1999]

(3)(iii) Reliability and Validity of FIR (contd.)

(iii) FIR and other evidence

See also Section 154, '(3)(ii)4. Discrepancies/Inconsistencies/Contradictions in or vis-à-vis FIR', above

See also CRIMINAL TRIAL — 'Appreciation of Evidence' — Contradictions, inconsistencies, exaggerations or embellishments in Vol. 3

[875] — S. 154 — Contradiction with testimony of complainant regarding time of recording of — Injured eyewitness who filed the FIR stating that it was recorded by the police in the evening while the police version was that it was recorded in the morning — Held, this discrepancy, on the facts of the case, was not enough to castigate an important eyewitness whose presence at the spot could not be doubted — The maximum consequence was that the first information statement could not be used to corroborate the evidence of the maker of it. State of Rajasthan v. Ani, (1997) 6 SCC 162: 1997 SCC (Cri) 851: AIR 1997 SC 1023: 1997 Cri LJ 1529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-1-1997]

[876] — Ss. 154 and 174 — Discrepancies between FIR and statements of witnesses during inquest — Doctor conducting post-mortem opining that injuries caused only with blunt weapon — While according to FIR injuries inflicted by sticks alone, according to the statement made during inquest injuries inflicted by iron rods and sticks — Held, High Court justified in ignoring the discrepancy relying upon the testimony of eyewitnesses. Desaji Wadia Samkaiah v. State of A.P., 1988 Supp SCC 531: 1988 SCC (Cri) 879: 1988 BLJR 382.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Dutt and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-2-1988]

[877] — S. 154 — FIR — Eyewitness who named the accused in FIR not sure of his presence but had heard about it — Effect — Reliability of eyewitness — There were twenty assailants — A-6 was named in statements of other witnesses — PW 1 explained how the confusion had arisen and courts below accepted the same — Held, doubt entertained by PW 1 could not be a ground to suspect the veracity of evidence of other eyewitnesses (PWs 2 to 4) (Para 6). Goura Venkata Reddy v. State of A.P., (2003) 12 SCC 469.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-2003]

[878] — S. 154 — FIR — Inconsistency with — Overt act of stabbing the deceased attributed to one of the accused by the prosecution, having not been mentioned in the earliest report lodged with the police, held, an afterthought and therefore unacceptable — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302 and 34. Bejoy Singh v. State of W.B., (1990) 2 SCC 159: 1990 SCC (Cri) 289: AIR 1990 SC 814: 1990 Cri LJ 901.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-2-1990]

[879] — S. 154 — FIR — Merely because names of some of the PWs had not been mentioned in FIR, testimony of those PWs does not become unreliable

There is no substance in the submission that because the names of PWs 1 and 5 were not mentioned in the FIR, no reliance could be placed on their testimony. The purpose of the FIR is to set the criminal law in motion which does not require the details or the names of all the witnesses who have seen the occurrence. It is not necessary that elaboration of every fact that had happened should be given by the person who lodges the first information report. PW 6 whose husband had been killed must have been extremely perturbed at the time of lodging of the FIR and in that state of mental agony she might not have been able to give details relating to the names of the witnesses who had seen the occurrence. The presence of all the eyewitnesses has been accepted by the courts below and there is no reason to take a different view, particularly this being a question of fact which was fully noticed by the two courts of fact and in spite of that the courts had believed the testimony of PWs 1 and 5. It is not the case of the appellant that the names of the accused persons were not mentioned in the FIR. It is also not the case of the appellant that the statements made under Section 161 CrPC of the aforesaid witnesses were not immediately recorded by the investigating agency. The plea raised is far-fetched and without any substance. (Para 25). Anil Rai v. State of Bihar, (2001) 7 SCC 318: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1009: AIR 2001 SC 3173.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas[2] and R.P. Sethi[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-2001]

[880] — Ss. 154, 161 and 174 — Name of assailant — Mention of, in inquest report although stated in FIR to be unknown — Whether indicative of infirmity of prosecution case — I.O.

explaining that the name was found out from the statements of the persons he examined — Eyewitnesses identifying the accused in T.I. Parade and no infirmity or suspicious feature appearing in their identification — In such circumstances, there was no infirmity in the prosecution case. Babu Poojari v. State of Karnataka, 1993 Supp (3) SCC 304: 1993 SCC (Cri) 997.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-1992]

[881] — S. 154 — Version given in FIR fully supported by testimony of eyewitnesses — FIR lodged within one hour of occurrence by brother of deceased as narrated to him by eyewitness — In the FIR only the appellant was named as having assaulted the deceased along with three others who could not be identified — Held, if the eyewitness was not there at the scene of occurrence, the FIR could not have been lodged within one hour — If the witnesses had any motive to falsely implicate their enemies or persons against whom they had any grudge they would have named the three other persons as well — The version given in the FIR was fully supported by the eyewitnesses in court — Hence the conviction under S. 302/34 of IPC and the sentence of life imprisonment imposed by High Court was not improper — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302/34. Rajju v. State of M.P., 1993 Supp (4) SCC 667: AIR 1994 SC 1459.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-1993]

[882] — S. 154 — Some witnesses deposing before trial court that it was the appellants who beat the deceased which is inconsistent with the FIR — Held, evidence on this point cannot be totally relied upon (Para 10). Parme Hansda v. State of Bihar (Now Jharkhand), (2006) 12 SCC 114: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 551: (2007) 49 AIC 728 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 314.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-2006]

[883] — Ss. 154 and 161 — Inconsistency — Two of the accused implicated in the course of deposition in court though no specific injury was attributed to them in FIR or in statement under S. 161 CrPC — Effect — High Court observing that credibility of witness should not be doubted as he clarified the factual aspect in court — Held, version disclosed in FIR was so different from the version disclosed in the course of deposition that it could not be said to be merely clarificatory — Hence, proved fatal (Para 22). Ram Swaroop v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 13 SCC 134: 2005 SCC (Cri) 61: AIR 2004 SC 2943: 2004 Cri LJ 5043.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-3-2004]

[884] — S. 154 — FIR — Mere failure to mention in FIR about injuries received by accused, held, not a ground to discard the explanation of injuries given at the trial — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 307 and Ss. 148, 323 and 324 r/w S. 149

The High Court took note of the fact that the prosecution witnesses did explain that the injuries came to be inflicted on the accused with bamboos picked up by PW 2 and his brother in order to repel the further attack by the accused. The High Court observed that the mere fact that the FIR was silent regarding the injuries received by the accused is not a ground to discard the explanation given at the trial. There may be initial reluctance on the part of the informant to disclose that the prosecution party made a counter-attack causing injuries to some of the accused. The High Court was of the view that in the face of the clear and consistent evidence of independent and natural witnesses supported by the dying declaration, all of which revealed that the accused party was the aggressor and initiated the attack on the deceased in front of his house, the non-explanation of injuries at the earliest point of time cannot be put against the prosecution. Broadly speaking, the approach of the High Court seems to be correct and in conformity with the legal position clarified and explained by the Supreme Court in a series of decisions. (Para 16). Dashrath Singh v. State of U.P., (2004) 7 SCC 408: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1932: 2004 All LJ 3256.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2004]

Bhaba Nanda Sarma v. State of Assam, (1977) 4 SCC 396: 1977 SCC (Cri) 602; Takhaji Hiraji v. Thakore Kubersing Chamansingh, (2001) 6 SCC 145: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1070, relied on [885] — S. 154 — Acquittal justified on ground of discrepancies or omissions in FIR — Variance between the FIR and the testimony of eyewitnesses — Trial court, held on facts, was justified in acquitting the accused persons. Kalyan v. State of U.P., (2001) 9 SCC 632: AIR 2001 SC 3976.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-2001]

(3)(iii) Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and other evidence (contd.)

[886] — S. 154 — Discrepancy between FIR and evidence of prosecution — Effect — Prosecution witness (PW) stating in FIR about the death of two persons whereas in evidence stating that while he was at police station he learnt from the SI that only one of the persons died whereas the other was in hospital — There being discrepancy between the statements made in FIR and evidence, the testimony of PW not reliable. Jang Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 9 SCC 704.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-2000]

[887] — S. 154 — FIR — Alleged discrepancies and shortcomings immaterial if otherwise inconsequential to the prosecution case and not contradictory to the rest of the testimony. State of Gujarat v. Bai Fatima, (1975) 2 SCC 7: 1975 SCC (Cri) 384: AIR 1975 SC 1478: (1975) 12 ACC 243: 1975 Cri LJ 1079.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A. Alagiriswami and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-3-1975]

[888] — S. 154 — FIR — Discrepancy — Difference between the statement of the eyewitnesses and FIR regarding the location of the injury inflicted upon the person of the deceased — No effect of, on prosecution case when all the witnesses deposed the position of the said injury consistently in the court

The High Court was justified in setting aside the judgment of the trial court because the judgment of acquittal is based upon surmises, conjectures and assumed contradictions. The High Court rightly found that in fact there was no contradiction in the depositions of the eyewitnesses and omissions or improvements noticed by the trial court did not amount to contradictions for the purposes of discarding the testimony of otherwise trustworthy natural witnesses. The trial court totally ignored the testimony of the eyewitnesses while holding that they had not seen the injury because, according to the FIR, the injury allegedly had been inflicted on the nose of the deceased. All the witnesses had deposed in the court that the injury was caused on the body of the deceased from behind near the right shoulder and the force with which it was caused resulted in the cutting of the vital inner parts of her body. (Para 4). Keshavlal v. State of M.P., (2002) 3 SCC 254: 2002 SCC (Cri) 641: AIR 2002 SC 1221: 2002 Cri LJ 1776.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-2002]

[889] — S. 154 — Exaggerated version in FIR — FIR not tallying with dying declaration recorded by Naib Tehsildar — Reliability of dying declaration — Effect on — Facts improbabilising that PW 2 could have received any information from deceased before he went to lodge FIR — Dying declaration recorded by Naib Tahsildar — Found credible — Hence held, could not be rejected merely because the FIR lodged by PW 2 and deposition of PW 2 did not tally with it — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 32 (Para 22). Sohan Lal v. State of Punjab, (2003) 11 SCC 534: 2004 SCC (Cri) 226: AIR 2003 SC 4466.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-2003]

[890] — S. 154 — FIR — Held on facts, no inconsistency between recitals in FIR and version of eyewitnesses. Suraj Pal v. State of U.P., 1994 Supp (1) SCC 528: 1994 SCC (Cri) 701: AIR 1994 SC 748: 1994 Cri LJ 928: (1994) 1 Crimes 502.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-1993]

[891] — S. 154 — Prosecution version as narrated in FIR at the instance of an eyewitness discrepant from evidence of other eyewitnesses at trial — Held, only testimony of that witness on whose dictation FIR had been written could be tested with reference to the version contained in the FIR and adverse inference drawn vis-à-vis that witness on the basis of the alleged discrepancies — Wholesale rejection of testimony of all prosecution witnesses collectively not justified. State of U.P. v. Brahma Das, (1986) 4 SCC 93: 1986 SCC (Cri) 368: AIR 1986 SC 1769: 1986 Cri LJ 1732.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-1986]

(iv) Doubt regarding lodging of FIR

See also Section 154, '(3)(ii)4. Discrepancies/Inconsistencies/Contradictions in or vis-à-vis FIR', above

See also '(3)(v) Falsity of/Fabricated FIR', below

[892] — S. 154 — FIR — Lodging of — Unnatural conduct — Plea that FIR not lodged at nearest police station — Inspector not available at nearest police station — Constable present there not competent to accept the intimation — He suggested the witness to lodge the report at another police station having jurisdiction — Hence held, contention based on the above plea had no substance (Para 6). Gubbala Venugopalaswamy v. State of A.P., (2004) 10 SCC 120: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1764: AIR 2004 SC 2477.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-2004]

[893] — S. 154 — FIR — Suspicious circumstances — FIR not recorded by the police constable present in the police station and the informant eyewitness told that the same would be recorded by the SI of Police, who was absent then — Police station diary, however, disclosing the presence of SI at the police station during the relevant time — Informant not naming assailants though narrating the incident to the constable — Not clear whether the station diary entry was recorded on the basis of rumours heard by SI or on the basis of statement made by the constable — Evidence of SI, as regards this aspect, contradictory — However, FIR fully corroborating the testimony of the informant eyewitness as well as that of other eyewitnesses — Medical evidence also supporting the prosecution case — In the circumstances, held, FIR cannot be discarded merely on the basis of certain suspicious circumstances (Paras 8, 9, 10 and 12 to 15). Nirmal Singh v. State of Bihar, (2005) 9 SCC 725: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1461: AIR 2005 SC 1265: 2005 Cri LJ 672.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2004]

[894] — S. 154 — FIR — Lodging of complaint — Suspicious circumstances — Lodging of complaint by PW 3, who was not an eyewitness, despite the presence of PW 4 (an eyewitness) and PW 5 (who came immediately after the assault) at the police station — PW 3 stating that complaint lodged on the basis of information given to him by PWs 4 and 5, but PWs 4 and 5 denying the said fact — Thus, lodging of complaint by PW 3, on facts, doubtful (Para 7). Khima Vikamshi v. State of Gujarat, (2003) 9 SCC 420: AIR 2003 SC 1326: 2003 Cri LJ 2025.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-3-2003]

[895] — S. 154 — FIR — Reliability of FIR — FIR reaching JM on May 26 — Seal of court on FIR affixed on May 29 — Genuineness of signature of Magistrate on May 26 not questioned by accused at any time — IO also not questioned regarding authenticity of signature of JM — May 28 was a holiday, being Muharram — Hence held, seal affixed on May 29 would not be extraordinary (Para 33). Myladimmal Surendran v. State of Kerala, (2010) 11 SCC 129: AIR 2010 SC 3281.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-9-2010]

State of Rajasthan v. Kalki, (1981) 2 SCC 752: 1981 SCC (Cri) 593, relied on

(v) Falsity of/Fabricated FIR

See also Section 154, '(3)(ii)2. Form and language of FIR', and

'(3)(iv) Doubt regarding lodging of FIR', above

[896] — S. 154 — Complaint (Ext. P-1) recorded at behest of PW 1 in hospital after MLA and legal advisors of the party had visited injured — Held, once it is proved that FIR itself was given with consultation of legal advisors and under guidance of MLA who was inimical towards appellant on account of political rivalry, the prosecution version becomes suspicious (Para 34). Boddella Babul Reddy v. Public Prosecutor, (2010) 3 SCC 648.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : V.S. Sirpurkar and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision : 6-1-2010]

[897] — Ss. 154, 156, 173(2) & (8) and 211 — FIR — Till police completes investigation pursuant to an FIR and finally lays the charge-sheet against the accused persons, if during the course of the investigation it finds the FIR to be false, it can continue with the investigation and reach its final conclusion as regards the real culprits

The respondent filed an FIR alleging that few persons from outside had entered the bedroom of her daughter-in-law and committed her murder. During the course of investigation the police found that murder was actually committed pursuant to a conspiracy hatched by the respondent and her other daughters-in-law. Accordingly the police sent a report to the court and continued the investigation on that basis after informing the court that it had registered another FIR. The respondent filed a protest complaint before CJM alleging that the police report was wholly unsustainable and reiterating that the person arrayed in her FIR were the real culprits. The CJM having rejected the protest complaint, the respondent challenged that order in revision before the High Court. The revision was allowed and the CJM was directed by the High Court to conduct an inquiry under Section 202 CrPC. The police proceeded with the investigation accordingly and on final conclusion thereof filed a charge-sheet against the respondent and her daughters-in-law, her son and few others for offence under Sections 302/34 IPC. In the meanwhile the respondent moved the High Court once again for quashing the criminal proceedings lodged against her and others. The High Court upheld the contention and quashed the criminal proceedings, taking the following view:

"When once recommendation of lodging of false case and cognizance thereof have been set aside by a court then there is no scope to proceed with the same allegation that too by the police officer making himself a party which is nothing but a double jeopardy."

(3)(v) Reliability and Validity of FIR - Falsity of/ Fabricated FIR (contd.)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The result of the factual development is that the respondent is allowed to persist with her complaint despite the conclusion reached by the police that the said complaint was false. But the course adopted by the court cannot disable the police to continue to investigate into the offence of murder of the deceased and to reach the final conclusion regarding the real culprits of the murder. The police completed their investigation only when the charge-sheet was finally laid against the respondent and others. The said case has to be legally adjudicated for which a trial by the Sessions Court is indispensable. Of course the legal position is that there cannot be two FIRs against the same accused in respect of the same case. But when there are rival versions in respect of the same episode, they would normally take the shape of two different FIRs and investigation can be carried on under both of them by the same investigating agency. Even that apart, the report submitted to the court by way of the subsequent FIR need be considered as an information submitted to the court regarding the new discovery made by the police during investigation that persons not named in the first FIR are the real culprits. To quash the said proceedings merely on the ground that final report had been laid in the first FIR is, to say the least, too technical. The ultimate object of every investigation is to find out whether the offences alleged have been committed and, if so, who have committed it. Even otherwise, the investigating agency is not precluded from further investigation in respect of an offence in spite of forwarding a report under sub-section (2) of Section 173 on a previous occasion. This is clear from Section 173(8) of the Code. (Paras 10 to 12). Kari Choudhary v. Sita Devi, (2002) 1 SCC 714: 2002 SCC (Cri) 269: AIR 2002 SC 441: 2002 Cri LJ 923: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 108.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2001]

[898] — Ss. 154, 156 and 173 — False complaint — Judicial review — Directions and investigation — On the basis of a false complaint by a non-existent person criminal case under Ss. 504/506 IPC, registered against petitioner — Non-bailable arrest warrant to arrest petitioner also obtained — Held, having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case the matter required investigation by an independent agency — Hence the Director of CBI directed to nominate a senior officer to investigate the circumstances under which the criminal case was registered and the person or persons responsible for having the said case registered against the petitioner in order to arrest him in connection with the said case — Such report directed to be filed within two months — Constitution of India — Art. 32. Uma Shankar Sitani v. Commr. of Police, Delhi, (1996) 11 SCC 714.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.C. Agrawal and Sujata V. Manohar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-3-1995]

[899] — Ss. 154 and 173 — FIR of doubtful authenticity — Names of four of the nine accused included by the informant in the FIR, not included in his brief statement to the investigating officer and not finding mention in the body of the inquest report — No explanation forthcoming for such omission — Such accused, held, rightly acquitted — Held, also casts serious doubt on veracity and authenticity of the FIR itself and the complicity of the other accused. Balaka Singh v. State of Punjab, (1975) 4 SCC 511: 1975 SCC (Cri) 601: AIR 1975 SC 1962: 1975 Supp SCR 129: 1975 Cri LJ 1734.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-4-1975]

[900] — S. 154 — False implication — On the basis of language used in the FIR it cannot be claimed that it was prepared by none else but the police in order to falsely implicate the accused — There is no necessity for employment of a particular language in the FIR — Mere fact that the maker of the FIR had come to know the name of the accused two years ago is also no ground to discard the FIR when he had actually witnessed the entire occurrence. Hari Om v. State of U.P., 1993 Supp (2) SCC 1: 1993 SCC (Cri) 396: 1993 Cri LJ 1383: (1993) 1 Crimes 294.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and S. Mohan, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-1993]

[901] — S. 154 — FIR — Credibility of — Held, absence of the name of the eyewitness therefrom is inconsequential when the same had been lodged by a person who was not an eyewitness — Further held, on facts, where there was practically no cross-examination of the eyewitness so far as the assault on the deceased was concerned, allegations of fabrication of FIR could not be proved (Paras 6 and 7). Shamsuddin v. State of M.P., (2003) 12 SCC 693.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2003]

[902] — S. 154 — FIR — Where FIR is recorded by Investigating Officer as narrated by eyewitness, court should not start with a presumption that it was false or fabricated — Testimony of the eyewitness found to be trustworthy — On facts held, FIR not fabricated — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114, Ill (e). Pattipati Venkaiah v. State of A.P., (1985) 4 SCC 80: 1985 SCC (Cri) 464: AIR 1985 SC 1715.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-1985]

[903] — S. 154 — FIR — FIR being in a neat and clean handwriting — Inference regarding — Held, fact that FIR is in a neat and clean handwriting cannot always lead to conclusion that said report was prepared by police officer or at his dictation — If handwriting of writer of information is neat and clean and he could express himself clearly, no fault could be found against such writing (Paras 25 and 26). Patai v. State of U.P., (2010) 4 SCC 429.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dr. M.K. Sharma and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision : 30-3-2010]

[904] — S. 154 — Neatly written and detailed FIR alleged to have been written within an hour of the murder, held, makes doubtful such fact of early reporting — Absence of entry in FIR, as to when it was sent to Magistrate concerned, held, assumes great significance and supports the defence plea that the FIR was drawn up much later than alleged. Datar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1975) 4 SCC 272: 1975 SCC (Cri) 530: AIR 1974 SC 1193: 1974 Cri LJ 908: (1974) 11 ACC 262.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-1973]

[905] — S. 154 — Failure of informant, father of the two deceased victims of murder, to withstand narration of the murder in Court does not justify the inference that he was a person of weak intellect who could not have dictated the detailed FIR. Sone Lal v. State of U.P., (1978) 4 SCC 302: 1978 SCC (Cri) 587: AIR 1978 SC 1142: 1978 Cri LJ 1122: 1978 ALJ 530.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-1978]

[906] — S. 154 — FIR — Reliability — FIR lodged on the basis of a report prepared by another person at the spot — Held, that by itself would not affect the prosecution version unless it is shown that the writer had some oblique motive — FIR naming the eyewitnesses lodged within 2 hours of the incident, the police station being 4 miles from place of occurrence — Investigating Officer reaching the spot within 2 hours of lodging of FIR — Version of occurrence in FIR same as stated in court — Held, there was no scope for concoction of a false case leaving out the real culprits. Ram Asrey v. State of U. P., 1993 Supp (4) SCC 218: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1164: (1993) 2 Crimes 339.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-1993]

[907] — S. 154 — Merely because two members of victim's family talked about giving the complaint and drafted the same it could not be said that there was consultation before filing the FIR. State of U.P. v. Nahar Singh, (1998) 3 SCC 561: 1998 SCC (Cri) 850: AIR 1998 SC 1328.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-1998]

(vi) FIR and Time

Synopsis

1. Generally 295
2. Ante-timed FIR 296
3. Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate (i.e. the report as required to be sent to Magistrate under S. 157 r/w S. 158) 303
4. Delay in lodging/filing FIR 317
5. Non-mention of time of dispatch in FIR 364
6. Promptness/Haste in filing FIR 365

1. Generally

[908] — Ss. 154, 156 & 157 and 162 — FIR — Timing of — When may be filed — Held, FIR need not precede the information regarding commission of cognizable offence received by the officer in charge of a police station which requires him to reach the place of occurrence as early as possible

When an information is received by an officer in charge of a police station, he in terms of the provisions of CrPC is expected to reach the place of occurrence as early as possible. It is not necessary for him to take that step only on the basis of a first information report. An information received in regard to commission of a cognizable offence is not required to be preceded by a first information report. Duty of the State to protect the life of an injured as also an endeavour on the part of the responsible police officer to reach the place of occurrence in a situation of this nature is his implicit duty and responsibility. If some incident had taken place in a bus, the officers of Road Transport Corporation also could not ignore the same. (Para 11). Animireddy Venkata Ramana v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (2008) 5 SCC 368: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 600: AIR 2008 SC 1603: 2008 Cri LJ 2038.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

(3)(vi)1. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Generally (contd.)

[909] — S. 154 — Allegation that FIR was not recorded at the time it was alleged to be recorded — Victim stating that his brother (PW 9) accompanied him to hospital after the incident whereas PW 9 stating that he had gone to police station to lodge FIR — Held, this discrepancy does not demolish the entire prosecution case — Having regard to the fact that the FIR was recorded at 12.15 p.m., there was a possibility of PW 9 lodging the report after leaving his brother in hospital at 11.45 a.m. — Thus, there was a sufficient time gap of half an hour (Para 4). Jagdish v. State of Haryana, (2005) 11 SCC 146: AIR 2005 SC 2576: 2005 Cri LJ 3073.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-2005]

2. Ante-timed FIR

See also Section 154, '(3)(vi)4. Delay in lodging/filing FIR', below

[910] — S. 154 — Version given in FIR fully supported by testimony of eyewitnesses — Ante-timed fardbeyan — Allegation of — Held on facts, not made out

The informant's fardbeyan was recorded at 10.00 a.m. on 22-1-1999 i.e. the date of occurrence. The inquest report was prepared on the same day at 1925 hours and the case number was also mentioned. Post-mortem was thereafter conducted at 2200 hours.

Held :

The plea that the fardbeyan was ante-timed has not been substantiated. The fardbeyan was recorded on the date of occurrence and filed at the indicated time and the case had been instituted on the basis of the said fardbeyan. Finding recorded by the High Court that the fardbeyan was not ante-timed is amply supported by evidence on record and no adverse view as claimed by the accused-appellants can be taken. (Para 14). Anil Sharma v. State of Jharkhand, (2004) 5 SCC 679: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1706: AIR 2004 SC 2294: 2004 Cri LJ 2527.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-2004]

[911] — S. 154 — Ante-timed FIR — Surnames of the appellants not disclosed by the informant nor did he name any other miscreant — But their surnames and name of another miscreant given in the formal FIR prepared on the basis of such statement of the informant — Held, in the peculiar facts and circumstances, which remained unexplained, FIR was not prepared at the time alleged by the prosecution but was outcome of the investigation. Ravindra v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 6 SCC 609: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1527: AIR 1998 SC 3031.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-1998]

[912] — S. 154 — Ante-timed FIR — Witness who claimed to have lodged the FIR not shown in the station diary to have visited the police station and lodged the report — Accused not known to him before the incident — Accused arrested two days after the occurrence and no explanation given therefor — In the circumstances, the statement of the witness that he lodged the FIR promptly and disclosed the name of the accused becomes absolutely doubtful and must be rejected. Mohanlal Gangaram Gehani v. State of Maharashtra, (1982) 1 SCC 700: 1982 SCC (Cri) 334: AIR 1982 SC 839: 1982 Cri LJ 630(2): 1982 MLJ (Cri) 431.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, D.A. Desai and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-2-1982]

[913] — S. 154 — Ante-timed FIR — Inference regarding, from non-mention of FIR number and name of complainant (PW 1) in inquest panchnama, when cannot be drawn — After police arrived at the scene of occurrence, complainant was sent to police station and during his absence from the scene of occurrence, the inquest panchnama was prepared — Complaint of PW 1 was registered at the police station on the basis of his statement — Held on facts, as at the time of preparing panchnama, neither the FIR number nor name of the complainant was known to police, the same could not be mentioned therein and even assuming it was known, such circumstance would not probabilise the defence version that the FIR was ante-timed in view of unequivocal, reliable and confidence-inspiring testimony of the complainant — Having regard to the events of circumstances, held on facts, the occurrence had actually taken place at about 1.15 p.m., as deposed by PWs, in consequence of which deceased died and FIR was registered on the basis of statement of the complainant at 2.40 p.m. at the police station — Therefore, defence case that the FIR was ante-timed to facilitate introduction of the alleged eyewitnesses cannot be sustained (Paras 9 to 13). Rajesh v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 4 SCC 426: AIR 2002 SC 1412: 2002 Cri LJ 1821.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-3-2002]

Meharaj Singh (L/Nk.) v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391, distinguished

See also Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450

[914] — S. 154 — Ante-timed FIR — Plea as to — Sustainability — Occurrence took place on 27-6-1995 in the morning — All material witnesses examined by IO on that very day — Post-mortem examination held at 3 p.m. on that day — The Magistrate who received FIR merely made a mistake in putting the relevant date as 26-6-1995 instead of 27-6-1995 — Thus, the contention as to ante-timed FIR was not sustainable — Hence, rejected (Paras 13 and 14). Mahendra Singh v. State of M.P., (2007) 9 SCC 796: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 583.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2007]

[915] — S. 154 — FIR — Ante-timed FIR — Contention — Sustainability — Incident occurring at about 6.15 p.m., while FIR registered at 7.35 p.m. — Hence held, there was no question of ante-timing of FIR (Para 13). Ramvir v. State of U.P., (2009) 15 SCC 254: 2009 Cri LJ 4155: (2009) 80 AIC 172 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-7-2009]

[916] — S. 154 — FIR — Ante-timed FIR — Contention of, if made out — Contention raised on premise that PW 8 got his father admitted at 1.35 p.m., whereas FIR was lodged at 1.50 p.m., and half an hour was at least needed to commute from hospital to police station, and besides, the Head Constable reached hospital at about 5 p.m. — Held, said contention cannot be sustained because by 1.30 p.m./1.40 p.m. the accused were arrested; they were produced before the doctor and medically examined; PW 12 and other witnesses were examined; and FIR was received by Magistrate concerned on same day — Moreover, the IO was not examined on the said point — Further held, even assuming it to be so, fact that incident had occurred was not disputed — Two accused had accepted their presence — If occurrence stands admitted, even if there is some delay in filing FIR, the same would not render prosecution case suspicious

It was contended that the FIR was ante-dated and ante-timed. Such a contention was raised inter alia on the premise that the first informant got his father admitted in General Hospital, Nanaul at about 1.35 p.m. whereas the FIR was lodged at about 1.50 p.m. at Ateli having regard to the fact that one has to take at least half an hour to reach Ateli from General Hospital, in his own conveyance and also having regard to the fact that Head Constable K (PW 13) reached the hospital at about 5.00 p.m. The said contention cannot be sustained having regard to the fact that by 1.30 p.m. or 1.40 p.m. even the accused persons were arrested; they had been produced before Dr. G and they had been examined; even PW 12 and other witnesses were also examined. The FIR might have been recorded at a later stage. But the information about the occurrence must have been given by PW 8 to the officer in charge of Ateli Police Station prior thereto. Even a copy of the FIR was received by the Magistrate concerned at about 10.30 p.m. on the same day. Furthermore, the investigating officers were not cross-examined on that point. Even assuming that the same was ante-timed or ante-dated, the fact that an incident had occurred was not disputed. At least two of the accused persons accepted their presence. The defence story is that two accused persons had sustained injuries at the hands of the prosecution witness L (PW 12). If occurrence of the incident stands admitted, even if some delay has been caused in writing of the FIR, the same would not render the entire prosecution case suspicious. (Paras 43 to 45). Ram Pat v. State of Haryana, (2009) 7 SCC 614: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 488: (2009) 79 AIC 98 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-2009]

[917] — S. 154 — FIR — FIR, if ante-timed — Delay in sending of FIR to the Magistrate — If fatal — PW 1 had made certain statements which went beyond the record viz. holding of inquest before the FIR was recorded and was examined ten years after the occurrence — FIR sent to Magistrate after twenty-four hours — Post-mortem examination held on the date of occurrence — Inference that may be drawn — Held, it is possible that PW 1 because of lapse of time had made certain statements which went beyond the record — Number of accused persons in FIR might have also been put by investigating officer at a later point of time — Fact that post-mortem examination had been held promptly itself went a long way to establish genesis of the occurrence — In a case of this nature delay in sending of FIR to the Magistrate may not, by itself, be held to be fatal — Therefore, submission that the FIR was ante-timed cannot be accepted (Para 44). Akbar Sheikh v. State of W.B., (2009) 7 SCC 415: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 431.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

[918] — S. 154 — Ante-timed FIR — Whether the FIR was ante-timed — Determination of — External checks — List of external checks given in Meharaj Singh case not exhaustive — Site map prepared at the spot in the presence of the first informant giving crime case number and sanha entry maintained at the police station giving all the relevant contents of the FIR are also external checks — Non-mention of name of the accused who hurled bomb on the deceased after the first informant left for the police station lending credence to the prosecution case that the FIR was promptly lodged — Non-mention of names of the accused in requisition application for post mortem would not by itself be a circumstance to rule out the prompt filing of the FIR. Girish Yadav v. State of M.P., (1996) 8 SCC 186: 1996 SCC (Cri) 552: AIR 1996 SC 3098.

(3)(vi)2. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Ante-timed FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-1996]

But see Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450

[919] — S. 154 — Ante-timed FIR — Whether the FIR was ante-timed and ante-dated — Positive checks by way of contemporaneous record — Occurrence taking place at 6.30 p.m. — Inquest report prepared after sometime in the morgue of the hospital and seizure list prepared at 12.30 o'clock — Both the documents giving nature of offence, criminal case No., etc. indicating that the FIR was registered prior to preparation of these documents — Consequently it cannot be said that the FIR was ante-timed or that it was not recorded as suggested by the prosecution. Ram Sanjiwan Singh v. State of Bihar, (1996) 8 SCC 552: 1996 SCC (Cri) 701: AIR 1996 SC 3265.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1996]

[920] — S. 154 — Anti-timed FIR — Statement in FIR that both the victims died in the occurrence having received bullet injuries — On fact held, finding of the trial court that FIR was anti-timed as the first informant had no knowledge of the death of the victims at the time of lodging of FIR is, on facts, not sustainable (Para 17). Ram Kumar v. State of Haryana, 1995 Supp (1) SCC 248: 1995 SCC (Cri) 355: AIR 1995 SC 280: (1995) 32 ACC 47.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-1994]

[921] — S. 154 — FIR — Alleged to be ante-timed — Allegation based on evidence of an illiterate rustic lady — Held on facts, cannot be accepted as minor variance in her statement should not be given primacy when evidence itself was recorded long time after and it should not be made basis for coming to a conclusion that FIR was ante-timed (Para 12). Anil Kumar v. State of U.P., 2005 SCC (Cri) 178: 2004 All LJ 3779.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2004]

[922] — S. 154 — FIR — Alleged to be ante-timed — Allegation based on evidence of an illiterate rustic lady — Held on facts, cannot be accepted as minor variance in her statement should not be given primacy when evidence itself was recorded long time after and it should not be made basis for coming to a conclusion that FIR was ante-timed (Para 12). Anil Kumar v. State of U.P., (2004) 13 SCC 257: 2005 SCC (Cri) 178: AIR 2004 SC 4662: 2004 Cri LJ 4881.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2004]

[923] — S. 154 — FIR — Ante-timed — Held on facts, not ante-timed

In this case the contention that the FIR was made 15 days after the incident cannot be accepted. The incident occurred on 30-10-1988. Evidence of the doctor of the hospital indicated that on 11-11-1988 he had medically examined the victim who was brought to the hospital by a Constable. The requisition slip carried by the Constable indicated that the FIR preceded 1-11-1988 when the victim and his wife (who had also sustained some injuries while attempting to save her husband from assault) were brought to the hospital. In the circumstances the FIR cannot be said to be ante-timed. (Para 18). Asharam v. State of M.P., (2007) 11 SCC 164: AIR 2007 SC 2594: (2007) 56 AIC 180 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-2007]

[924] — S. 154 — FIR — Ante-timed FIR — Determination of — Held, whether the first information report is an ante-timed one or not must be considered having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case — In the instant case FIR was transcribed by PW 8 from the oral statement made by PW 1 and it contained all the material particulars — Very fact that it was recorded almost immediately after taking place of the occurrence, the question of its being an ante-timed one would not arise (Para 23). Budh Singh v. State of M.P., (2007) 10 SCC 496: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 64: (2007) 57 AIC 134 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-5-2007]

[925] — S. 154 — FIR — FIR whether ante-timed — Determination of — FIR lodged within 1 hour and 45 minutes of occurrence, wherein two people were murdered, one received serious injuries and one minor injuries — Police station at a distance of 8 km from the place of occurrence — Special report forwarded to the Magistrate next day — Hence, contention that FIR was ante-timed which was supported by the fact that no crime number had been mentioned in the letter requesting the doctor to conduct post-mortem — Held, after such a ghastly crime was committed, it was but natural for PW 1 to report the matter as early as possible to the police — It was also necessary to get necessary medical assistance for the injured persons, particularly having regard to the nature of injuries suffered by them — PW 1 had travelled in a bullock-cart to the outskirts of the village and thereafter took a tractor to travel up to the police station — He returned to his village on a cycle — Further held, crime number was mentioned in the inquest report and the time of lodging FIR was also mentioned therein — Crime number was not necessary to be mentioned on the challan of the dead bodies or letters to the doctors for the medical examination of the injured persons and for obtaining post-mortem report of the deceased — Contention rejected (Paras 11, 12 and 13). Hori Lal v. State of U.P., (2006) 13 SCC 79: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 581: (2007) 50 AIC 979 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1181.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-2006]

[926] — S. 154 — FIR — If on facts antedated — Receipt of the FIR by the Magistrate after about two days, held, not ipso facto a proof of the FIR being belated — More so when the eyewitness (the widow) had asserted to have seen the entire incident and to have gone to the police station by the named vehicle (Matador) with the dead body and lodged the FIR on the date and at the time as specified, and despite searching cross-examination the defence had failed to elicit any omission or contradiction in her statement. Madru Singh v. State of M.P., (1997) 11 SCC 506: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1232: AIR 1997 SC 3527.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, S.P. Kurdukar and M. Jagannadha Rao, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-9-1997]

[927] — S. 154 — FIR — Whether ante-timed — FIR containing such details of weapons used and wounds caused as could not have been known without proper medical examination — Such FIR, held on facts, was ante-timed and was a fabricated document

The doctor did not notice any contusion but on external examination he only noticed an incised injury on the left leg of the deceased. However, he detected that there was a fracture. Neither the doctor who examined him in the first instance nor the doctor who conducted the post-mortem indicated as to how the fracture would have been caused except saying that the injuries Nos. 1 to 4 were caused by sharp-edged weapon. The evidence of the doctor who conducted the post-mortem also would indicate that the incised injury on the leg could have resulted in fracture but strangely in the FIR it is mentioned that the leg was twisted in such a way that it resulted in fracture. None of the doctors spoke about this possibility. Obviously from the mere external examination of the injury, no definite cause could be given at that time. Therefore it could only be explained that not knowing the cause of the fracture, it was vaguely mentioned that the leg was twisted. Further it is rather intriguing as to how the informant could mention in the FIR that there was a fracture of the left leg. A layman cannot detect a fracture by himself unless he is told or comes to know after medical examination that there was such a fracture. This also shows that the version in the FIR in which such details, as mentioned above, were given, must have been a result of consultations among the interested persons after coming to know the nature of injuries. Dharam Singh v. State of Punjab, 1993 Supp (3) SCC 532: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1059: AIR 1993 SC 319: 1993 Cri LJ 150.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-1992]

[928] — S. 154 — FIR — Whether ante-timed — Murder — In the enclosed report prepared in respect of dead body there was an inscription that in the column meant for the person who gave information of the dead body the name of a member of Home Guard (who was on duty at the place of occurrence) was mentioned — Inquest report prepared at 8.30 a.m. — In the entry in general diary of the police station, made at 1 a.m., report of the said member of Home Guard was mentioned — That entry in the general diary not produced — There was nothing to show that that entry in general diary was the FIR — That member of Home Guard was neither examined by prosecution, nor was he cited by the defence as a defence witness or a witness to be examined under S. 311 CrPC — FIR, relied upon by prosecution, based on a statement furnished by PW 1 and lodged at 2 a.m. — FIR reaching the Magistrate next day — In the circumstances held, FIR relied upon by prosecution cannot be said to be ante-timed and not the real one merely because of non-examination of the said member of Home Guard (Paras 6 to 10). Gopal v. State of U.P., (2002) 9 SCC 744.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-2-2001]

[929] — S. 154 — FIR — Whether ante-timed — Bodies of deceased reaching hospital in town 28-29 km from place of incident about 15-16 hours after incident — Incident taking place at dusk — Explanation being that police jeeps carrying bodies had broken down about 13-14 km from hospital town, hence the delay — Held, explanation acceptable and it could not be said on the basis of said delay that FIR was ante-timed (Para 23). Jaishree Yadav v. State of U.P., (2005) 9 SCC 788: AIR 2004 SC 4443: 2004 Cri LJ 4826.

(3)(vi)2. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Ante-timed FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, S.B. Sinha and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2004]

[930] — S. 154 — FIR — Whether ante-timed — Radio transmission made to senior officers by investigating officer informing them of incident involving murder of prominent person of area concerned — Particulars that may be contained — Held, in such communication it is not necessary that names of all persons or other particulars contained in complaint ought to have been mentioned or that non-mentioning of such particulars in such communication gives rise to inference that at time of transmission investigating agency was not in know of names of all the accused — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 (Paras 17 and 18). Jaishree Yadav v. State of U.P., (2005) 9 SCC 788: AIR 2004 SC 4443: 2004 Cri LJ 4826.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, S.B. Sinha and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2004]

[931] — S. 154 — FIR — Whether ante-timed — Requisition sent to doctor to conduct post-mortem not containing all the particulars found in inquest report and complaint, like particulars of case, weapon used and names of accused persons, etc. — Held, the same would not lead to the conclusion that FIR was ante-timed (Para 15). Jaishree Yadav v. State of U.P., (2005) 9 SCC 788: AIR 2004 SC 4443: 2004 Cri LJ 4826.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, S.B. Sinha and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2004]

[932] — S. 154 — FIR — Whether ante-timed — Time of receipt of special report sent to Jurisdictional Magistrate not noted — Other facts as to delivery of special report, however, consistent and credible — Held, mere non-noting of said time would not lead to conclusion that FIR was ante-timed (Para 15). Jaishree Yadav v. State of U.P., (2005) 9 SCC 788: AIR 2004 SC 4443: 2004 Cri LJ 4826.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, S.B. Sinha and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2004]

[933] — S. 154 — Scooter robbery — Scooter not belonging to the first informant but given to him some time before the incident — Letters of English alphabet preceding the scooter number mentioned in the FIR but the first informant admitting that he did not give those letters in the FIR — Scar on forehead of one of the accused mentioned in the FIR but not visible to the first informant in the court — First informant making material improvements to make his claim of having seen the scar acceptable — Held, in the circumstances of the case, the FIR was prepared after the scooter was recovered by the police. Bhupinder Singh v. State of Punjab, 1996 SCC (Cri) 103.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-1995]

[934] — S. 154 — Time of lodging — If ante-time — Occurrence taking place around 11 a.m. and FIR claimed to have been given at 1.12 p.m. — FIR not containing Magistrate's endorsement regarding time of its receipt — But head constable deposing that special report despatched to the Magistrate at 1.20 p.m. itself through a constable and that General Diary contained an entry to that effect — In the circumstances held, the FIR cannot be said to have been given later than 1.12 p.m. and ante-dated to cover up the delay in making the report. Subash v. State of U.P., (1987) 3 SCC 331: 1987 SCC (Cri) 573: AIR 1987 SC 1222: 1987 Cri LJ 991.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Dutt and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-4-1987]

[935] — S. 154 — Time of lodging — If ante-time — Prosecution case that report made at 9.10 p.m. on the date of occurrence — No correction made on the date mentioned in the FIR — Police-officer's signature existing in more than one place under that very date — Prior report made at 4 p.m. on the same date, about which entry made in General Diary, also mentioning names of accused — In the circumstances held, High Court erred in doubting the FIR on the basis of surmise that there had been confabulation in the night and that the FIR had actually been lodged next morning. State of U.P. v. Ranjha Ram, (1986) 4 SCC 99: 1986 SCC (Cri) 374: AIR 1986 SC 1959: 1986 Cri LJ 1906.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-1986]

[936] — Ss. 154, 157 and 174 — FIR — Value of — Delay in lodging — Effect — Whether the FIR was ante-timed — Determination of — External checks — Delay in sending special report to the Magistrate or failure to send copy of the FIR to the Medical Officer along with the dead body for post-mortem and absence of its reference in inquest report can give rise to an inference that the FIR had been ante-timed — On facts, held, the FIR had been ante-timed and had not been recorded till the inquest proceedings were over at the spot by the Investigating Officer

FIR in a criminal case and particularly in a murder case is a vital and valuable piece of evidence for the purpose of appreciating the evidence led at the trial. The object of insisting upon prompt lodging of the FIR is to obtain the earliest information regarding the circumstance in which the crime was committed, including the names of the actual culprits and the parts played by them, the weapons, if any, used, as also the names of the eyewitnesses, if any. Delay in lodging the FIR often results in embellishment, which is a creature of an afterthought. On account of delay, the FIR not only gets bereft of the advantage of spontaneity, danger also creeps in of the introduction of a coloured version or exaggerated story. With a view to determine whether the FIR was lodged at the time it is alleged to have been recorded, the courts generally look for certain external checks. One of the checks is the receipt of the copy of the FIR, called a special report in a murder case, by the local Magistrate. If this report is received by the Magistrate late it can give rise to an inference that the FIR was not lodged at the time it is alleged to have been recorded, unless, of course the prosecution can offer a satisfactory explanation for the delay in despatching or receipt of the copy of the FIR by the local Magistrate. The second external check equally important is the sending of the copy of the FIR along with the dead body and its reference in the inquest report. Even though the inquest report, prepared under S. 174 CrPC, is aimed at serving a statutory function, to lend credence to the prosecution case, the details of the FIR and the gist of statements recorded during inquest proceedings get reflected in the report. The absence of those details is indicative of the fact that the prosecution story was still in an embryo state and had not been given any shape and that the FIR came to be recorded later on after due deliberations and consultations and was then ante-timed to give it the colour of a promptly lodged FIR. Meharaj Singh (L/Nk.) v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1994]

But see Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450

[937] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR if ante-timed — FIR allegedly recorded at 2.40 p.m. on the day of occurrence but received by the Magistrate on the next day at 10 a.m. — Held, in the circumstances of the case, the FIR was recorded on the next day after the case was converted to one under S. 302 IPC consequent upon the death of the injured and not on the day of occurrence as alleged by the prosecution. Devinder v. State of Haryana, 1997 SCC (Cri) 570: AIR 1997 SC 454: 1996 Cri LJ 4461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1996]

[938] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Ante-timed FIR — Delay in dispatch — Effect — Submission that FIR was ante-timed and ante-dated and brought into existence after due deliberations and consultations with the police; delay in sending copy of FIR to Ilaqa Magistrate; one accused M was arrested and detained in police station at 3.40 p.m. while the alleged occurrence took place at 4.45 p.m.; and the seizure memos prepared by the IO did not bear any crime number — Held, there is no dispute with the proposition that it is the duty of the Station House Officer to dispatch special report to the Ilaqa Magistrate as required under S. 157(2) — But, it is not possible to lay down any universal rule as to within what time the special report is required to be dispatched by the Station House Officer after recording FIR — Each case turns on its own facts — Delay contemplated under S. 157 of the Code for doubting the authenticity of FIR is not every delay but only extraordinary and unexplained delay — Delay in dispatch of FIR by itself is not a circumstance which can throw out the prosecution case in its entirety, particularly in cases where the prosecution provides cogent and reasonable explanation for the delay in dispatch of FIR — Existence of FIR and its time may become doubtful in cases where there is no satisfactory and proper explanation from the investigating agencies — In the instant case, PW 1 (son of deceased) stating that he rushed to the police station by a bicycle and lodged written FIR, Ext. Ka-1 within 11/2 hours of the incident — Distance between the place of occurrence and the police station about 9 km — He further stating that he took about 15-20 minutes to prepare his report and nobody advised him in preparation of the report and that he had gone to the police station alone — No reason discernible to disbelieve PW 1's version — Nothing unnatural and unusual in PW 1 stating the details of the incident in his written FIR, Ext. Ka-1 — Behavioural pattern and response of individuals in a given situation may differ from person to person — Bare reading of FIR does not disclose any manipulation and cannot be said to be a contrived one brought into existence after due deliberations — PW 7 (officer in charge of the police station) had rushed to the place of occurrence at about 6 p.m. where he found the dead body; inquest report was prepared on spot which duly mentioned lodging of FIR by PW 1 at 4.45 p.m. followed by dispatch of the dead body to the hospital which reached the hospital by 9.30 p.m. and the post-mortem examination at 9.30 a.m. on the next day in clear and unequivocal terms reveal that FIR was lodged at the time it is stated to have been recorded — It cannot be treated as an ante-timed and ante-dated one — In such circumstances, mere fact that crime number is not mentioned in the inquest report is of no significance — Further, next day being Sunday, the Ilaqa Magistrate received special report on Monday by dak — Moreover, M was arrested in connection with another case (Paras 7, 8, 10 to 15, 17 to 19 and 22). Mahmood v. State of U.P., (2007) 14 SCC 16: AIR 2008 SC 515: 2008 Cri LJ 696: (2008) 1 All LJ 248: (2008) 61 AIC 203 (SC).

(3)(vi)2. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Ante-timed FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-11-2007]

Meharaj Singh v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391; Anil Rai v. State of Bihar, (2001) 7 SCC 318: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1009; Alla China Apparao v. State of A.P., (2002) 8 SCC 440: 2003 SCC (Cri) 87, relied on

[939] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR — Ante-timed — Delay in sending FIR to Magistrate — Prosecution failing to clear doubt regarding date and time of recording the FIR — Held on facts, adverse inference can be drawn — Meharaj Singh case explained

The incident of murder had taken place on the intervening night of 18-5-1982, 19-5-1982. Complaint was lodged on the morning following the night of the occurrence. The defence produced a certified copy of the FIR received by the Court of the First Class Magistrate in which a note was written by the clerk of the court showing that it was received on 21-5-1982. The evidence of the date of sending the copy of FIR to the Magistrate's court was not adduced by the prosecution in spite of being given more than one opportunity. On 28-11-1984, it was noted that adverse inference will be drawn if the record was not produced. Yet, the prosecution failed to adduce proof. The Sessions Judge particularly adverted to the fact that the prosecution did not produce the original record of the police station relating to the receipt and dispatch of FIR in spite of an order passed to that effect. A specific suggestion was put to the SHO concerned that FIR was prepared 2 or 3 days after the occurrence which, however, was denied. The SHO admitted that no attempt was made to apprehend the accused on May 19 or 20. The crime number/FIR number was not found in the inquest report, site plan or the requisition sent to the hospital for post-mortem. No reference was made in the inquest report about the information, if any, furnished by PWs. Though the trial Judge was not careful enough in recording a specific finding that the prosecution failed to clear the doubt regarding the date and time of recording the FIR, in sum and substance, that was what the trial Judge purported to say.

Held :

The facts cast a serious doubt on the correctness of the FIR, especially the time and date of its recording. All this would support the defence version that FIR in which the names of the accused were mentioned would have probably come into existence much later. There is nothing in the decision of the Supreme Court in Shiv Ram v. State of U.P. which goes against the legal position laid down in Meharaj Singh case. No broad proposition can be said to have been enunciated in that later case that inordinate and unexplained delay in sending the FIR to the Magistrate would be an immaterial factor liable to be ignored altogether. (Paras 6 and 5.2). Thanedar Singh v. State of M.P., (2002) 1 SCC 487: 2002 SCC (Cri) 153: AIR 2002 SC 175: 2002 Cri LJ 254.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-10-2001]

Meharaj Singh v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391, relied on

Shiv Ram v. State of U.P., (1998) 1 SCC 149: 1998 SCC (Cri) 278, clarified and harmonised

See also Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450

[940] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR — Ante-timed — Necessity of production of general policy diary — Original general diary not produced despite the fact that a specific defence was raised that the FIR was ante-timed — Copy of FIR sent to Circle Officer after 4 days and to Court of Magistrate after 8 days of the incident — Held, production of general diary, wherein FIR was required to be taken down, was necessary when it was alleged to be ante-dated — Further, in a case of grave nature such delay in sending copy of FIR to the Magistrate was not proper — Police Act, 1861, S. 147. Jagdish Murav v. State of U.P., (2006) 12 SCC 626: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 234: (2006) 46 AIC 641 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2006]

Meharaj Singh v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391; Budh Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 9 SCC 731, relied on [941] — Ss. 154 and 174 — Ante-timed FIR — FIR lodged at 9.05 p.m. and the inquest report prepared on the following day — Non-mention of title of crime in the inquest report — Police reaching the place of occurrence at 11 p.m. — Held, in the circumstances FIR cannot be said to be ante-timed — Such minor omission is nothing but a bona fide error or casual approach on the part of the investigating agency which does not affect the substratum of the prosecution story. Shiv Ram v. State of U.P., (1998) 1 SCC 149: 1998 SCC (Cri) 278: AIR 1998 SC 49: 1998 Cri LJ 76.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-10-1997]

[942] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Ante-timed FIR — FIR allegedly lodged at 7.30 a.m. — Evidence of panch witness and inquest report showing that work of preparing inquest report started at 8 a.m. — Number of FIR given in inquest report and other panchnamas indicating that the FIR had come into existence before 8 a.m. — Merely because the FIR reached the Magistrate after three days its genuineness cannot be doubted. Sk. Ayub v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 9 SCC 521: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1055: AIR 1998 SC 1285.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-1998]

3. Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate
(i.e. the report as required to be sent to Magistrate under S. 157 r/w S. 158)

See also Section 154, '(3)(vi)2. Ante-timed FIR', above

[943] — S. 154 — Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate — Effect — Held on facts, that alone not fatal to prosecution case (Para 9). State of Punjab v. Hakam Singh, (2005) 7 SCC 408: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1679: 2005 Cri LJ 4111.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-2005]

[944] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in sending, to Ilaka Magistrate — Held on facts, merely because of some delay prosecution case would not become unreliable — Moreover, since no effort was made to elicit the reason for such delay, adverse inference cannot be drawn — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill. (g)

FIR was recorded on 29-10-1999 at about 11.00 a.m. and it reached the Magistrate on 30-10-1999 at about 12 noon.

Held :

It cannot be laid down as a rule of universal application that whenever there is some delay in sending the FIR to the Magistrate concerned, the prosecution version becomes unreliable. It would depend upon the facts of each case. In the instant case as appears from the records the investigation was taken up immediately and certain steps in investigation were taken. Therefore, the plea that there was no FIR in existence at the relevant time has no substance. Additionally, no question was asked of the investigating officer as to the reason for the alleged delayed dispatch of the FIR. Had this been done, the investigating officer could have explained the circumstances. That having not been done, no adverse inference can be drawn. (Para 13). Sunil Kumar v. State of Rajasthan, (2005) 9 SCC 283: AIR 2005 SC 1096: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1230: 2005 Cri LJ 1402.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-1-2005]

[945] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in sending to Magistrate — Report recorded at 3.25 p.m. on the basis of dying declaration for offence under Ss. 307 read with 148 and 149 Indian Penal Code but after his death offence converted into S. 302 read with Ss. 148 and 149 — Next morning report despatched to Magistrate — Held, there was no delay in sending the report. Dalbir Singh v. State of Punjab, (1987) 3 SCC 360: 1987 SCC (Cri) 519: AIR 1987 SC 1328: 1987 Cri LJ 1065.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Khalid and G.L. Oza, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-1987]

[946] — S. 154 — FIR — Once FIR is held to be fabricated or brought into existence long after the occurrence, the entire prosecution case would collapse — Omission to mention names of eyewitnesses in FIR giving minute details, and unexplained delay in despatch of the FIR to Magistrate besides other infirmities, held, would throw serious doubt on prosecution case. Marudanal Augusti v. State of Kerala, (1980) 4 SCC 425: 1980 SCC (Cri) 985: AIR 1980 SC 638: 1980 Cri LJ 446.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-1979]

[947] — S. 154 — FIR — Report to Village Munsif — Delay of one or two hours in making the report — Held, did not undermine the corroborative evidentiary value of FIR where the informant was terror-stricken and was overwhelmed with grief and the murderers, fully armed, were active and roaming about the village. Public Prosecutor, Govt. of A.P. v. Boya Jaggapuram Venkateswarlu, 1980 Supp SCC 480: 1981 SCC (Cri) 444: AIR 1980 SC 1876: 1980 Cri LJ 1301.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-1980]

[948] — S. 154 — Time of lodging FIR — Effect of delay in despatch of — On facts, delay reasonably explained — Hence no adverse inference can be drawn

Mere delay in despatch of the FIR, is not a circumstance which can throw out the prosecution case in its entirety. Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1976) 4 SCC 369: 1976 SCC (Cri) 646: AIR 1976 SC 2304: 1976 Cri LJ 1787.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, A.C. Gupta and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-1976]

(3)(vi)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate (i.e. the report as required to be sent to Magistrate under S. 157 r/w S. 158) (contd.)

[949] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Delay in sending copy of FIR to area Magistrate — Not material where FIR is shown to have been recorded promptly and investigation had started on that basis — Also delay not material when prosecution gives cogent and reasonable explanation for it — Doubt on authenticity of FIR can be based not on every delay but only on extraordinary and unexplained delay

The further contention based on the alleged delay in sending copy of the FIR to the Area Magistrate also has no substance. In the present case the FIR is shown to have been lodged within 15 minutes after the occurrence and most of the accused had been apprehended immediately. There does not appear to be any possibility of falsely implicating the accused persons. On facts also the courts below did not find any delay in despatch of the copy of the FIR to the Area Magistrate. (Para 21)

Section 157 CrPC is designed to keep the Magistrate informed of the investigation of such cognizable offence so as to be able to control the investigation and if necessary to give appropriate direction under Section 159. But where the FIR is shown to have actually been recorded without delay and investigation started on the basis of the FIR, the delay in sending the copy of the report to the Magistrate cannot by itself justify the conclusion that the investigation was tainted and the prosecution insupportable. Extraordinary delay in sending the copy of the FIR to the Magistrate can be a circumstance to provide a legitimate basis for suspecting that the FIR was recorded on a much later day than the stated day, affording sufficient time to the prosecution to introduce improvements and embellishment by setting up a distorted version of the occurrence. The delay contemplated under Section 157 CrPC for doubting the authenticity of the FIR is not every delay but only extraordinary and unexplained delay. However, in the absence of prejudice to the accused the omission by the police to submit the report does not vitiate the trial. Delay in despatch of FIR by itself is not a circumstance which can throw out the prosecution's case in its entirety, particularly when it is found on facts that the prosecution had given a very cogent and reasonable explanation for the delay in despatch of the FIR. (Para 20). Anil Rai v. State of Bihar, (2001) 7 SCC 318: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1009: AIR 2001 SC 3173.

Pala Singh v. State of Punjab, (1972) 2 SCC 640: 1973 SCC (Cri) 55: AIR 1979 SC 2679; Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1976) 4 SCC 369: 1976 SCC (Cri) 646: AIR 1976 SC 2304, relied on

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas[2] and R.P. Sethi[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-2001]

[950] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Delay in sending FIR to Magistrate — Explanation given that due to holidays court being closed, FIR could reach the Magistrate only on reopening of the court after the holidays — Held, court holidays cannot be a ground for the delay in the FIR reaching the Magistrate, because requirement of law is that the FIR should reach the Magistrate concerned without any undue delay — Explanation neither convincing nor acceptable (Para 4). State of Rajasthan v. Teja Singh, (2001) 3 SCC 147: 2001 SCC (Cri) 439: AIR 2001 SC 990: 2001 Cri LJ 1176.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-2-2001]

[951] — S. 154 — Delay in sending FIR report to Magistrate — Defective investigation — Effect of — FIR lodged at about 10.50 a.m. however, the inquest report showed that the inquest was started at 10.30 a.m. on the same day — No explanation offered for the discrepancies — Moreover, Magistrate received FIR after four days — Delay not explained — Held, it is true that a faulty investigation cannot be a determinative factor and would not be sufficient to throw out a credible prosecution version — But in the instant case, it was required to be explained by the investigating officer by plausible evidence on record, as to how the inquest was undertaken at a point of time when the FIR was not in existence — Further held, the statutory requirement under S. 157 CrPC is that the report has to be sent forthwith: that itself shows the urgency attached to the sending of the report — If the FIR is timely lodged and investigation is undertaken immediately, in a given case, the delayed receipt of the report by the Magistrate would not be fatal to the prosecution — It would depend upon the facts of each case — In a given case it is open to the prosecution to establish by evidence the reasons for the delayed dispatch or delayed receipt — Therefore, the cumulative effect of the factors highlighted above would show that the prosecution miserably failed to establish the accusations — Hence appellants acquitted (Paras 9 to 12). Motilal v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 7 SCC 454: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 444.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

[952] — S. 154 — Delay in transmitting FIR to Magistrate — Allegations of — Absence of any evidence as to when FIR reached the Magistrate — Non-cross-examination of IO pertaining thereto — Effect — Held, in absence of any cogent evidence led by defence to substantiate its claim, it cannot be held that there was any such delay — Besides, said issue was not raised before courts below — Furthermore, no suggestion was put to IO regarding thereto, which if given would have given him an opportunity to explain as to when it was sent and received by the Magistrate — New plea (Para 28). Satish Narayan Sawant v. State of Goa, (2009) 17 SCC 724: 2009 Cri LJ 4655: (2010) 1 ECrN 464: (2009) 82 AIC 89 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2009]

Dinesh Kumar v. State of Rajasthan, (2008) 8 SCC 270: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 472; State of U.P. v. Krishna Gopal, (1988) 4 SCC 302: 1988 SCC (Cri) 928; Anwar v. State of Haryana, (1997) 9 SCC 766: 1997 SCC (Cri) 762; Ravi Kumar v. State of Punjab, (2005) 9 SCC 315: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 738; Munivel v. State of T.N., (2006) 9 SCC 394: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 581, relied on [953] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Delay of 7 days in sending copy of the FIR to the Magistrate — Delay not explained by the IO — Defence plea that the witnesses could not identify the assailants and only after recovery of the alleged pistol they were named as assailants in the FIR — Considering the defence of the accused in the light of evidence on record and previous enmity between the parties, held, prosecution failed to establish guilt of the accused beyond reasonable doubt — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 307/34. Chhotu v. State of Haryana, 1996 SCC (Cri) 1161.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-1996]

[954] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in transmitting the FIR and its reaching the Magistrate, held, not fatal in all cases — However, if the genesis of the complaint is in doubt then promptness in receipt of FIR by Magistrate assumes importance (Para 34). Chikkarangaiah v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 17 SCC 497: 2009 Cri LJ 4667: (2010) 1 ECrN 427: (2009) 82 AIC 233 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-2010]

[955] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR — Delay in despatching FIR to Magistrate — If otherwise reasonable and otherwise trustworthy, that would not be fatal to the prosecution case

While it is true that Section 157 of the Code makes it obligatory on the officer in charge of the police station to send a report of the information received to a Magistrate forthwith, but that does not mean and imply to denounce and discard an otherwise positive and trustworthy evidence on record. Technicality ought not to outweigh the course of justice — if the court is otherwise convinced and has come to a conclusion as regards the truthfulness of the prosecution case, mere delay, which can otherwise be ascribed to be reasonable, would not by itself demolish the prosecution case. The statutory obligation warrants utmost promptitude and in the event of the delay not being an unreasonable one and in the event of availability of some explanation therefor, which is otherwise acceptable as well, question of prosecution being tainted would not arise. FIR sets the investigation rolling and in the event of there being some delay somewhere and with the acceptable explanation, the delay cannot be said to vitiate the trial by reason therefor. (Paras 13 and 16). Munshi Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 351: 2002 SCC (Cri) 175: AIR 2001 SC 3031.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-2001]

Shiv Ram v. State of U.P., (1998) 1 SCC 149: 1998 SCC (Cri) 278; State of Karnataka v. Moin Patel, (1996) 8 SCC 167: 1996 SCC (Cri) 632: AIR 1996 SC 3041, relied on [956] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Delay in despatching FIR to Magistrate — If established — Occurrence taking place on 3-4-1988, while FIR alleged to have been received by court on 12-4-1988 i.e. after about nine days — Held, FIR register (Ext. 84) indicates that copy of FIR was sent to Magistrate concerned on 3-4-1988 itself — Further held, if evidence of eyewitnesses is found cogent, convincing and credible, delay in receipt of copy of FIR by court concerned, insignificant (Paras 42 and 24). Pandurang Chandrakant Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 10 SCC 773: (2009) 83 AIC 38 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2009]

[957] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Delay in lodging and/or despatching FIR to Ilaqa Magistrate, and/or discrepancy between ocular and medical evidence — Effect — Held, not fatal to prosecution case in all circumstances — However, in the instant case combined effect thereof leads to conclusion that prosecution had failed to substantiate accusations — View taken by High Court directing acquittal being a possible view, no interference therewith called for — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 r/w S. 34 (Paras 3 and 5). State of Punjab v. Avtar Singh, (2009) 10 SCC 800: (2009) 1 ECrN 658 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, C.K. Thakker and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-10-2008]

(3)(vi)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate (i.e. the report as required to be sent to Magistrate under S. 157 r/w S. 158) (contd.)

[958] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Delay in receipt of occurren ce report by Magistrate — Effect — Held, delay itself does not make the investigation tainted — Further held, where an explanation is offered by the prosecution for the delay, that has to be tested — Unexplained delay by itself may not be fatal, but is certainly a relevant aspect which can be taken note of while considering the role of the accused — Delay in sending the FIR to the Magistrate sometimes affords opportunity to introduce improvement and embellishment thereby resulting in a distorted version of the occurrence — Hence, S. 157 mandates that the report should be sent to the Magistrate forthwith, which itself indicates urgency (Para 13). State of Kerala v. Anilachandran, (2009) 13 SCC 565: AIR 2009 SC 1866: (2009) 77 AIC 46 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, L.S. Panta and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

Pala Singh v. State of Punjab, (1972) 2 SCC 640: 1973 SCC (Cri) 55; Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1976) 4 SCC 369: 1976 SCC (Cri) 646, relied on [959] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Delay in sending special report — By itself can be of no consequence (Paras 15 and 17). Munnawar v. State of U.P., (2010) 5 SCC 451.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

[960] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Delay in sending copy of FIR to Magistrate — Effect of — Held, not always fatal to prosecution — However, said delay is of significance when genesis of prosecution case is doubtful (Para 34). Chikkarangaiah v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 17 SCC 497: 2009 Cri LJ 4667: (2010) 1 ECrN 427: (2009) 82 AIC 233 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-2010]

[961] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR — Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate — Effect of — Held, such delay does not by itself render prosecution case doubtful — Explanation offered for delay and possibility of such explanation has to be looked into — Whether delay led to false implication has to be assessed from facts and circumstances (Para 22). Narinder Kumar v. State of J&K, (2010) 9 SCC 259: AIR 2010 SC 3015: 2010 Cri LJ 3905.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2010]

[962] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Forwarding of special report to Magistrate — Purpose/Necessity of — Held, forwarding of the report is indispensable and absolute and it has to be forwarded with earliest dispatch which intention is implicit in use of word "forthwith" in S. 157 which means promptly and without any undue delay — Real purpose is to avoid possibility of improvement in prosecution case and introduction of distorted version by deliberations and consultation and to enable Magistrate concerned to keep a watch on progress of investigation — However, it cannot be laid down as a rule of universal application that whenever there is some delay in sending FIR to Magistrate, prosecution version becomes unreliable — It would depend upon facts of each case — In the instant case, occurrence had taken place on 16-12-2001, while report received on 20-12-2001 — However, High Court rightly observed that if there was any lapse on the part of investigating officer, that would not affect credibility of prosecution version — Words and Phrases — "Forthwith" (Paras 8 to 10). Aqeel Ahmad v. State of U.P., (2008) 16 SCC 372: AIR 2009 SC 1271: (2009) 2 All LJ 178: (2009) 75 AIC 248 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-2008]

Pala Singh v. State of Punjab, (1972) 2 SCC 640: 1973 SCC (Cri) 55; State of Karnataka v. Moin Patel, (1996) 8 SCC 167: 1996 SCC (Cri) 632; considered and relied on

Rabindra Mahto v. State of Jharkhand, (2006) 10 SCC 432: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 592, relied on

[963] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR — Delay in its dispatch to and/or receipt by the court — Held, alone cannot be taken to be a ground for throwing out the prosecution case if otherwise the same is proved by unimpeachable evidence — However, this may be a ground to discard the prosecution case, if the court otherwise doubts the veracity of the same

It cannot be said that there was any delay at all in lodging the FIR, much less an inordinate one, as the incident took place on 11-9-1996 at 2130 hours and the fardbeyan was recorded in the hospital at 0045 hours on the same night and dispatched to the police station through special messenger where formal FIR was drawn at 0120 hours on the fateful night itself. The FIR was received by the Magistrate in the morning at 0730 hours on 12-9-1996. Hence, there was no delay at all either in its dispatch to or receipt by the court. Further, even in cases where there is some delay in dispatch of the FIR to the court and its receipt by it, that alone can in no case be taken to be a ground for throwing out the prosecution case if otherwise the same is proved by unimpeachable evidence. However, in cases where the court otherwise doubts the veracity of the prosecution case, this may be taken to be one of the grounds to discard the same. (Paras 8 and 9). Ashok Kumar Pandey v. State of Delhi, (2002) 4 SCC 76: 2002 SCC (Cri) 728: AIR 2002 SC 1468.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-3-2002]

[964] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR — Delay in sending FIR to Magistrate — Incident occurred on 3-8-1994 — FIR reached the Magistrate on 5-8-1994 — In view of the proper explanation offered for the delay, held, the plea of delayed dispatch of FIR did not have any substance

The delay in sending the FIR to the Magistrate cannot be said to be unusual when proper explanation has been offered for the delay. The plea of delayed dispatch has been rightly held to be without any substance. (Para 32). Bodhraj v. State of J&K, (2002) 8 SCC 45: AIR 2002 SC 3164.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ruma Pal and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-9-2002]

[965] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Requirement to forward forthwith copy of FIR to Magistrate — Delay in sending the copy — Effect — Does not render the entire prosecution case doubtful but would put the court on guard — Delay must be reasonably explained — In case of non-explanation, court should be cautious and should minutely examine the prosecution version to ensure that there was no false implication of innocent persons — On facts held, delay not properly explained by prosecution which raised doubt as regards complicity of some of the accused in the crime

Sending the copy of the special report to the Magistrate as required under Section 157 CrPC is the only external check on the working of the police agency, imposed by law which is required to be strictly followed. The delay in sending the copy of the FIR may by itself not render the whole of the case of the prosecution as doubtful but shall put the court on guard to find out as to whether the version as stated in the court was the same version as earlier reported in the FIR or was the result of deliberations involving some other persons who were actually not involved in the commission of the crime. Immediate sending of the report mentioned in Section 157 CrPC is the mandate of law. Delay wherever found is required to be explained by the prosecution. If the delay is reasonably explained, no adverse inference can be drawn but failure to explain the delay would require the court to minutely examine the prosecution version for ensuring itself as to whether any innocent person has been implicated in the crime or not. Insisting upon the accused to seek an explanation of the delay is not the requirement of law. It is always for the prosecution to explain such a delay and if tendered, no adverse inference can be drawn against it. (Para 7)

In the instant case, the FIR was registered on 25-8-1991 at about 2.30 a.m. and copy thereof referred to in Section 157 was received by the Magistrate on 27-8-1991. Even though there was a mention in the FIR that its copy was sent through special messenger, yet no date or time of sending the said report was mentioned. The Magistrate, receiving the copy of the report, had also not noted the time of its receipt. The Magistrates receiving reports under Section 157 CrPC, particularly when it relates to the commission of heinous crime are required to note not only the date but also the time of the receipt of the copy thereof. (Para 8)

The prosecution has apparently failed to explain the delay in sending the copy of the said report in terms of Section 157 CrPC to the Magistrate of the area. This aspect has been highlighted by the counsel for the appellant to contend that many of the accused were innocent and wrongly roped in the case allegedly on account of enmity existing between the complainant and the accused party. There is some substance in such a submission. (Para 8). Bijoy Singh v. State of Bihar, (2002) 9 SCC 147: AIR 2002 SC 1949: 2002 Cri LJ 2623.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-4-2002]

[966] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate — Delay of 3 days in sending FIR to Magistrate — No explanation given in respect of — Said delay, held, was fatal. Jang Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 9 SCC 704.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-2000]

[967] — Ss. 154 and 157(1) — Delay in sending FIR to Magistrate, explained — Requirement under S. 157(1), restated — Meaning of expression "forthwith" used therein, explained — Further held, prosecution is not required to explain every hour's delay in sending FIR to Magistrate, but the same has to be sent within a reasonably possible time in the circumstances prevailing — Where the FIR lodged at 12 noon reached the Magistrate at 6.00 p.m., having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case as well as lack of adequate strength of police personnel at the police station, held, there was no delay at all in forwarding the FIR to Magistrate

(3)(vi)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate (i.e. the report as required to be sent to Magistrate under S. 157 r/w S. 158) (contd.)

If any delay is caused in sending the FIR to the Magistrate, which the prosecution fails to explain by furnishing reasonable explanation, ipso facto the same cannot be taken to be a ground for throwing out the prosecution case if the same is otherwise trustworthy upon appreciation of evidence which is found to be credible. However, if it is otherwise, an adverse inference may be drawn against the prosecution and the same may affect the veracity of the prosecution case, more so when there are circumstances from which an inference can be drawn that there were chances of manipulation in the FIR by falsely roping in the accused persons after due deliberations. (Para 9)

What is required under Section 157(1) CrPC is that if from information received or otherwise, an officer in charge of a police station has reason to suspect the commission of an offence which he is empowered under Section 156 to investigate, he shall, forthwith send a report of the same to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of such an offence upon a police report. (Para 9)

The expression "forthwith" used in Section 157(1) would undoubtedly mean within a reasonable time and without any unreasonable delay. In the case on hand, distance from the police station to the Magistrate's Court was about 20 to 25 km. PW 11 constable was entrusted with the FIR by the then Sub-Inspector of Police for being made over to the Magistrate. This witness stated that after handing over the FIR, the Sub-Inspector of Police sent him to the place of occurrence where as per his instructions he stayed till 5 p.m. Later, the Inspector of Police made over the dead body of the deceased to this witness with instructions to take the same to the Government Hospital, Guntur, and to hand it over to the hospital authorities and after handing over the dead body to the hospital authorities, he went to the Magistrate and delivered the FIR to him at 6 p.m. This witness further stated that there were only six constables attached to the police station on the relevant date which goes to show that at the police station concerned there was no full strength of constables. This apart, it is a matter of common experience that there has been tremendous rise in crime resulting in enormous volume of work, but increase in the police force has not been made in the same proportion. In view of the aforesaid factors, the expression "forthwith" within the meaning of Section 157(1) obviously cannot mean that the prosecution is required to explain every hour's delay in sending the FIR to the Magistrate, of course, the same has to be sent with reasonable dispatch, which would obviously mean within a reasonably possible time in the circumstances prevailing. (Para 9)

Thus, in the instant case, the FIR was sent to the Magistrate with reasonable promptitude and no delay at all was caused in forwarding the same to the Magistrate. In any view of the matter, even if the Magistrate's Court was close by and the FIR reached him within six hours from the time of its lodgement, in view of the increase in workload, even in such a case it cannot be said that there was any delay at all in forwarding the FIR to the Magistrate. (Para 9). Alla China Apparao v. State of A.P., (2002) 8 SCC 440: 2003 SCC (Cri) 87: AIR 2002 SC 3648.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-2002]

Pala Singh v. State of Punjab, (1972) 2 SCC 640: 1973 SCC (Cri) 55; Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1976) 4 SCC 369: 1976 SCC (Cri) 646; State of Karnataka v. Moin Patel, (1996) 8 SCC 167: 1996 SCC (Cri) 632; Harpal Singh v. Devinder Singh, (1997) 6 SCC 660: 1997 SCC (Cri) 981; Shiv Ram v. State of U.P., (1998) 1 SCC 149: 1998 SCC (Cri) 278; Anil Rai v. State of Bihar, (2001) 7 SCC 318: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1009; Munshi Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 351: 2002 SCC (Cri) 175, relied on [968] — Ss. 154 and 157(1) — FIR — Delay in sending FIR to Magistrate — FIR registered at 6.30 a.m. on 19-12-1984 reached the Magistrate at 3.30 p.m. on that day — Contention that delay in dispatching the FIR to the court was not properly explained — In view of the fact that the FIR after its registration was transferred to another police station and from there it was dispatched to the Magistrate, held, the above contention had no substance (Para 5). Kunhimodeenkutty v. State of Kerala, (2002) 10 SCC 352: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1452: AIR 2003 SC 836.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2002]

[969] — S. 154 — FIR lodged round about midnight — It reached the Magistrate next morning at about 6 a.m. — Held, no delay. Satish Kumar v. State of Punjab, 1994 SCC (Cri) 180.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and Dr. A.S. Anand, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-1993]

[970] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR and delay in sending the special report to and in receiving of the same by Magistrate — Allegations regarding, on facts, not made out

The occurrence had taken place at about 6.30 a.m. in a village as a result of political rivalry. It was not a hit-and-run affair but one in which five persons had died, several others received injuries and a large number of accused persons had participated. Some of the injured and the deceased persons tried to escape but they were given a chase and beaten. The incident, therefore, must have taken some time. It is also obvious that the witnesses and others, whosoever may have been around had also run for safety and shelter. It must have taken some time to come out and assemble again making sure that the danger of assault again was over. They must have been shocked to see headless bodies lying on the spot, besides others. It is very natural in these circumstances that they went to the place of the Sarpanch to narrate the whole incident. The Sarpanch wrote down the report. In the meantime a Sub-Inspector reached the place of incident at about 10.30 a.m., who was handed over the report. He sent it to the police station, where the case was registered at 11.30 a.m. The sequence of the events and the circumstances as well as the horrifying nature of the incident which took place leaving five persons dead, does not make it unnatural at all. The manner in which the FIR was scribed and lodged can hardly be said to be inordinately delayed so as to create any kind of suspicion on the prosecution case. (Para 10)

As regards the further submission that the special report should have been sent and received by the Magistrate immediately, whose office was also in the same complex or in the nearby building, the High Court observed that there was an endorsement of the Magistrate, having received the special report on the same day. Even if for the sake of argument it is assumed that there may have been some delay in furnishing the special report to the Magistrate, it is difficult to conclude that it will be fatal to the prosecution case. It was received by the Magistrate on the same day. A little delay here and there in furnishing copy of the FIR to the Magistrate, cannot be a ground to throw out the prosecution case, in the facts and circumstances of the case. (Para 10). Gajula Venkateswara Rao v. State of A.P., (2002) 6 SCC 487: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1432: AIR 2002 SC 2775.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-2002]

[971] — Ss. 154 and 157(1) — FIR — Delay in registration of FIR and its dispatch to the Magistrate — Held on facts, explained — Hence, not fatal to the prosecution case

In the instant case, the time of occurrence was around 11.00 p.m. The FIR was lodged on the next day at around 9.35 a.m. First the information was given at the police chowk at about 8.00 a.m. The FIR reached the Magistrate around 3.00 p.m.

Held :

Considering the distance between the place of occurrence, police chowk, police station and the Court of the Magistrate, it cannot be said that there was any unexplained delay so far as registration of the FIR and dispatch to the Magistrate are concerned. From the evidence it is clear that the area was a terrorist-infected area and terrorism was at its peak during the period concerned. Merely because the information was not lodged at the police chowk or the police station in the night, that cannot be a suspicious circumstance in view of the facts of the case. (Para 7). State of Punjab v. Karnail Singh, (2003) 11 SCC 271: 2004 SCC (Cri) 135: AIR 2003 SC 3609.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-8-2003]

[972] — Ss. 154 and 158 — Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate — Effect — Incident occurring at 7.30 p.m. on 18-7-1996 — FIR registered at 11 p.m. — Distance between police station and Magistrate's court about 20 km — No bus service available during the two places during nighttime — FIR received by Magistrate at 4 p.m. on 19-7-1996 i.e. delay of about 16 hours — Held, it has been repeatedly and consistently emphasised that the requirement of sending FIR to Magistrate forthwith is to enable him to watch progress of investigation — Further held, forwarding of the occurrence report is indispensable and absolute and it has to be forwarded with earliest despatch which intention is implicit with the use of the word "forthwith" occurring in S. 157, which means promptly and without any undue delay — It has the dual purpose, firstly, to avoid the possibility of improvement in the prosecution story and introduction of any distorted version by deliberations and consultation and, secondly, to enable the Magistrate concerned to have a watch on the progress of the investigation — In the instant case there was a delay of about sixteen hours in sending the FIR (Ext. P-5) to the Magistrate, but the same was due to fact that the majority of the police personnel were deputed for maintaining the law and order situation which was too tense in view of the murder of three men of the village on the same evening — Hence, there is no cogent and convincing reason for doubting the correctness and truthfulness of the FIR (Paras 22 to 35). Bathula Nagamalleswara Rao v. State, (2008) 11 SCC 722: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 898.

(3)(vi)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate (i.e. the report as required to be sent to Magistrate under S. 157 r/w S. 158) (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-2008]

Thulia Kali v. State of T.N., (1972) 3 SCC 393: 1972 SCC (Cri) 543; Arjun Marik v. State of Bihar, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 372: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1551; Meharaj Singh v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391; Thanedar Singh v. State of M.P., (2002) 1 SCC 487: 2002 SCC (Cri) 153; Kunju Muhammed v. State of Kerala, (2004) 9 SCC 193: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1425, considered and relied on

[973] — Ss. 154, 158 and 157 — Copy of FIR sent to Magistrate after four days — Delay not explained — Held, requirements of S. 157 not satisfied

The Code of Criminal Procedure provides for certain internal and external checks; one of them being the receipt of a copy of the first information report by the Magistrate concerned. It is not in dispute that in a grave case of this nature, the copy of the first information report was received by the Magistrate four days later. No explanation has been offered therefor. Section 157 CrPC mandates that the first information report should be sent to the nearest Magistrate within a period of 24 hours. It has not been disputed that the occurrence took place near the district headquarters. There cannot be any reason whatsoever as to why the first information report was sent after four days. (Para 20). Ramesh Baburao Devaskar v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 13 SCC 501: 2008 Cri LJ 372.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

Jagdish Murav v. State of U.P., (2006) 12 SCC 626: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Rajasthan v. Teja Singh, (2001) 3 SCC 147: 2001 SCC (Cri) 439, relied on [974] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Delay in despatch of the FIR — FIR recorded without delay and the investigation started on the basis thereof — Mere delay in despatch of the FIR would not make the prosecution case suspect — FIR lodged at 1 a.m. — Received by the constable for handing over the same to the local Magistrate at 1.30 a.m. — Constable covering a distance of 17 kms handing over the FIR to the Magistrate at 10 a.m. — Held, even assuming that the plea that no conveyance was available at the dead of night was unsatisfactory one, there was no undue delay in despatch of the FIR. State of Karnataka v. Moin Patel, (1996) 8 SCC 167: 1996 SCC (Cri) 632: AIR 1996 SC 3041.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-1996]

[975] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Delay in despatch of the FIR — Occurrence taking place on 24-5-1972 at 6.30 p.m. — Fact that copy of the FIR was placed before the Magistrate on 26-5-1972 would only indicate that the clerk concerned brought it to the notice of the Magistrate on that day and not that the copy of the FIR had not reached the Magistrate's office on next day. Ram Sanjiwan Singh v. State of Bihar, (1996) 8 SCC 552: 1996 SCC (Cri) 701: AIR 1996 SC 3265.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1996]

[976] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Delay in despatching the FIR — Held, does not affect the testimony of the person who lodged the FIR — Delay of 4 hours in lodging the FIR with the Magistrate, in the circumstances, not unreasonable

Even if the residence of the Chief Judicial Magistrate was close-by, the fact that the FIR was lodged with him within four hours is not ignorable. No doubt the ideal situation is that FIR is lodged with utmost speed and despatch but if the ideal is not adhered to in any case, the corollary is not castigation of the evidence of the maker of the FIR. In the present set-up no police station can be expected to have only one case to look into. A little delay in lodging the FIR with the Magistrate should not be viewed from an unrealistic angle. Harpal Singh v. Devinder Singh, (1997) 6 SCC 660: 1997 SCC (Cri) 981: AIR 1997 SC 2914: 1997 Cri LJ 3561.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-7-1997]

[977] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Delay in sending copy of FIR to Magistrate — If made out — Need for sending copy to residence of Magistrate — Occurrence took place at 6 a.m., FIR lodged at 7.20 p.m. and copy thereof received by the Magistrate in court next day at 12.45 p.m. — Definite stand taken by prosecution that there was no practice prevalent in the area for sending the report to the residence of the Magistrate — Held, no adverse inference should be drawn for not sending the report at the residence of the Magistrate on the same night of the occurrence — Copy of FIR was sent at the earliest on the next day in court and there was no delay much less inordinate delay in sending the same to Magistrate

Mere delay in sending the first information report to a Magistrate cannot be a ground to throw out the prosecution case if the evidence adduced is otherwise found to be credible and trustworthy. (Para 11). State of J&K v. S. Mohan Singh, (2006) 9 SCC 272: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 484: AIR 2006 SC 1410: 2006 Cri LJ 1691.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-3-2006]

[978] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Delay in sending FIR to Magistrate — FIR lodged on 10-11-1981 at about 4 a.m. reaching the Magistrate on 12-11-1981 — Held, delay rendered the FIR suspicious in the absence of any explanation. Radhakrishnan Nair v. State of Kerala, 1995 Supp (1) SCC 217: 1995 SCC (Cri) 345.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-1994]

[979] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Delay in sending FIR to the Magistrate — Not fatal to the prosecution case unless prejudice is shown to have been caused to the accused by such delay — Held, in the circumstances of the case, sending of report not delayed in order to introduce some improvement, embellishment or distorted version of the occurrence (Para 7). Sushil v. State of U.P., 1995 Supp (1) SCC 363: 1995 SCC (Cri) 388.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-11-1994]

[980] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Delay in sending information to Magistrate — If on facts, fatal to second complaint of graver offence lodged same day and acted upon promptly — Where no action was taken by police on the first complaint informing about a missing boy but on the basis of the second complaint lodged on the same day informing kidnapping of the boy and demand of ransom, investigation was started and the complaint was sent promptly to Magistrate, held mere delay in sending the first complaint to the Magistrate cannot be a ground to discard the prosecution case if found reliable — It could not be inferred thereby that the first complaint contained something inconsistent with the prosecution case

A complaint about a missing boy was first lodged with the police on 20-5-1996 at 1.00 p.m. The complaint was registered by the police on the same day. But the complaint was sent to the Magistrate on 17-8-1996. However, another complaint was made on 20-5-1996 after receipt of a telephone call about kidnapping of the boy and demand of ransom and the same was sent to the Magistrate's Court the very next day i.e. on 21-5-1996. It was this compliant on the basis of which the investigation was started. It was urged that delay in sending the first complaint to the Magistrate gave a reasonable apprehension that the actual complaint made on 20-5-1996 at 1.00 p.m. contained something different than what it contained in a complaint sent to the Magistrate on 17-8-1996 and that therefore, the whole genesis of the prosecution case was belied and could not be relied upon. Rejecting the contention.

Held :

While it is true that Section 157 CrPC makes it obligatory on the officer in charge of the police station to send the information to the Magistrate's Court forthwith but that does not mean and imply to denounce and discard an otherwise positive and trustworthy evidence on record. The first complaint of missing person although was sent late, in fact, had not moved the investigating agency to real investigation except informing various other police stations regarding disappearance of the boy. The second complaint which was taken note of was sent in due time to the Magistrate. Unless, it is that the evidence led by the prosecution is not reliable, the delay in sending the first complaint would not lead to the inference that the complaint lodged of missing person contained some other facts that may have revealed some other story which is not consistent with the prosecution case. (Para 4). A.N. Venkatesh v. State of Karnataka, (2005) 7 SCC 714: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1938: 2005 Cri LJ 3732.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-2005]

[981] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Delay in sending report to magistrate by police — Delay of 6 hours, held on facts, not inordinate and unexplained

There was no inordinate and unexplained delay in sending the report to the magistrate. There is no ground to doubt the presence of the eye witnesses at the scene of occurrence. They have consistently deposed that the two appellants inflicted injuries on the neck with kirpans. The medical evidence amply supports the same. There are no material contradictions or omissions which in any manner throw a doubt on their veracity. The High Court by way of an abundant caution gave the benefit of doubt to the other three accused since the allegation against them is an omnibus one. The evidence against the appellants being cogent and convincing and the specific overt acts having been attributed to them, there are no grounds for the Supreme Court to interfere. (Para 4). Tara Singh v. State of Punjab, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 536: 1991 SCC (Cri) 710: AIR 1991 SC 63: (1991) 28 ACC 93.

(3)(vi)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate (i.e. the report as required to be sent to Magistrate under S. 157 r/w S. 158) (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-10-1990]

[982] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Delay in sending special report of occurrence to Magistrate — When adverse inference cannot be drawn on ground of such delay

It is not as if every delay in sending a special report to the District Magistrate under S. 157 CrPC would necessarily lead to the inference that the FIR has not been lodged at the time stated or has been ante-timed or ante-dated or that the investigation is not fair and forthright. If in a case it is found that the FIR was recorded without delay and the investigation started on that FIR then however improper or objectionable the delayed receipt of the report by the Magistrate concerned, that cannot by itself justify the conclusion that the investigation was tainted and the prosecution unsupportable.

In the present case the incident took place on the night between March 27 and 28, 1972 and steps in investigation by way of drawing inquest report and other Panchanamas had been taken in the early morning of March 28, and these could only follow the handing over of FIR to the station officer at about 2.15 a.m. In view of these facts the delayed receipt of the special report by the District Magistrate on March 29 would not enable the Court to dub the investigation as tainted one nor could the FIR be regarded as ante-timed or ante-dated. For the same reasons the delay in sending the necessary papers to the medical officer which were received by him on March 29, will be of no significance. State of U.P. v. Gokaran, 1984 Supp SCC 482: 1985 SCC (Cri) 41: AIR 1985 SC 131.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar, M.P. Thakkar and V. Khalid, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-1984]

Pala Singh v. State of Punjab, (1972) 2 SCC 640: 1973 SCC (Cri) 55, followed [983] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Delay in sending special report to the Magistrate — Delay properly explained by the constable who delivered the special report to the Magistrate — Even assuming that there was some delay it was on account of the constable — On facts, no prejudice caused to the accused (Para 18). Ram Kumar v. State of Haryana, 1995 Supp (1) SCC 248: 1995 SCC (Cri) 355: AIR 1995 SC 280: (1995) 32 ACC 47.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-1994]

[984] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Delay in sending the FIR to the Magistrate — Occurrence taking place on 4-1-1980 — Post-mortem examination conducted on 5-1-1980 and before that the inquest completed and despatched to the Magistrate — Copy of the FIR despatched to the Magistrate on which the Magistrate set his eyes on 10-1-1980 — Such facts not concealed by the prosecution but what happened in between gone unchallenged — High Court rightly held that there was no delay in despatch of the special report especially when the foundation of the case stood laid well before the post-mortem examination completed. Surjan Mahto v. State of Bihar, 1998 SCC (Cri) 886, 889.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and M. Srinivasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-1997]

[985] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — FIR — Delay in sending copy of the FIR to Magistrate — Held, would not demolish other positive and credible evidence on record — This only shows carelessness on part of the investigating agency. Shiv Ram v. State of U.P., (1998) 1 SCC 149: 1998 SCC (Cri) 278: AIR 1998 SC 49: 1998 Cri LJ 76.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-10-1997]

[986] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — FIR lodged at 1.00 a.m. and a constable sent at 1.30 a.m. to deliver the special report to the Magistrate — Special report received by the Magistrate at about 3.15 a.m. — Held, in the facts and circumstances, delay of about 2 hours in delivering the special report is of no consequence in the absence of any prejudice to the accused. State of Haryana v. Jinder Singh, (1997) 4 SCC 180: 1997 SCC (Cri) 532.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-1997]

[987] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Forthwith sending FIR to Magistrate — Must be sent even on Sundays and holidays — Practice in Bihar of not sending the FIR to the residence of Magistrate on Sundays and holidays deprecated. Arjun Marik v. State of Bihar, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 372: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1551.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1994]

[988] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Mere delay in lodging FIR and further delay in sending the same to Magistrate concerned would not always be fatal to the prosecution case — But such delay is a material circumstance to be taken into consideration while appreciating evidence on record — Having regard to reliable evidence led by prosecution, held, delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate would not dislodge the prosecution case

It was urged that the delay in lodging the FIR and thereafter further delay in forwarding the same to the Magistrate concerned would lead to the conclusion that the FIR had been recorded much later than the one as shown in the document and as such the very genesis of the prosecution case belies and cannot be relied upon to convict the accused-appellants.

Held :

Section 157 CrPC requires sending of an FIR to the Magistrate forthwith which reaches promptly and without undue delay. The reason is obvious to avoid any possibility of improvement in the prosecution story and also to enable the Magistrate to have a watch on the progress of the investigation. At the same time, this lacuna on the part of the prosecution would not be the sole basis for throwing out the entire prosecution case being fabricated if the prosecution had produced the reliable evidence to prove the guilt of the accused persons. The provisions of Section 157 CrPC are for the purpose of having a fair trial without there being any chance of fabrication or introduction of the fact at the subsequent stage of investigation. The cases cited by the learned counsel for the appellants do not lay down any law that simply because there is a delay in lodging the FIR or sending it to the Magistrate forthwith, the entire case of the prosecution has to be discarded. The decisions rendered by this Court and relied upon by the learned counsel for the appellant would only show that this will be a material circumstance which will be taken into consideration while appreciating the evidence on record. Having regard to the material on record, it must be held that the prosecution has led reliable evidence, the veracity of which is not dislodged by delay in recording of the FIR and delay in sending the same to the Magistrate in the facts and circumstances of this case. At best it can be taken to be an infirmity in investigation. (Paras 19 and 20). Rabindra Mahto v. State of Jharkhand, (2006) 10 SCC 432: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 592: AIR 2006 SC 887: 2006 Cri LJ 957: (2006) 1 KLJ 431. Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-1-2006]

[989] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Requirement of sending FIR to the Magistrate forthwith — Object of — Meaning of the expression "forthwith" in S. 157 — Effect of delay in despatch of FIR — On facts and in the circumstances delay in sending FIR leads to the conclusion that the Fard-beyan and FIR had been recorded much later than one as shown in the said documents

The forwarding of the occurrence report is indispensable and absolute and it has to be forwarded with earliest despatch which intention is implicit with the use of the word "forthwith" occurring in S. 157, which means promptly and without any undue delay. The purpose and object is very obvious which is spelt out from the combined reading of Ss. 157 and 159 CrPC. It has the dual purpose, firstly to avoid the possibility of improvement in the prosecution story and introduction of any distorted version by deliberations and consultation and secondly to enable the Magistrate concerned to have a watch on the progress of the investigation.

It is true that quite often there are valid reasons for the delay in the despatch of the first information report and it is not always a circumstance on the basis of which the entire prosecution case may be said to be fabricated, but it all depends on the facts and circumstances of each case where the circumstance of delay may lead to serious consequences. But in the present case there are other circumstances which cast a serious cloud on the prosecution case and this circumstance of delay in sending the FIR still hardens the suspicion and leads to the definite conclusion that the Fard-beyan and FIR both were recorded much later in point of time than the one as shown in the said documents and in any case after the appellant's house was raided and seizure of articles was effected. Arjun Marik v. State of Bihar, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 372: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1551. Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1994]

[990] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Sending copy of FIR to Illaqa Magistrate — Object — Delay in sending must be reasonably explained — Failure to explain the delay would put the court on guard requiring it to minutely examine the prosecution version but that by itself would not render the entire prosecution case doubtful — On facts held, delay reasonably explained

(3)(vi)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate (i.e. the report as required to be sent to Magistrate under S. 157 r/w S. 158) (contd.)

In this case, the incident occurred at 7 a.m. in which the deceased received head injuries. The brothers of the deceased, in order to provide the injured immediate medical aid, took him first to the Primary Health Centre, then to Civil Hospital and lastly to PGI where he ultimately died at 1.15 p.m. FIR was then lodged at police station situated a few kilometres away from the hospital, after making funeral arrangements. The special report was received by the Illaqa Magistrate shortly after midnight.

Held :

The first priority of the family members was to save the life of the deceased. There is no unexplained delay in sending the special report to the Special Magistrate, as the distance between the police station and the place where the Illaqa Magistrate was stationed was not small. (Para 11)

Sending the copy of the special report to the Magistrate as required under Section 157 CrPC is the only external check on the working of the police agency, imposed by law which is required to be strictly followed. The delay in sending the copy of the FIR may by itself not render the whole of the case of the prosecution as doubtful but shall put the court on guard to find out as to whether the version as stated in the court was the same version as earlier reported in the FIR or was the result of deliberations involving some other persons who were actually not involved in the commission of the crime. Immediate sending of the report mentioned in Section 157 CrPC is the mandate of law. Delay wherever found is required to be explained by the prosecution. If the delay is reasonably explained, no adverse inference can be drawn but failure to explain the delay would require the court to minutely examine the prosecution version for ensuring itself as to whether any innocent person has been implicated in the crime or not. (Paras 13 and 16). Ravi Kumar v. State of Punjab, (2005) 9 SCC 315: AIR 2005 SC 1929: 2005 Cri LJ 1742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-2005]

Pala Singh v. State of Punjab, (1972) 2 SCC 640: 1973 SCC (Cri) 55, relied on

[Ed.: See also Bijoy Singh v. State of Bihar, (2002) 9 SCC 147: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1093]

[991] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR — Communal riot — Delay in sending FIR to Magistrate — Court has to see whether there were indications in the report to show that it was a result of subsequent deliberations — Having regard to the nature of occurrence, held, the report was a true one and even if there had been some delay, that by itself cannot be a ground to hold that the same was brought into existence at a later stage. Paresh Kalyandas Bhavsar v. Sadiq Yakubbhai Jamadar, (1993) 3 SCC 95: 1993 SCC (Cri) 612: AIR 1993 SC 1544: 1993 Cri LJ 1857.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1993]

[992] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR lodged within 30 minutes of the occurrence clearly describing the basic prosecution case — Mere delay in sending the same to the Magistrate is of no consequence. Betal Singh v. State of M.P., (1996) 8 SCC 205: 1996 SCC (Cri) 571: AIR 1996 SC 2770.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-3-1996]

[993] — Ss. 154, 157 and 156 — Delay in sending report to Magistrate — Effect of — Held, that alone cannot affect the prosecution case if the same is otherwise found to be trustworthy — On facts, there was no delay at all in sending the said report rather the same was very promptly sent and delivered (Para 12). Gurpreet Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 12 SCC 615.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-2005]

[994] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Non-explanation by prosecution for delayed dispatch and receipt of FIR and connected documents in Court of Magistrate — Non-explanation by prosecution of serious injuries received by some of the accused persons — Lack of credibility and cogency in evidence of PW 1 — Held, though delayed receipt of FIR and connected documents in all cases may not be a factor corroding credibility of prosecution version, but considering combined effect of all these factors High Court rightly concluded that prosecution established the accusations and accordingly convicted the accused persons — Criminal Trial — Benefit of doubt. State v. N. Rajamanickam, (2008) 13 SCC 303: (2008) 70 AIC 105 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, and M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2008]

[995] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — FIR — Whether ante-timed — Delay in sending special report to Magistrate — Explanation — Murder — Incident occurred on April 4 at 3 p.m., FIR lodged at

3.45 p.m. — Inquest on dead bodies started at 5.45 p.m. and dead bodies removed to police headquarters at 6.30 p.m. and received therein at 7.45 p.m. — Police constable deposed that dead bodies were sealed and handed over to him between 6.30 p.m. to 7 p.m. on April 4 and that he came in possession of FIR and other related documents which were handed over to him — Constable was not cross-examined on this aspect and his statement was fortified by other evidence — Post-mortem conducted during night hours as per DM's order — Copy of FIR reached Circle Police Officer on April 5 — Special Report received by Magistrate on April 8 — Held on facts, delay in delivering the special report to Magistrate would not raise a suspicion that FIR had been written later and was ante-timed — Suspicion that a line or two might have squeezed in here and there in some of the documents prepared during the initial investigation would not dislodge the huge volume of documentary and oral evidence on the spontaneity of the FIR (Paras 14 and 15). Sarvesh Narain Shukla v. Daroga Singh, (2007) 13 SCC 360: AIR 2008 SC 320: (2008) 1 All LJ 56.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

[996] — Ss. 154, 158, 157 and 174 — Sending of FIR to the Magistrate — Dak Book or outward Register not produced by the prosecution as it was destroyed after lapse of 3 years — Kaimisanha, a contemporaneous record of what was mentioned in the FIR, mentioning that the copy of the FIR was being sent to the Magistrate concerned — Absence of positive proof regarding receipt of a copy of FIR by the Magistrate inconsequential. Girish Yadav v. State of M.P., (1996) 8 SCC 186: 1996 SCC (Cri) 552: AIR 1996 SC 3098.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-1996]

[997] — Ss. 154, 158 and 157 — Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate — No satisfactory explanation therefor — Delay adversely affected the prosecution case

The Supreme Court in Marudanal Augusti case, (1980) 4 SCC 425 observed that the delay in forwarding the FIR to the Magistrate would throw serious doubt on the prosecution case, whereas in Arjun Marik v. State of Bihar, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 372 it was reminded that the forwarding of the occurrence report is indispensable and absolute and it has to be forwarded with earliest dispatch. But, in the instant case, the prosecution did not satisfactorily explain the delayed lodging of the FIR with the Magistrate. (Paras 15 and 14). Rajeevan v. State of Kerala, (2003) 3 SCC 355: 2003 SCC (Cri) 751: AIR 2003 SC 1813.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-2-2003]

Marudanal Augusti v. State of Kerala, (1980) 4 SCC 425: 1980 SCC (Cri) 985; Arjun Marik v. State of Bihar, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 372: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1551, relied on [998] — Ss. 154, 158 and 157 — Delay in sending FIR to Court — Inference of High Court in respect of, whether proper — Held, where occurrence had taken place between 7.00 a.m. and 7.30 a.m., the distance of the police station was 10 km from the place of occurrence, FIR was lodged at 10.30 a.m. and after registering the case IO simultaneously proceeded to the place of occurrence and sent the FIR to court where the same was received at 4.15 p.m. on that day itself, held, High Court not justified in holding that delay was caused in receipt of the FIR in court (Para 11). Kamma Otukunta Ram Naidu v. Chereddy Pedda Subba Reddy, (2003) 11 SCC 293: 2004 SCC (Cri) 155: AIR 2003 SC 3342.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2003]

[999] — Ss. 154, 158 and 157 — Delay in sending FIR to Ilaqa Magistrate — Held, it is not the time, but unexplained delay in a case, which is of relevance — Distance between police post and Ilaqa Magistrate was about 20 km — No question was put to IO as to why it took three hours for the report to reach the Magistrate — In such case, held, it was not open to say that there was delay in sending the report (Para 13). State of Punjab v. Phola Singh, (2003) 11 SCC 58: 2004 SCC (Cri) 276: AIR 2003 SC 4407.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2003]

[1000] — Ss. 154, 158 and 157 — Delay in sending FIR to Magistrate — Murder — Seventeen victims — Delay, held on facts, not fatal to the prosecution case

Here is a case where a serious crime had been committed and the dead bodies of as many as seventeen victims had to be taken care of and inquest and post-mortem had to be conducted at the instance of the police. This must have caused a few hours' delay in sending the FIR to the Magistrate. (Para 9). Gurdev Singh v. State of Punjab, (2003) 7 SCC 258: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1616: AIR 2003 SC 4187: 2003 Cri LJ 3764.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-8-2003]

(3)(vi)3. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate (i.e. the report as required to be sent to Magistrate under S. 157 r/w S. 158) (contd.)

[1001] — Ss. 154, 157 and 174 — Delay in receipt of report, by Magistrate — Not by itself fatal to prosecution case — FIR lodged immediately after murder — Investigation started, statements of witnesses recorded, inquest report prepared, dead bodies sent for post-mortem examination without delay — Special report sent by post — In such circumstances, the mere fact that special report was received by Magistrate after about one week from the date of occurrence, held, not sufficient to doubt prosecution case — More so when none of the witnesses including IO were examined on that point

There was no delay in lodging of FIR. Thereafter, the investigation proceeded, the statements of the witnesses recorded, the inquest report prepared and the dead bodies were sent for post-mortem examination without delay. It is also on record that the special report was sent by post. In the background of the said facts, mere delay in receipt of the special report, in no way casts doubt on the case of the prosecution. Furthermore, none of the witnesses including the investigating officer of the case were cross-examined on that point. Therefore, it would not be proper to reject the case of the prosecution merely on the ground that there was delay in dispatch of the FIR. (Paras 16 and 17). Dharamveer v. State of U.P., (2010) 4 SCC 469.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision : 9-3-2010]

L/Nk. Meharaj Singh v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391; Pala Singh v. State of Punjab, (1972) 2 SCC 640: 1973 SCC (Cri) 55, cited

[1002] — Ss. 154, 158 and 157 — Delay in sending FIR to Magistrate — When not fatal — Delay in lodging the FIR explained — Few hours delay in sending the same to Magistrate, held, not of serious consequence (Para 7). State of Punjab v. Joginder Singh, (2003) 12 SCC 179.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-10-2003]

[1003] — Ss. 154, 158 and 157 — Delay in sending the FIR/complaint to the Jurisdictional Magistrate — When not fatal — If the ocular evidence adduced by the prosecution is worthy of acceptance, held, the said delay by itself not fatal to the prosecution case — There was no delay in preparing the FIR but there was some delay in transmitting the said information to the Jurisdictional Magistrate — Delay satisfactorily explained by the prosecution — Testimony of PWs found reliable — Thus, on facts, the said delay did not affect the prosecution case adversely

If the ocular evidence adduced by the prosecution is worthy of acceptance, the element of delay in registering a complaint or sending the same to the Jurisdictional Magistrate by itself would not in any manner weaken the prosecution case. In the instant case, the evidence of PWs 1 and 2 does not suffer from any such contradiction or omission which makes the said evidence unbelievable. (Paras 10 and 13)

The incident in question took place at about 8.30 p.m. on 5-5-1990. The FIR reached the Jurisdictional Magistrate at about 3.05 a.m. on 6-5-1990. There was no delay in preparing the FIR but there was some delay in transmitting the said information to the Jurisdictional Magistrate. The prosecution has given satisfactory explanation for this delay. Having been satisfied with the fact that the FIR in question was registered in the morning of 6-5-1990, it could not be said that the delay thereafter in communicating it to the Jurisdictional Magistrate on the facts of this case, has really given any room to doubt that the FIR was created after much deliberation. (Para 10). Balram Singh v. State of Punjab, (2003) 11 SCC 286: 2004 SCC (Cri) 149: AIR 2003 SC 2213.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, Ashok Bhan and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-2003]

[1004] — Ss. 154, 158 and 157 — Delay of one day in sending the FIR to the Magistrate — Held on facts, not fatal

Though the incident happened on 25-6-1984, injured S passed away during the night of 25-6-1984/26-6-1984. There was only one day's delay in sending the first information report to the Magistrate. The "fardbeyan" was received in Hilsa Police Station on 25-6-1984 and from there it was sent to Hilsa Court. This must have caused some delay in sending the FIR to the Magistrate. (Para 7). Krishna Gope v. State of Bihar, (2003) 10 SCC 45: AIR 2003 SC 3114: 2003 Cri LJ 3890.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-8-2003]

[1005] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in recording and sending of report to Magistrate — Appellant-accused husband alleged to have strangled the deceased while her in-laws held her, for non-fulfilment of dowry demand — Demand for dowry not proved — Testimonies of PWs neither inspiring confidence, nor corroborating each other — Incident alleged to have occurred at about 6 a.m. but fardbeyan recorded only after 9.30 p.m. when IO visited place of occurrence, despite fact that

PWs (father and brother of deceased, and one acquaintance) were with dead body for entire day — Moreover, FIR reached Magistrate only after five days which was extremely suspicious since court and police station were in same city — Though medical evidence suggesting that there were multiple bruises which could be due to forcible pressure of fingers, and even if it were assumed that deceased died due to throttling, there was no convincing evidence that it was the accused alone who had throttled deceased to death — Further, there were many lacunae in investigation — Furthermore, DWs had stated that deceased was alive after 6 a.m.; and one of them even stated that she had offered breakfast to her husband at about 11 a.m. — Held, in such circumstances, benefit of doubt must go to appellant — Hence, impugned judgment confirming conviction of appellant under S. 302 set aside — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 304-B and 498-A (Paras 13 to 32). Arun Kumar Sharma v. State of Bihar, (2010) 1 SCC 108.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-2009]

Arun Kumar Sharma v. State of Bihar, (2002) 3 PLJR 174, reversed

[1006] — Ss. 154, 158 and 157 — Delay of six days in sending FIR to Magistrate — Effect — Contention that said delay enabled the prosecution to cook up a false case against the accused — Sustainability of — IO not given opportunity to explain the said delay — Further, FIR containing only a brief statement of events — Absence of any further details in FIR showing its genuineness — Hence, the said delay, held, not fatal (Para 8). Sahdeo v. State of U.P., (2004) 10 SCC 682: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1873: AIR 2004 SC 3508: 2004 Cri LJ 2876.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-2004]

[1007] — Ss. 154, 158 and 157 — FIR reaching the Jurisdictional Magistrate more than 36 hrs. after the incident — No explanation given in respect of — Distance between Magistrate's court and police station was very close — Said delay, held on facts, created a serious doubt about the prosecution case (Para 9). Kunju Mohd. v. State of Kerala, (2004) 9 SCC 193: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1425.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-2003]

[1008] — Ss. 154, 158 and 157 — FIR recorded at 9.00 p.m. — Reached the court on next day at 1.30 p.m. — On facts, held, no delay in sending the FIR to the court — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34 and 302/114 — Arms Act, 1959 — Ss. 25 and 27 (Para 9). Hem Raj v. Raja Ram, (2004) 9 SCC 18: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1412: AIR 2004 SC 1489: 2004 Cri LJ 901.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-1-2004]

[1009] — Ss. 154, 158 and 157 — Inordinate delay of 1 1/2 days in sending the report to the Magistrate after the registration of complaint — In absence of any explanation therefor, held, the said delay contributed to the doubtful circumstances surrounding the prosecution case

The express message which PW 13 sent to the Jurisdictional Magistrate reached the said Magistrate at his place only on 12-10-1992 nearly 1 1/2 days after the said complaint was registered. There is no explanation from PW 13 as to this inordinate delay which only adds to the doubtful circumstances surrounding the prosecution case. (Para 9). Suresh Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2003) 4 SCC 128: 2003 SCC (Cri) 801: AIR 2003 SC 1981: 2003 Cri LJ 1717.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2003]

[1010] — Ss. 154, 158 and 157 — Special report received by Magistrate ten days after its alleged dispatch — Delay not explained by prosecution — Hence proved fatal (Paras 23 and 24). Badam Singh v. State of M.P., (2003) 12 SCC 792: AIR 2004 SC 26: 2004 Cri LJ 22.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2003]

4. Delay in lodging/filing FIR

See also Section 154, '(3)(vi)2. Ante-timed FIR', above

[1011] — S. 154 — Delay, held, by itself is not fatal to the prosecution case but requires satisfactory explanation — Delay in filing FIR in rape cases is normal especially when the perpetrator is a relative — A village girl of the age of 5 years 6 months, complaining commission of rape on her at about 6.30 p.m. on 29-10-1991 while her widow mother was away — The accused (appellant) was a relative — FIR lodged by mother on 31-10-1991 in the morning — In the intervening period, the mother discussed the incident with her in-laws who in turn called upon respondent's father — The matter was reported to police when it was not settled within the family — Held, the sequence of events as projected by the prosecution sounded quite natural and provided satisfactory explanation for the delay — Prosecution story could not therefore be disbelieved on the ground of delay — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 375 and 376

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

Delay in lodging FIR cannot be used as a ritualistic formula for doubting the prosecution case and discarding it. Delay has the effect of putting the court on its guard to search if any explanation has been offered, and if offered, whether or not it is satisfactory. If prosecution fails to satisfactorily explain the delay and there is possibility of embellishment in the prosecution version on account of such delay, the delay would be fatal to the prosecution case. However, if the delay is explained to the satisfaction of the court, it cannot by itself be a ground for disbelieving and discarding the entire prosecution case. The accused, in the present case, is a close relation of prosecutrix's late father. The mother obviously needed her in-laws to accompany her or at least to help her in lodging an FIR. The incident having occurred in a village, the approach of in-laws displayed rusticity in first calling upon father of the accused. It remained an unpleasant family affair on the next day of the incident which was tried to be settled, if it could be, within the walls of the family. That failed. It is thereafter only that the complainant who is a widow, left all by herself and having no male family member willing to accompany her, proceeded alone to the police station. She was lent moral support by the village Panch, whereupon report of the incident was lodged. The sequence of events soon after the crime provide a satisfactory explanation for the delay. The High Court has not looked into the explanation offered and very superficially recorded a finding of the delay having remained unexplained. It is common knowledge and also judicially noted fact that incidents like rape, more so when the perpetrator of the crime happens to be a member of the family or related therewith, involve the honour of the family and therefore there is a reluctance on the part of victim's family to report the matter to police and carry it to the court. A cool thought may precede lodging of FIR. The delay has been satisfactorily explained in this case and therefore it does not cause any dent in the prosecution case. (Para 12). State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980: AIR 2001 SC 2075.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Harpal Singh v. State of H.P., (1981) 1 SCC 560: 1981 SCC (Cri) 208, relied on

Gian Chand v. State of H.P., (1996) 2 Crimes 213 (HP), reversed

[1012] — Ss. 154 and 482 — Delay in FIR — Principles reiterated

One K executed an agreement dated 4-1-1988 to sell the land specified, in favour of the respondents. The land was already mortgaged with the respondents. The sale deed was to be executed and registered by 10-6-1989. According to the appellants herein, on 22-10-1988, K entered into an agreement with their father to sell the same land, and received a certain amount as earnest money. The sale was to be executed and registered by 15-6-1989.

The respondents filed a suit for specific performance of the sale deed against K in 1989 which was decreed in 1996 and in pursuance thereof, the sale was executed by K in favour of the respondents. The father of the appellants filed a suit seeking cancellation/setting aside of the said decree but the same stood dismissed. An appeal filed thereagainst continued to be pending.

In 2002, the father of the appellants filed an FIR under Sections 420/423/467/468/120-B IPC alleging that K's signatures on the agreement to sell dated 4-1-1988 were forged. At the instance of the respondents, the High Court quashed the FIR on the ground that the civil court had recorded a finding that the document in question was not forged or fabricated. The first informants then filed the present appeal by special leave.

Finding the order of the High Court to be not sustainable legally but in the facts and circumstances of the case refusing interference,

Held :

No explanation has been furnished as to why after expiry of the date of execution of the sale deed in favour of the appellants' father i.e. 15-6-1989, the appellants' father did not file the suit for specific performance which was subsequently filed on 6-2-1996. Even if it is presumed that he was not aware of the suit filed by the respondents, no explanation could be furnished that in case the appellants' father filed another suit for setting aside the decree passed in the respondents' suit, why did he wait till the decision of that suit for lodging FIR, as the civil and criminal proceedings could have proceeded simultaneously. The FIR was filed only after filing of appeal thereagainst before High Court on 15-7-2002. (Para 20)

Prompt and early reporting of the occurrence by the informant with all its vivid details gives an assurance regarding truth of its version. In case there is some delay in filing the FIR, the complainant must give explanation for the same. Undoubtedly, delay in lodging the FIR does not make the complainant's case improbable when such delay is properly explained. However, deliberate delay in lodging the complaint is always fatal. (Paras 21 and 24)

In cases where there is a delay in lodging an FIR, the court has to look for a plausible explanation for such delay. In the absence of such an explanation, the delay may be fatal. The reason for quashing such proceedings may not be merely that the allegations were an afterthought or had given a coloured version of events. In such cases the court should carefully examine the facts before it for the reason that a frustrated litigant who failed to succeed before the civil court may initiate criminal proceedings just to harass the other side with mala fide intentions or the ulterior motive of wreaking vengeance on the other party. Chagrined and frustrated litigants should not be permitted to give vent to their frustrations by cheaply invoking the jurisdiction of the criminal court. The court proceedings ought not to be permitted to degenerate into a weapon of harassment and persecution. In such a case, where an FIR is lodged clearly with a view to spite the other party because of a private and personal grudge and to enmesh the other party in long and arduous criminal proceedings, the court may take a view that it amounts to an abuse of the process of law in the facts and circumstances of the case. (Para 22). Kishan Singh v. Gurpal Singh, (2010) 8 SCC 775.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision : 12-8-2010]

Sahib Singh v. State of Haryana, (1997) 7 SCC 231: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1049; Chandrapal Singh v. Maharaj Singh, (1982) 1 SCC 466: 1982 SCC (Cri) 249; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Gorige Pentaiah v. State of A.P., (2008) 12 SCC 531: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 446, relied on

[1013] — S. 154 — Allegation of fabrication and delay in lodging FIR in the face of regular entries in public documents — Presumption of due performance of official acts — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114

Once the prosecution had shown that regular entries were made in public document namely, the general diary regarding the registration of the case and the forwarding of the special report to the higher authorities and of the return of the person who had taken the special report to the Police Station the legal presumption would be that official acts must have been duly performed.

Of course, it would have been better if the prosecution would have completed the link in the chain by examining the constable who took the report and showing the exact time when the FIR was received by the Magistrate or the S.P., but even if it did not do so that was not sufficient to put the prosecution out of court.

In the present case the fact of filing of FIR at 9.10 a.m. had to be believed since three of the injured were medically examined at 10.30, 11.00 and 11.45 a.m. The fact that the constable who took the FIR to the Magistrate or the S.P. returned at 8 p.m., is therefore of no significance. Sone Lal v. State of U.P., (1978) 4 SCC 302: 1978 SCC (Cri) 587: AIR 1978 SC 1142: 1978 Cri LJ 1122: 1978 ALJ 530.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-1978]

[1014] — S. 154 — Effect — Held, time and again, the object and importance of prompt lodging of the FIR has been highlighted — More often than not, results in embellishment and exaggeration, which is a creature of an afterthought — Delayed report not only gets bereft of the advantage of spontaneity, the danger of the introduction of a coloured version, an exaggerated account of the incident or a concocted story as a result of deliberations and consultations, also creeps in, casting a serious doubt on its veracity — Therefore, it is essential that the delay in lodging the report should be satisfactorily explained — In the instant case Accused 1 to 4 alleged to have forced complainant to consume poison as a result whereof she was admitted in nursing home in an unconscious state on 19-4-1996 — FIR in regard thereto lodged on 22-5-1996 — Admittedly, after her discharge from the hospital on 22-4-1996, the complainant went to her parents' house and resided there — Complainant stating that since no one from the family of the accused came to enquire about her welfare, she decided to lodge the FIR — No explanation worth the name for delay in filing the complaint with the police was brought on record — Held, such circumstances raise considerable doubt regarding the genuineness of the complaint and the veracity of the evidence of the complainant (PW 1) and her father (PW 3), rendering it unsafe to base the conviction of the respondent upon it — Resultantly, when the substratum of the evidence given by the complainant (PW 1) is found to be unreliable, the prosecution case has to be rejected in its entirety (Paras 30 and 31). State of A.P. v. M. Madhusudhan Rao, (2008) 15 SCC 582: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1123: (2009) 1 ECrN 489 (SC): (2008) 71 AIC 8 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2008]

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

[1015] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Falsity of FIR — High Court not finding any delay — On facts, conviction of appellants under Ss. 147, 148, 323, 324, 307 and 302 IPC r/w S. 149 IPC by courts below upheld (Paras 12 to 14). Kilari Malakondiaah v. State of A.P., (2008) 15 SCC 311: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 974: (2008) 72 AIC 13 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 910 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-2008]

[1016] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing — Effect — Held, delay in lodging FIR impels the court to scrutinise evidence of witnesses regarding actual occurrence with greater care and caution (Para 20). Darshan Singh v. State of Punjab, (2010) 2 SCC 333.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-1-2010]

[1017] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — When not a factor for discrediting prosecution case — Immediately after occurrence of incident, deceased taken to hospital by complainant and other relations where he was declared dead — One general diary entry entered on same night which was just after a gap of about two hours — Therefore, considering normal human conduct, held, delay of about two hours between occurrence and lodging of complaint, was not a factor for discrediting prosecution case — Hence, finding of acquittal on ground of this delay, not a reasonable exercise of jurisdiction by appellate court (Paras 23 and 26). Champaben Govindbhai v. Popatbhai Manilal, (2009) 13 SCC 662: (2009) 82 AIC 48 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-7-2009]

Chandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 4 SCC 415: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 325; Shivaji Sahabrao Bobade v. State of Maharashtra, (1973) 2 SCC 793: 1973 SCC (Cri) 1033, relied on

[1018] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — By itself not fatal to the prosecution case, if the delay is explained to the satisfaction of the court — Incident of rape taking place on Oct. 1 but reported to the police on Oct. 5 — Initial hesitation on the part of victim's father to give publicity as also other factors such as likelihood of communal tension etc. stated as reasons for the delay — Held, on facts explanation acceptable — Hence prosecution case cannot be wholly disbelieved merely on ground of such delay — Penal Code, 1860, S. 376

A mere delay in lodging the FIR cannot be a ground by itself for throwing the entire prosecution case overboard. The court has to seek an explanation for delay and test the truthfulness and plausibility of the reason assigned. If the delay is explained to the satisfaction of the court it cannot be counted against the prosecution. (Para 15)

In the present case it is true that the incident dated 1-10-1993 was reported to the police on 5-10-1993. The prosecutrix was a married woman. Her muklana ceremony had not taken place. Muklana ceremony is a rural custom prevalent in Rajasthan, whereunder the bride is left with the parents after marriage having been performed and is taken away by the husband and/or the in-laws to live with them only after a lapse of time. The origin of the custom owes its existence to performance of child-marriages which are widely prevalent there. The muklana was yet to take place. The prosecutrix was a virgin prior to the commission of the crime and this fact finds support from the medical evidence. The parents of such a prosecutrix would obviously be chary to such an incident gaining publicity because it would have serious implications for the reputation of the family and also on the married life of the victim. The husband and the in-laws having become aware of the incident may even refuse to carry the girl to reside with them. The incident if publicised may have been an end to the marriage of the prosecutrix. Added to this is the communal tinge which was sought to be given by the community of the accused. (The accused and the prosecutrix belonged to different communities.) The father of the prosecutrix and other witnesses have stated that while they were about to move to the police station they were prevented from doing so by the community fellows of the accused who persuaded them not to lodge a report with the police and instead to have the matter settled by convening a panchayat of the village people. After all the family of the victim had to live in the village in spite of the incident having taken place. The explanation is not an afterthought. An indication thereof is to be found in the FIR itself where the complainant stated — "the delay in lodging the report is due to village panchayat, insult and social disrepute". Nothing has been brought out in the cross-examination of the witnesses to doubt the truth and reasonableness of the explanation so offered. (Para 14). State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898: AIR 2000 SC 1812: 2000 Cri LJ 2205.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

State of Rajasthan v. Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781; State of Punjab v. Gurmeet Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977, relied on [1019] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay — Considerations in sexual offences — Effect of — FIR lodged after about four months of commission of offence — Panchayat had intervened and it pressurised complainant to compromise — Panchayat met several times — Fine of Rs 1100 imposed on appellant — Complainant had demanded that appellant be fined to the tune of Rs 5000 and be taken in procession after blackening his face and be paraded in village — Demand not accepted by Panchayat — Ultimately complainant raised grievance before SP — Report lodged on instruction of SP — Held, delay in lodging FIR has been satisfactorily explained — Delay in lodging FIR in sexual offences has to be considered with a different yardstick — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 375 and 376 (Paras 10 to 18). Satpal Singh v. State of Haryana, (2010) 8 SCC 714.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision : 28-7-2010]

Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of A.P. v. M. Madhusudhan Rao, (2008) 15 SCC 582: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1123; Satyapal v. State of Haryana, (2009) 6 SCC 635: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 108; State of H.P. v. Prem Singh, (2009) 1 SCC 420: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 351, relied on [1020] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Effect on credibility of prosecution case — Held, by itself cannot be a ground to doubt the prosecution case and discard it — It would put the court on its guard to search if any plausible explanation has been offered and if offered whether it is satisfactory — Father of the deceased finding the dead body of his daughter at 1 p.m. on 8-9-1990, yet lodging the FIR on 9-9-1990 at 7.30 p.m. — Explanation offered being that he was shocked and mentally unfit to lodge the complaint, found sufficient and satisfactory by the courts below — Held, after finding his newly wedded daughter's dead body in her matrimonial home, where he had left her just a day before, it was very natural for the father to lose his tranquillity of mind — Hence if such grief-stricken father had told the police that he would give the complaint afterwards, it was not unnatural or unusual — Besides, there was no reason to falsely implicate the accused-appellants, nor any allegation that his daughter was murdered were made in the complaint which contained only narration of facts of the harassment meted out to the deceased — Hence, simply because of the delay it cannot be said that the allegations in the FIR are unworthy of credence or that the accused-appellants had been falsely implicated. Sahebrao v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 9 SCC 794: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 408: AIR 2006 SC 2002: 2006 Cri LJ 2881.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2006]

State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980; Ravinder Kumar v. State of Punjab, (2001) 7 SCC 690: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1384; Zahoor v. State of U.P., 1991 Supp (1) SCC 372: 1991 SCC (Cri) 678; Tara Singh v. State of Punjab, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 536: 1991 SCC (Cri) 710; Jamna v. State of U.P., 1994 Supp (1) SCC 185: 1994 SCC (Cri) 348; Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641, relied on [1021] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Reliability of such FIR — Appraising evidence of PW 1 (eyewitness and father of the deceased), the informant, his explanation for delay, inter alia, was that due to fear of accused and non-availability of conveyance, he could not promptly go to police station to lodge FIR — Said explanation, held, quite satisfactory and convincing and there was no deliberate delay in reporting crime to police — Contention, therefore, unsustainable (Paras 13 to 15). Indra Pal Singh v. State of U.P., (2008) 16 SCC 648: AIR 2009 SC 958: (2009) 74 AIC 244 (SC): (2009) 1 All LJ 666: 2009 Cri LJ 942.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: L.S. Panta and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-12-2008]

State of U.P. v. Ayodhya Singh, (2006) 55 All Cri C 216, affirmed

[1022] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay — Effect — Incident taking place in the early morning hours while FIR lodged at 1.30 p.m. — PW 1 immediately lodging complaint after occurrence, and was accompanied by PW 2 (grievously injured witness) to police station — PW 2 taken to a hospital first and FIR recorded at 1.30 p.m. on basis of the complaint — Held, in such circumstances delay of few hours would not vitiate the prosecution version — It was consistent with normal human conduct that effort would be first made to save life of a seriously injured person before spending time on anything else (Paras 10 and 18). Hari v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 11 SCC 96: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1254.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-2009]

State of Rajasthan v. Rajendra Singh, (2009) 11 SCC 106: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1605, distinguished on facts

[1023] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay — Informant going to wrong police station — Delay explained (Para 15). State of Maharashtra v. Prakash Sakha Vasave, (2009) 11 SCC 193: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1289: AIR 2009 SC 1636.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-2009]

[1024] — S. 154 — Presumption of adverse inference as to guilt — Incorrect basis — The fact of delay in informing police (lodging FIR) was misconstrued — PW 1 (neighbour of appellant) getting information from appellant had informed the police — On facts, held, no presumption of adverse inference can be raised against the appellant. Dinesh Borthakur v. State of Assam, (2008) 5 SCC 697: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 39: AIR 2008 SC 2205.

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-2008]

[1025] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Indirect information to police prior to FIR — Effect — FIR was lodged by appellant-accused only when police arrived at the scene of occurrence — PW 1 (neighbour of appellant) getting information from appellant had informed the police — Held, there is no delay on the part of appellant in informing the police

There was no delay on the part of the appellant in informing the police, particularly, when he had informed PW 1 who, in turn, informed the police. The first information report might have been lodged by the appellant only when the police arrived at the scene of occurrence. The investigating officer came to the place of occurrence at about 4.45 p.m. PW 1 categorically stated that he had asked somebody (whose name has not been disclosed) to inform the police. As the said request was not complied with, he himself informed the officer in charge of the police station about the incident. (Paras 58 and 5)

Though the appellant had not informed the officer in charge of the police station, no presumption of adverse inference could be raised against him. The learned trial Judge, apart from the statements made by the prosecution witnesses in regard to the conduct of the appellant opined that the appellant had failed to establish his own innocence. An adverse inference was drawn against the accused in regard to his failure to inform about the death of his wife and adopted daughter till the arrival of the police party to his house. (Paras 58 and 27). Dinesh Borthakur v. State of Assam, (2008) 5 SCC 697: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 39: AIR 2008 SC 2205.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-2008]

[1026] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Inference — Study of factual situation — Prompt filing whether guarantees veracity of the report — CrPC, 1898, S. 154

It is true that witnesses cannot be called upon to explain every hour's delay and a commonsense view has to be taken in ascertaining whether the First Information Report was lodged after an undue delay so as to afford enough scope for manipulating evidence. Whether the delay is so long as to throw a cloud of suspicion on the prosecution case must depend upon a variety of factors which would vary from case to case. Even a long delay in filing report of an occurrence can be condoned if the witnesses on whose evidence the prosecution relies have no motive for implicating the accused. On the other hand, prompt filing of the report is not an unmistakable guarantee of the truthfulness version of the prosecution. Ram Jag v. State of U.P., (1974) 4 SCC 201: AIR 1974 SC 606.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-12-1973]

[1027] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Police outpost in village where occurrence taking place — But informant proceeding to jurisdictional police station which was 6-7 km away and that too on foot though having a tractor and a scooter in his house — Meeting PW 19 (police) on the way 2 km before the police station — Complaint lodged with PW 19 at 7 p.m. but the same reaching the police station at about 11.15 p.m. — No explanation regarding this delay — As per PW 9, police arriving at the place of occurrence at about 7.30 p.m. — PW 19 in his evidence not mentioning the time of recording of the complaint — Held, actual complaint drafted at village after due deliberations and sent to police station well past 10 p.m. — Thus, PW 4 had no knowledge about the assailants when he met PW 19 — Prosecution case doubtful (Paras 10 and 17). Mohinder Singh v. State of Punjab, (2004) 12 SCC 311: AIR 2003 SC 4399: 2003 Cri LJ 5002.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-2003]

[1028] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Police station at a short distance — Delay explained — Members of Peoples' War Group armed with pistol and tamanchas suddenly appearing and firing at one of the three ex-members of the Group — One (PW 1 herein) of the remaining two ex-members rushing to police station at a distance of 200 ft and the other one running away — PW 1 returning with the police, taking the injured one to hospital where the injured dying 55 minutes after the incident — Five minutes later, PW 1 returning to police station and lodging formal FIR — In such circumstances, held, there was no delay in filing of FIR — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302 and 34 — TADA Act, 1987, Ss. 3(2)(i) & (ii) and 5 — Arms Act, 1959, S. 27 (Para 11). Sheelam Ramesh v. State of A.P., (1999) 8 SCC 369: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1437: AIR 2000 SC 118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-1999]

[1029] — S. 154 — Delay in registration and forwarding of FIR to Magistrate — On facts, held, there was no such delay — On facts, held, there was no such delay — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302

The contention about delay in registering the FIR in sending the same to the Magistrate is without any substance. PW 13, in his deposition before the trial court, clearly stated that immediately on receipt of information about the incident, PW 13 intimated his senior officer, PW 14 at the police station about the same. He further stated that after registering the FIR at 11.10 a.m. (the incident having taken place at 9.25 am), he forwarded the FIR to the Magistrate forthwith. The crystal clear statements furnished by PW 13 (police SI) do not leave any doubt that there was any delay either in registering the FIR or in forwarding the same to the Magistrate. (Para 25). Jayabalan v. UT, Pondicherry, (2010) 1 SCC 199.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2009]

[1030] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR in sexual offences — Reluctance of the prosecutrix or her family members must be taken into consideration — On facts, delay not only properly explained but also found natural — Penal Code, 1860, S. 376

The courts cannot overlook the fact that in sexual offences delay in the lodging of the FIR can be due to variety of reasons particularly the reluctance of the prosecutrix or her family members to go to the police and complain about the incident which concerns the reputation of the prosecutrix and the honour of her family. It is only after giving it a cool thought that a complaint of sexual offence is generally lodged. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 1996 SC 1393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1996]

[1031] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing — Effect — Held, not fatal in each and every case — Factum of delay requires the court to scrutinise the evidence adduced with greater degree of care and caution — Further held, delay by itself would not be sufficient to discard the prosecution version unless it is unexplained and such delay is coupled with the likelihood of concoction of evidence — In the instant case, occurrence taking place around midnight of 24/25-8-1995, statement recorded by ASI at 9.40 a.m. on basis of which formal FIR recorded at 11 a.m. on 25th, while the copy thereof reached the Magistrate at 7 p.m. — Late delivery was due to floods, which was specifically noted by the Magistrate and undisputed — Held, the delay was satisfactorily explained (Para 12). Silak Ram v. State of Haryana, (2007) 10 SCC 464: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 58: AIR 2007 SC 2739: (2007) 57 AIC 29 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 3760.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-2007]

[1032] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing FIR — Effect — Held, though mere delay in lodging of the report may not by itself be fatal to the case of the prosecution, but the delay has to be considered in the background of the facts and circumstances in each case and is a matter of appreciation of evidence by the court of fact — Circumstances under which delay may be condoned, stated — On facts, further held, FIR was lodged eight days after the alleged occurrence, for which no satisfactory explanation was rendered — Hence, appellants given benefit of doubt — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 375 and 376

In the light of the totality of the evidence, the court of fact has to consider whether the delay in lodging the report adversely affects the case of the prosecution. That is a matter of appreciation of evidence. There may be cases where there is direct evidence to explain the delay. Even in the absence of direct explanation there may be circumstances appearing on record which provide a reasonable explanation for the delay. There are cases where much time is consumed in taking the injured to the hospital for medical aid and, therefore, the witnesses find no time to lodge the report promptly. There may also be cases where on account of fear and threats, witnesses may avoid going to the police station immediately. The time of occurrence, the distance to the police station, mode of conveyance available, are all factors which have a bearing on the question of delay in lodging of the report. (Para 24)

It is also possible to conceive of cases where the victim and the members of his or her family belong to such a strata of society that they may not even be aware of their right to report the matter to the police and seek legal action, nor was any such advice available to them. (Para 24)

In the case of sexual offences there is another consideration which may weigh in the mind of the court i.e. the initial hesitation of the victim to report the matter to the police which may affect her family life and family's reputation. Very often in such cases only after considerable persuasion the prosecutrix may be persuaded to disclose the true facts. There are also cases where the victim may choose to suffer the ignominy rather than to disclose the true facts which may cast a stigma on her for the rest of her life. These are cases where the initial hesitation of the prosecutrix to disclose the true facts may provide a good explanation for the delay in lodging the report. In the ultimate analysis, what is the effect of delay in lodging the report with the police is a matter of appreciation of evidence, and the court must consider the delay in the background of the facts and circumstances of each case. Different cases have different facts and it is the totality of evidence and the impact that it has on the mind of the court that is important. No straitjacket formula can be evolved in such matters, and each case must rest on its own facts. (Para 24). Ramdas v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 2 SCC 170: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 546: AIR 2007 SC 155: (2007) 49 AIC 418 (SC).

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2006]

[1033] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging of — By itself not fatal to the prosecution case — A matter of appreciation of the evidence — Normal human nature in the context of Indian rural conditions have to be kept in mind — In absence of indications of fabrication and false implication of accused, version given in FIR and later substantiated by evidence cannot be rejected merely on ground of such delay

According to the prosecution the two appellants, who were armed with kirpans and three other accused who were armed with gandasas and takwa, emerged from the field at about 5 p.m. and at the instigation of the first appellant, all the accused chased and overtook the deceased. The first appellant (A-1) inflicted a kirpan blow on his neck while the second appellant inflicted another blow on the neck and they inflicted further blows on the deceased on receipt of which he fell down. The other accused thereafter gave him some blows. The accused thereupon ran away. An eye witness (PW 2) then went to the village at a distance of half a mile, informed the Lambardar and proceeded along with the Lambardar to the police station at a distance of 6 1/2 miles and lodged the FIR at about 8.45 p.m. on the same evening particularly mentioning that the two appellants inflicted injuries with kirpans on the neck of the deceased. On the basis of the report the Investigating Officer prepared copies of the FIR and despatched the same to all the concerned officers including the local Magistrate who received the same at about 2.45 a.m. Post mortem disclosed 12 incised wounds and one contusion. Some of them were on the head and injuries Nos. 7, 8 and 11 were either on the neck or near about. The doctor opined that the death was due to shock and haemorrhage and that injuries Nos. 1 to 5 which were on the head were also individually sufficient to cause death. The accused were absconding. Then later they were arrested and at their instance the weapons were recovered. The trial court relying on the evidence of the three eyewitnesses, which was corroborated by the medical evidence and the circumstantial evidence, convicted all the five accused and sentenced them to suffer imprisonment for life and also to pay a fine of Rs 1500 each. The Division Bench of the High Court, however, felt it unsafe to convict all the five accused since no specific acts attributed to accused 3 to 5 and accordingly convicted under S. 302/34 IPC the two appellants only to whom specific overt acts were attributed and acquitted the other three accused. Before the Supreme Court it was contended on behalf of the appellants that there was unexplained delay in the special report reaching the Magistrate and therefore a reasonable doubt arose that this time should have been utilised for consultation with a view to implicate some of the appellants falsely out of enmity.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The delay in giving the FIR by itself cannot be a ground to doubt the prosecution case. Knowing the Indian conditions as they are these villagers cannot be expected to rush to the police station immediately after the occurrence. Human nature as it is, the kith and kin who have witnessed the occurrence cannot be expected to act mechanically with all the promptitude in giving the report to the police. At times being grief-striken because of the calamity it may not immediately occur to them that they should give a report. It is but natural in these circumstances for them to take some time to go to the police station for giving the report. As in cases arising out of acute factions there is a tendency to implicate persons belonging to the opposite faction falsely, courts in order to avert the danger of convicting such innocent persons, are cautioned to scrutinise the evidence of such interested witnesses with greater care and caution and separate grain from the chaff after subjecting the evidence to a closer scrutiny and in doing so the contents of the FIR also will have to be scrutinised carefully. However, unless there are indications of fabrication, the court cannot reject the prosecution version as given in the FIR and later substantiated by the evidence merely on the ground of delay. These are all matters for appreciation and much depends on the facts and circumstances of each case. (Para 4)

There was no inordinate and unexplained delay in sending the report to the magistrate. There is no ground to doubt the presence of the eye witnesses at the scene of occurrence. They have consistently deposed that the two appellants inflicted injuries on the neck with kirpans. The medical evidence amply supports the same. There are no material contradictions or omissions which in any manner throw a doubt on their veracity. The High Court by way of an abundant caution gave the benefit of doubt to the other three accused since the allegation against them is an omnibus one. The evidence against the appellants being cogent and convincing and the specific overt acts having been attributed to them, there are no grounds for the Supreme Court to interfere. (Para 4). Tara Singh v. State of Punjab, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 536: 1991 SCC (Cri) 710: AIR 1991 SC 63: (1991) 28 ACC 93.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-10-1990]

Balaka Singh v. State of Punjab, (1975) 4 SCC 511: 1975 SCC (Cri) 601, distinguished

[1034] — S. 154 — Genuine causes for, illustrated — Delayed FIR is neither illegal nor necessarily fatal — Court has to ascertain the causes for the delay in a particular case and if the causes are not attributable to any effort to concoct a version, mere delay by itself would not be fatal to the prosecution case — Where death of the deceased was confirmed only when his dead body was identified two days after his disappearance and thereafter it took some time for deceased's grief-stricken widow to come to the level of placidity so as to communicate to others, held, delay of two days in lodging the FIR was not a vitiating factor

The attack on prosecution cases on the ground of delay in lodging FIR has almost bogged down as a stereotyped redundancy in criminal cases. It is a recurring feature in most of the criminal cases that there would be some delay in furnishing the first information to the police. It is to be noted that law has not fixed any time for lodging the FIR. Hence a delayed FIR is not illegal. Of course a prompt and immediate lodging of the FIR is the ideal as that would give the prosecution a twin advantage. First is that it affords commencement of the investigation without any time lapse. Second is that it expels the opportunity for any possible concoction of a false version. Barring these two plus points for a promptly lodged FIR the demerits of the delayed FIR cannot operate as fatal to any prosecution case. Even a promptly lodged FIR is not an unreserved guarantee for the genuineness of the version incorporated therein. (Para 13)

When there is criticism on the ground that FIR in a case was delayed the court has to look at the reason why there was such a delay. There can be a variety of genuine causes for FIR lodgement to get delayed. Rural people might be ignorant of the need to inform the police of a crime without any lapse of time. This kind of unconversantness is not too uncommon among urban people also. They might not immediately think of going to the police station. Another possibility is due to lack of adequate transport facilities for the informers to reach the police station. The third, which is a quite common bearing, is that the kith and kin of the deceased might take some appreciable time to regain a certain level of tranquillity of mind or sedativeness of temper for moving to the police station for the purpose of furnishing the requisite information. Yet another cause is, the persons who are supposed to give such information themselves could be so physically impaired that the police had to reach them on getting some nebulous information about the incident. This is not an exhaustive catalogue of instances which could cause delay in lodging the FIR. (Para 14)

The stale demand made in the criminal courts to treat the FIR vitiated, merely on the ground of delay in its lodgement cannot be approved as a legal corollary. In any case, where there is delay in making the FIR the court is to look at the causes for it and if such causes are not attributable to any effort to concoct a version no consequence shall be attached to the mere delay in lodging the FIR. (Para 15)

In the present case, no doubt, there is apparently a long delay of two days to give information to the police but the bereaved widow was not absolutely certain that she lost her husband once and for all until her brother-in-law confirmed to her, after identifying the dead body, that the same was that of her husband. The initial tension and suspense undergone by her would have billowed up into a massive wave of grief. It is only understandable how much time a woman, placed in such a situation, would take to reach some level of placidity for communicating to the strangers of what she knew about the last journey of her husband. Therefore, there is no merit in the contention that the inordinate delay in filing the FIR was itself a vitiating factor. (Para 16). Ravinder Kumar v. State of Punjab, (2001) 7 SCC 690: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1384: AIR 2001 SC 3570.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-2001]

Zahoor v. State of U.P., 1991 Supp (1) SCC 372: 1991 SCC (Cri) 678; Tara Singh v. State of Punjab, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 536: 1991 SCC (Cri) 710; Jamna v. State of U.P., 1994 Supp (1) SCC 185: 1994 SCC (Cri) 348, relied on

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

[1035] — S. 154 — Lodging of FIR regarding a gruesome murder after 3 hours at a police station 4 1/2 miles away from the place of occurrence, cannot amount to unreasonable delay — Delay properly explained. Abdul Razaq v. Nanhey, 1984 Supp SCC 15: 1984 SCC (Cri) 384: AIR 1984 SC 452: 1984 Cri LJ 185.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, O. Chinnappa Reddy and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-1983]

[1036] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Whether there was due diligence — Normal conduct of person of common prudence to be considered

The argument raised on behalf of the appellant that there was inordinate and unexplained delay in registering the FIR is without any substance. The incident occurred at 4.00 p.m. on 16-5-1988 whereafter the family of the deceased was informed. It is a normal conduct of a normal person that the entire concentration would be upon looking after and saving the deceased rather than to run up to the police or other persons instantaneously. She died at 9.00 p.m. on the same day. A complaint was lodged resulting in registration of the FIR at 7.30 p.m. on 17-5-1988 which obviously means that the complainant had reached the police station even prior thereto. The conduct of the complainant and the witnesses is in line with the behaviour of a person of common prudence and the facts and circumstances of the case clearly demonstrate proper exercise of due diligence on the part of these witnesses. Firstly, the complainant family got the information of the death of the deceased from a relative and, thereafter, they must have tried to get the body subjected to the post-mortem and have the same released for performing the last rites. The incident occurred on 16-5-1988 and the FIR was registered on 17-5-1988. Therefore, there was no abnormal or inordinate delay in lodging the FIR in the facts of this case. Even if delay is presumed it is not of such a nature that would entail any benefit to the accused. There is no inordinate or unexplained delay in lodging the FIR. (Paras 45 and 46). Ashok Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2010) 12 SCC 350: AIR 2010 SC 2839: 2010 Cri LJ 4402: (2010) 93 AIC 129 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. B.S. Chauhan and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-7-2010]

[1037] — S. 154 — Mere delay by itself not sufficient to reject the evidence of eyewitnesses unless there were indications of false implication or circumstances which would manifest that they could not have witnessed the occurrence. Brijpal Singh v. State of U.P., 1994 Supp (1) SCC 566: 1994 SCC (Cri) 419: AIR 1994 SC 1624: 1994 Cri LJ 2082.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-1993]

[1038] — S. 154 — Occurrence taking place at 7 p.m. — Deceased rushed to hospital but expiring on the way and so his dead body brought back — FIR lodged next morning, held, cannot be said to be case of delay — In any case, such delay not material on facts. State of Karnataka v. Rama Reddy, 1994 SCC (Cri) 42: 1993 Cri LJ 3553.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-1993]

[1039] — S. 154 — Time taken in lodging FIR — Must be considered against the facts and circumstances of the case without ignoring the human factor involved such as the time required by the persons concerned to compose themselves before deciding on their course of action. State of U.P. v. Manoharlal, 1981 Supp SCC 35: 1981 SCC (Cri) 672: AIR 1981 SC 2073.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-1981]

[1040] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Delay in filing FIR — Occurrence taking place at 6.30 p.m. — FIR lodged at 9.45 p.m. at Police Station 13 km. from the place of occurrence — Special report reaching the Magistrate at midnight at a distance of 25 km. — Held, FIR not delayed. State of Haryana v. Mewa Singh, (1997) 10 SCC 587: 1997 SCC (Cri) 890: AIR 1997 SC 1407: 1997 Cri LJ 1906.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-1997]

[1041] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Conviction confirmed — Dispute over fixing of a banner — Six accused, of whom SK and AA armed with double-barrelled guns alleged to have gone to informant's house and on exhortation from other co-accused alleged to have fired at D-1 and D-2 (informant's sons) resulting in their death and causing injuries to one other — AA convicted under S. 302 and sentenced to death (commuted to life imprisonment by High Court) while other accused convicted under S. 302 r/w S. 149 and sentenced to life imprisonment — Submission by accused that: (i) unexplained delay in lodging FIR; manipulations/fabrication in FIR; no evidence that special report was sent to Magistrate; (ii) as injured wit- ness not examined, evidence of other PWs also should not be believed; (iii) investigation was tainted; (iv) no evidence to show that death was on account of AA's firing and even if prosecution version accepted in totality appropriate conviction would be under S. 304 Pt. I; and (v) co-accused included the driver and if they were carrying weapons, there was no question of any exhortation or it might have been done by the absconding accused since it was unlikely that a driver would give orders to his master — Held, purported delay in registering/manipulation of FIR, or dispatch of special report to Magistrate has been satisfactorily explained by prosecution — Moreover, as observed by High Court that if there was any lapse on the part of the investigating officer, that would not affect the credibility of the prosecution version — Besides, investigation had commenced immediately and there was no previous enmity between parties — Hence, question of fabrication/manipulation of FIR does not arise — Held, no interference with impugned judgment called for (Paras 2, 6 and 13 to 19). Aqeel Ahmad v. State of U.P., (2008) 16 SCC 372: AIR 2009 SC 1271: (2009) 2 All LJ 178: (2009) 75 AIC 248 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-2008]

Sunil Kumar v. State of Rajasthan, (2005) 9 SCC 283: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1230; Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641, considered and relied on

Ram Bali v. State of U.P., (2004) 10 SCC 598: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2045, relied on [1042] — S. 154 — FIR — Delayed FIR — Effect of — Delayed FIR based on dying declaration written on 17-9-1993 — Complaint was filed on 26-9-1993 — FIR held to be doubtful (Para 19). Mukeshbhai Gopalbhai Barot v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 12 SCC 224: AIR 2010 SC 3692.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2010]

[1043] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing — Offence of bigamy — Delay of four years in filing the complaint — Effect — Held, delay by itself may not be fatal but it was so in the facts and circumstances of the case

Ordinarily the Supreme Court would decline to reappreciate the evidence but in a given case if the court comes to the conclusion that the appreciation of evidence by lower courts has resulted in grave miscarriage of justice, the court may appreciate the evidence. Having examined the record, it is held that the present case falls in the excepted category as all the courts have lost sight of the material aspect of the case, namely, filing of the complaint after four years and absence of any explanation as to what was happening during the said period. (Para 6). Purandar Sahoo v. Golapi Sahoo, (2007) 15 SCC 696.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-2003]

[1044] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Satisfactory explanation — Attack by unlawful assembly — Appreciation of evidence — Conviction justified — Ongoing land dispute between B and J caste — Appellant-accused of B caste not permitting father and brother of first informant of J caste to cultivate land allotted to them by Government — On a day, appellants on being informed about tilling of disputed land by people of J caste, proceeded towards said land, armed with axes and lathis, and on reaching the place, attacked first informant and his relatives, by means of weapons carried and fist-blows, thereby injuring them and causing death of his brother — Held, homicidal death of deceased, proved beyond reasonable doubt — Medical evidence establishing cause of death and various injuries sustained by injured witnesses and also corroborating prosecution version regarding time and date of occurrence — Submission that appellants should be acquitted on ground that several conflicting complaints given, without substance — In a small village, incident relating to death of villager and injuries to several others would cause sensation and anxiety in minds of villagers residing there — Therefore, some villagers had also given vague information relating to incident — Further, merely because FIR handed over to police on next day of incident, would not show that no incident took place at all — Undoubtedly, appellants were members of unlawful assembly, common intention of which was to mount attack and cause injuries and death to first informant and his relatives — Hence, held, conviction justified (Paras 22 to 49). Vishnu v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 10 SCC 477: (2009) 83 AIC 177 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-2009]

[1045] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging — Unnatural conduct of complainant — Adverse inference drawn — Police station hardly one furlong away from place of occurrence — Complainant not going to police station immediately — Instead going elsewhere, getting a written report prepared and lodging report after 45 minutes — Held, such behaviour creates doubt and false implication not ruled out since complainant had a grudge against accused

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

One of the main reasons given by the High Court in upsetting the judgment of acquittal is that the FIR was lodged barely 45 minutes after the incident; the distance of police station being hardly one furlong from the place of occurrence. The High Court, however, failed to consider a very material aspect that despite the fact that police station was situated close and visible from the place of incident, yet PW 1 did not go immediately to the police station to report but he first went to C to have a written report prepared and then went to the police station with written report. The first version of the incident could have been reported at the police station within five minutes of its occurrence. The fact that PW 1 took 45 minutes in reporting the incident at the police station rather creates doubt about the truthfulness of the prosecution case and does not rule out false implication of the accused against whom PW 1 had grudge due to some civil dispute between them. (Para 15). Mahtab Singh v. State of U.P., (2009) 13 SCC 670: AIR 2009 SC 2298: (2009) 5 All LJ 268: (2009) 78 AIC 254 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.B. Sinha, Dr. M.K. Sharma and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2009]

[1046] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — High Court holding that although there was no cross-examination on the aspect of delay but possibility of some deliberation before registration of FIR could not be ruled out as a result of delay in sending the FIR — Held, such conclusion of the High Court without any factual basis was perverse (Para 6). State of Karnataka v. Papanna Uruf Babavaraj Shivappa, (2008) 17 SCC 739.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-2003]

[1047] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — Reasonably explained — Held, in such a case, High Court was in grave error in concluding that there was no reasonable and plausible explanation for belated FIR and that it was lodged after consultation and due deliberation which created doubt about instant case — Unfortunately, High Court did not advert to evidence of PW 1 (complainant, brother of rape victim) and reasoning of trial court in this regard — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 (Para 33). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

Prakash Singh v. Union of India, (2006) 8 SCC 1: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 417, relied on [1048] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay satisfactorily explained — The alleged delay in lodging FIR satisfactorily explained that informant first got his two injured sons admitted to hospital and soon thereafter lodged FIR — High Court not considering relevance of concession made by advocate of accused as regards death of wife of informant — High Court also discarding evidence of three injured eyewitnesses which trial court found flawless and credible — Held, High Court should not have on mere surmises and conjectures interfered with judgment of trial court — Hence, conviction restored. State of Punjab v. Atma Singh, (2009) 15 SCC 45.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

[1049] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — Adequate reasons therefor — Effect on prosecution story, if any — Murder trial — On facts, delay in lodging FIR, if any, was explained with adequate reasons therefor — Hence, held, no delay at all was caused in lodging the same — Therefore prosecution story not affected — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 307, 143, 148, 504 and 149

The FIR, having regard to the distance between the place of occurrence and the police station cannot be said to have been lodged after a long delay. The incident took place at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. It must have continued for sometime. The mental condition of the prosecution witnesses can be well imagined. They had to arrange a transport to take three persons, who were severely injured, to the hospital, particularly when one of them had suffered grievous injuries. (Para 14)

Before coming to the police station, PW 1 (nephew of two of the deceased) got the FIR scribed by PW 2 (nephew of two of the deceased) who is a graduate in Science. He wrote the same in English. That must have also consumed some time. It was in the aforementioned circumstances that the FIR was lodged at the police station within a period of 2½ hours from the time when the incident had taken place; the police station being at a distance of 16 km from the village. Therefore, no delay at all was caused in lodging the same. (Para 17). Gurunath Donkappa Keri v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 13 SCC 34: 2009 Cri LJ 2995.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[1050] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR — Delay — Whether there was unexplained and unreasonable delay in lodging — Whether FIR antetimed — Checks to determine — Murder — Copy of FIR received by Ilaqa Magistrate in time —

While sending the dead body for inquest copy of FIR also sent along with it — Inquest report referred to the FIR and time of its lodging as also dispatch of the special report to authorities concerned — Incident took place in village at 7 p.m. — Victim in a critically injured condition first taken to his farmhouse, then to Primary Health Centre in a bullock cart at about 9 p.m. and then to Civil Hospital, where he died — FIR lodged next day at 11.45 a.m. in police station at a distance of 9-10 km — Special report sent to Ilaqa Magistrate at 5 p.m. same day — Held on facts, sequence of events reveals that there was no unexplained and unreasonable delay in lodging FIR — In the circumstances, FIR cannot be said to be ante-timed and brought into existence after some deliberations — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 (Paras 13 to 15). Paramjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2007) 13 SCC 530: AIR 2008 SC 441: (2008) 61 AIC 142 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-2007]

[1051] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR — Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate — Explanation if satisfactory — FIR lodged at 0025 hours on 13-4-1992 received by the Judicial Magistrate only on 18-4-1992 — Only explanation offered was that the same was sent through a Circle Officer and not directly — No explanation as to why the Circle Officer of the rank of DSP did not act responsibly — Statement of V who had accompanied PW 1 (complainant) to lodge FIR not recorded by the IO and provisions contained in U.P. Police Regulations not complied with — Held, finding of the trial court that there was possibility of FIR being ante-timed sustainable since although the number of FIR was mentioned other details were lacking — U.P. Police Regulations — Regns. 97, 108 and 109 (Paras 14, 15, 16 and 18 to 24). Budh Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 9 SCC 731: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 377: AIR 2006 SC 2500: 2006 Cri LJ 2886: (2006) 4 All LJ 284.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-2006]

Thanedar Singh v. State of M.P., (2002) 1 SCC 487: 2002 SCC (Cri) 153; Rajeevan v. State of Kerala, (2003) 3 SCC 355: 2003 SCC (Cri) 751; Bijoy Singh v. State of Bihar, (2002) 9 SCC 147: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1093; Rajesh v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 4 SCC 426: 2002 SCC (Cri) 814, relied on

Meharaj Singh v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391, held distinguished

Followed in Mahmood v. State of U.P., (2007) 14 SCC 16*

[1052] — S. 154 — Delay explained — Delay in lodging FIR adequately explained by the fact of fear created by the accused and by the compelling circumstance to first trace out the dead bodies taken away by the accused and another person abducted by them. Sone Lal v. State of U.P., (1978) 4 SCC 302: 1978 SCC (Cri) 587: AIR 1978 SC 1142: 1978 Cri LJ 1122: 1978 ALJ 530.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-1978]

[1053] — S. 154 — Delay explained — Murder taking place at 12 noon — Police station at a distance of three miles — Complainant son made to wait at police station for arrival of PSI — FIR recorded at 5-30 p.m. — Held, delay in filing report, if any, remains explained and did not affect prosecution case

When the accused themselves do not want to rely on the injuries found on them and do not in any manner connect the receipt of the injuries found on them to the occurrence, the question of explaining the same by the prosecution does not arise. The High Court has rightly held that the trial court has erred on doubting the prosecution case and the evidence of the eyewitnesses on the ground that the injuries on the accused were not explained. Thakore Dolji Vanvirji v. State of Gujarat, 1993 Supp (2) SCC 534: 1993 SCC (Cri) 704: AIR 1993 SC 209: (1993) 1 GLH 1040.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-1992]

[1054] — S. 154 — 14 hours' delay in lodging FIR — On facts, held, was inevitable — Hence, not vitiative of the testimony of the prosecution witnesses

The evidence of PWs 1 and 3 clearly indicates that they spent the night in the fields, then walked the entire distance to the police station situate at a distance of 10 miles, got the report written there and lodged it at the police station at 8.30 a.m. Having seen the ghastly murder of their leader being committed by the rivals at about 6.30 p.m. in the preceding evening, it was too much to expect of PWs 1 and 3 to rush to the police station, for reasonable apprehension to their lives in the event of their taking such a step could not be excluded. Obviously, for that purpose PWs 1 and 3 took shelter in the fields in the darkness and proceeded to the police station in the small hours of the following day. Therefore, there was no avoidable delay in lodging the FIR. On the contrary, it was lodged at the earliest possible opportunity. B. Subba Rao v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1997) 11 SCC 478: AIR 1997 SC 3427: 1997 Cri LJ 4072.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-1997]

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

[1055] — S. 154 — Attack on deceased taking place at midnight — Deceased remaining alive and taken to police station at a distance of 5 miles for lodging FIR next morning due to difficulty in arranging bullock-cart at night and fear of further attack by the accused in darkness — Lantern seized and produced before court, not having wick and chimney — In the circumstances held, High Court erred in construing the delay in taking the deceased to the police station as meaning that the attack on the deceased had gone unnoticed till the morning hours. State of U.P. v. Chet Ram, (1989) 2 SCC 425: 1989 SCC (Cri) 388: AIR 1989 SC 1543: 1989 Cri LJ 1785.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-3-1989]

[1056] — S. 154 — Concoction of prosecution case alleged — Murder in a village at 11.00 p.m. — FIR lodged on the following day at about 7.30 a.m., held, not delayed — Hence, the plea that the prosecution had concocted a false story against the accused, rejected. Nikka Singh v. State of Punjab, (1996) 11 SCC 283: 1997 SCC (Cri) 67: AIR 1997 SC 3676.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-1996]

[1057] — S. 154 — Delay in filing, even though concerned police officers and DM reached the spot soon after the occurrence, police station situated at a short distance and eyewitnesses also claim to be present at the spot — No satisfactory explanation given by prosecution — Held, circumstances make the presence of the eyewitnesses at the place and time of occurrence doubtful. Awadesh v. State of M.P., (1988) 2 SCC 557: 1988 SCC (Cri) 361: AIR 1988 SC 1158.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.N. Singh and M.H. Kania, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-1988]

[1058] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Attempt to murder daughter by her father and uncle — Victim and her mother being shocked could not take any intelligent decision and FIR lodged about 30 hours after the incident — Delay not fatal. Sher Singh v. State of Punjab, (1979) 3 SCC 606: 1979 SCC (Cri) 740: AIR 1979 SC 699: 1979 Cri LJ 642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.S. Kailasam and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-1978]

[1059] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — If stands explained — Effect on prosecution case, if any — Death by burning — Allegation on appellant-accused for burning deceased to death — Information received at police outpost in the hospital on 9-4-1995 when requisition for recording dying declaration made — Dying declaration recorded on 9-4-1995 — On 10-4-1995 statement taken by police officer himself — Formal FIR recorded on 12-4-1995 — Held, delay in recording formal FIR stood explained — Hence, prosecution case not affected

A submission was made that there was a delay in filing the FIR inasmuch as although the alleged incident of burning had taken place on 9-4-1995 the same came to be recorded in the form of a formal FIR only on 12-4-1995. On going through the records and its proper examination, the said contention cannot be accepted for the simple reason that information was received about the incident of burning at the police outpost located in the hospital (where the deceased was admitted) itself on 9-4-1995, when requisition was sent for recording the dying declaration, pursuant to which the dying declaration was recorded on 9-4-1995. On 10-4-1995, a statement was taken from the deceased by the police officer himself. Consequently, it is established that the formal FIR came to be recorded on 12-4-1995, although the incident was reported on 9-4-1995 on the basis of which the police started the investigation by sending a requisition to the Taluka Executive Magistrate which was followed up by recording of the statement of the deceased by the police. Delay, therefore, in recording the formal FIR stands explained. (Para 19). Kamalavva v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 13 SCC 614: 2009 Cri LJ 4408.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-2009]

[1060] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Delay of 10 hours in lodging FIR — Incident taking place at 10.30 p.m. — FIR lodged in the following morning immediately after arrival of the father of the deceased — Held, on facts, no unreasonable delay occurred. Sat Pal v. State of Punjab, 1995 SCC (Cri) 1039: AIR 1996 SC 201.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-1995]

[1061] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Delay of 12 hours in filing the FIR at police station which was at a distance of two furlongs from the spot — Deceased taken to the hospital in a very critical condition — Eyewitnesses, one of whom was father of the deceased, remaining busy in attending the deceased and arranging for blood and medicines — Accused closely related with the complainant and there was no previous enmity between the two families — In the facts and circumstances of the case conclusion of the High Court that the delay was properly explained is unexceptionable. Sanjeev Kumar v. State of Punjab, (1997) 10 SCC 40: 1997 SCC (Cri) 773: AIR 1997 SC 3717: 1997 Cri LJ 3178.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1997]

[1062] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — FIR mentioning names of some of the accused lodged next day early in the morning at police station at a distance of 5 km from the place of occurrence — Held, in the circumstances, FIR was not delayed and non-mention of name of all the accused (24) and details of injuries would not render it unreliable (Para 6). P. Venkataswarlu v. State of A.P., (2002) 10 SCC 46: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1414: AIR 2003 SC 574: 2003 Cri LJ 837.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-2002]

[1063] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Gruesome murder of three persons in a village — Assailants keeping a watch on the road throughout the night and leaving the place at about 5.00 a.m. — FIR lodged at 7 a.m. — Two hours' time taken in covering distance of police station — Absence of cross-examination of the first information on explanation of delay — Held, in the circumstances, delay satisfactorily explained. State of U.P. v. Nahar Singh, (1998) 3 SCC 561: 1998 SCC (Cri) 850: AIR 1998 SC 1328.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-1998]

[1064] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Held, mere delay in lodging FIR may not prove fatal in all cases — But on facts of the present case, certainly it is one of the factors which corrodes the credibility of the prosecution case (Para 6). State of Rajasthan v. Bhanwar Singh, 2005 SCC (Cri) 73.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2004]

[1065] — S. 154 — FIR — Sufficiently explained — Action on part of PWs in giving priority to treatment of injured deceased was wholly justifiable — Again, they were busy also in intimating his son and bringing him to hospital at the earliest possible opportunity — Therefore, delay in lodging FIR, sufficiently explained (Paras 23 and 24). Padmanaban v. State, (2009) 15 SCC 108.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-7-2009]

Virsa Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1958 SC 465; Kesar Singh v. State of Haryana, (2008) 15 SCC 753; Mohd. Asif v. State of Uttaranchal, (2009) 11 SCC 497; Bala Baine Linga Raju v. State of A.P., (2009) 6 SCC 706, relied on [1066] — S. 154 — Sufficiently explained — Effect, if any — Held, on facts, delay of two hours in filing FIR, stood sufficiently explained — Therefore, defence submission that time of two hours was used to falsely implicate accused due to previous enmity, rejected (Para 17). Himanshu v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2011) 2 SCC 36.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-1-2011]

Ram Babu v. State of U.P., (2010) 5 SCC 63: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1233, relied on [1067] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Held, mere delay in lodging FIR may not prove fatal in all cases — But on facts of the present case, certainly it is one of the factors which corrodes the credibility of the prosecution case (Para 6). State of Rajasthan v. Bhanwar Singh, (2004) 13 SCC 147: 2005 SCC (Cri) 73: AIR 2004 SC 4660: 2004 Cri LJ 4886.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2004]

[1068] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Held, on facts to be sufficiently explained. Ravulappalli Kondaiah v. State of A.P., (1975) 3 SCC 752: 1975 SCC (Cri) 213: AIR 1975 SC 216: 1975 Cri LJ 262.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-11-1974]

[1069] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — In sexual offences, held, delay in lodging the first information report cannot be used as a ritualistic formula for doubting the prosecution case and discarding the same — Delay has the effect of putting the court on guard to search if any explanation has been offered for the delay and, if offered, whether it is satisfactory (Para 6). Dildar Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 10 SCC 531: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 129: AIR 2006 SC 3084: 2006 Cri LJ 3914.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

[1070] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Incident taking place at about 2.15 p.m. and FIR lodged at 5.10 p.m. — Time taken in providing medical aid to the victim — Held, in the circumstances, delay not fatal to the prosecution case. State of Karnataka v. Diwakara Bhat, (1996) 11 SCC 148: 1997 SCC (Cri) 146.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-1996]

[1071] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — Not established — Incident taking place at 12 midnight — Police station at a distance of 4 or 5 km — Three persons in family killed by group of persons armed with deadly weapons and PWs 2 to 4 (eyewitnesses) also seriously injured — Entire village terror-stricken — Under such circumstances, held, it is not expected that someone would rush to police station and lodge FIR — FIR lodged within 5 to 5 1/2 hours immediately after incident, can not be characterised as delayed one in such circumstances — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 307 and 147 to 149 (Paras 16 and 16.3). Surendra Pal v. State of U.P., (2010) 9 SCC 399.

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2010]

Suresh Rai v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 84: 2000 SCC (Cri) 764; Eqbal Baig v. State of A.P., (1986) 2 SCC 476: 1986 SCC (Cri) 232, relied on [1072] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Information of the incident given to the local village officer who went to the spot and after verifying the correctness of the information furnished by the informant recorded his statement — Possibility of deliberations and confabulations cannot be ruled out — But that is not enough to vitiate the entire testimony of the first informant — Assurance can be obtained from other evidence regarding the truth of his version. Periasami v. State of T.N., (1996) 6 SCC 457: 1997 SCC (Cri) 121.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-1996]

[1073] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Message about the incident given to the police at 9.54 a.m. — Police reaching the spot at about 10.30 a.m. and taking the victims to the hospital at 11.15 a.m. — FIR recorded on the basis of the statement of the sister of the deceased at about 1.15 p.m. when she was fit to make a statement — Held, in the circumstances of the case, the High Court was justified in taking the view that there was no undue delay in recording the FIR and it was a true and correct recording of the earliest version about the incident. Hari Chand v. State of Delhi, (1996) 9 SCC 112: 1996 SCC (Cri) 950: AIR 1996 SC 1477.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-1996]

[1074] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Occurrence taking place at 2.30 p.m. — Fardbayan giving complete and full account of the occurrence and the role of the accused recorded by the IO at 4.30 p.m. — IO preparing the inquest report and site plan and continuing to record the statements of witnesses till 10.30 p.m. — Thereafter, fardbayan sent to the police station through special messenger on the basis of which the FIR recorded next day — Held, in the circumstances of the case, plea that there was delay in lodging the FIR making the prosecution story unbelievable cannot be accepted. Baleshwar Mandal v. State of Bihar, (1997) 7 SCC 219: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1042: AIR 1997 SC 3471: 1997 Cri LJ 4084.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-1997]

[1075] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Occurrence taking place in the evening at 7.30 p.m. in the winter season — FIR lodged next day at 10.30 a.m. — Police station at a distance of 18 kms. — Injured first informant, a widow, having 4 minor children one of whom also injured in the occurrence — Absence of male member in family — Held, in the circumstances, delay properly explained (Para 16). Ram Kumar v. State of Haryana, 1995 Supp (1) SCC 248: 1995 SCC (Cri) 355: AIR 1995 SC 280: (1995) 32 ACC 47.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-1994]

[1076] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR not explained properly — Such FIR would be viewed with suspicion

In the present case in view of the inordinate delay involved in giving FIR to the police and other inherent inconsistencies in the evidence of the sole eyewitness, such evidence cannot be considered as sufficient to find the accused guilty. Ramji Surjya Padvi v. State of Maharashtra, (1983) 3 SCC 629: 1983 SCC (Cri) 748: AIR 1983 SC 810: 1983 Cri LJ 1105: 1983 MLJ (Cri) 520.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: E.S. Venkataramiah and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-1983]

[1077] — S. 154 — Delay in filing of FIR — Seriously affects the credibility of the story stated therein. Anne Nageswara Rao v. Public Prosecutor, (1975) 4 SCC 106: 1975 SCC (Cri) 357: AIR 1975 SC 1387: 1975 Cri LJ 1119.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A. Alagiriswami and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-1975]

[1078] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Considerable delay for which the explanation was not convincing — Benefit given to defence (Paras 7 to 9). Ronald Kiprono Ramkat v. State of Haryana, (2001) 6 SCC 423: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1034: AIR 2001 SC 2488.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-7-2001]

[1079] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Father of deceased daughter staying in hospital all along till evening of next day when body handed over after post-mortem — Delay explained — Not to affect veracity of statement of the father and sister of deceased. Gurbachan Singh v. Satpal Singh, (1990) 1 SCC 445: 1990 SCC (Cri) 151: AIR 1990 SC 209: 1990 Cri LJ 562.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Sabyasachi Mukharji[1] and B.C. Ray[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 26-9-1989]

[1080] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Incident taking place at 9 a.m. — Distance of police station from the village in question 15 km. and bus not available to reach the police station in the night — FIR lodged at 9 a.m. on the following day, held, not delayed. Bhaskaran v. State of Kerala, (1998) 9 SCC 12: 1998 SCC (Cri) 843: AIR 1998 SC 476: 1998 Cri LJ 684.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-1997]

[1081] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Occurrence taking place at 1.30 p.m. and the first information statement recorded at 4.50 p.m. — Time taken in shifting the injured to other hospital and making effort to save his life — Delay not unreasonable. Harpal Singh v. Devinder Singh, (1997) 6 SCC 660: 1997 SCC (Cri) 981: AIR 1997 SC 2914: 1997 Cri LJ 3561.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-7-1997]

[1082] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Occurrence taking place at about 6 p.m. — FIR lodged next day at 2 p.m. — Delay in medical treatment of the deceased and in preparation of medico-legal report due to non-availability of doctor in the hospital — Held, in the circumstances, delay in registering the case was not due to some ulterior motive. Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 472: 1995 SCC (Cri) 951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-1995]

[1083] — S. 154 — Occurrence taking place on 26-8-1998 at 4 p.m. — Father of victim, the informant, reached home at 8 p.m. whereafter he was informed about the occurrence — IO stating that it was rainy season, the area was flooded, and he reached the place of occurrence on night of 26-8-1998/27-8-1998 at about 1.30 a.m. and recorded fardbeyan — Hence held, there was no such delay which was fatal to the prosecution case (Para 6). Murari Thakur v. State of Bihar, (2009) 16 SCC 256.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-2006]

[1084] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Adverse effect — Murder — Political rivalry — Presence of eyewitnesses (PWs 1 and 2) at the place of incident — Doubt in respect of — PWs 1 and 2 along with deceased M returning from a hospital where S (brother of M) was lying injured because of an earlier attack by the members of the accused — On the way, they found accused and their followers waiting in a jeep and tractor abusing S — A-2 exhorting A-1 to kill M — M started running towards hospital — A-1 shot him on his back — Body of M found lying not in direction of hospital but in opposite direction — M bleeding profusely, but no stains of blood on clothes of PWs 1 and 2 who were stated to have carried him to hospital — Case diary showing that M was carried to hospital by IO — FIR filed belatedly after due deliberation — Ballistic report not supporting prosecution case — Contradiction between evidence of IO and PWs 1 and 2 regarding the time at which they went to see S in the hospital — Defence version that (i) M and others came to attack accused persons present in shop of one O, and (ii) M died due to gunshot fired by one supporter of S, on facts, more probable — Acquittal upheld — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302 and 302/34

The IO stated that he went to the hospital at about 9 p.m. and recorded the statement of injured S; whereas PWs 1 and 2 state that when they went to the hospital at 9 p.m. they did not see the IO there. Therefore, either the IO who stated that he recorded the statement at 9 p.m. or the statement of PWs 1 and 2 that they went to the hospital at 9 p.m. is false. Either way, the prosecution has to suffer the consequence of such contradiction. (Para 11)

The defence stated that after the incident in which S was injured, the members of the group belonging to the said S which included M, came to the Chowk Bazar and wanted to attack the supporters of the group of the accused persons who were in the shop of one O. O and others who were in the shop, noticing the likely attack from this group, downed the shutters of the shop but the same did not close completely, hence, one of the members of the group supporting S fired with a 12-bore gun which inadvertently hit M who was then peeping between the gaps in the shutter into the shop, and because of that injury M fell down dead on the thara of the said shop of O. There was a parallel investigation in regard to the said attack in the shop of O and in the said investigation, the investigating agency had recorded certain statements which clearly showed the possibility of M having died in such an attack. (Para 9)

Further, the entry in the case diary shows that it is the IO who took the dead body of M to the hospital from the place of incident, and not PWs 1 and 2. That apart, a gandasa was found opposite to the shop of the said O. It is not the case of the prosecution in this case that these accused carried any gandasa, while the defence had suggested that the assailants went to the shop of O carrying a gandasa apart from a gun. The facts in the case strengthen the argument of the defence that the complaint in question had come into existence much later as stated by the prosecution. (Para 10)

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

From the evidence of the ballistic expert it is clear that it is not possible to establish whether the firearm used in the attack as alleged by the prosecution was the same as was sent to him for his examination. (Para 12)

In view of the above, the judgment of the High Court is unexceptional, therefore, it does not call for any interference. (Para 13). State of Rajasthan v. Taran Singh, (2003) 12 SCC 341: AIR 2004 SC 1080: 2004 Cri LJ 654.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2003]

[1085] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Explanation — Incident taking place at 10.00 p.m. — Terrorist activities at its peak in Punjab at that time — PW stating that accused had threatened the lives of the witnesses, in case they went to police station — Next morning PW going to Sarpanch at 5.00 a.m. and as it was raining they starting from his house at 7.45 a.m. for lodging report at the police station — On the way they meeting the Officer-in-charge of the police station, who was on patrolling duty — He recording the statement of PW at 9.00 a.m. on the basis of which formal FIR was drawn up at 9.40 a.m. — Held, there was no inordinate delay in lodging the FIR as the delay had been duly explained (Para 11). State of Punjab v. Mela Singh, (2003) 12 SCC 464: AIR 2004 SC 257: 2004 Cri LJ 368.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2003]

[1086] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Explanation that critical law and order situation was existing in the area concerned — Acceptability of — Incident occurring at about 8 p.m. — FIR lodged at about 6 a.m. on the next day — PW 7 (a male) soon after the incident going to a village 5 km away from the place of incident to inform his grandmother about the occurrence — No explanation as to why he could not go to police station which was situated 5 km in the opposite direction — That apart, explanation regarding delay in sending FIR to Magistrate, difficult to believe — No efforts made to take assistance of the Village Lambardar and the members of the Panchayat and others present at the place of the incident to lodge the complaint — Nor the said independent witnesses examined to establish that the alleged eyewitnesses disclosed the names of assailants at the first available opportunity — Held, prosecution failed to explain the delay in filing the complaint — Prosecution case doubtful — Acquittal by High Court, upheld — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 r/w S. 34 (Para 8). State of Punjab v. Daljit Singh, (2004) 10 SCC 141: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1776.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-2003]

[1087] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Gang rape — Delay of about 10 days in lodging the FIR — Delay fully explained and strongly supported by the circumstantial evidence — On facts, held, the said delay was not fatal to the prosecution case

The courts below have carefully considered the evidence on record and have come to the conclusion that the delay, if any, in lodging the first information report was fully explained by the prosecutrix and was strongly supported by the circumstantial evidence on record. The prosecutrix was living all alone and was an unmarried person, about 28 years of age. She did not have any family member to whom she could have narrated her story immediately after the occurrence on 4-3-1992. Moreover, the sense of shame coupled with the fear on account of threats given out by the appellants must have deterred her from immediately reporting about the occurrence to others. The prosecutrix narrated the incident to the Deputy Director of Education on 6-3-1992. Later she narrated the incident to one of her colleagues whom she found to be sympathetic towards her and thereafter when her cause was taken up by the Teachers' Association, she could muster courage to lodge a report with the Superintendent of Police. Thus in the facts and circumstances of the case, the mere delay in lodging of the first information report does not discredit the prosecution case. (Para 5). Malkhansingh v. State of M.P., (2003) 5 SCC 746: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1247: AIR 2003 SC 2669: 2003 Cri LJ 3535.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, Ashok Bhan and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-7-2003]

[1088] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — If explained, held, not fatal — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 376 r/w S. 34

Mere delay in lodging the FIR is really of no consequence, if the reason is explained. In the instant rape case, the evidence of PW 3, the victim and that of her husband, PW 4, clearly shows that there was initial reluctance to report the matter to the police by PW 4. He, in fact, had taken his wife to task for the incident and had slapped her. (Para 5). Sri Narayan Saha v. State of Tripura, (2004) 7 SCC 775.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-2004]

[1089] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — In the absence of any plausible explanation therefor, held, fatal — Occurrence took place at about 4.00 p.m. on 10-4-1991 — FIR lodged at about 11.30 p.m. and reached the court at about 10.00 a.m. on 11-4-1991 — The delay, considering the fact that there was police outpost just in front of PW 4's house and court was at a very short distance, held, not explained — Hence, proved fatal (Para 13). Gorle S. Naidu v. State of A.P., (2003) 12 SCC 449: AIR 2004 SC 1169: 2004 Cri LJ 924.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-2003]

[1090] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging/filing of FIR — When relevant, necessitating acquittal — PW 2 (sole eyewitness) though witnessing murder not revealing it to anyone on account of fear — FIR lodged after 36 hours after discovery of dead body — Time of murder alleged by PW 2 being 40 to 70 hours after the time of death of victim (as deduced from medical evidence) — Effect — Evidence of PW 2 (the only eyewitness) being diluted by medical evidence and his unnatural conduct, conviction by Sessions Court and High Court set aside and accused acquitted — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302

Allowing the appeal of the accused and acquitting him,

Held :

Although a mere delay in lodging the FIR would not be fatal to the prosecution story, but there is a proviso to this broad principle, that the evidence read as a whole must inspire confidence. PW 2 was the only eyewitness and his statement under Section 161 CrPC was recorded after a delay of about 36 hours. (Para 9)

Eyewitness, PW 2's conduct was wholly unnatural. PW 2 deposed that he heard the cry for help and saw the appellant standing in the field giving axe-blows on the deceased's head. Getting frightened, PW 2 returned home and did not inform anybody about the incident. Though PW 2 as alleged had witnessed the murder, at about 6.00 a.m. on 13-5-1999, he did not tell anyone about the incident. The incident was reported by PW 1 (Police Patil of village) from information received from PW 5. The FIR was accordingly lodged after an inordinate delay at 4.00 p.m. on 14-5-1999. (Paras 9 and 8)

The eyewitness, PW 2's account is diluted by the medical evidence. An appreciation of medical evidence to find out whether it corroborated the prosecution story was necessary because the evidence was looked at with suspicion and the entire prosecution story was alleged to have been concocted after the dead body was recovered. (Paras 13 and 9)

Clearly, the murder was a blind one and had not been witnessed by PW 2. In this background, the other circumstantial evidence becomes irrelevant. It is clear from the inquest and the post-mortem reports that the brain had disappeared. Taking the medical evidence to be correct, the incident could not have happened on 13-5-1999 at 6.00 a.m. (as deposed by PW 2) and must have happened much earlier in any case between 40 to 70 hours before the alleged time of death. (Paras 14 and 12)

By taking the average time between the minimum and maximum time for putrefaction mentioned in Modi's Jurisprudence, the death must have occurred at least 40 hours before the body was first examined at the time of the inquest report on 14-5-1999. A perusal of Modi's Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, 23rd Edn., pp. 438-40, would reveal that the rectum and uterus protrude within 48 to 70 hours after death and that maggots come on to the body within a minimum of 24 hours 18 minutes and a maximum of 76 hours, making an average of 39 hours 43 minutes. (Para 11)

The post-mortem examination of PW 4 itself is tell-tale and indicates some very significant facts. The body was highly decomposed, insects and maggots were crawling all over the face, the brain was absent and maggots were crawling in the skull cavity. The doctor also deposed that in his opinion the death had occurred about 60 hours before the post-mortem examination but in the cross-examination he modified his statement to say that it could be less than 60 hours but not less than 48 hours under any circumstances. The inquest report which is equally revealing and refers to the fact that maggots were crawling all over the body and that the anus was swollen and that the skin thereat had peeled off. (Para 10)

Therefore, the conviction by the Sessions Court and the High Court is set aside and the appellant is acquitted. (Para 15). Rupchand Chindu Kathewar v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 17 SCC 37.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2009]

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

[1091] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Incident at 5.30 p.m. — FIR lodged at 9.00 p.m. — Deceased taken to hospital by informant (close relative of deceased) and others — Informant left for police station after other relatives reached the hospital — On facts, held, no delay in lodging the FIR — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302/34 and 302/114 (Para 9). Hem Raj v. Raja Ram, (2004) 9 SCC 18: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1412: AIR 2004 SC 1489: 2004 Cri LJ 901.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-1-2004]

[1092] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging — PW 1 stated that he rushed to police station at 9.00 a.m. — FIR allegedly recorded at 2.00 p.m. — High Court holding that recording FIR belatedly was mistake on part of officer — PW 9, who delivered report to Magistrate, stating that distance between police station and Magistrate residence is only half kilometre and he delivering FIR at 5.55 p.m. — Inference can be drawn that FIR was registered at 5.30 p.m. or 5.45 p.m., when body had been received in hospital — There is delay in lodging FIR (Para 10). Birappa v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 12 SCC 182: AIR 2010 SC 3398.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2010]

[1093] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Incident taking place at 4.00 p.m. — FIR lodged at 6.30 p.m. — Police station only 4 miles away — Informant not going directly to police station, but adopting a circuitous route — Reason that one of the accused was Sarpanch of the village where occurrence took place — Hence, quite natural that informant would not be approaching anybody in the said village/adjoining village risking his life — On such facts, held, no delay, much less unexplained delay, in lodging the FIR — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34 and Ss. 302/109 (Para 4). State of Punjab v. Hardan Singh, (2003) 12 SCC 679: AIR 2003 SC 4343: 2003 Cri LJ 5048.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2003]

[1094] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Incident taking place at 9 p.m. — FIR lodged on the following day at 4 a.m. — Distance between police station and village being 6 miles — Time taken in bringing the victims to their house, fomenting their injuries and thereafter making an effort to arrange some conveyance — Held, in the circumstances of the case, there was no delay in lodging the FIR. Ranjha v. State of Punjab, 1996 SCC (Cri) 1163: AIR 1996 SC 2741.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-1996]

[1095] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Witnesses not chasing/nabbing murderers committing murder in a busy market — PW 1's detailed explanation in his deposition unshaken by cross-examination, accepted

On 21-11-1981, at about 5 p.m. when the deceased had gone to the market with his son (PW 1) and was taking betel from the shop of KI, he was attacked by the accused persons D, V and KN at the instigation of SH and T. First V stabbed him with a knife and thereafter the other accused persons beat him with lathis as a result of which the deceased fell on the ground. An alarm was raised by PW 1 as a result of which PWs 3 and 6 and one KR reached there and saw the occurrence.

PW 1 lodged an FIR at about 6.35 p.m. on the same day. The deceased was taken to a Primary Health Care Centre, where PW 7 doctor medically examined him, prepared the injury report and sent him to the District Hospital for better treatment. The deceased died in the hospital on 3-11-1984 at about 8.30 p.m. The post-mortem examination was done on 4-11-1981 at about 4.10 p.m.

The defence took the plea of false implication due to past enmity The Sessions Judge convicted all the accused persons under Sections 147, 148 and 302 IPC r/w Section 149 IPC and sentenced them to imprisonment for life. SH, T, V, SU and D were sentenced to life imprisonment under Section 302 read with Section 149 IPC. They were further sentenced to two years' RI under Section 148 IPC and one year's RI under Section 147 IPC. Considering that accused H was aged about 16 years, benefit of the Children Act, 1960 was extended to him. He was not sentenced to jail and was directed to be kept in children's home. The High Court after considering the materials on record set aside the conviction and acquitted all of them. Although the trial court had relied on the dying declaration which was neither recorded either by the police or by any doctor, the High Court disbelieved it on the ground that the same could not have been given by the deceased immediately after the occurrence as the prosecution witnesses themselves had stated that he became unconscious after receiving the blows and, therefore, he was not in a state of giving any such statement although alleged by the prosecution.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court was wrong in doubting the entire prosecution case on the ground that there was a delay of one and a half hours (5 p.m. to 6.30 p.m.) although the police station was only one furlong away. The High Court was also wrong in doubting the prosecution case on the ground that the eyewitnesses present did not interfere, intervene or chase the culprit. It is proved and established on record that the entire incident as it happened was mentioned in the first information report wherein the names of the eyewitnesses were also mentioned. It cannot be said that there was any undue delay either in reporting the incident to the police or taking the victim to the hospital. (Paras 24 to 26)

PW 1, the informant, who was the son of the deceased, in his statement has clearly stated in detail as to how the incident took place and as to why he did not intervene when his father was being assaulted by the accused persons. He has stated that he could not immediately get any mode of conveyance to take his father to the police station or to the hospital and he had to wait for some time for getting a conveyance to enable him to shift his father to the police station which they reached at about 6.30 p.m. when the report was recorded. The victim was examined in the Primary Health Centre at about 7.15 p.m. i.e. within 45 minutes of the incident being reported to the police. Therefore, the order of acquittal passed by the High Court is set aside and order of the trial court is restored. (Paras 19 and 31). State of U.P. v. Shobhanath, (2009) 6 SCC 600.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

[1096] — S. 154 — FIR — Whether delayed — Witnesses taking injured (deceased) first to hospital and then lodging FIR, though police station was located in between place of occurrence and hospital — Effect — Held, it is a case of quick reporting rather than delay in lodging FIR — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114

It was natural that the witnesses accompanying the deceased first tried to take him to the hospital so as to enable him to get immediate medical treatment although the police station was located in between the hospital and the place of occurrence. Such action was definitely in accordance with normal human conduct and psychology. When their efforts failed and the deceased died they immediately reported the incident to the police. In fact, it was a case of quick reporting to the police. (Paras 25 and 24)

When every minute is precious, it is the natural conduct of the person accompanying him to see that his life could be saved. Therefore, the first endeavour is always to take the person to the hospital immediately so as to provide him medical treatment and only thereafter report the incident to the police. (Para 25). State of H.P. v. Rakesh Kumar, (2009) 6 SCC 308.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[1097] — S. 154 — FIR, on facts of the case if delayed — The incident happened in two parts, first at about 6.00 p.m. and again an hour later — In the first incident brothers B and J were killed and in the second incident N, father of B and J was killed, while he was going to report earlier murders to police — W then went to send a message to the police by phone, but could not get the connection on which he called the police at another police station — The message was conveyed to police station concerned upon which the message was recorded in the daily diary (Ext. 31) — Police officer reached the village at 1.00 p.m. next day and on enquiry found that B, J and N were dead — He then recorded the statement of D on which FIR was registered — Held, no delay on facts of case (Paras 47 and 48)

The incident happened in two parts. In the first incident B and J, sons of N were killed, an event which was witnessed by PW 1, S, the son and nephew of the two deceased, respectively. The second incident was witnessed by PW 4, PW 5 and PW 6. S testified that he, B and J were returning from the field when they had been surrounded by all the accused and injuries had been caused to B and J. He also specified the weapons that each of the accused was holding and the manner of their use. His statement had been duly corroborated by the dying declaration made by J to D. PW 4 deposed that while accompanying his grandfather (N) to lodge the report with the Police Inspector with respect to the earlier murders, they had met PW 5 on the way and she too had accompanied them. They had thereafter been accosted by all the accused who were armed with axes and sticks and they had caused injuries to N with their weapons. PW 4 also deposed that on seeing this, he had run home, informed his mother about the incident and on account of the panic prevailing in the village, he too was hidden away till the next morning. The statement of PW 4 also found corroboration from the evidence of PW 5 and PW 6. The medical evidence fully supports the prosecution's story. The prosecution story is further fortified by the recoveries of bloodstained articles from some of the accused. Blood found on the articles was of the blood groups of the deceased persons. (Paras 37 to 40, 45 and 46). Himmat Sukhadeo Wahurwagh v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 6 SCC 712.

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.B. Sinha, H.S. Bedi and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2009]

Chandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 4 SCC 415: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 325; Swami Prasad v. State of M.P., (2007) 13 SCC 25, followed

State of Maharashtra v. Himmat Sukhadeo Wahurwagh, (2007) 4 AIR Bom R 596, affirmed

[1098] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Is of great importance if there is enmity between the parties (Para 18). Om Prakash v. State of U.P., (2008) 17 SCC 249: AIR 2009 SC 944: (2009) 1 All LJ 657: (2009) 2 ECrN 14 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 782: (2009) 75 AIC 257 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-2008]

[1099] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Murder of a housewife by inflicting axe blows — Occurrence taking place at 9 a.m. — Deceased's husband PW 1, who had seen the occurrence, lodging FIR at 1.45 p.m. — Having regard to the state of mind of PW 1, held, prosecution case cannot be disbelieved merely because of short delay in lodging the FIR

Court should have regard to the reality that for PW 1 it was his wife who was butchered right in front of his eyes. If he had taken a couple of hours to regain his composure to go to the police station for lodging the complaint it only sounds as normal conduct of a bereaved husband in the aforesaid circumstances. There was no justification for the High Court to use that short delay for denouncing the core of the prosecution story. (Para 16). State of U.P. v. Shyam Sunder, (2000) 10 SCC 49.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-2-1999]

[1100] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — One day delay in lodging FIR explained. Kashiram v. State of M.P., (1998) 7 SCC 450: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1683.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and M. Srinivasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-1998]

[1101] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — Non-naming of all accused — Inference — Credibility — Incident occurring at about 4.45 p.m. on May 25; injured brought to Government Hospital at 5.40 p.m.; FIS of father of deceased recorded at 7 p.m. which reached police station concerned at about 9 p.m., whereafter FIR was registered which reached JM at 11.30 a.m. on May 26 — If FIR was fabricated then all the accused could have been incorporated — Hence, no unexplained delay in lodging/transmission of FIR — Besides, no prejudice had been caused to accused (Paras 32 and 34). Myladimmal Surendran v. State of Kerala, (2010) 11 SCC 129: AIR 2010 SC 3281.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-9-2010]

State of Rajasthan v. Kalki, (1981) 2 SCC 752: 1981 SCC (Cri) 593, relied on

[1102] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Question of, not raised before High Court — Explanation given in respect of delay, plausible — Hence, said delay not fatal to prosecution case

It has been explained by the prosecution as to why there was some delay in lodging the FIR. It has been categorically stated that there was no bus available and, therefore, it could be only done when the bus was available. The question was not raised before the High Court and apart from that, explanation offered appears to be plausible, in the absence of any material to the contrary. (Para 15). Ram Bali v. State of U.P., (2004) 10 SCC 598: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2045: AIR 2004 SC 2329: 2004 Cri LJ 2490.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-4-2004]

[1103] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay if inordinate — Incident had happened at 6.30 p.m. on 25-8-1995, the injured had reached the hospital by 8 p.m. and the FIR had been lodged at the police station by an injured eyewitness eight hours later — Held, taking into account normal human conduct and the fact that many persons had sustained injuries, one of whom had subsequently died, a delay of eight hours can, by no stretch of imagination, be dubbed as inordinate (Paras 16 and 17). Shankaraya Naik v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 14 SCC 685.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2008]

[1104] — Ss. 154 & 173 and 401(3) — FIR — Delay — 7 days' delay in registering FIR — 40 days' delay in sending it to court — Effect — Trial court convicting appellant-accused under Ss. 306 and 294(b) — Co-accused convicted under Ss. 306 and 323 — Both accused acquitted in appeal — In revision petition High Court converting acquittal into conviction with reduced sentence — Sustainability — Held, unexplained delay was large — Judgment of High Court set aside and mat- ter remitted for considering the effect of delay keeping in view the scope and ambit of S. 401(3) — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 306, 294(b) and 323 (Paras 16 to 18). Kannika v. Mookaiah, (2009) 3 SCC 735.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-2009]

[1105] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Rape case — FIR lodged after 17-18 days of the incident — Effect — Held, delay in lodging the FIR would not be fatal to the prosecution case if the same is explained to the satisfaction of the court — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 375 and 376

Delay in lodging the FIR cannot be used as a ritualistic formula for doubting the prosecution case and discarding the same solely on the ground of delay in lodging the first information report. Delay has the effect of putting the court on its guard to search if any explanation has been offered for the delay, and if offered, whether it is satisfactory or not. If the prosecution fails to satisfactorily explain the delay and there is possibility of embellishment in the prosecution version on account of such delay, the same would be fatal to the prosecution. However, if the delay is explained to the satisfaction of the court, the same cannot by itself be a ground for disbelieving and discarding the entire prosecution version, as was done by the High Court in the present case. (Para 9)

The evidence of PWs 4 and 5 read with that of the victim clearly explained as to why the first information report was lodged after 17-18 days. The evidence of the aforesaid three witnesses clearly shows that PW 5 (father of victim) was seriously ill and the family members did not want to create tension in his mind when he was not physically well and waited for his recovery. In spite of the lengthy cross-examination this aspect has not been shaken by the defence. The view of the High Court that PW 4 should have told some respectable person or the father earlier to say the least is a view which has no foundation and overlooks the very reason to shun or openly publicise it to avoid the ignominy involved in it. In a tradition-bound and conservative society, more particularly in a rural area, the shame of sexual assault on a girl of about 14 years cannot be lost sight of. This down-to-earth reality has been lost sight of by the High Court. The trial court had rightly emphasized this aspect, but unfortunately, the High Court took a contrary view irrationally. (Para 10). State of Punjab v. Ramdev Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 421: 2004 SCC (Cri) 307: AIR 2004 SC 1290.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2003]

[1106] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Rape cases — Rape of a minor — Delay in lodging FIR was also a natural phenomenon in rape cases — Conviction of appellant under S. 376 IPC, sustainable — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 375 and 376 (Paras 10, 14, 17 to 21). Satyapal v. State of Haryana, (2009) 6 SCC 635.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-2009]

Satyapal v. State of Haryana, 2007 Cri LJ 2095 (P&H), affirmed

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, 23rd Edn., at pp. 897 and 928, relied on [1107] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging of — Sexual offence(s) involved — Different considerations apply — Effect of delay in filing FIR in cases of sexual assault — Respondent-accused alleged to have sexually ravished PW 1 and outraged the modesty of several other girl students of the school where he was a teacher — High Court setting aside his conviction considering delay in lodging FIR — Held, delay in a case of sexual assault, cannot be equated with the case involving other offences — There are several factors which weigh in the mind of the prosecutrix and her family members before coming to the police station to lodge a complaint — In a tradition-bound society prevalent in India, more particularly rural areas, it would be quite unsafe to throw out the prosecution case merely on the ground that there was some delay in lodging the FIR — Further, though prosecution had failed to establish allegations of rape but commission of offence punishable under Ss. 354 and 506 have clearly been established — Hence, respondent deserves to be convicted for the offences punishable under Ss. 354 and 506 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 376, 354 and 506 (Paras 2 and 6 to 8). State of H.P. v. Prem Singh, (2009) 1 SCC 420.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-11-2008]

[1108] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — Case of taking away victim fraudulently and subjecting her to rape by appellant-accused and forcing her to indulge in prostitution by coercion — Delay was bound to occur as FIR was filed only after return of victim from her captivity after one-and-a-half years — Reasons for which she could not come back or inform her parents, held, stood well explained by victim that she was given threat by appellant that dead body of some other girl had been identified by her parents to be of the victim and thus if she went back, her parents would be in difficulty —

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

She had been living under a constant threat and could not muster courage to inform any person — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 375, 376 and 366 (Paras 14 and 13). Fateh Chand v. State of Haryana, (2009) 15 SCC 543: AIR 2009 SC 2729: (2009) 81 AIC 216 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 3942.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

[1109] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — Held on facts, was not fatal — In cases involving offence of rape, the victim or her family members hesitate to file a complaint as there are other factors to be considered — Besides, no cross-examination on this aspect was made — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 375 and 376

The trial court found that there was inordinate and unexplained delay in lodging the FIR; there was enmity between the appellant and the victim's family; the medical evidence did not support the case of the prosecution; material witnesses and mother of the victim girl were not examined and there were material contradictions in evidence of PWs. Hence, the Sessions Judge giving benefit of doubt to the accused, acquitted him.

In appeal, the High Court dealt with every one of the reasons given by the trial court for acquitting the accused and dislodged them by recording its own reasons. The High Court pointed out that if there was enmity between the family of PW 2 and that of the accused, it was improbable and unnatural that the victim girl would be allowed to work in the house of the appellant. As far as delay in lodging the FIR was concerned, the High Court has rightly held that the same was not fatal. It has also pointed out that in cases involving offence of rape, the victim or members of the family of the victim would be hesitant and reluctant to file a complaint as there would be other factors working in their minds. Moreover, there was no cross-examination on the said point. It further held that the evidence of the prosecutrix PW 1 was trustworthy and was acceptable and her age at the time of incident was about 10 years and she specifically denied that she was tutored. Further, the prosecution version was supported by other PWs.

Held :

As far as medical evidence is concerned, the High Court had rightly stated that a too technical view cannot be taken having regard to the evidence of the doctor that abrasion on hymen may be caused due to rape, coupled with the evidence of the victim girl herself. (Para 9)

Though, the mother of the victim and some of the material witnesses were not examined, but in the facts and circumstances of the case, their non-examination was not material having regard to the evidence that was brought on record particularly the evidence of the victim girl herself. No doubt, non-examination of material witnesses may go against the prosecution in some cases but not in all cases. The High Court observed that if a false case was to be foisted against the appellant at the instance of the victim's mother the complaint could have been lodged on the very day of the incident without waiting for the arrival of PW 2. Hence, the High Court was perfectly justified in reversing the order of acquittal. (Para 9). Ayub Hussain Mandal v. State of Assam, (2007) 15 SCC 549.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Shivaraj V. Patil and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2002]

[1110] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — Case of gang rape — Alleged incident of gang rape occurring on the night intervening 25-6-1989/26-6-1989; PW 4 (mother of prosecutrix) going to the police station next day to lodge FIR, but police concerned failing to take any action; written complaint (Ext. DA) lodged on 5-7-1989 before SSP who forwarding same to DSP; DSP, DW 2 visiting the village on 8-7-1989 and recording statement of prosecutrix — However, a panchayatnama (Ext. DB) dated 17-7-1989 brought forth by DW 2 wherein prosecutrix alleged to have admitted that she consensually cohabited with one R*, and in order to save him she falsely implicated appellant-accused — A further complaint lodged before SSP by PW 4 and prosecutrix on 22-7-1989 stating that signatures of prosecutrix and thumb impression of PW 4 were obtained on some blank papers; that DW 2 had threatened them with dire consequences if they did not give statement in favour of accused; and that prosecutrix was harassed by constables who also caused her injuries — Injuries caused proved by doctor — Prosecutrix categorically denying that any Panchayat was convened on 17-7-1989 and stating that her signature was obtained after beating her with "leather patta" — Held, panchayatnama was the brainchild of DW 2, contents whereof cannot be taken into consideration for whatever purposes — Truthfulness of statement made by prosecutrix on 5-7-1989 to SSP, and her statement of 8-7-1989 based on which FIR was lodged cannot be doubted — Hence, submission that FIR was ante-timed and brought into existence to falsely implicate appellants, rejected* (Paras 8 to 13). Jaswant Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 16 SCC 201.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-11-2009]

[1111] — S. 154 — When does not affect prosecution case — In instant case of gang rape, delay in lodging FIR stood properly explained — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 375 and 376

When FIR by a Hindu lady is to be lodged with regard to commission of offence like rape, many questions would obviously crop up for consideration before one finally decides to lodge the FIR. It is difficult to appreciate the plight of the victim who has been criminally assaulted in such a manner. Obviously, the victim must have also gone through great turmoil and only after giving it a serious thought, must have decided to lodge the FIR. Precisely this appears to be the reason for little delayed FIR. The delay was found to be properly explained by both the courts below. (Para 13). Sohan Singh v. State of Bihar, (2010) 1 SCC 68.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2009]

[1112] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Rape of a married woman — Effect of delay — Held, does not necessarily indicate that the version of victim is false — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 375 and 376

In India if the prosecutrix happened to be a married person, she will not do anything without informing her husband. Merely because the complaint was lodged less than promptly, does not raise the question that the complaint was false. The reluctance to go to the police is because of society's attitude towards such women. It casts doubt and shame upon her rather than comfort and sympathy. Therefore, the delay in lodging complaint in such cases does not necessarily indicate that her version is false. (Para 8). Sri Narayan Saha v. State of Tripura, (2004) 7 SCC 775.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-2004]

[1113] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR — Time taken in carrying victims from one hospital to another — In circumstances, held, delay properly explained. Kanhiyalal v. State of Rajasthan, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 263: 1990 SCC (Cri) 168: AIR 1989 SC 1515: 1989 Cri LJ 1482: 1989 BBCJ 117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1989]

[1114] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR explained

When the incident in the village between 9.30 pm to 10 pm at night and when effort was to be made first to remove the injured to the hospital which was a couple of kilometres away and when evidence shows that they had to requisition a vehicle of another person, it would naturally take some time. After injured was removed to the hospital, the witness had proceeded towards the police station but at the bus stop of the village ASI accompanied with constables met him and then immediately on the bus stop itself the complaint was recorded. On facts, it could not, therefore, be said that the recording of FIR was unduly delayed. Ram Kumar v. State of Haryana, Criminal Appeal No. 312 of 1985.

[1115] — S. 154 — Delay in lodging FIR involving sexual offences — Since it brings in questions of morality and chastity of the victim, the initial hesitation and delay is understandable. State of Rajasthan v. Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781: AIR 1992 SC 2004.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, Kuldip Singh and B.P. Jeevan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-7-1992]

[1116] — S. 154 — Delay in recording FIR, on facts, held fatal to the prosecution case. Ganesh Bhavan Patel v. State of Maharashtra, (1978) 4 SCC 371: 1979 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1979 SC 135: 1979 Cri LJ 51.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-1978]

[1117] — S. 154 — Delay in registration of FIR — If on facts material — Incident at 7.45 a.m. — FIR lodged at 8 a.m. and formal FIR recorded at 9.30 a.m. — Since the IO had himself proceeded to the hospital and recorded the complaint of the injured there and sent the same to the police station where the same was registered at 9.30 a.m., held, there was, on facts, no possibility of any manipulation at the instance of others. State of Maharashtra v. Bandu, 1998 SCC (Cri) 584, 586.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-1997]

[1118] — S. 154 — Delay of 10 days in lodging the FIR — Explanation that the injured refused to disclose anything to the IO on the plea that the respectable inhabitants of the village were trying to have the matter compromised — None of them examined at the trial — No other material on record to substantiate the explanation for delay in lodging the FIR — Injured not disclosing the names of his assailants to the doctor in the hospital which rendered the prosecution case doubtful — Held, in the circumstances of the case the accused is entitled to the benefit of doubt. Satguru Singh v. State of Punjab, 1997 SCC (Cri) 632: AIR 1995 SC 2449: 1995 Cri LJ 4165.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1995]

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

[1119] — S. 154 — Delay of 14 hours in filing FIR — Occurrence taking place in the night time in a village about 9 kilometres away from the Police Station — Three persons killed in the incident and the killers having deadly weapons — In such circumstances villagers could not be expected to go out in the night time — Held, in the circumstances of the case, FIR not delayed. State of M.P. v. Udai Singh, 1998 SCC (Cri) 593, 596: AIR 1998 SC 198.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and M. Srinivasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-1997]

[1120] — S. 154 — Delay of about 5-6 hours in lodging FIR — Victim totally stranger for the informant found lying in semi-conscious state with injuries on her private part — Time taken in tracing out the identity of the victim girl, arranging for a khatola and staying in the village for joining some more persons for taking the victim to the police station — Held, explanation for delay in lodging the FIR not fabricated. State of U.P. v. Babul Nath, (1994) 6 SCC 29: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-1994]

[1121] — S. 154 — Delay of one day in forwarding the FIR to Magistrate — Held on facts, did not vitiate the prosecution case. Jinnat Mia v. State of Assam, (1998) 9 SCC 319: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1017: AIR 1998 SC 533.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and M. Srinivasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-1997]

Arjun Marik v. State of Bihar, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 372: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1551, distinguished [1122] — S. 154 — Delay of twelve hours in lodging FIR — Deceased immediately rushed to hospital in a seriously injured condition — Relatives and friends of deceased being under shock for some time after the occurrence and then their main concern being to save the life of the deceased lodging of FIR delayed till police arrived at the hospital in morning — Hence, the delay in filing FIR would not detract its corroborative value. Krishna Pillai Sree Kumar v. State of Kerala, 1981 Supp SCC 31: 1981 SCC (Cri) 669: AIR 1981 SC 1237: 1981 MLJ (Cri) 539: 1981 Cri LJ 743: 1981 KLT 317.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.D. Koshal and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1981]

[1123] — S. 154 — Delay of two days in lodging the FIR not a factor casting doubt on prosecution story in view of the generally known fact that the rape victim or her husband would hesitate to approach the police. State of Rajasthan v. Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781: AIR 1992 SC 2004.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, Kuldip Singh and B.P. Jeevan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-7-1992]

[1124] — S. 154 — Delay properly explained — Prosecutrix, a widow aged 55 years and having two grown-up children, alleging that respondents grappled with her and made her lie down on the earth and then committed rape and that in that process she received injuries — Allegation corroborated by medical evidence — At the time of contacting her advocate she was scared and hesitant — Lodging FIR through her advocate on the next day — Salwar of prosecutrix was found to be torn and stained — Forensic Science Laboratory report showing presence of human blood and semen on the salwar — In such circumstances, held, the trial court rightly convicted the accused under Ss. 376(2)(g) and 323 IPC (Para 11). State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147: AIR 1999 SC 3916: 2000 Cri LJ 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-1999]

[1125] — S. 154 — Delay satisfactorily explained — Attending to the injured first — Rushing of the victim to the hospital to save his life instead of first going to the police station was a satisfactory explanation for the delay in making the complaint. Raghbir Singh v. State of Haryana, (2000) 9 SCC 88: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1169: AIR 2000 SC 3395: 2000 Cri LJ 2463.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Wadhwa and Ruma Pal, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-4-2000]

[1126] — S. 154 — Explanation for delay — Murder at night — FIR containing categorical statement that nobody came forward to accompany the complainant wife of deceased to police station in the dark night — Therefore, she had to wait till the morning for visiting the police station for lodging the report — In her long cross-examination no question regarding the reasons for the alleged delay in lodging the FIR asked — No suggestion made that she had wrongly stated about the reason why she was lodging the FIR on the next morning — In the circumstances held, there was neither unexplained delay nor was there requirement for offering any explanation — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302 and 34 (Para 13). State of Punjab v. Mohinder Singh, (2007) 13 SCC 560: AIR 2008 SC 92.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-2007]

[1127] — S. 154 — Explanation for delay of twelve hours — Murder case — Incident at about sunset in a village, at 9 kms. from police station — FIR lodged next day at 7 a.m. — FIR containing the informant's statement that due to fear he could not reach during the night — Held, delay stood explained — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 300 and 302. State of U.P. v. Ram Swarup, 1988 Supp SCC 262: 1988 SCC (Cri) 552: AIR 1988 SC 1028: 1988 ALJ 555: (1988) 1 Crimes 994.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.L. Oza, B.C. Ray and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-1988]

[1128] — S. 154 — FIR — Belated FIR — Sufficient explanation given in respect thereof — Hence, the said delay, held on facts, was not fatal to the prosecution case

So far as the grievance to the belated FIR is concerned, sufficient explanation was found to have been given. The place of incident is said to be situated in a remote area, namely, three kilometres away from the village itself and the village in turn itself is said to be situated in a remote area in Athani taluk. In such circumstances, the explanation given that no one who was present at the time of occurrence could dare to leave the place in the dead of night to inform others or go to the police station seems to be plausible and reasonable and that only after the arrival of PW 7, another son of the deceased, at the place of incident they could send information to the police, normally and sufficiently explains the delay. Thus, the same could not be said to cast any shadow of doubt on the truthfulness of the case of the prosecution, on this account. (Para 7). Shivraj Bapuray Jadhav v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 6 SCC 392: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1372: AIR 2003 SC 3578: 2003 Cri LJ 3542.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-7-2003]

[1129] — S. 154 — FIR — Deceased immediately rushed to hospital in a seriously injured condition — Relatives and friends of deceased being busy in saving the life of the deceased FIR lodged after death of the deceased — Held, delay in lodging FIR not undue. Nagappa Fakirappa Goudar v. State of Karnataka, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 716: 1994 SCC (Cri) 621: AIR 1994 SC 953: 1994 Cri LJ 1200: (1994) 1 Crimes 577: (1994) 31 ACC 161.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1994]

[1130] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay — Effect — Held, delay in lodging FIR will not be fatal in every case if the ocular version of the eyewitnesses is reliable and trustworthy — Incident taking place at 6.30 p.m. on 4-11-1986, while FIR lodged at 10 a.m. on 5-11-1986 at the police station which was at a distance of about 15 km from the place of occurrence — Deceased and injured witnesses brutally assaulted by the accused-appellants with choppers, club etc. in front of A-1's house — Injured witnesses managing to flee, leaving the deceased lying there in injured condition — Held, having regard to the injuries inflicted on the body of the deceased as also on the person of the injured witnesses, it was but natural for PW 1 and other witnesses not to venture to go straight to the police station and lodge the complaint with the police on the day of the occurrence and the fact that the witnesses left the deceased on the scene of occurrence itself would indicate the gravity of the situation — Delay in lodging FIR satisfactorily explained — Hence, delay not fatal (Para 16). Venkategowda v. State of Karnataka, (2006) 13 SCC 203: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 610: (2006) 48 AIC 47 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Lokeshwar Singh Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2006]

Peddireddi Subbareddi v. State of A.P., AIR 1991 SC 1356: 1991 Cri LJ 1391; Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641, considered [1131] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay — Effect — Incident occurring at about 10.30 p.m. on 22-1-1997 in village P where there was no police post — FIR lodged at 7.30 a.m. on 23-1-1997 by PW 2 — PW 2 informing officer in charge of A police station on phone, consequent whereto police officers visiting place of occurrence at about 1 a.m. — Thereafter, deceased and injured admitted to hospital under a requisition letter of investigating officer which was proved — PW 6 admitted as indoor patient from 23-1-1997 to 26-1-1997 — Held, in a situation of this nature, explanation of PW 2 and others that they gave priority to the treatment of the deceased and the injured which occasioned the delay in lodging FIR was satisfactorily explained (Paras 15 to 22). Vikram v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 12 SCC 332: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 362: AIR 2007 SC 1893: 2007 Cri LJ 3193: (2007) 56 AIC 207 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2007]

State of M.P. v. Kriparam, (2003) 12 SCC 675: 2005 SCC (Cri) 830; Shankarlal v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 10 SCC 632: 2005 SCC (Cri) 579, distinguished

[1132] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay — Effect — Incident occurring on 8-8-1984, while complaint made on 31-8-1984 — Except for a bare statement to the effect that representations were made to various persons, no material in that regard was adduced — Complainant seeking to explain the delay by stating that the matter was reported to the police but the police did not take any action but modalities envisaged under S. 154(3) not adopted — Held, such allegations have to be established by calling for the necessary records from the police — Absence of such satisfactory proof was fatal to prosecution case (Paras 5, 12, 15 and 16). Dilawar Singh v. State of Delhi, (2007) 12 SCC 641: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 330: AIR 2007 SC 3234: (2007) 58 AIC 72 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 4709.

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-2007]

Khedu Mohton v. State of Bihar, (1970) 2 SCC 450: 1970 SCC (Cri) 479, relied on [1133] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay — Explained and hence not fatal — Murder trial — Conviction justified — Appellant alleged to have stabbed the deceased on his chest with knife — Appellant contending that High Court erred in convicting him and sentencing him to rigorous imprisonment for life and a fine of Rs 2000, as; (i) the first information report was lodged after considerable delay; (ii) the investigating officer could not collect any bloodstains from the place of occurrence as there were heavy torrential rains; (iii) the weapon of attack, namely, knife was not recovered — Held, delay in lodging FIR was satisfactorily explained — Police station was at a distance of 21 kms from place of occurrence and there was torrential rain — Fact that the bloodstains were not sent for chemical examination, or that the knife was not recovered insignificant — Statement by doctor that the injury suffered by deceased could be caused by fall on iron railing immaterial, as it was not the case of the defence that there was any iron railing or the deceased had fallen on any iron railing — Testimony of PW 2 (eyewitness) not impeached in cross-examination — Moreover, his testimony was substantially corroborated by PW 3 (eyewitness) — Hence, conviction and sentence sustainable — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 (Paras 2, 7, 10 to 13). Tama v. State of W.B., (2007) 10 SCC 493: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 61: 2007 Cri LJ 4724: (2007) 59 AIC 268 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-2007]

[1134] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay — Lodged after inquest — Credibility — Murder — PW 13 informed IO about the incident naming only A-9 as the assailant and PW 11 as the eyewitness — Details of the incident not furnished by him — Information given by PW 13 based on the version of PW 11 — But why PW 11 himself did not lodge FIR not disclosed — Instead PW 11 asked IO to visit the place of occurrence — Accordingly, IO reached the place of occurrence along with PW 13 — Inquest report prepared — Details of the incident narrated by PW 11 on the basis whereof FIR lodged on the spot — Panchnama held immediately thereafter — In inquest panchnama it was stated that deceased was assaulted with sharp-edged weapons by some unknown assailants as a result of which he died — Held, FIR cannot be lodged in murder case after inquest was held — Names of all the assailants not disclosed — FIR not reliable — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302

An information received by the officer in charge of a police station for commission of a cognizable offence must be reduced to writing so as to enable him to start investigation. Lodging of a first information report is necessary for setting the criminal law in motion. It can be lodged by anybody. It, however, should not be too sketchy so as to make initiation of investigation on the basis thereof impossible. Only information in regard to commission of an offence may not for all intent and purport satisfy the requirement of the first information report. When, however, the first information report is lodged by a person who claims himself to be aware of not only the commission of the offence, the name of the deceased and at least one of the accused who had committed the same, could have been recorded on the basis thereof. It may, however, be another thing to say that any information in regard to the commission of an offence is given by way of a telephone or by a person who does not disclose his identity and such message is so cryptic that it may not satisfy the requirement of Section 154 CrPC. (Paras 12 and 15)

A first information report cannot be lodged in a murder case after the inquest has been held. The first information report had been lodged on the basis of the statements made by PW 11 to the informant himself at the spot. If the said prosecution witness who claimed himself to be the eyewitness was the person who could lodge a first information report, there was absolutely no reason as to why he himself did not become the first informant. The first information report was recorded on the basis of his information given to the first informant at the spot. All information given by him to PW 13 was made before the investigating officer himself. What prevented him from lodging the first information report is beyond comprehension. PW 11, categorically stated that he had disclosed the details of information to all concerned. Therefore, it is expected that the first informant was informed thereabout. The information given by PW 13 had at least been recorded by the police in the crime register and he categorically stated a few facts viz. the main accused Accused 9 committed the murder. Even the place where the murder took place was known to him. The investigating officer recorded the statement after holding inquest. The detailed report in regard to the nature of injuries as also the place where the injuries were inflicted was known to him as inquest report had already been prepared. Such an attempt on the part of the investigating officer has been deprecated by the Supreme Court in a large number of decisions. All other witnesses including the panch witnesses must have been present there. If despite the same, according to panch witnesses some unknown persons are said to be his assailants, it is evident that PW 11 did not disclose the names of the assailants; at least all of them before PW 9 as also the investigating officer. It may be true that the prosecution would not be bound thereby. But, the impression that can be gathered therefrom is that at least at that point of time there was a general belief that the deceased had been killed by unknown assailants. (Paras 18 and 25)

In a case of this nature, enmity between two groups is accepted. Whether the first information report was ante-timed or not also requires serious consideration. First information report, in a case of this nature, provides for a valuable piece of evidence although it may not be a substantial evidence. The reason for insisting on lodging of first information report without undue delay is to obtain the earlier information in regard to the circumstances in which the crime had been committed, the name of the accused, the parts played by them, the weapons which had been used as also the names of eyewitnesses. Where the parties are at loggerheads and there had been instances which resulted in death of one or the other, lodging of a first information report is always considered to be vital. (Para 19)

The Code of Criminal Procedure provides for certain internal and external checks; one of them being the receipt of a copy of the first information report by the Magistrate concerned. It is not in dispute that in a grave case of this nature, the copy of the first information report was received by the Magistrate four days later. No explanation has been offered therefor. Section 157 CrPC mandates that the first information report should be sent to the nearest Magistrate within a period of 24 hours. It has not been disputed that the occurrence took place near the district headquarters. There cannot be any reason whatsoever as to why the first information report was sent after four days. (Para 20)

Proof of motive by itself may not be a ground to hold the accused guilty. Enmity, as is well known, is a double-edged weapon. Whereas existence of a motive on the part of an accused may be held to be the reason for committing crime, the same may also lead to false implication. Suspicion against the accused on the basis of their motive to commit the crime cannot by itself lead to a judgment of conviction. (Para 26)

There is some substance in the submission that the other accused persons did not share the common object with Accused 9. Their names did not appear in the first information report. Even PWs 11 and 12 did not attribute any overt act on their part. (Para 27)

As it is difficult to rely upon the testimonies of PWs 11 and 12 and for other reasons enumerated hereinbefore, it would be hazardous to record a judgment of conviction in this case. (Para 28). Ramesh Baburao Devaskar v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 13 SCC 501: 2008 Cri LJ 372: (2007) 59 AIC 54 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

Om Prakash v. State of Uttaranchal, (2003) 1 SCC 648: 2003 SCC (Cri) 412; Mundrika Mahto v. State of Bihar, (2002) 9 SCC 183: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1163; Jagdish Murav v. State of U.P., (2006) 12 SCC 626: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Rajasthan v. Teja Singh, (2001) 3 SCC 147: 2001 SCC (Cri) 439, relied on

[1135] — Ss. 154, 161 and 156, 157, 160 — FIR lodged after investigation (herein of witnesses), held, is doubtful — Suppression by prosecution as to how police got prior information, on facts, created a doubt

According to PW 2 (mother of the deceased), police had already arrived when they reached at the place of occurrence on the next day morning. The police must have received some information. Why the other information was suppressed by the prosecution has not been explained. In a situation of this nature, particularly if an FIR was lodged after recording the statements of the witnesses, another FIR would not be admissible in evidence and ordinarily an investigation cannot be started without recording the FIR. (Paras 35 and 37). Subramaniam v. State of T.N., (2009) 14 SCC 415: (2009) 78 AIC 19 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 3002.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2009]

[1136] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay — Non-explanation of — Effect — Generally

In criminal trial one of the cardinal principles for the court is to look for plausible explanation for the delay in lodging the report. Delay sometimes affords opportunity to the complainant to make deliberation upon the complaint and to make embellishment or even make fabrications. Delay defeats the chance of the unsoiled and untarnished version of the case to be presented before the court at the earliest instance. That is why if there is delay in either coming before the police or before the court, the courts always view the allegations with suspicion and look for satisfactory explanation. If no such satisfaction is formed, the delay is treated as fatal to the prosecution case. (Para 9). Dilawar Singh v. State of Delhi, (2007) 12 SCC 641: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 330: AIR 2007 SC 3234: 2007 Cri LJ 4709.

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-2007]

Thulia Kali v. State of T.N., (1972) 3 SCC 393: 1972 SCC (Cri) 543; Ram Jag v. State of U.P., (1974) 4 SCC 201: 1974 SCC (Cri) 370, relied on [1137] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay — Unexplained delay — When fatal — Murder trial — Acquittal justified — Respondent-accused (uncle of the deceased) alleged to have shot the deceased when the latter refused to be dissuaded from ploughing the field — Accused thereafter said to have rushed to the village and made extra-judicial confession to PWs — Occurrence taking place on 19-8-1987 at about 4 p.m., while FIR lodged on 21-8-1987 at 1 p.m. — No explanation offered for such delay — Accused advised by PW 8 to go to Village Kotwar — Distance between place of occurrence and house of Village Kotwar about 10 km and time required for commutation was approximately 2 hrs — PW 3 (son of Village Kotwar) stating that accused reached his house at about 4 p.m. — Held, if the accused had confessed to PW 3 at about 4 p.m., the incident could not have occurred at 4 p.m. as alleged — Further, PWs 1, 3 and 8 specifically stating that they had taken the accused to police station and his gun was seized there — However, PW 10 (police official) stating that the statement of the accused was recorded when he was found after search and the accused was not before him when the FIR was lodged — In such circumstances, held, the so-called extra-judicial confession is a myth and the prosecution version lacks credibility and has been rightly discarded by High Court — High Court's order of acquittal calls for no interference — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 24 — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 (Paras 2, 10 and 11). State of M.P. v. Basodi, (2007) 14 SCC 548.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-8-2007]

[1138] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay, if any — Incident, in which death of a person occurred, took place at 11 p.m. — Dead body lying in the house and informant and others were threatened — Informant started proceeding to the police station which was about 11 km from the place — On his way he met SI at about 2 a.m. and informed him about the incident — FIR recorded at 3.10 a.m. — In this situation, held, FIR lodged without any delay (Paras 13 and 14). Anil v. State of Haryana, (2007) 10 SCC 274: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 641: 2007 Cri LJ 4294.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-5-2007]

[1139] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing — FIR held reliable having regard to the time taken in assembling concerned persons on the spot and thereafter the distance covered in adverse weather for lodging it. Babu Krishna Kamble v. State of Maharashtra, 1980 Supp SCC 222: 1980 SCC (Cri) 913: AIR 1980 SC 1269: 1980 Cri LJ 928.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and R.S. Pathak, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-1980]

[1140] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing — FIR regarding the gruesome murder lodged within 1 1/2 hours of the incident — Held, in the circumstances, not delayed. Kaki Ramesh v. State of A.P., (1994) 4 SCC 397: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1214.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.M. Sahai and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1994]

[1141] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing — Occurrence taking place at about 11.30 a.m. — FIR lodged at 3.30 p.m. — Held, in circumstances of the case, FIR not delayed. Raja Ram v. State of M.P., (1994) 2 SCC 568: 1994 SCC (Cri) 573: (1994) 2 An LT (Cri) 7: (1994) 1 Crimes 734.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-1994]

[1142] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing — Suicidal death of woman in her in-laws' house within ten months of marriage — Elder brother of deceased making written complaint about unnatural death of his sister on very day of incident but the same not treated as FIR by police — Mother of deceased making statement to police on next day which was treated as an FIR — Cause of delay in making such statement being great mental shock due to her daughter's death — Held, delay not unjustified even though FIR could have been lodged by some other adult member of the family

If on getting the news of suicide being committed by the daughter, mother becomes unwell and is not in a proper mental frame to make any statement to the police, no exception can be taken to such conduct. It should be borne in mind that the elder brother of the deceased gave a written complaint to the police on the very day of the incident by indicating that there had not been any natural death of his sister and he felt that his sister had been murdered by her in-laws. On the very next date, the mother made a statement to the police indicating the plight of her deceased daughter and the physical and mental torture to which she was subjected to by the accused. Such statement of the mother has been treated as an FIR in the case. In the aforesaid circumstances, it cannot be held that there has been unjustified inordinate delay in lodging the FIR and that even if the mother had become unwell after hearing the news of the daughter's death other adult members of the family could have lodged the complaint with the police. State of W.B. v. Orilal Jaiswal, (1994) 1 SCC 73: 1994 SCC (Cri) 107: AIR 1994 SC 1418: 1994 Cri LJ 2104: (1994) 1 BLJR 267: (1994) 1 Guj LH 537.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-1993]

[1143] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing — Explanation for — Incident taking place at about 8 p.m. — FIR lodged next day at 11 a.m. by father of the deceased who could get details of incident at about 9 a.m. from his other son who was under shock and not in his senses till then — Held, delay properly explained — Importance of time factor in lodging FIR

The adverse inference drawn by the High Court as to why the brother of the deceased did not inform the police regarding the occurrence throughout the night is without justification. A young boy of 19 years, who escaped death even after several attempts on the road and ultimately found his brother becoming victim of the said attack, must have been completely broken. It was too much to expect from him that before his father arrived, he would have taken legal steps for prosecuting the respondent. The father of the victim got the information from Rohtak at about 2.00 or 2.15 in the night and he immediately proceeded for Rohtak and reached there at about 4.00 or 4.15 in the morning. He found his son in the house but he was not in his senses. At about 9.00 a.m., in the morning he tried to know the full details from his son and then he lodged the first information report on the basis of the facts narrated by his son. It is true that time factor has an important role in context with lodging of a first information report. But, if the prosecution explains the delay satisfactorily, the Court is not expected to reject the whole prosecution case merely on that ground. The present case is one such case where taking all facts and circumstances into consideration, the prosecution case cannot be rejected on the ground that the first information report was not lodged during the night. State of Haryana v. Manoj Kumar, (1994) 1 SCC 495: 1994 SCC (Cri) 93: AIR 1994 SC 147: (1994) 1 Crimes 102: (1994) 31 ACC 34.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-1993]

[1144] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing — FIR lodged within half an hour of reporting the incident to police — Special report reaching the Elaqa Magistrate within eight hours of lodging the FIR, although distance between police station and Magistrate's residence was about 16 miles — Held, on facts, no case of delay in lodging the FIR made out. Amrik Singh v. State of Punjab, 1980 Supp SCC 315: 1981 SCC (Cri) 252: AIR 1981 SC 1171: 1981 Cri LJ 634.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.C. Gupta and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-1980]

[1145] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing — Incident taking place around 2 p.m. and report lodged at a police station 13 miles away at about 4.15 p.m. — Held on facts, there was no appreciable delay in lodging the FIR. Joginder Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 1 SCC 493: 1980 SCC (Cri) 255: AIR 1979 SC 1876: 1979 Cri LJ 1406.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-1979]

[1146] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing — Mere delay by itself not enough to reject the prosecution case unless there are clear indications of fabrication — On facts, there was no fabrication — Twenty people breaking into house at 5 p.m., beating inmates and killing one of them by pressing lathi on the throat — Report handed over by deceased's wife to chowkidar at about 2.30 a.m. and the same reaching the police station six miles away at about 7.55 a.m. — Mode of attack and cause of death by strangulation mentioned in material particulars in the FIR and the same found to be in conformity with medical evidence — Held, there was no inordinate delay in filing the FIR — Having regard to the nature of the occurrence and the commotion that would have been created during the night, one cannot expect the persons concerned to go to the police station on that very night — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302/149, 325/149, 323/149 and 452. Zahoor v. State of U.P., 1991 Supp (1) SCC 372: 1991 SCC (Cri) 678: AIR 1991 SC 40.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-10-1990]

[1147] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing — Not by itself a circumstance to doubt the prosecution case. Jamna v. State of U.P., 1994 Supp (1) SCC 185: 1994 SCC (Cri) 348: AIR 1994 SC 79.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-9-1993]

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

[1148] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing — Rape on minor girl — Immediately thereafter, incident narrated by prosecutrix to her mother and other ladies — But decision on course of action, taken only on arrival of prosecutrix's father — Sarpanch then contacted, who advised to proceed to police station next morning, as it was already evening and dark — FIR lodged next morning, in the circumstances held, not delayed. Prithi Chand v. State of H.P., (1989) 1 SCC 432: 1989 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 702: (1989) 1 SCR 123: 1989 Cri LJ 841.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-1989]

[1149] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing FIR — Incident taking place at night but FIR lodged on the following morning — Eyewitnesses remaining with the dead body for the whole night in view of the possibility of the accused persons removing the dead body to cause disappearance of evidence — Held, conduct of the eyewitnesses not unnatural and it cannot be said that there was delay in lodging FIR (Para 6). Gurmit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 146: 1996 SCC (Cri) 45.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-1995]

[1150] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing FIR — Death of deceased alleged to have occurred sometime between 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. on 7-11-1992 — FIR lodged at 6.30 a.m. on 8-11-1992 — Prosecution alleging that father of the accused informed the Sarpanch about death of the deceased at 7 p.m. on 7-11-1992 and Sarpanch thereafter telephonically informed the police as well as "sent a written report" at 11 p.m. — However, no such entry made in the station diary and no written report produced, to substantiate the claim — IO also not making any report, though the information disclosing commission of a cognizable offence — Besides, IO reaching the place of occurrence, which was only at a distance of 4 km from the police station on the next day at 6.30 a.m. and only thereafter FIR drawn up — Held, these facts cast doubt on the prosecution case and consequently on the time of occurrence of death (Para 9). State of A.P. v. Patnam Anandam, (2005) 9 SCC 237: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1225: AIR 2005 SC 764: 2005 Cri LJ 894.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-2004]

[1151] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing FIR — Held, delay can only be a ground to arouse suspicion when it is unexplained

It is seen that though there was some delay in lodging the FIR, it is but natural in a tradition-bound society to avoid embarrassment, which is inevitable where the reputation of a woman is concerned. (Para 8)

Delay in every case cannot be a ground to arouse suspicion. It can only be so when the delay is unexplained. Vidyadharan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 1 SCC 215: 2004 SCC (Cri) 260: AIR 2004 SC 536: (2004) 1 KLT 105: 2004 Cri LJ 605: (2004) 2 MPLJ 251.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-2003]

[1152] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing FIR — When fatal — Incident occurring at 1.30 p.m. but complaint lodged at 3.15 a.m. on next day — Police station 30 miles away from the place of incident — Facility of tractor available but used only on the next day for going to police station — Said unexplained long delay in filing the complaint, held, creates doubt as to the genuineness of the prosecution case — Penal Code, 1860, S. 302 (Para 5). Shankarlal v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 10 SCC 632: AIR 2004 SC 3559: 2004 Cri LJ 2874.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, B.P. Singh and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-2004]

Distinguished in Vikram v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 12 SCC 332

[1153] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing of — Failure of court to appreciate police apathy and rustic village woman's endeavour in lodging FIR

Apathy on the part of the police officers to accept complaints promptly is well-known phenomenon. The courts cannot be oblivious of such conduct on the part of the police officers. PW 1 is a rustic villager. She is an illiterate lady. According to her, she had been turned away from the police station on the premise that no dead body was recovered or there being no other evidence relating to her death. No exception to such a statement can be taken. (Para 16). Ponnusamy v. State of T.N., (2008) 5 SCC 587: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 656: AIR 2008 SC 2110: 2008 Cri LJ 2563.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-2008]

[1154] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in filing the complaint — Accused outraging modesty of a married woman — Victim filing complaint after two days of the incident — Effect — Victim working at place where her husband or near relatives not available — She must have taken some time to decide as to what course of action was to be taken — Hence contention that much time was taken for filing the complaint, held, not sustainable — Penal Code, 1860, S. 354 (Para 8). Satyaendra Dayal Khare v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 12 SCC 485.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-8-2005]

[1155] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in giving FI statement to police — Deceased dragged out of his house and murdered by accused persons at about 7/7.30 p.m. and when his wife tried to rescue him she was also assaulted — Deceased's wife stating that she was afraid to go to the police station at night and so she went only on the next day and gave the FI statement — Held, her evidence cannot be rejected on ground of delay in giving the FI statement when her evidence was corroborated by another eyewitness who too had sustained several injuries in the incident (Para 8). State of Karnataka v. Bhaskar Kushali Kotharkar, (2004) 7 SCC 487: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1963: AIR 2004 SC 4333.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-2004]

[1156] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging — Complainant party proceeding with injured to hospital but not lodging complaint at either of two police stations on the way — Delay therefore fatal

It is also unusual that though two police stations fell on the way from the village, in which the occurrence had taken place, to the hospital, but the complainant party did not stop at the two police stations and proceeded straight to General Hospital. In the ordinary circumstances, it is quite imperative that the complainant party could have stopped at the police station, sought necessary help from the police station and also given first-hand information to the police. The injuries suffered by the complainant party were simple in nature except that of the deceased. Therefore, there are no mitigating circumstances for not reporting to the police station at the first hour especially when the police stations are on the way to General Hospital. (Para 11). Raghunath v. State of Haryana, (2003) 1 SCC 398: AIR 2003 SC 165.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-2002]

[1157] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging — If there is absence of motive for falsely implicating the accused and plausible explanation for the delay, even long delay can be condoned — Whether delay would render prosecution case suspect would depend upon facts of each case — On facts held, delay not fatal to the prosecution case

There cannot be any generalisation that whenever there is a delay in lodging the FIR, the prosecution case becomes suspect. Whether delay is so long as to throw a cloud of suspicion on the seeds of the prosecution case, would depend upon the facts of each case. Even a long delay can be condoned if the witnesses have no motive of implicating the accused and have given a plausible reason as to why the report was lodged belatedly. In the instant case, this has been done. The witnesses have clearly stated that after seeing the deceased in an injured condition, immediate effort was to get him hospitalised and get him treated. Though there was cross-examination at length, no infirmity was noticed in their evidence. Therefore, the trial court and the High Court were right in relying on the evidence of the prosecution witnesses. (Para 7). Harbans Kaur v. State of Haryana, (2005) 9 SCC 195: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1213: AIR 2005 SC 2989: 2005 Cri LJ 2199.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-2005]

[1158] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging — Parents and brother of the deceased rushing to the hospital to save the deceased as also to get medical aid for themselves being injured — Message thereafter sent from the hospital to Police station by them — Concurrent finding of trial court and High Court that the delay satisfactorily explained in the circumstances upheld. Gurnek Singh v. State of Punjab, 1988 Supp SCC 807: 1989 SCC (Cri) 10: AIR 1988 SC 2249.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-9-1988]

[1159] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging — That by itself not sufficient to draw adverse inference against the prosecution case — Facts and circumstances of each case to be considered — Relevant circumstances stated — On facts held, sequence of events and manner in which FIR was lodged not considered — Delay properly explained — Report promptly sent to CJM — Hence no adverse inference can be drawn

The main reason given by the High Court for disbelieving the prosecution case is that though the incident took place at 7.00 p.m. on 23-5-1987 but the FIR was recorded at 9.20 p.m. on 24-5-1987 at the police station and the special report reached the Magistrate at 11.45 p.m. and as the distance of Police Station Sangrur from the place of occurrence is only 4 kilometres, there was an inordinate delay in lodging the FIR which rendered the prosecution case doubtful.

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

Held :

There is no hard-and-fast rule that any delay in lodging the FIR would automatically render the prosecution case doubtful. It necessarily depends upon facts and circumstances of each case whether there has been any such delay in lodging the FIR which may cast doubt about the veracity of the prosecution case and for this a host of circumstances like the condition of the first informant, the nature of injuries sustained, the number of victims, the efforts made to provide medical aid to them, the distance of the hospital and the police station etc. have to be taken into consideration. There is no mathematical formula by which an inference may be drawn either way merely on account of delay in lodging of the FIR. (Para 10)

In this case sequence of events and the manner in which the FIR was lodged have not at all been taken into consideration. The High Court did not at all take into consideration the fact that the first informant and his three sons besides two others had received injuries and they had first gone to Sangrur from their village on a tractor-trolley and from there to Christian Medical College, Ludhiana which is about 60 kilometres on taxis and further, that all the six injured had been admitted in the hospital where one of them died next morning and another had sustained serious injuries which were dangerous to life and he had to be operated upon and in such circumstances he could not have left the hospital for going to PS Sangrur for lodging the FIR. The High Court also failed to take into consideration the fact that the FIR was lodged after SI of Police Station Sangrur had come to the hospital and had recorded the statement of the first informant after seeking opinion of the doctor in writing and thereafter, the said statement was sent through constable to Police Station Sangrur. The special report of the occurrence was sent to CJM, Sangrur within two hours and twenty minutes of the lodging of the FIR. The special report was thus sent very promptly. Therefore, in the facts and circumstances of the case, there was no delay in either lodging of the FIR or in sending the special report to the CJM and the view to the contrary taken by the High Court is absolutely incorrect. (Paras 9 and 11). Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641: AIR 2003 SC 1164: 2003 Cri LJ 1282.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-2003]

Tara Singh v. State of Punjab, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 536: 1991 SCC (Cri) 710; Zahoor v. State of U.P., 1991 Supp (1) SCC 372: 1991 SCC (Cri) 678; Jamna v. State of U.P., 1994 Supp (1) SCC 185: 1994 SCC (Cri) 348, relied on [1160] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging — Becomes material when it causes prejudice to accused or where there is any doubt regarding the prosecution case — Incident of fatal attack on deceased happened between 7 a.m. and 8 a.m. — Deceased in injured condition admitted to hospital — Report sent by doctor to police station pursuant to which SHO came to the hospital but could not record any statement of deceased as he was not in a fit condition — Thereafter police did not take any action that day — Police swung into action only when a written complaint was lodged in the police station next day at 10.30 a.m. — Held, delay in registering the case was due to ignorance and negligence on the part of the police — Police officer who had visited the hospital could have registered the case based on the information that may be volunteered by any of the bystander to the patient — However, in this case delay in lodging the report had not caused any serious prejudice to the accused nor did it cast any doubt on the prosecution case — There was no allegation that accused were roped in and a false case was foisted upon them. State of Rajasthan v. Maharaj Singh, (2004) 13 SCC 165: 2005 SCC (Cri) 90: AIR 2004 SC 4205: 2004 Cri LJ 4195.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-9-2004]

[1161] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging — Explanation for — Murder — Held on facts, delay properly explained

The incident took place at about 6.30 p.m. at Taran Taran. Two eyewitnesses, who were ladies and related to the deceased, were obviously very much frightened. They raised hue and cry but nobody from the neighbouring locality came there. The accused ran away. They, in the circumstances, locked the house and went to Amritsar to inform the deceased's husband but he was not available. He came back late at night and it was not possible thereafter to go to police station. Therefore, on the next day morning they went to the police station and lodged FIR at about 11.25 a.m.

Held :

It could not be said that there was unexplained delay on the part of the prosecution in lodging FIR. It was immediately forwarded to the Magistrate. (Para 13). Gurdev Raj v. State of Punjab, (2007) 13 SCC 380: 2008 Cri LJ 382: (2007) 59 AIC 124 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2007]

[1162] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging — Explanation for — Murder — Occurrence took place at 7 a.m. in which deceased received head injuries — First priority for the relations of the injured being to provide him immediate medical aid, he was first taken to Primary Health Centre, then to Civil Hospital and ultimately to PGI where he succumbed to his injuries at 1.15 p.m. — Thereafter FIR lodged in police station which was a few kilometres away from the hospital — Held, there was no unreasonable delay in lodging the FIR (Para 11). Ravi Kumar v. State of Punjab, (2005) 9 SCC 315: AIR 2005 SC 1929: 2005 Cri LJ 1742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-2005]

Ram Jag v. State of U.P., (1974) 4 SCC 201: 1974 SCC (Cri) 370; Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1976) 4 SCC 369: 1976 SCC (Cri) 646, relied on [1163] — S. 154 — On facts, held, no delay in recording of FIR — Incident happened at 1 or 2 a.m. in a remote village — Wife of deceased, 75 years of age, witnessing murder of her husband in a most brutal and blood-curdling manner with a huge amount of bleeding, nevertheless giving statement to Village Administrative Officer at about 8 a.m. and delay occurring after that was beyond her control — FIR received at police station 7 km away at 10.00 a.m., held, not delayed (Para 20). State of A.P. v. M. Narasimha Rao, (2010) 9 SCC 166: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 1165: AIR 2010 SC 3776.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-8-2010]

[1164] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging — Occurrence alleged to have taken place at midnight but the informant waited till 7 a.m. next morning and only thereafter started for police station for lodging the report — Explanation that in those days terrorists were active in Punjab was not acceptable as the informant knew that the assailants were not terrorists — FIR containing great details about family affairs of the deceased — Held, FIR was lodged after much deliberation (Paras 17 and 18). State of Punjab v. Ajaib Singh, (2005) 9 SCC 94: 2005 SCC (Cri) 43: AIR 2004 SC 2466: 2004 Cri LJ 2547.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2004]

[1165] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging due to threats held out by the opposite faction who were roaming about the village and nobody in the village was prepared to come forward — Held, on facts, delay satisfactorily explained. Nand Singh v. State of Punjab, 1980 Supp SCC 347: 1981 SCC (Cri) 273: AIR 1980 SC 2128: 1980 Cri LJ 1478.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1980]

[1166] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Held, would assume significance in cases where the accused persons are being unnecessarily implicated while some others may have been responsible for the crime or to lug in those who were not present at the time of occurrence of the incident — Delay of more than nine hours in lodging the FIR, on facts, not affecting the prosecution case

There was no justification for the High Court to hold that there was delay in lodging the FIR because the incident took place at the end of the night intervening 19-7-1984 and 20-7-1984 and the eyewitnesses who lodged the FIR had to go to the police station by at least covering a distance of 25 km partly by foot and partly by travelling in a bus. Further, waiting for a bus and reaching the appropriate police station to lodge the complaint does take time. More so, delay in lodging the complaint would assume significance in cases where the accused persons are being unnecessarily implicated while some others may have been responsible for the crime or to lug in those who were not present at the time of occurrence of the incident. On 20-7-1984, fairly early in the morning at about 7.15 a.m., PW 3 left for the police station to lodge the complaint about the incident which is neither unnatural or improbable. (Para 11). State of Haryana v. Ram Sarup, (2002) 7 SCC 250: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1691: AIR 2002 SC 3114.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-2002]

[1167] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Becomes material when it causes prejudice to accused or where there is any doubt regarding the prosecution case — Incident of fatal attack on deceased happened between 7 a.m. and 8 a.m. — Deceased in injured condition admitted to hospital — Report sent by doctor to police station pursuant to which SHO came to the hospital but could not record any statement of deceased as he was not in a fit condition — Thereafter police did not take any action that day — Police swung into action only when a written complaint was lodged in the police station next day at 10.30 a.m. — Held, delay in registering the case was due to ignorance and negligence on the part of the police — Police officer who had visited the hospital could have registered the case based on the information that may be volunteered by any of the bystander to the patient — However, in this case delay in lodging the report had not caused any serious prejudice to the accused nor did it cast any doubt on the prosecution case — There was no allegation that accused were roped in and a false case was foisted upon them. State of Rajasthan v. Maharaj Singh, 2005 SCC (Cri) 90: AIR 2004 SC 4205: (2004) 98 Cut LT 686: 2004 Cri LJ 4195.

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-9-2004]

[1168] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Grounds/considerations for ascertaining bona fides — Offence under S. 376(2)(g) IPC — Prosecution case, held, should not be thrown out only on the ground of delay in lodging FIR — Other factors like trauma suffered by the victim, sociological factors along with other evidence should be taken into consideration

The prosecutrix, a coolie, was gang raped while on her way back from a movie at about 10.00 p.m. on 20-11-1994. Her brother, P who was slapped, ran for help and when he returned with other villagers, found her sister lying unconscious and naked. FIR was lodged at about 7.00 p.m. on 21-11-1994 after the victim regained her consciousness. The conviction of six accused persons under Section 376(2)(g) IPC was upheld by the High Court.

Allowing the appeal of Accused 4 to 6 and dismissing the appeal of Accused 1 to 3,

Held :

The prosecution case should not be thrown out only on the ground of delay in lodging the FIR. Some delay has occurred in the lodging of the FIR but keeping in view the trauma suffered by the victim, her statement that she had regained her composure only in the evening cannot be disbelieved particularly in view of the evidence of PW 8. The fact that she was found lying naked at the place of occurrence in an unconscious state, stands proved not only by PW 7 but also by PW 8. The evidence of PW 8 remains uncontroverted. Prosecution case and the factor of delay should also be considered with regard to the sociological backgrounds from which PW 6 and PW 7 and other witnesses hail. (Paras 20, 19 and 14). Viswanathan v. State, (2008) 5 SCC 354: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 593: AIR 2008 SC 2222.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2008]

[1169] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Incident allegedly occurring at 10.45 a.m. — FIR lodged at 1.00 p.m. — Injured were taken to hospital — One of the injured persons died at 12.00 noon — Held, immediate reaction of the witnesses would be to save the lives of injured — On facts, held, no delay in lodging the FIR (Para 4). Goura Venkata Reddy v. State of A.P., (2003) 12 SCC 469.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-2003]

[1170] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Incident at 10 p.m. — FIR lodged on next day at 7.20 a.m. — Effect — Disturbed conditions prevailing in locality — Not possible to go to police station — Information given to Sarpanch of village in the night itself — Held, delay in lodging the FIR explained — Hence, not fatal (Para 7). State of Punjab v. Joginder Singh, (2003) 12 SCC 179.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-10-2003]

[1171] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Occurrence at 10.30 a.m. inside a factory — FIR lodged at 1.15 p.m. — Effect — Accused causing serious injuries to three senior officers of factory — PW 5 (eyewitness who was son of one of the injured and employee of the said factory) along with others taking these injured to the hospital first — Defence plea that it was strange that though several telephones were available in factory, no information was given to the police and only when PW 5 was allegedly returning from the hospital to the factory he met the police on the way and reported the matter — Rejection of — High Court was justified in holding that there was no delay in lodging the FIR — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302 and 307 (Paras 6 and 9). Kamaljit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2003) 12 SCC 155: AIR 2004 SC 69: 2004 Cri LJ 28.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2003]

[1172] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Rape case — In view of the social conditions prevalent in India, there may be delay in giving the first information of such an offence to the police — Though the delay as such is not serious, but while considering the broad probabilities of the case, the delay in giving information to police in the instant case, considered to be of some importance

It is true that in view of the social conditions prevalent in India, there may be delay in giving the first information of such an offence to the police. A rape victim may think seriously before giving the information to the police about rape as the onslaught of a social stigma may haunt her for life. Though the delay as such is not serious, but while considering the broad probabilities of the case, the delay in giving the information to the police, in the instant case, also assumes some importance. (Para 19). Sudhansu Sekhar Sahoo v. State of Orissa, (2002) 10 SCC 743: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1484: AIR 2003 SC 2136.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2002]

[1173] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Rape case — Undue delay in lodging the complaint without acceptable evidence, held on facts, contributed to the doubt in the prosecution case (Para 4). State of Karnataka v. Mapilla P.P. Soopi, (2003) 8 SCC 202: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1977.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-2003]

[1174] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Rape case — Version of prosecutrix that the FIR was lodged after three days of the incident — Reliability of — Held on facts, not correct — Evidence indicating that the FIR was lodged six days after the occurrence — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 376, 457 and 380

The prosecutrix claimed that she lodged the report on the third day of the incident. This apparently is not correct because the report identified by her as the report lodged by her was lodged on 26-2-1994. She deposed that on the third day she had talked to some labourers and narrated to them the incident. None of those labourers has been examined as a witness. In fact evidence of the residents of the building in which she was residing, who appeared as witnesses, is not that the prosecutrix, either in the morning following the incident or on any other day, mentioned to them about the incident which took place on the night of 20-2-1994. The evidence on record, therefore, does establish that for six days after the occurrence, the prosecutrix did not narrate the incident to anyone. (Para 16). Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185: AIR 2003 SC 3365.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2003]

[1175] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Rape cases — Inordinate delay of 6 months — When accusations of rape involved, held, said delay per se is not a mitigating circumstance — Such delay, if satisfactorily explained, held, not fatal — If not so explained and there is possibility of embellishment or exaggeration in prosecution version due to such delay, then it is a relevant factor — Victim, a girl of about 14 years, ravished by her teacher in the month of May — She not disclosing about the incident to anyone due to threats given by the accused — Few days after the incident, accused again committing sexual intercourse with her — Since victim complaining about stomach ache, her mother taking her to a hospital in the month of September — Doctor telling the mother about pregnancy of victim — On enquiry by mother, victim disclosing that her conception was due to sexual intercourse by accused — FIR lodged in the month of November — Victim totally unaware of the catastrophe which had befallen her — Held, High Court's conclusion that there was unexplained delay in lodging the FIR was not sustainable — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 375 and 376, Ss. 376 and 506 (Paras 18 and 19). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

Tulshidas Kanolkar v. State of Goa, (2003) 8 SCC 590: 2004 SCC (Cri) 44, relied on

[1176] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — When accusations of rape are involved, held, said delay per se is not a mitigating circumstance — Such delay, if satisfactorily explained, held, not fatal — If not so explained and there is possibility of embellishment or exaggeration in prosecution version due to such delay, then it is a relevant factor — Where a mentally deficient girl totally unaware of the catastrophe which had befallen her was ravished by accused not once, but several times, held, the unusual circumstances satisfactorily explained the delay in lodging FIR — Thus, said delay did not affect the prosecution version adversely — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 376 and 506(2)

Delay in lodging the first information report cannot be used as a ritualistic formula for discarding the prosecution case and doubting its authenticity. It only puts the court on guard to search for and consider if any explanation has been offered for the delay. Once it is offered, the court is to only see whether it is satisfactory or not. In case if the prosecution fails to satisfactorily explain the delay and there is possibility of embellishment or exaggeration in the prosecution version on account of such delay, it is a relevant factor. On the other hand, satisfactory explanation of the delay is weighty enough to reject the plea of false implication or vulnerability of the prosecution case. (Para 5)

Delay per se is not a mitigating circumstance for the accused when accusations of rape are involved. As the factual scenario shows, the victim was totally unaware of the catastrophe which had befallen her. That being so, the mere delay in lodging of the first information report does not in any way render the prosecution version brittle. (Para 5). Tulshidas Kanolkar v. State of Goa, (2003) 8 SCC 590.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-2003]

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

[1177] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — When not fatal — Brutal attack — Victim taken to hospital — Paramount attempt was to save his life — Thus delay in lodging FIR, held, explained — Hence, not fatal (Para 23). Bhargavan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 12 SCC 414: AIR 2004 SC 1058: (2004) 1 KLT 201: 2004 Cri LJ 646.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2003]

[1178] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Whether satisfactorily explained — PW 8, who was also thrown in the canal along with the deceased, after coming out from canal had gone to Village K and narrated the incident to one J — Thereafter along with J he returned to the place of occurrence and searched for the deceased and the tractor but could not find them — Thereafter they going to Village M on a tractor and narrating the incident to deceased's father, who reported the matter to Sarpanch — Then they went to Police Post I who refused to lodge the report but informed the Police at G — Held, though the distance between K and G Police Station is only 5 km, but PW 8 had satisfactorily explained the sequence of events which resulted in delay — Conduct of PW 8 in not going to the police station immediately was quite natural as it is not expected that a person would straightaway first go to the nearest police station and lodge the first information report even without informing the near relatives of the deceased — Further, it is not the case of the appellant that after occurrence of the incident some deliberations took place in order to falsely implicate the appellant in the case — No suggestion of any enmity between the appellant and PW 8 made — Hence held, mere delay in lodging the first information report, in the facts and circumstances of the case cannot be held to be fatal to the prosecution case (Para 14). Subhash v. State of Haryana, (2007) 12 SCC 63: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 213.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-8-2007]

[1179] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging of FIR in case of child rape, on facts, was fully explained — Acquittal for child rape reversed — Delay of 26 hours in lodging FIR fully explained by prosecution — When testimony of the prosecutrix and her relatives and the doctor, who had examined her, found to be trustworthy, convincing and reliable, non-examination of other witnesses cannot be a ground to reject the prosecution case — It cannot be expected from the mother of the victim to have shouted on seeing the accused committing the rape so as to collect others, nor can it be expected that after the occurrence in the village others would have visited her house who would stand as prosecution witnesses — Courts should adopt a sensitive approach in dealing with cases of child rape — On facts held, trial court by a well-considered and well-analysed judgment was justified in convicting the respondent under S. 376 and High Court erred in reversing the same and acquitting the respondent on benefit of doubt — Penal Code, 1860, S. 376

According to the testimony of PW 2, her daughter, then aged 8 years, had gone to the house of one S to take therefrom buttermilk. When her daughter did not return for a long time, she went to that house and when she pressed open the door which was closed, she found the respondent, son of S then aged 18 years, committing rape on her daughter, who was totally unconscious. On seeing her the respondent, who was then alone in the house, ran away. She lifted her daughter and brought her back home. At that time her husband and brother-in-law had gone to another village. Next day a report was lodged with the police. Besides the mother (PW 2), the father of the prosecutrix (PW 1) and wife of the brother of PW 1 also deposed supporting the version of PW 2. Prosecutrix, PW 5, being a child witness, the Additional District and Sessions Judge before administering her oath asked general questions so as to satisfy that she was competent to answer the questions and take oath. Her statement in court was recorded about four years after the date of the incident. Her deposition also was that the respondent had committed rape on her under the same circumstances as narrated by PW 2. The testimony of the doctor, PW 11, who had examined the prosecutrix was that externally there was no injury on her body but on the inner parts of both thighs and at the outer part of the left foot there were signs of blood. For internal examination she was referred to Family Incharge Hospital. The injury report was in his handwriting wherein the reports of a lady doctor and another doctor had been incorporated. PW 11 stated that: "In my opinion, the intercourse was done with the girl i.e. the possibility of doing the intercourse cannot be ruled out." The tip of the finger in the whole of her uterus was passing easily. PW 11 deposed that: "According to the opinion of the lady doctor, the opinion of the pathologist and my opinion of the examination, something was penetrated in her vagina." The only cross-examination of the witness was that the main examination report by the lady and the other doctors was not before him, that the seminal stains were not present on the clothes and that after the sexual contact the vagina remained intact. The Additional District and Sessions Judge found the respondent guilty for offence under Section 376 of the Indian Penal Code and imposed rigorous imprisonment for seven years and fine of Rs 1000 and in default of payment of fine to further undergo six months' rigorous imprisonment. The High Court gave benefit of doubt to the respondent and acquitted him. The main reasons which prevailed with the High Court in reversing the conviction were two. First, the non-examination of other independent witnesses and second, the rejection of medical evidence i.e. testimony of the doctor, PW 11. As regards non-examination of other witnesses, the High Court noticed that the incident had taken place in the environment of the village where there were other residential houses; the house of the prosecutrix from where the incident took place was 2-3 houses away and in the house of the accused his other brothers and sisters-in-law were also living. The High Court held that it was unnatural that PW 2 and PW 5 would not have shouted and others might not have gathered at the place of incidence and that, except the family members no other witness had come forward to support the case of the prosecution. The High Court also described as unnatural the statement of the mother that except her husband's brother's wife, PW 4, not a single person of the village had come to her house. As regards the second reason the High Court held that in absence of the evidence of the lady doctor, there was no support from any medical evidence. The prosecution case was also questioned on the ground of delay of nearly 26 hours in lodging the FIR. The offence was alleged to have taken place at about 9 a.m. The FIR was registered at about 11.30 a.m. on the next day. It was contended that this delay had assumed importance and was fatal particularly when the brother of the prosecutrix, was admittedly at the house. The delay, according to the defence counsel, resulted in embellishments.

Allowing the State's appeal,

Held :

As regards the contention regarding the delay in lodging the FIR, the real question is about the explanation for the delay. It is not at all unnatural for the family members to await the arrival of the elders in the family when an offence of this nature is committed before taking a decision to lodge a report with the police. The reputation and prestige of the family and the career and life of a young child is involved in such cases. Therefore, the presence of the brother of the prosecutrix at home is not of much consequence. It has been established that the father of the girl along with his brother came back to their house at 7 o'clock in the evening. The girl was unconscious during the day. PW 2 told her husband as to what had happened to their daughter. The police station was at a distance of 15 km. According to the testimony of PW 1 no mode of conveyance was available. The police was reported to the next day morning and FIR was recorded at 11.30 a.m. The delay in reporting the matter to the police has thus been fully explained. (Para 9)

The conviction for offence under Section 376 IPC can be based on the sole testimony of a rape victim. However, after carefully scanning and scrutinising the evidence of the parents of the prosecutrix, her brother, the prosecutrix herself and the doctor (PW 11), the same is found to be trustworthy, convincing and reliable. At the time of the incident the accused was alone at home. When such an act is done, the natural tendency is not to talk about it to others but, to an extent possible, hide it. There was nothing unnatural in other villagers not visiting the house of PWs 1 and 2. Being a child witness, the testimony of the prosecutrix and that of her mother had been examined by the trial court with utmost care and caution. The High Court has clearly committed a serious illegality in assuming that in the natural course of events if rape had been committed, the young girl child and her mother would have shouted so as to collect others and they would have visited her house. The prosecutrix was unconscious. There was no question of the prosecutrix shouting as assumed by the High Court. Too much was made by the High Court on account of non-examination of persons other than the family members. The aspect of non-examination was given undue importance without having regard to the contextual facts. Cases involving sexual molestation and assault require a different approach — a sensitive approach and not an approach which a court may adopt in dealing with a normal offence under penal laws. (Para 15). State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210: AIR 2002 SC 2235: 2002 Cri LJ 2951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2002]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980; State of U.P. v. Ashok Dixit, (2000) 3 SCC 70: 2000 SCC (Cri) 579, relied on

Joseph v. State of Kerala, (2000) 5 SCC 197: 2000 SCC (Cri) 926, distinguished

[1180] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — Effect, if any, considered — On facts, there was some delay in lodging the FIR — However, as three of accused had put up a counter-version, held, effect of delay in the FIR was somewhat reduced — Also, delay in lodging FIR was substantially explained — Hence, considering the background, delay of a couple of hours cannot be said to be unreasonable

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

In a dispute between the deceased and his brothers relating to possession of land, the brothers of the deceased along with some others, assaulted him with sickles and choppers, resulting in his death. PW 3, another brother of the deceased, went to his rescue, but he too was assaulted, thereby sustaining injuries. The accused were charged for offences punishable under Sections 143, 147, 148, 302 and 324 read with Section 149 IPC.

The trial court acquitted the accused persons. However, the High Court, in appeal, reversed the judgment of acquittal, convicting the accused persons for offences punishable under Sections 143, 147, 148, 302/149 and 324/149 and sentencing them to imprisonment for life under Sections 302/149 IPC with no separate sentence for the other offences. Hence, the present appeal.

The contention of the appellants before the Supreme Court were that the deceased and his companions were the aggressors and that the incident had happened when the accused were exercising their right of self-defence to protect their person and property. It was further pleaded that the witnesses were discrepant as to the actual manner of the assault and as such no credence could be attached to their testimony. It was finally pleaded that there was an inordinate delay in the registration of the FIR and that this delay was utilised to create four eyewitnesses and a false story inculpating the accused.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

It is true that prima facie there appears to be some delay in the lodging of the FIR at 10.45 p.m. in the light of the fact that incident had happened at 4.30 p.m. However, as three of the accused have put up a counter-version, the effect of the delay in the FIR is somewhat reduced. The delay in the lodging of the FIR has been substantially explained as the incident had happened in a remote village some distance from the police station and as PW 3 had also sustained a serious injury, the first anxiety of the family would have been to look after him, the more so as all the brothers of the deceased and PW 3, were themselves the assailants and there was nobody else in the family to have taken the injured PW 3 to the hospital. It is also significant that the FIR could not have been recorded earlier as the entire family was involved either on one side or the other and it had ultimately been left to a hapless widow, completely isolated from the rest of the family, to lodge the FIR. It is in this background that a delay of a couple of hours cannot be said to be unreasonable. (Para 16). Chandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 11 SCC 328: AIR 2008 SC 2323.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2008]

[1181] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — If fatal — Held, mere delay in lodging the FIR is not by itself fatal to the prosecution case — Nevertheless, it is a relevant factor of which the court is obliged to take notice and examine whether any satisfactory explanation has been offered — Else adverse inference may be drawn — However, if delay is properly and satisfactorily explained, prosecution case cannot be thrown out merely on ground of the delay — Explanation has to be considered in light of the totality of facts and circumstances of the case — In the instant case, informant, PW 5, promptly gave his fardbeyan to police on the very next day i.e. 18-7-1988, in the hospital — Fardbeyan was forwarded by police to the police station concerned the same day and on the basis thereof, formal FIR was registered on 22-7-1988 — Despite delay FIR was in consonance with fardbeyan and not embellished in any manner — In the light of surrounding circumstances and the fact that police station concerned was about 12 km away from place of occurrence, delay was satisfactorily explained (Paras 16 and 19). Ashok Kumar Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2008) 12 SCC 173: AIR 2008 SC 2436: (2008) 66 AIC 13 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3030.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2008]

State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980; Ramdas v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 2 SCC 170: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 546, relied on

[1182] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — Whether indicates existence of possibility of false implication of accused — In the instant case, delay sufficiently explained — Held, on facts, delay in lodging FIR in a case of this nature was not such from which existence of possibility of false implication could be inferred — Undoubtedly, lodging of FIR within a short time after occurrence would ordinarily lead to a conclusion that statements made therein are correct, but when delay in lodging FIR is sufficiently explained, same would receive the evidentiary value it deserves

Delay in lodging the FIR has sufficiently been explained. If the accused persons were to be falsely implicated, PW 9 and PW 10 (father and brother of the deceased, respectively) would have rushed to the police station on the same night. In any event, they would have themselves gone for lodging the FIR on the next date. They had fled away because of the threats given to them. They stayed out throughout the night. PW 9 came back only on the next day. One can very well visualise his mental condition. If the married sisters of the deceased, therefore, in the aforementioned situation started from their village round about 8 a.m. on the next day to reach the police station at about 10 a.m., no exception can be taken thereto. Delay in lodging the FIR in a case of this nature is not such which would impel to infer that there existed a possibility of false implication. There cannot be any doubt whatsoever that lodging of the FIR within a short time after the occurrence would ordinarily lead to a conclusion that the statements made therein are correct but when the delay in lodging FIR is sufficiently explained, the same would receive the evidentiary value it deserved. (Para 28)

The very fact that two married sisters gathered the courage at the earliest possible opportunity to go to the police station itself eliminates false implication. They are married. They came to spend some time with their family on the occasion of some festival. It is difficult to believe that they would have some independent motive to falsely implicate so many persons. If that be so, it might not have been possible for them to give a detailed description of the manner in which the occurrence took place. Furthermore, the police came to the place of occurrence soon after the lodging of the FIR. The dead body was immediately sent for post-mortem examination. From the evidence of the doctor, the post-mortem examination started at 12.30 p.m. The approach of the High Court, therefore, cannot be said to be incorrect. Furthermore, in the FIR itself, three motives have been attributed, one of them being the involvement of the deceased in the murder of the younger brother of Accused 1. (Para 29). Shivappa v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 11 SCC 337: AIR 2008 SC 1860: 2008 Cri LJ 2992.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2008]

[1183] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in recording — Objection regarding — Rejected in view of corroborated testimony of eyewitnesses. Baboo v. State of M.P., 1993 Supp (3) SCC 411: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1047: AIR 1994 SC 1712.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-7-1993]

[1184] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in registering a complaint/FIR — When not fatal — If the ocular evidence adduced by the prosecution is worthy of acceptance, held, the said delay by itself not fatal to prosecution case

If the ocular evidence adduced by the prosecution is worthy of acceptance, the element of delay in registering a complaint or sending the same to the Jurisdictional Magistrate by itself would not in any manner weaken the prosecution case. In the instant case, the evidence of PWs 1 and 2 does not suffer from any such contradiction or omission which makes the said evidence unbelievable. (Paras 10 and 13). Balram Singh v. State of Punjab, (2003) 11 SCC 286: 2004 SCC (Cri) 149: AIR 2003 SC 2213.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, Ashok Bhan and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-2003]

[1185] — Ss. 154 and 176(1-A) — FIR — Delay in sending telegram to superior police officers complaining about beating given to deceased at police station — Time lost in post-mortem and securing dead body of deceased and time taken in taking decision to make so serious a complaint against police officer — Held, delay not unreasonable. Gauri Shanker Sharma v. State of U.P., 1990 Supp SCC 656: AIR 1990 SC 709: (1990) 1 Crimes 196.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-1990]

[1186] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay of 4 hours in lodging FIR — Effect — Complainant, a police official — Police station at about 50 yards from place of occurrence — Telephone services available — On these facts, delay in lodging FIR raised doubt as to prosecution case — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 12

The offence took place around 7 o' clock in the morning. The trial court noticed that the first information report was recorded around 11 o'clock and it reached the Court of the Chief Judicial Magistrate after three-and-a-half hours. The police station was about 50 yards away from the police lines where PW 2 used to reside. Further, the telephone services were available both at the civil lines as also the police station. No attempt was made by PW 2 to inform the SHO of the police station immediately. The first information report was admittedly lodged after a long delay. Having regard to the distance of the police station as well as the CIA Office, it could not be understood as to why the DSP could come to the place of occurrence only at about 11.30 a.m. and why he remained at the spot for about three hours. (Paras 17 and 14). Om Parkash v. State of Haryana, (2006) 2 SCC 250: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 493: AIR 2006 SC 894: 2006 Cri LJ 972.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-2006]

(2005) 4 RCR 895 (P&H), reversed

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

[1187] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay of 6 hours in lodging — Accused's premises raided, recovery of arms effected, accused arrested and FIR lodged thereafter — In the circumstances held, delay does not warrant any adverse inference (Para 6). Erram Santosh Reddy v. State of A.P., (1991) 3 SCC 206: 1991 SCC (Cri) 510: AIR 1991 SC 1672: (1991) 2 Crimes 671.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-1991]

[1188] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay of 12 hours in lodging FIR — Delayed filing of FIR and its consequences, discussed — Held on facts, sufficient to doubt the genuineness of the FIR

The delayed filing of FIR and its consequences were discussed in Thulia Kali v. State of T.N., (1972) 3 SCC 393 wherein the Supreme Court observed that the delay in lodging the FIR quite often results in embellishment which is a creature of afterthought. It was further stated that on account of delay, the report not only gets bereft of the advantage of spontaneity, danger creeps in of the introduction of coloured version, exaggerated account or concocted story as a result of deliberation and consultation. The delay of 12 hours in filing the FIR in the instant case irrespective of the fact that the police station is situated only at a distance of 100 metres from the spot of incident is another factor sufficient to doubt the genuineness of the FIR. (Paras 12 and 14). Rajeevan v. State of Kerala, (2003) 3 SCC 355: 2003 SCC (Cri) 751: AIR 2003 SC 1813.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-2-2003]

Thulia Kali v. State of T.N., (1972) 3 SCC 393: 1972 SCC (Cri) 543; Maharaj Singh v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391; Thanedar Singh v. State of M.P., (2002) 1 SCC 487: 2002 SCC (Cri) 153, followed

But see Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450

[1189] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay of about 5 hrs in lodging FIR — Informant (close relative of victim) owning a tractor — Merely because he did not use the tractor to go to the police station (9 km away), held, is not a suspicious circumstance — Delay, held on facts, not fatal to the prosecution case

Merely because the informant and the father of the deceased did not choose to use a tractor to go to the police station, that cannot be a suspicious circumstance. It has only been brought on record that the informant owned a tractor. There is no evidence to show that the tractor was in usable condition. Even if it was in usable condition, the frame of mind of one who had lost his son and the other a close relative, using a tractor to cover a distance of 9 km at that point of time, has been lost sight of by the High Court. It is not unusual for a person to avail public transport facility to go to a police station. Much has been made of not lodging the case at the police post. An explanation has been offered as to why it has not been done. The High Court very lightly brushed it aside. Unfortunately, the High Court came to conclude on surmises and conjectures that the FIR was lodged after deliberation. There was no material to support such a conclusion. (Para 13). State of Punjab v. Phola Singh, (2003) 11 SCC 58: 2004 SCC (Cri) 276: AIR 2003 SC 4407.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2003]

[1190] — S. 154 — FIR — Doubt as regards time of filing and other details if substantiated — Incident taking place at 4.15 p.m. and FIR allegedly filed at 5.35 p.m. — High Court doubting the correctness of entries made in the FIR regarding time and names of the accused — Finding of the High Court based on improper appreciation of entries in Daily Diary — Evidence establishing that all the details regarding the incident had reached the police station by about 5.00 p.m. — Held, in the circumstances of the case there was no delay in recording the FIR and that it was truly recorded — Even assuming that the special report was received by the Magistrate on next day at 10.00 a.m. that circumstance in the facts of the case cannot be regarded as sufficient to create as doubt regarding genuineness of the time and other details contained in the FIR. Babu Ram v. State (Delhi Admn.), 1998 SCC (Cri) 597, 599: AIR 1998 SC 663.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-1998]

[1191] — S. 154 — FIR — Fardbeyan — Delay in recording — Rape and murder — According to prosecution, informant had gone to the police station, narrated the occurrence and after 10-20 minutes' stay there, returned to his village where the officer in charge of the police station recorded his fardbeyan naming appellant as having committed the offence — But while in police station, informant had not disclosed the name of appellant — Held, recording of fardbeyan at the house of informant instead of at police station when he had gone there shows that there was inordinate delay in recording the fardbeyan — This further shows that by the time the informant was at the police station he did not suspect complicity of the appellant with the crime and subsequently, after due deliberations, fardbeyan was given by the informant at his house alleging therein that the appellant had committed the crime — Thus the evidence of this witness makes the prosecution case showing complicity of the appellant with the crime doubtful — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 376 & 302 (Para 7). Kanhai Mishra v. State of Bihar, (2001) 3 SCC 451: 2001 SCC (Cri) 537: AIR 2001 SC 1113: 2001 Cri LJ 1259.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, R.P. Sethi and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-2001]

[1192] — S. 154 — FIR — Importance of — Vital in case of clash between two groups resulting in death — Also, FIR in such situations must be lodged without delay

In a case of this nature, enmity between two groups is accepted. Whether the first information report was ante-timed or not also requires serious consideration. First information report, in a case of this nature, provides for a valuable piece of evidence although it may not be a substantial evidence. The reason for insisting on lodging of first information report without undue delay is to obtain the earlier information in regard to the circumstances in which the crime had been committed, the name of the accused, the parts played by them, the weapons which had been used as also the names of eyewitnesses. Where the parties are at loggerheads and there had been instances which resulted in death of one or the other, lodging of a first information report is always considered to be vital. (Para 19). Ramesh Baburao Devaskar v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 13 SCC 501: 2008 Cri LJ 372: (2007) 59 AIC 54 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

Om Prakash v. State of Uttaranchal, (2003) 1 SCC 648: 2003 SCC (Cri) 412; Mundrika Mahto v. State of Bihar, (2002) 9 SCC 183: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1163; Jagdish Murav v. State of U.P., (2006) 12 SCC 626: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Rajasthan v. Teja Singh, (2001) 3 SCC 147: 2001 SCC (Cri) 439, relied on

[1193] — S. 154 — FIR — Incident occurring at about 7.45 p.m. — Lodging of FIR at 11.30 p.m., held on facts, inconsequential

PW 3, the informant has stated that he was busy in searching the body and he could not lodge the fardbeyan in time. He also stated that people told him that the officer-in-charge of Mau Outpost had gone to Agar village for Holi duty. He has also stated that Tekari Police Station is about 5 miles away from the place of occurrence and conveyance was not easily available. In the aforesaid circumstances lodging of fardbeyan at 11.30 p.m. is inconsequential. (Para 11). Gaya Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2003) 9 SCC 122: AIR 2003 SC 1759: 2003 Cri LJ 1564.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-2003]

[1194] — S. 154 — FIR — Incident took place at about 8 p.m. on 6-7-1989 — FIR lodged at 6 a.m. on 7-7-1989 at a police station situated at a distance of about 10 to 12 km from the village where the incident took place — Held, the said FIR could not be said to be belated (Para 16). Jayantibhai Bhenkarbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 8 SCC 165: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1873: AIR 2002 SC 3569.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-2002]

[1195] — S. 154 — FIR — Injured taken to hospital but no report lodged promptly at the police station 100 yards from that hospital — Explanation and conduct showing that time was sought to rope in innocents

In the instant case, the FIR was registered on 25-8-1991 at about 2.30 a.m. and copy thereof referred to in Section 157 was received by the Magistrate on 27-8-1991. Even though there was a mention in the FIR that its copy was sent through special messenger, yet no date or time of sending the said report was mentioned. The Magistrate, receiving the copy of the report, had also not noted the time of its receipt. (Para 8)

The prosecution has apparently failed to explain the delay in sending the copy of the said report in terms of Section 157 CrPC to the Magistrate of the area. This aspect has been highlighted by the counsel for the appellant to contend that many of the accused were innocent and wrongly roped in the case allegedly on account of enmity existing between the complainant and the accused party. There is some substance in such a submission. (Para 8). Bijoy Singh v. State of Bihar, (2002) 9 SCC 147: AIR 2002 SC 1949: 2002 Cri LJ 2623.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-4-2002]

[1196] — S. 154 — FIR — Inordinate delay in lodging complaint — Allegation of — Deceased D assaulted and forcibly taken away from his house at 12.30 p.m. — Mother of D informing PW 1 (brother of D) about the said incident when he came home at 1.30 p.m. — PW 1 going in search of D and coming back at 4.30 p.m. — He informing his mother that D was found lying injured in an open ground and that he admitted him in a hospital — PW 1 thereafter going to police station to lodge the complaint — On such facts, held, there was no delay in lodging the complaint

The evidence of PW 2 (mother of deceased D) is cogent and convincing. She stated that appellant A-1 along with six persons armed with knife and sticks entered into their house and went inside the room where D was lying and attacked him. A-1 assaulted D with knife and a person with black complexion beat D with a stick. Unable to bear the beatings D climbed down the staircase and started running and the seven persons chased him. When she came out she found that all the seven persons forcibly took D in an autorickshaw. She told this fact to PW 1 at 1.30 p.m. when he came to her house. PW 1 and her other son K went in search of D and at 4.30 p.m. PW 1 came to her and informed her that D had sustained injuries and was lying in an open land and that they had admitted him in the hospital. (Para 20)

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

All the injuries in the post-mortem report were ante-mortem in nature. Injuries 1 and 2 with the corresponding internal injuries are fatal in nature, sufficient to cause death in the ordinary course of nature. The prosecution has established its case that A-1 has caused the death of the deceased. (Paras 21 to 23). Ravi v. State, (2004) 11 SCC 266: AIR 2004 SC 4164.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2004]

[1197] — S. 154 — FIR — Lodging of FIR after the injured were moved to hospital — Time gap between occurrence and lodging of FIR was 3 hrs. 50 min. — Held, it is a natural conduct of a normal human being to rush the injured persons to the hospital, particularly when they are his near and dear ones, instead of leaving them at the place of occurrence to die and go to the police station to give information about the occurrence — Hence, no adverse inference could be drawn against the prosecution when the informant did not go to the police station to lodge FIR but rushed the injured persons to hospital to save their lives — On facts, there was no delay in lodging the FIR

It cannot be said that there was any delay at all in lodging the FIR, much less an inordinate one, as the incident took place on 11-9-1996 at 2130 hours and the fardbeyan was recorded in the hospital at 0045 hours on the same night and dispatched to the police station through special messenger where formal FIR was drawn at 0120 hours on the fateful night itself. (Para 8)

It is natural conduct of a normal human being to rush with injured persons to the hospital, more so when they are near and dear ones like daughter and granddaughter, instead of leaving them at the place of occurrence to die and go to the police station to give information about the occurrence. Therefore, no adverse inference can be drawn against the prosecution on the ground that the informant did not go to the police station to lodge the FIR, rather rushed to the hospital with the deceased persons to save their lives. (Para 8). Ashok Kumar Pandey v. State of Delhi, (2002) 4 SCC 76: 2002 SCC (Cri) 728: AIR 2002 SC 1468.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-3-2002]

[1198] — S. 154 — FIR — Mere delay in filing, not fatal to prosecution case

Mere delay in filing FIR cannot be said to be fatal to a criminal prosecution. First information report cannot but be termed to be the starting point and thus sets in motion a criminal investigation. Strictly speaking it is of no consequence in the event the FIR has been delayed with a plausible explanation though on the factual score it is not even so. (Paras 7 and 8). Munshi Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 351: 2002 SCC (Cri) 175: AIR 2001 SC 3031.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-2001]

Apren Joseph v. State of Kerala, (1973) 3 SCC 114: 1973 SCC (Cri) 195: AIR 1973 SC 1, relied on [1199] — S. 154 — FIR — Occurrence taking place at about 5.15 p.m. — FIR lodged at 9.45 p.m. — Time taken in informing family members of deceased and covering distance of police station in a tractor — Held, FIR not delayed. Rai Saheb v. State of Haryana, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 74: 1994 SCC (Cri) 239.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-1993]

[1200] — S. 154 — FIR — Occurrence taking place at about 8 p.m. — FIR lodged next morning at about 7.45 a.m. — Held, in the absence of indications in FIR that it had been lodged after consultations and the delay had been utilised for some purpose, delay by itself not fatal to the prosecution case — In the circumstances of the case it cannot be said that family members of the deceased had informed the police in the night itself through telephone calls and the FIR had been lodged next morning after consultations — Fact that no important role assigned to the principal offender and no overt acts attributed to two other accused persons shows that the informant had witnessed the occurrence and had not lodged the FIR after consultations. Sanganabasappa Bheemappa Kaligonnavar v. State of Karnataka, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 583: 1994 SCC (Cri) 727: AIR 1994 SC 848: 1994 Cri LJ 606: (1994) 31 ACC 147: (1994) 1 Crimes 33.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-1993]

[1201] — S. 154 — FIR — On facts, apparent delay in lodging the FIR reasonably explained. State of U.P. v. Sughar Singh, (1978) 1 SCC 178: 1978 SCC (Cri) 83: AIR 1978 SC 191: 1978 Cri LJ 141: 1978 ALJ 466.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.K. Goswami and V.D. Tulzapurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1977]

[1202] — S. 154 — FIR — On facts, held, FIR lodged promptly — Contrary finding of High Court not based on any sound reasoning — Hence liable to be rejected. State of Karnataka v. Bheemappa, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 103: 1994 SCC (Cri) 198: 1993 Cri LJ 2609.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-1993]

[1203] — S. 154 — FIR — Time taken in lodging FIR and sending it to Magistrate — Murderous assault taking place at 9.30 a.m., death of the injured taking place in hospital at around 11 a.m. and FIR lodged at 1 p.m. which reaching Magistrate at 5.30 p.m. — Held on facts, no unreasonable delay occurred — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302

When a murderous assault takes place in broad daylight, the first anxiety of the nearest ones of the victim would be to take him to the nearest hospital to get him medical aid to save his life. In the present case there was no great delay in lodging the FIR and it reached the Magistrate only about 4-5 hours after it was lodged. The mere fact that there was some delay in despatching a copy of the FIR to the Magistrate or some delay before necessary entries were made, would not be fatal to the prosecution case. Pattipati Venkaiah v. State of A.P., (1985) 4 SCC 80: 1985 SCC (Cri) 464: AIR 1985 SC 1715.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-1985]

[1204] — S. 154 — FIR — Twelve hours' delay in lodging — Explanation for — Incident taking place around 11 a.m. in which family members receiving grievous injuries — Medical treatment continuing till 3 p.m. when one of the injured persons succumbing to injuries — Heavy rains at that time affecting movement — Police station located 14 km. away — Held, sufficient and cogent reasons given for the delay. Meheruddin Sheikh v. State of W.B., (1985) 2 SCC 448: 1985 SCC (Cri) 241.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A. Varadarajan and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-1985]

[1205] — S. 154 — FIR — Unexplained delay in lodging FIR — Adverse effect of — Abduction and murder — Testimony of friends of deceased — Acquittal — Propriety — As per the prosecution, accused armed with weapons forcibly carried away the deceased G with them when he was gossiping with his friends at night — G found dead in the house of accused M — Evidence regarding abduction not reliable — Unexplained delay in lodging FIR — Non-disclosure to police about assailants or scenario of the crime when they arrived at the spot — Unusual conduct of eyewitnesses — Their presence at the spot of occurrence, held, doubtful — Acquittal upheld — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/149 and 364/149

Merely because the witnesses were friendly with the deceased, that would not be sufficient to term them as interested witnesses. Whenever any plea is taken by the accused persons about the interestedness of witnesses, materials have to be placed in that regard. (Para 7)

In the instant case, the two Hon'ble Judges of the High Court who have held the accused persons not guilty have kept the aforesaid salutary principle in view. They have analysed the evidence of PWs 4, 5 and 9 (friends of the deceased) with care and caution. It has been found that they were not truthful witnesses and their presence at the alleged spot of occurrence was doubtful. The evidence regarding abduction as stated by PWs 4, 5 and 9 does not inspire confidence. It is unnatural that with the scanty light which was stated to be available at the spot of occurrence, the witnesses could even notice the weapons held by the accused persons individually. The source of light for identification was also differently described by the witnesses. (Para 7)

Thus, the unusual conduct of PWs 4, 5 and 9, the unexplained delay in lodging the FIR, non-disclosure to the police officials about the assailants, or the scenario of the crime when they arrived at the spot cumulatively present a possible view of the case which has weighed with the two Hon'ble Judges directing acquittal. (Para 9). Bihari Nath Goswami v. Shiv Kumar Singh, (2004) 9 SCC 186: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1435.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-2-2004]

[1206] — S. 154 — FIR lodged at police station 10 miles away within 8 hours at night — Held, not fatal

The High Court was justified in holding that in the facts of the case there had not been any inordinate delay in lodging the FIR. As a matter of fact, such FIR had been lodged at a distance of about 10 miles from the place of occurrence at night within 8 hours and a copy of the FIR was also received by the Taluka Magistrate, the very next morning. Lakhwinder Singh v. State of Punjab, 1993 Supp (2) SCC 551: 1993 SCC (Cri) 719: AIR 1993 SC 87: (1993) 1 An WR 20 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-1992]

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

[1207] — S. 154 — Rape case — Delay explained — Held, not fatal to prosecution case — Rape — Delay in filing complaint — The mere factum of, held, by itself not fatal to prosecution case — Occurrence on 6-3-1990 — Filing of complaint on 10-3-1990 — Victim, a girl of eight years — Her father out of station on the date of occurrence — Possibility of hesitation on the part of mother in lodging complaint — Thus said delay, held, explained — Hence, did not prove fatal — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 376 and 376(2)(f) (Para 7). State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, (2004) 9 SCC 699: 2004 Cri LJ 2109.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

[1208] — S. 154 — Unexplained delay — On facts, proved fatal — Contradictions — Testimony of eyewitnesses — Their presence at the time of incident — Doubt in respect of — Murder at night — Original case that when attack took place, eyewitnesses (PWs 1 and 3) and deceased B were sleeping together — During evidence, change in version that PWs 1 and 3 were sleeping on the roof of pump house while B was sleeping on a cot under a tree — On seeing the attack, PWs 1 and 3 ran away and hid themselves till about 8 o'clock in the morning — Contradiction regarding direction in which they ran — They did not try to seek help of others who were sleeping in nearby thrashing yards — Incident took place in month of April when sunrise would have been around 6 o'clock — No explanation as to why PWs 1 and 3 did not go to their house or contact anybody up to 8 o'clock — Unexplained delay in lodging the FIR at 8.15 a.m. — Contradiction also regarding lodging of complaint — Testimony of PWs 1 and 3, held, not acceptable — Acquittal upheld — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 r/w S. 34 (Para 8). State of M.P. v. Kriparam, (2003) 12 SCC 675.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-2003]

Distinguished in Vikram v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 12 SCC 332

[1209] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Delay of 12 hours in filing FIR — Held, not detrimental when there was understandable reason for the delay. Lalai v. State of U.P., (1975) 3 SCC 273: 1974 SCC (Cri) 881: AIR 1974 SC 2118: 1974 Cri LJ 1393.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, R.S. Sarkaria and A.C. Gupta, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-10-1974]

[1210] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Delay of about 6 hours in filing FIR — Though one of the sons of the deceased remained in the village, he did not go to the police station to lodge the report — Held, in the circumstances of the case, the delay was deliberate and meaningful. Sahib Singh v. State of Haryana, (1997) 7 SCC 231: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1049: AIR 1997 SC 3247: 1997 Cri LJ 3956.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-1997]

[1211] — S. 154 — FIR lodged immediately after the incident — Delay in despatching the FIR from the outpost to the police station, held, on facts, was of no consequence (Para 7). Ayodhya Ram v. State of Bihar, (1999) 9 SCC 139: 1999 SCC (Cri) 564.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and A.P. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-1999]

[1212] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay explained — Gang rape by entering into victims' house at night — Victims taking shelter in another's house after the rape and lodging FIR next morning — Delay in lodging FIR, held on facts, satisfactorily explained — Penal Code, 1860, S. 376(2)(g). Pramod Mahto v. State of Bihar, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 672: 1990 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 1475: 1989 Cri LJ 1479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1989]

[1213] — Ss. 154 and 161 — Murder near bus-stop witnessed by the brother and the wife of the deceased — Trial court convicting all the seven accused but in appeal High Court acquitting five of them and convicting only two of them under Ss. 302/34 IPC — Held, though the defence suggested that the victim might have died in a motor cycle accident, the various injuries on the body of the victim were undoubtedly suggestive of a homicidal death — The fact that the name of the other eyewitness (wife of the deceased) was not mentioned in the FIR lodged by the brother of the deceased was not sufficient to discard her testimony — Nothing could also be said against the testimony of the brother of the deceased except that he waited till next morning for filing the FIR — The delay in filing the FIR was hardly sufficient to reject his testimony — Accordingly, order of High Court confirmed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302/34. Sahab Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1997 SCC (Cri) 704: AIR 1997 SC 945: 1997 Cri LJ 1188.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-1997]

[1214] — Ss. 154 and 161 — Murder — Occurrence taking place in the morning — FIR lodged by son of the deceased at 2.00 p.m. at the police station which was at a distance of 7 miles from the place of occurrence — Testimony of the son of the deceased found consistent and cogent and corroborated from the FIR — Held, in the circumstances of the case, reversal of acquittal by the High Court justified — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302. Jaswant Singh v. State of U.P., 1998 SCC (Cri) 1344.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and M. Srinivasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-10-1997]

[1215] — S. 154 — FIR lodged within 3 hours of the incident after covering a distance of 5 miles — First informant being aged only 19 years and had lost her father and brother just then — Her conduct in sending message to her relations and seeking their help at that hour of her distress not unnatural — In the circumstance of the case, there was no delay in lodging FIR — Merely because the other witness did not go to the police station for lodging FIR no adverse inference can be drawn — On facts held, the Investigating Officer proceeded for the spot after recording of the FIR — Finding of the High Court that the FIR was doctored at the behest of the Investigating Officer to fit in with the injuries found on the person of the deceased not sustainable (Paras 11 and 12). State of Punjab v. Surja Ram, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 419: 1995 SCC (Cri) 937: AIR 1995 SC 2413.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-8-1995]

[1216] — S. 154 — Delay explained — Allegation of FIR being fabricated found misconceived — Arrest of persons on the basis of the FIR and intervening public holiday explained the delay (Para 5). Ramesh v. State of M.P., (2000) 1 SCC 243: 2000 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1999 SC 3759: 1999 Cri LJ 4603.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-1999]

[1217] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging — Prosecution case of recovery of charas and a loaded pistol from possession of accused-appellant — Though the two offences alleged to have been committed at the same time, two prosecutions, one under S. 61 of Punjab Excise Act and the other under S. 27 of Arms Act separately launched — Two offences bifurcated and FIR relating to the offence under Arms Act lodged 36 days after the seizure — Trial court acquitting the accused finding that in fact agarbattis and not charas seized from his possession and that there was no explanation for bifurcation of the offences and delay in lodging FIR — Appeal preferred only against acquittal from offence under the Arms Act — High Court reversing the acquittal order convicting under S. 27 of Arms Act — Held, High Court erred in doing so by condoning lapses of the prosecution — Arms Act, 1959, S. 27. Rajinder Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), 1988 Supp SCC 599: 1989 SCC (Cri) 43: 1988 BLJR 369: (1988) 25 ACC 107.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-1987]

[1218] — S. 154 — FIR — Delay in lodging/filing of — Effect — When material — Delay by itself may not be a ground to disbelieve prosecution case — But where the prosecution case (or main prosecution witness relying on whom conviction is based) itself is doubtful, held, the court may take a serious notice of delay in lodging the FIR — Penal Code, 1860, S. 377

Delay in lodging of a first information report although by itself may not be a ground to disbelieve the entire prosecution case, but each case must be judged on its own facts. If the story of the complainant victim, PW 1 is to be accepted at its face value, the court may not take serious notice of delay in lodging the first information report. If PW 1 had returned to school on 3-8-1986 and attempts were made by the appellant immediately thereafter to send for him for repeating the commission of the same offence (of sodomy), there was no reason why the first information report was not lodged immediately. (Paras 17 and 18)

According to PW 4 as also PW 8, PW 1 came back to the house only on the Rakshabandhan day and stayed there for 20 days. He had to be persuaded to return to school. PW 8 came with them. Whereas according to PWs 4 and 8, they came to know about the incident on or about 18-8-1986 and Respondent 2 and his brother having stayed in the house for 20 days, it remains a mystery how first information report could be lodged on 29-8-1986. PW 4, the victim's mother in her deposition completely denied to have made any statement before the police officer on 31-8-1986. The reason is not very far to seek. Her attention was drawn to her previous statements where she had alleged that her son had mentioned about the incidents on 18-8-1986 and left the house on 28-8-1986. (Paras 19, 27 and 25)

It is unlikely that no step would be taken by the guardians when they came to know about the incident. PW 8 (the victim's maternal uncle) was attached to the Mutt. It was he, who was instrumental for admission of the boy in the Mutt. He knew the administrator. He did not meet the appellant to make enquiries. He did not meet the senior Swamiji to lodge a complaint. He did not even meet the administrator. PW 4 was not an illiterate lady. She had studied up to IXth standard. She had been working in a school as an aaya. Her sister is a teacher in a school. (Para 20). Gowrishankara Swamigalu v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 14 SCC 411.

(3)(vi)4. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

[1219] — S. 154 — Delay in filing FIR — Effect — Offence under Ss. 384 and 506 IPL — Proof of — Complainant's evidence regarding — Corroborated by her subsequent conduct in narrating the incident to witnesses on the following day and recovery of incriminating documents at accused's instance from accused's house — Admissibility in evidence — Held on facts, sufficient to establish prosecution case — High Court erred in rejecting complainant's evidence merely on ground of delay in filing FIR — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 6 and 157 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 384 and 506

The accused Headmaster of a school called the complainant, a lady teacher of the school, at his residence on the pretext of some official work on March 10. When the complainant reached the accused's house, he alone was there. He asked the complainant to sign on three blank papers, which in fact were meant for affidavits and threatened her that if she did not sign, he would spoil her modesty. Apprehending trouble she put her signatures on those papers whereupon the accused told her that he could malign and blackmail her by recording any kind of statement on those papers or she should act according to his wishes. The complainant refused and after reaching home she narrated the incident to her husband. On the following day she narrated the incident to three of her colleagues at the school. Thereafter, the accused used to threaten her that he would make use of those papers. On March 18, the accused sent for her to see him in his office and when she went there he was all alone and he actually caught hold of her by her arm and tried to outrage her modesty but the complainant after pushing him aside managed to escape. The complainant immediately returned home and reported the incident to her husband who along with complainant went to police station and filed an FIR on the very day. The investigating officer arrested the accused on the same day and during the course of interrogation that followed the accused made a disclosure statement regarding the three papers on which the complainant's signatures had been obtained as also some photographs of the members of the staff (including a cut-out of the complainant) and in pursuance of such statement he led the police and the Panchas to his house and he produced the three papers, and some photographs. These documents were seized under a Memo attested by Panch witnesses.

Held :

As regards the first incident relating to charges under Ss. 384 and 506 IPC, the two pieces of evidence viz. subsequent conduct on the part of the complainant in narrating the story to the three witnesses on the following day and actual recovery of the three papers bearing the signatures of the complainant thereon from the house of the accused lend the strongest support to the complainant's story and clinches the veracity of that incident as deposed to by her in her evidence. Assuming that the complainant's conduct of narrating the incident to her colleagues is not res gestae and hence inadmissible under S. 6 of the Evidence Act, the same when corroborated by the three witnesses is clearly admissible under S. 157 of that Act and therefore ignoring such crucial and relevant evidence has led the Court to give undue importance to the so-called delay in lodging the report with the police. In fact it could not be regarded as a case of any delayed report for, it was the second incident when the accused actually assaulted the complainant that the culminating point was reached and immediately the same evening she lodged the FIR. The so-called delay in lodging the report to the police cannot cast any doubt on the veracity of the story. The so-called doubt entertained by the Sessions Judge about the complainant's version was not a doubt of a reasonable mind. With the two strong pieces of corroborative evidence discussed above the acquittal of the accused in regard to charges under Ss. 384 and 506 must be regarded as perverse. Chander Kala v. Ram Kishan, (1985) 4 SCC 212: 1985 SCC (Cri) 491: AIR 1985 SC 1268: 1985 Cri LJ 1490.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar, D.A. Desai and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-1985]

5. Non-mention of time of dispatch in FIR

[1220] — S. 154 — FIR — Non-mention of time of despatch of FIR to court — Inference that report had been prepared after the inquest, drawn from the non-mentioning of time raising doubts as to possibility of preparing an exhaustive report and lodging the same before police soon after the occurrence — Held, the inference and doubt unsustainable in view of unimpeachable evidence to the contrary regarding positive time of filing the report as entered in panchnama which was signed by a defence witness as well. State of U.P. v. Anil Singh, 1988 Supp SCC 686: 1989 SCC (Cri) 48: AIR 1988 SC 1998.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.L. Oza and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-1988]

[1221] — Ss. 154, 157 and 158 — Time of despatch of FIR not required to be mentioned — Failure to note time in the FIR would not lead to the inference that the FIR was antetimed. Om Prakash v. State of U.P., (1983) 2 SCC 358: 1983 SCC (Cri) 475: AIR 1983 SC 431: 1983 Cri LJ 831: 1983 ALJ 830.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1983]

6. Promptness/Haste in filing FIR

[1222] — S. 154 — FIR — Held, reliable because it was promptly lodged — Plea that accused persons were falsely implicated, therefore, rejected. Jangir Singh v. State of Haryana, 1993 Supp (2) SCC 632: 1993 SCC (Cri) 737: AIR 1993 SC 76.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-1992]

[1223] — S. 154 — Prompt FIR and offence proved — Conviction upheld — Homicidal death by gunshot injury corroborated by medical and ocular evidence — Aggrieved accused persons inquiring from informant and his father (deceased) about one P, who had objected to A-1's misbehaviour with female members of informant's family — Deceased advising accused persons not to fight — A-1 exhorted by A-4 shooting deceased on the right side of stomach over his waist — A-4 and A-5 intercepting PWs 7 and 6 running to help deceased — A-4 giving lathi-blow to PW 7 and A-5 giving gandasa-blow on the head of PW 6 — 15-16 accused persons heavily armed with deadly weapons coming to spot together and indiscriminately firing and fleeing together after commission of murder — Doctor opining that death was caused due to shock and haemorrhage by reason of the injuries caused by a firearm damaging vital organs — Conviction of A-1, A-4 and A-5 under Ss. 302/34 IPC upheld (Paras 12 to 19). Ramdeo Kahar v. State of Bihar, (2008) 17 SCC 517: AIR 2009 SC 1803: 2009 Cri LJ 1715: (2009) 75 AIC 195 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-2008]

[1224] — S. 154 — FIR — Prompt filing of — Inference — Held, when soon after occurrence, FIR is lodged, false story being cooked up and/or false implication of accused, stands ruled out (Para 17). Kirpal Singh v. State of U.P., (2010) 3 SCC 347.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : B. Sudershan Reddy and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 23-2-2010]

[1225] — S. 154 — FIR — Prompt lodging of — Fact that FIR was given immediately after the incident rules out any possibility of deliberation to falsely implicate any person in the crime (Para 17). Krishnan v. State, (2003) 7 SCC 56: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1577: AIR 2003 SC 2978: 2003 Cri LJ 3705.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2003]

[1226] — S. 154 — Prompt FIR — Effect of — Incident happened at 9.30 p.m. — FIR recorded at 10.30 p.m. i.e. within an hour of incident — Eyewitnesses turned hostile — Three dying declarations in spite of minor discrepancies, believed — Held, prompt lodging of the FIR is another circumstance in favour of prosecution — Reversal of acquittal and conviction by High Court on basis of the three dying declarations, confirmed (Para 13). Abrar v. State of U.P., (2011) 2 SCC 750.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: H.S. Bedi, P. Sathasivam and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2010]

[1227] — S. 154 — Prompt lodging of FIR by independent informant rules out false implication (Para 14). Onkar Lal v. State of M.P., (2009) 13 SCC 754.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.B. Sinha, Dr. M.K. Sharma and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2009]

[1228] — S. 154 — FIR — Prompt lodging of — Incident taking place at 6 p.m. four miles away from police station — FIR lodged at 7.15 p.m. — No adverse inference justified. Mohd. Aslam v. State of U.P., (1993) 3 SCC 10: 1993 SCC (Cri) 577.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-3-1993]

[1229] — S. 154 — FIR — Prompt lodging of, in case of murder — A significant circumstance in support of the prosecution case

In cases relating to murder the time taken in lodging the FIR assumes special significance. The FIR being the first version of the occurrence disclosed to the police acts as check on the part of the prosecution. In this case the fact that the FIR was lodged by deceased's wife within an hour of the occurrence, giving the details of the manner of occurrence lends corroboration to her testimony in court regarding the participation of the accused persons in the occurrence. Jarnail Singh v. State of Haryana, 1993 Supp (3) SCC 91: 1993 SCC (Cri) 869: 1993 Cri LJ 1656.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-1993]

(3)(vi)6. Reliability and Validity of FIR - FIR and Time - Promptness/Haste in filing FIR (contd.)

[1230] — S. 154 — Prompt lodging of FIR — Held, lends credence to the presence/evidence of the eyewitnesses named therein (Para 16). Ram Pal v. State of U.P., (2007) 15 SCC 79.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-2007]

[1231] — S. 154 — Prompt FIR — Necessity of, explained (Para 15). Satpal Singh v. State of Haryana, (2010) 8 SCC 714.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision : 28-7-2010]

Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of A.P. v. M. Madhusudhan Rao, (2008) 15 SCC 582: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1123; Satyapal v. State of Haryana, (2009) 6 SCC 635: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 108; State of H.P. v. Prem Singh, (2009) 1 SCC 420: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 351, relied on [1232] — S. 154 — FIR — Time of lodging — FIR lodged by eyewitness within one hour of the incident in a police station at a distance of 12 1/2 kms. from the scene of occurrence — Whether this was possible — Question regarding, should have been raised by the defence in cross-examination — Having failed to do so and in absence of any evidence showing that the time of the incident noted was the precise time and that the person who lodged the FIR had gone to the police station on foot, held, the FIR lodged immediately after the incident. Darshan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1988) 1 SCC 618: 1988 SCC (Cri) 214: AIR 1988 SC 747.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.L. Oza, B.C. Ray and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-1-1988]

[1233] — S. 154 — FIR lodged within 3 hours of the incident naming the accused with all details — Order of acquittal recorded by the High Court on ground that case against the accused was framed in the village with the connivance of the police, is based on mere surmise. Hardev Singh v. Harbhej Singh, (1997) 1 SCC 80: 1997 SCC (Cri) 5: AIR 1997 SC 1487: 1997 Cri LJ 727.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-11-1996]

[1234] — S. 154 — Prompt FIR lends support to the prosecution case regarding the time of occurrence. Charan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1975) 3 SCC 39: 1974 SCC (Cri) 735: AIR 1975 SC 246: (1975) 1 SCR 561: 1974 Cri LJ 1253.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.R. Khanna and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-7-1974]

[1235] — S. 154 — FIR — Prompt FIR — Place of incident 7 km away from police station — FIR lodged within 2½ hours after incident, by brother of deceased — As a close relative of family had been murdered, an hour or so would have been taken at place of incident before he had left for police station — Held, promptitude of FIR supports prosecution story (Para 10). Hari Singh v. State of M.P., (2010) 12 SCC 108: AIR 2010 SC 3630.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-2010]

[1236] — S. 154 — Prompt lodging of FIR — FIR lodged within 2½ hours of the occurrence and copy thereof sent to Illaqua Magistrate 90 km away by a special report about 5 hours after lodging of FIR — In the circumstances held, FIR lodged promptly (Para 8). State of Haryana v. Tek Singh, (1999) 4 SCC 682: 1999 SCC (Cri) 622: AIR 1999 SC 1742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-1999]

[1237] — S. 154 — Promptness in filing FIR — Held, promptly lodged FIR reflects the first hand account of what actually happened and who were responsible for the offence in question. Girish Yadav v. State of M.P., (1996) 8 SCC 186: 1996 SCC (Cri) 552: AIR 1996 SC 3098.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-1996]

[1238] — S. 154 — Spontaneity of FIR — FIR corroborated by medical evidence — Importance of — Prompt FIR giving all relevant details fortifies prosecution story — Prosecution story is that accused had fired at deceased with a country-made pistol from a very close range — Doctor who had conducted post-mortem examination found one wound of entry about 3 cm + 2.5 cm with blackening and charring and also recovered 160 pellets and three wads from inside the dead body — Medical evidence clearly suggests use of such a weapon from almost point blank range — Appellant's plea of false implication rejected (Para 12). Hari Singh v. State of U.P., (2010) 13 SCC 756.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2010]

[1239] — S. 154 — Promptness in filing FIR — Prompt and early reporting of the occurrence by the informant with all its vivid details gives an assurance regarding truth of his version. State of U.P. v. Harban Sahai, (1998) 6 SCC 50: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1412.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and K.T. Thomas and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1998]

[1240] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Promptness in filing and despatching FIR to Magistrate — Finding of lower courts that there was no delay in recording or despatching of FIR — Admissibility of FIR or truth of its contents cannot be assailed. Pattad Amarappa v. State of Karnataka, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 389: 1990 SCC (Cri) 179: AIR 1989 SC 2004: 1989 Cri LJ 2167: (1989) 3 Crimes 39.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-1989]

[1241] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Undue haste in registering the case by police officer — Held, by itself not sufficient to quash the FIR — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5-A(1)

In this case the SP had directed the SHO to register the case and investigate the same even on the very first day of the receipt of the complaint from the DGP, in whose office the complaint was lying for nearly 9 days. This unprecedented overenthusiasm shown by the SP, without disclosing the reasons for making an order entrusting the investigation to the SHO who is not a designated officer under S. 5-A(1), shocks one's sense of justice and fair play even though the untested allegations made in the complaint require a thorough investigation. Still, it is an inexplicable riddle as to why the SP had departed from the normal rule and hastily ordered the SHO to investigate the serious allegations, levelled against a former Chief Minister and a Minister in the Cabinet of the Central Government on the date of the registration of the case. However, this conduct of the SP can never serve as a ground for quashing this FIR. State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 1992 SC 604: 1992 Cri LJ 527.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

[1242] — Ss. 154 and 159 — Prompt FIR — Discrepancy regarding sending special report to Magistrate — Incident happened at 7 a.m. on 24-4-1980 — FIR lodged at about at 9.10 a.m. — Police station 4 km from place of occurrence — As per column in statutory form dealing with FIRs, copy of special report had been dispatched next day to Magistrate — Head Constable R categorically stated that copy of special report had been dispatched from police station same day through Constable M — Both departure and arrival reports had been recorded in daily diary of 24-4-1980 of police station — PW 7 was not even remotely cross-examined with regard to special report — Held, no advantage can be taken by defence on account of this discordance — It is proved that incident had indeed happened at 7 a.m., FIR had been recorded at 9.10 a.m. and special report had been delivered to Magistrate the same day — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302 and 307 (Paras 16 and 17). Mohd. Mian v. State of U.P., (2011) 2 SCC 721.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2010]

(vii) FIR not filed/lodged

[1243] — S. 154 — FIR — Absence of — Eyewitnesses busy in removing deceased to hospital and informing relatives — FIR lodged by accused also deterring — Held, failure to lodge report in the presence of sufficient explanation not detrimental to prosecution case. Thakarda Lalaji Gamaji v. State of Gujarat, (1974) 3 SCC 639: 1974 SCC (Cri) 169: AIR 1974 SC 1351: 1974 Cri LJ 612.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-1973]

(viii) Mala fides

See also under S. 157, below

[1244] — Ss. 154, 190 and 200 — Prosecution against former Minister or Chief Minister at the instance of succeeding political opponent in power — Mala fide political motivation whether can be inferred — Effect on maintainability of the prosecution if political vendetta found

Per Bhagwati, C.J. and Oza, J.

Merely because the prosecution against the Chief Minister was initiated by the successor Government after his ministry went out of power, that by itself cannot support the inference that the initiation of the prosecution was actuated by political vendetta or mala fides because it is quite possible that there might be material justifying the initiation of prosecution against the erstwhile Chief Minister and the successor Government might have legitimately felt that there was a case for initiation of prosecution and that is why the prosecution might have been initiated. There would be nothing wrong on the part of the successor Government in doing so and the prosecution cannot be said to be vitiated on that account.

Per Khalid and Natarajan, JJ.

The appellant was admittedly a political rival of the accused. There was no love lost between them. It was at the instance of such a highly interested person that Supreme Court was called upon to direct retrial of the case, setting aside the consent given by the Special Judge. Viewed against this background, it would not advance either the interests of justice or public interest, on the unsatisfactory factual details of the case, to accept the appeal and direct retrial. Sheonandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, (1987) 1 SCC 288: 1987 SCC (Cri) 82: AIR 1987 SC 877: 1987 Cri LJ 793.

(3)(viii) Reliability and Validity of FIR - Mala fides (contd.)

Bench Strength 5. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, C.J.[1] and E.S. Venkataramiah[2], V. Khalid[3], G.L. Oza[1] and S. Natarajan[4], JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-1986]

[1245] — Ss. 154 and 157 — Criminal proceedings — Mala fides — Complaint laid, case registered but investigation stayed by High Court — Question of mala fides on the part of the complainant — Held, premature — Moreover, criminal proceeding, if otherwise justifiable, not liable to be quashed merely on ground of mala fides — Further, if dominant purpose of registration of the case and intended investigation is not tainted with mala fide, the proceeding not liable to be quashed

In this case the entire matter is only at a premature stage and the investigation is not yet proceeded with except some preliminary effort taken on the date of the registration of the case. The evidence has to be gathered after a thorough investigation and placed before the court on the basis of which alone the court can come to a conclusion one way or the other on the plea of mala fides. If the allegations are bereft of truth and made maliciously, we are sure, the investigation will say so. At this stage, when there are only allegations and recriminations but no evidence, this court cannot anticipate the result of the investigation and render a finding on the question of mala fides on the materials at present available. Therefore, there is no force in the contention that the complaint should be thrown overboard on the mere unsubstantiated plea of mala fides.

Further, the question of mala fide exercise of power will assume significance only if an authority acts for unauthorised purpose. The proper test to be applied in such a case is as to what is the dominant purpose for which the power is exercised. Applying this test to the present case it must be held that the dominant purpose of registration of the case and the intended follow-up action are only to investigate the allegations and present a case before the court, if sufficient evidence in support of those allegations are collected but not to make a character assassination of the accused respondent and his relatives. State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 1992 SC 604: 1992 Cri LJ 527.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

Sheonandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, (1987) 1 SCC 288: 1987 SCC (Cri) 82, followed

[1246] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR — Mala fide — Allegations of, cannot be gone into at investigation stage — On facts held, allegations made in the FIR prima facie made out

When the entire matter is only at a preliminary stage and when the investigation has yet to go a long way to gather the requisite evidence the Court cannot come to a conclusion one way or the other on the plea of mala fide at such a stage. Further, in case the investigation discloses that the entire proceeding has been initiated only with mala fides, probably the prosecution itself may throw the case overboard. There is no merit in the submission that the Government has neither filed any civil suit nor has initiated any arbitration proceeding to recover the amount of alleged commission in the Bofors gun deal serves as one of the factors compelling the Court not to accept the case of the prosecution.

The allegations made in the FIR under S. 154 of the Code of Criminal Procedure prima facie constitute the offence alleged therein. Union of India v. W.N. Chadha, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 260: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1171: AIR 1993 SC 1082: 1993 Cri LJ 859.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1992]

[1247] — Ss. 154 to 173 and 482 — Criminal proceedings challenged on ground of mala fides and bias on the part of the first informant and investigating officer — Maintainability — Non-impleadment of the informant and investigating officer as eo nomine party itself sufficient to dismiss the petition — Besides no personal animosity or bias on the part of the informant and the investigating officer established — Mere lodging of FIR by the informant and rejection of certain documents, claimed to be favourable to the accused, as irrelevant and participation in writ proceedings by the investigating officer would not indicate mala fides or malice in law — Mala fides on the part of the informant would be of secondary importance once FIR is registered by police — Further, permitting the investigation to complete without complaining about the mala fides or bias to higher authorities amounted to waiver of the objection by the petitioners-accused — Moreover, investigating officer would also be available to cross-examination at the trial. State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192: AIR 1991 SC 1260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh[1] and K. Ramaswamy[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1991]

(ix) Multiple FIRs/Cases

See also Section 154, '(1)(ii)4. FIRs in Cross-cases', and

'(1)(ii)8. Information if first information or statement of witness under S. 161, etc.', above

[1248] — Ss. 154, 173 and 482 — Second FIR covering partly the same subject-matter and period — Legality of such FIR and investigation pursuant thereto — If to be quashed — Offence under S. 13(1)(e) read with S. 13(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act — FIR against, in respect of the period 1-8-1978 to 24-8-1989 and investigation pursuant thereto culminating in submission of 'B' report which, after a public notice accepted by the trial court — Subsequently another FIR filed making the same allegation against the same officer for the period 1-8-1978 to 25-7-1995 — Such a second FIR, held, not by itself illegal — Hence, could not be quashed and investigation pursuant thereto could not be restrained under S. 482 — However, the investigating authority will have essentially to take into account the results of the earlier investigation — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(e) and 13(2)

The appellant was a Class I officer in the Karnataka Administrative Service. At the instance of the police, an FIR lodged against him under Sections 13(1)(e) and 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act in respect of check period of 1-8-1978 to 24-8-1989 alleging that he had assets disproportionate to his known sources of income. The Investigating Officer submitted a 'B' Report before the Special Judge, who after issuing a public notice inviting objections, accepted the report. On 25-7-1995 another FIR was filed at the instance of the police against the appellant in respect of the period 1-8-1978 to 25-7-1995 under the same provisions and making similar allegations. The appellant filed a petition under Section 482, CrPC before the Karnataka High Court seeking quashment of the second FIR on the ground that in view of the result of the earlier investigation the inclusion of the same check period in the second FIR was not proper. However, the High Court refused relief and observed that the second FIR contained a set of fresh allegations in respect of fresh alleged assets during a fresh check period. Disapproving of the said observations but otherwise approving of the High Court's decision,

Held :

There is no provision in the Criminal Procedure Code or the Prevention of Corruption Act to sustain the appellant's contention that the present FIR itself is bad in law. There is no provision in the CrPC which debars the filing of an FIR and investigating into the alleged offences merely because for an earlier period, namely, 1-8-1978 to 24-8-1989, there was an FIR which was duly investigated into and culminated in a 'B' Form Report which was accepted by a competent court. At the same time, it has to be held that the conclusion of the High Court that the present proceeding relates to fresh alleged assets and a fresh check period is not wholly correct. Though the earlier period also could be a subject-matter of investigation for a variety of reasons like some assets not being taken into account or some materials brought during investigation not being taken into account, yet at the same time, the results of the earlier investigation cannot be totally obliterated and ignored by the investigating agency. But that cannot be a ground for quashing of the FIR itself and for injuncting the investigating authority to investigate into the offence alleged.

The appellant is right in contending that the assets which were valued in the earlier investigation proceeding at a particular value cannot be valued higher in the present proceedings unless any positive ground is there for such revaluation. M. Krishna v. State of Karnataka, (1999) 3 SCC 247: 1999 SCC (Cri) 397: AIR 1999 SC 1765.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1999]

[1249] — S. 154 — FIR — Incident in question relating to FIR dated 12-10-1990 — Acquittal of accused in respect of the incident relating to FIR dated 13-10-1990, held on facts, was not sufficient to ignore the prosecution story because evidence is to be read independently in both the FIRs (Para 10). Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, (2003) 1 SCC 240: 2003 SCC (Cri) 282: AIR 2002 SC 3652: 2003 Cri LJ 21.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Y.K. Sabharwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-2002]

[1250] — Ss. 154 & 156(3) and Ss. 161 & 162 — Two FIRs — Second complaint in regard to same incident filed as a counter-complaint, held, not prohibited under CrPC — Hence, on refusal by police to register counter-complaint, Magistrate can direct the police, at any stage to register the complaint and investigate the same — Ss. 161 and 162 CrPC do not apply to such a situation — T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181, considered, explained and clarified

(3)(ix) Reliability and Validity of FIR - Multiple FIRs/ Cases (contd.)

The first respondent herein filed a complaint against the appellant and some others. On that basis the police registered a crime under Sections 452 and 307 IPC against the said persons. The appellant also lodged a complaint in regard to the very same offence against the respondents herein for having committed offences punishable under Sections 506 and 307 IPC as against him and his family members but since the said complaint was not entertained by the police concerned he tried to approach the Superintendent of Police and the District Magistrate and having failed in his attempts to get his complaint registered he filed petition under Section 156(3) CrPC before the Judicial Magistrate concerned. The Magistrate having found a prima facie case directed the police to register a crime against the accused persons named in the said complaint of the appellant and to investigate the same and submit a report within 2 months. The said order was set aside by the Sessions Judge in the revision petition filed by the first respondent. The High Court following its earlier judgment in the case of Ram Mohan Garg v. State of U.P., (1990) 27 ACC 438 upheld the order of the Sessions Judge. The High Court understood the ratio of the judgment of the Division Bench in Ram Mohan Garg case as laying down a principle in law that in regard to one single incident there could not be a case and a counter-case. It observed that two FIRs are not permissible in respect of one and the same incident because the subsequent FIR is hit by Section 162 CrPC.

The Supreme Court while granting leave in the instant appeal doubted the correctness of the judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181. Hence, the instant case was referred to the present three-Judge Bench for final disposal and to consider the correctness of law laid down in the case of T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala.

Allowing the appeal and setting aside the impugned orders of the High Court and the Sessions Court,

Held :

In T.T. Antony case, (2001) 6 SCC 181 the Supreme Court did not consider the legal right of an aggrieved person to file counterclaim. On the contrary, from the observations found in the said judgment, it clearly indicates that filing a counter-complaint is permissible. If the law laid down in T.T. Antony case is to be accepted as holding that a second complaint in regard to the same incident filed as a counter-complaint is prohibited under the Criminal Procedure Code then, such conclusion would lead to serious consequences. This will be clear from the hypothetical example that if in regard to a crime committed by the real accused he takes the first opportunity to lodge a false complaint and the same is registered by the jurisdictional police then the aggrieved victim of such crime will be precluded from lodging a complaint giving his version of the incident in question, consequently he will be deprived of his legitimate right to bring the real accused to book. This cannot be the purport of the Code. (Paras 24 and 23)

In the instant case, it is seen in regard to the incident which took place on 20-5-1995, the appellant and the first respondent herein have lodged separate complaints giving different versions but while the complaint of the respondent was registered by the police concerned, the complaint of the appellant was not so registered, hence on his prayer the learned Magistrate was justified in directing the police concerned to register a case and investigate the same and report back. Both the Sessions Judge and the High Court erred in coming to the conclusion that the same is hit by Section 161 or 162 of the Code which has absolutely no bearing on the question involved. Section 161 or 162 of the Code does not refer to registration of a case, it only speaks of a statement to be recorded by the police in the course of the investigation and its evidentiary value. (Para 25). Upkar Singh v. Ved Prakash, (2004) 13 SCC 292: 2005 SCC (Cri) 211: AIR 2004 SC 4320: 2004 Cri LJ 4219.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, S.B. Sinha and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-2004]

T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1048, considered, explained and clarified

Kari Choudhary v. Sita Devi, (2002) 1 SCC 714: 2002 SCC (Cri) 269; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479, relied on

[1251] — Ss. 154 and 173(2) & (8) — Lodging of two FIRs by different persons in respect of the same offence and against the same person — Sustainability — Extent of overlap between FIRs — Relevance of — ABKS filed writ petition in the Rajasthan High Court alleging that Bangur Group ("Bangurs", for short) was responsible for siphoning off funds of Bank of Rajasthan ("BOR", for short) — Pursuant to the order dated 31-5-2002 passed by the Division Bench, CBI registered sixteen cases and filed charge-sheets — In the meantime, the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Alipore, Calcutta at the instance of one NB vide its order dated 23-7-2001 directed the officer in charge of Alipore Police Station, Calcutta to register and investigate under S. 156(3) CrPC by treating the complaint of NB as FIR — Accordingly, on

25-7-2001 Alipore Police Station registered FIR No. 138/01 against Bangurs — The said FIR No. 138/01 was closed by the Alipore police on account of the CBI's involvement in the case — Subsequently the Supreme Court directed the CBI to proceed with the investigation of FIR No. 138/01 — Held, the closure of FIR was not on merits and even otherwise the investigating agency is not precluded from further investigation of an offence in spite of forwarding a report under S. 173(2) CrPC — It would be for the trial court to decide whether the aspects covered in FIR No. 138/01 stand covered by the report of CBI in the said sixteen FIRs or whether FIR No. 138/01 deals with some aspect which is left out by CBI in the said sixteen cases — Similarly, the trial court also directed to decide whether the alleged siphoning off took place under same transaction or under separate transactions

The question which came up for Supreme Court's consideration was whether registration of FIR No. 138/01 by Calcutta Police constituted the first FIR and, if so, whether the process in the hands of CBI initiated at the instance of the Rajasthan High Court stood discontinued when Calcutta Police registered the first FIR No. 138/01. The other question which fell for Supreme Court's consideration was what would be the procedure to be followed where there are two FIRs in respect of the same incident against the same person.

Disposing of the appeal in the following terms,

Held :

The above question has now become academic for the following reasons. Firstly, in our order dated 8-3-2007 we directed CBI to proceed with investigation into FIR No. 138/01 filed in PS Alipore, Calcutta. Under the said order we also directed CBI to submit their report under a sealed cover within six weeks. That report has been placed before us. We have gone through that report. We do not wish to discuss the contents of the report at this stage. (Para 15)

By the impugned judgment, the Calcutta High Court has directed CBI to take up the investigation of Alipore PS Case No. 138/01 and has further directed that in the course of such investigation of the said Case No. 138/01 it would be open to CBI to take into consideration the aforestated sixteen FIRs, the period during which the alleged offence were committed and thereafter to decide the course of action to be taken in accordance with law. The learned Sub-Divisional Judicial Magistrate was also directed to transmit the record of Alipore PS Case No. 138/01 to the Third Special Judge, CBI, Calcutta. We agree with the said direction. The said direction of the Calcutta High Court contained in the impugned judgment read with our order dated 8-3-2007 indicates that investigation into FIR No. 138/01 as well as into sixteen FIRs have been entrusted to one single agency, namely, CBI. (Paras 16 and 17)

Secondly, on 12-7-2002 a closure report in final form was drawn up in connection with FIR No. 138/01 inasmuch as CBI had taken up the investigation. The hearing on the final report of closure was concluded before the Sub-Divisional Judicial Magistrate, Alipore. It was allowed by the Sub- Divisional Judicial Magistrate. However, it may be clarified that the said closure was not on merits of the case. The said closure was only on account of the fact that the investigation stood transferred to CBI. Consequently, now Alipore Police Station has no role to play. (Para 19)

Applying the test laid down in Kari Choudhary case, (2002) 1 SCC 714 to the present batch of cases suffice it to state that since investigation has been done by CBI (common agency) the report submitted by it to the Supreme Court, pursuant to our order dated 8-3-2007, would also be placed before the Third Special Judge, CBI, Calcutta and it would be for that court to decide whether the aspects covered in FIR No. 138/01 stand covered by the report of CBI in the said sixteen FIRs or whether FIR No. 138/01 deals with some aspect which is left out by CBI in the said sixteen cases. Accordingly, it would decide whether the sixteen cases cover all aspects including those falling under FIR No. 138/01 or whether FIR No. 138/01 has some aspects which do not fall in the sixteen cases and, accordingly, it would decide whether to accept the report submitted by CBI before us pursuant to our order dated 8-3-2007. Similarly, it would be for that court to decide whether the alleged siphoning off took place under same transaction or under separate transactions. Suffice it to state, all the above cases from Calcutta, Mumbai and Delhi shall be tried and disposed of in accordance with law by the Third Special Judge, CBI, Calcutta. (Para 21). Bank of Rajasthan v. Keshav Bangur, (2007) 13 SCC 145: AIR 2008 SC 202: 2008 Cri LJ 397.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-10-2007]

Kari Choudhary v. Sita Devi, (2002) 1 SCC 714: 2002 SCC (Cri) 269, relied on [1252] — Ss. 154 and 161 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Dowry death — Delay in lodging second report and recording of statements of PWs in respect thereof — On facts, held, not fatal (Para 9). Alamgir Sani v. State of Assam, (2002) 10 SCC 277: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1447: AIR 2003 SC 2108.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-2002]

Ravindra Pyarelal Bidlan v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cri LJ 3019 (Bom), mentioned as laying down bad law

(3)(ix) Reliability and Validity of FIR - Multiple FIRs/ Cases (contd.)

[1253] — S. 154 — FIR made soon after the occurrence — Held, reliable even though a supplementary statement was made by the maker immediately thereafter. Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1976) 3 SCC 478: 1976 SCC (Cri) 436: AIR 1977 SC 349: 1977 Cri LJ 214.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, R.S. Sarkaria and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-1976]

[1254] — Ss. 154 and 162 — More than one FIR — Cryptic report followed by detailed report — Submission that PW 2 having informed the officer in charge of Police Station A on telephone which having been recorded in writing, the first information report lodged at 7.30 a.m. on 23-1-1997 was barred — Information given by PW 2 on phone was a cryptic report and only for the purpose of visiting the scene of occurrence — Hence held, if in the aforementioned premise, another first information report which was a detailed one came to be recorded, no exception can be taken to the same being treated as the FIR (Paras 5 and 24 to 27). Vikram v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 12 SCC 332: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 362: AIR 2007 SC 1893: 2007 Cri LJ 3193: (2007) 56 AIC 207 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2007]

Tapinder Singh v. State of Punjab, (1970) 2 SCC 113: 1970 SCC (Cri) 328; State of U.P. v. P.A. Madhu, (1984) 4 SCC 83: 1984 SCC (Cri) 598; Ramsinh Bavaji Jadeja v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 2 SCC 685: 1994 SCC (Cri) 609; Binay Kumar Singh v. State of Bihar, (1997) 1 SCC 283: 1997 SCC (Cri) 333; Soma Bhai v. State of Gujarat, (1975) 4 SCC 257: 1975 SCC (Cri) 515, relied on

[1255] — Ss. 154, 161 and 162 — More than one FIR — Permissibility — Test of sameness — Two FIRs in respect of same transaction — Subsequent to registration of an FIR, any further complaint in connection with the same or connected offence relating to the same incident or incidents which are parts of the same transaction, reiterated, not permissible — But if two FIRs pertain to two different incidents/crimes, second FIR is permissible

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2010]

Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479; T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1048; Upkar Singh v. Ved Prakash, (2004) 13 SCC 292: 2005 SCC (Cri) 211; Rameshchandra Nandlal Parikh v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 1 SCC 732: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 481; Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 523, relied on

[1256] — Ss. 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170 and 173 — FIR — There can be no second FIR and no fresh investigation on receipt of every subsequent information in respect of the same cognizable offence or same occurrence giving rise to one or more cognizable offences — Only information about commission of a cognizable offence which is first entered in station house diary by officer in charge of the police station can be regarded as FIR under S. 154 — All such subsequent informations will be covered by S. 162 — Officer in charge of the police station has to investigate not merely the cognizable offence reported in the FIR but also other connected offences found to have been committed in the course of the same transaction or the same occurrence and file one or more reports as provided in S. 173 — Even if after conclusion of the investigation pursuant to filing of the FIR and submission of report under S. 173(2), the officer in charge of the police station comes across any further information pertaining to the same incident, he can make further investigation, normally with the leave of the court and forward the further evidence, if any collected, with further report or reports under S. 173(8) — Words and Phrases — "FIR"

When a Minister came to Kannur District (State of Kerala) to inaugurate the evening branch of a Cooperative Bank, violent demonstrations were staged by the members of youth wing of the rival political party viz. CPI(M) and police had to open fire to protect the Minister and public and private properties at two places — (i) in the proximity of Town Hall on the orders of the Executive Magistrate and Deputy SP, and (ii) in the vicinity of a police station on the orders of SP. As a result of the firing five persons died and six persons were injured. In the melee which preceded the police firing, more than hundred persons suffered injuries in lathi-charge resorted to by the police, and a few police personnel also suffered injuries. In respect of the occurrence near the Town Hall, FIR was lodged and Crime No. 353 of 1994 under Sections 143, 147, 148, 332, 353, 324 and 307 read with Section 149 IPC, Section 3(2)(e) of the PDPP Act and Sections 3 and 5 of the Explosive Substances Act, was registered, against the eight named and many other unidentifiable persons belonging to CPI(M) and in respect of the occurrence near the police station FIR was filed and Crime No. 354 of 1994 of Kuthuparamba Police Station under Sections 143, 147, 148, 307 and 427 read with Section 149 IPC and Section 3(2)(e) of the PDPP Act was registered against unidentifiable persons of CPI(M). Both the crimes were registered on the date of the incident itself and the Executive Magistrate submitted a report to the District Collector who in turn informed the Commissioner and Secretary to the Govt. and the SP sent a report to the DGP about the incident. On public demand the Govt. appointed a Distt. and Sessions Judge as Commission of Inquiry under Section 3(1) of the Commissions of Inquiry Act, 1952. Meanwhile as a result of the assembly elections in the State of Kerala, the ruling party lost to LDF which came in power and headed by CPI(M) formed the Govt. While the investigations on the basis of the FIRs were pending, the Inquiry Commission submitted its report to the Govt. holding the former Minister, the Deputy SP and the Executive Magistrate responsible for the police firing and consequent death of five persons and injuries to many others. The report was accepted by the Govt. and as a follow-up action, the Additional Chief Secretary to the Government of Kerala, while enclosing a copy of the said report, wrote to the Director General of Police regarding acceptance of the report of the Commission by the Government and directed that legal action be taken against those responsible on the basis of findings of the Commission. The Director General of Police issued orders to the Inspector General of Police (North Zone), to register a case immediately and have the same investigated by a senior officer. The Inspector General of Police noted that firing without justification by which people were killed amounted to murder and issued direction to the Station House Officer to register a case under the appropriate sections and forward the investigation copy of the FIR to the Deputy Inspector General of Police, North Zone, for urgent personal investigation. On that information the Deputy Superintendent of Police, registered Crime No. 268 of 1997 under Section 302 IPC arraigning the said former Minister, the Deputy SP and the Executive Magistrate as Accused 1 to 3 respectively. The DIG of Police who investigated Crime No. 268 of 1997 filed an interim report in the Court of Judicial First Class Magistrate implicating 19 police officers and 14 constables (who are parties to these appeals). The cases registered as Crimes Nos. 353 and 354 of 1994 which were mainly against the workers of the youth wing of CPI(M) came to be closed as being false and undetected after the said Crime No. 268 of 1997 was registered. Writ petitions were filed in the High Court for quashing the FIR in Crime No. 268 of 1997 and alternatively for directing investigation into the said crime by CBI. A Single Judge of the High Court directed the case to be reinvestigated by CBI. In writ appeals, the Division Bench of the High Court ordered quashing of the FIR in Crime No. 268 of 1997 as against the ASP but it directed a fresh investigation by the State police headed by one of the three senior officers named in the judgment instead of a fresh investigation by CBI. Hence the present appeals. At the rehearing of the appeals, the counsel for the parties addressed arguments on the question of the legality of the second FIR registered as Crime No. 268 of 1997 and the investigation that followed it in respect of the cognizable offence mentioned therein after about three years of the occurrence when in that regard two FIRs pertaining to two different places were already filed and registered as Crimes Nos. 353 and 354 of 1994 on the date of the occurrence and the investigations in those cases were pending. The counsel for the accused argued that registration of fresh information in respect of the very same incident as an FIR under Section 154 CrPC is not valid and therefore, all the steps taken pursuant thereto, including investigation are illegal and liable to be quashed. The Solicitor-General countered them stating that no illegality can be attached to the second FIR or the investigation made thereunder as nothing prevented the investigating agency from making further investigation on the basis of the first FIR in view of the subsequent information received and forwarding a further report; at any rate, the objection is merely one of form and not of substance and it makes no difference so far as the final report is concerned. Before the Supreme Court four points arose for determination:

(i) Whether registration of a fresh case, Crime No. 268 of 1997 which in the nature of second FIR under Section 154 CrPC was valid and could form the basis of a fresh investigation?

(ii) Whether the appellants, the Executive Magistrate in Cri. A. No. 689 of 2001 and the Police Constables in CA No. 4066 of 2001 and the respondents in the State's appeal Cri. As. Nos. 690-91 of 2001 have otherwise made out a case for quashing of proceedings in Crime No. 268 of 1997?

(iii) What was the effect of the report of the Commission of Inquiry?

(iv) Whether the facts and circumstances of the case justify a fresh investigation by CBI?

Allowing Cri. A. No. 689 of 2001 and CA No. 4066 of 2001 and dismissing Cri. As. Nos. 690-91 of 2001,

Held :

Points (i) and (ii)

An information given under sub-section (1) of Section 154 CrPC is commonly known as the first information report (FIR) though this term is not used in the Code. It is a very important document.

(3)(ix) Reliability and Validity of FIR - Multiple FIRs/Cases (contd.)

And as its nickname suggests it is the earliest and the first information of a cognizable offence recorded by an officer in charge of a police station. It sets the criminal law in motion and marks the commencement of the investigation which ends up with the formation of opinion under Section 169 or 170 CrPC, as the case may be, and forwarding of a police report under Section 173 CrPC. It is quite possible and it happens not infrequently that more than one piece of information is given to a police officer in charge of a police station in respect of the same incident involving one or more than one cognizable offences. In such a case he need not enter every one of them in the station house diary and this is implied in Section 154 CrPC. Apart from a vague information by a phone call or a cryptic telegram, the information first entered in the station house diary, kept for this purpose, by a police officer in charge of a police station is the first information report — FIR postulated by Section 154 CrPC. All other informations made orally or in writing after the commencement of the investigation into the cognizable offence disclosed from the facts mentioned in the first information report and entered in the station house diary by the police officer or such other cognizable offences as may come to his notice during the investigation, will be statements falling under Section 162 CrPC. No such information/statement can properly be treated as an FIR and entered in the station house diary again, as it would in effect be a second FIR and the same cannot be in conformity with the scheme of CrPC. (Para 18)

The scheme of CrPC is that an officer in charge of a police station has to commence investigation as provided in Section 156 or 157 CrPC on the basis of entry of the first information report, on coming to know of the commission of a cognizable offence. On completion of investigation and on the basis of the evidence collected, he has to form an opinion under Section 169 or 170 CrPC, as the case may be, and forward his report to the Magistrate concerned under Section 173(2) CrPC. However, even after filing such a report, if he comes into possession of further information or material, he need not register a fresh FIR; he is empowered to make further investigation, normally with the leave of the court, and where during further investigation he collects further evidence, oral or documentary, he is obliged to forward the same with one or more further reports; this is the import of sub-section (8) of Section 173 CrPC. (Para 19)

In the case on hand the second FIR was filed in respect of the same incident and on the same facts after about three years. (Para 22)

The right of the police to investigate into a cognizable offence is a statutory right over which the court does not possess any supervisory jurisdiction under CrPC. This plenary power of the police to investigate a cognizable offence is, however, not unlimited. It is subject to certain well-recognised limitations. (Paras 23 and 24)

A just balance between the fundamental rights of the citizens under Articles 19 and 21 of the Constitution and the expansive power of the police to investigate a cognizable offence has to be struck by the court. The sweeping power of investigation does not warrant subjecting a citizen each time to fresh investigation by the police in respect of the same incident, giving rise to one or more cognizable offences, consequent upon filing of successive FIRs whether before or after filing the final report under Section 173(2) CrPC. It would clearly be beyond the purview of Sections 154 and 156 CrPC, nay, a case of abuse of the statutory power of investigation in a given case. A case of fresh investigation based on the second or successive FIRs, not being a counter-case, filed in connection with the same or connected cognizable offence alleged to have been committed in the course of the same transaction and in respect of which pursuant to the first FIR either investigation is under way or final report under Section 173(2) has been forwarded to the Magistrate, may be a fit case for exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC or under Articles 226/227 of the Constitution. Where the police transgresses its statutory power of investigation the High Court under Section 482 CrPC or Articles 226/227 of the Constitution and the Supreme Court in an appropriate case can interdict the investigation to prevent abuse of the process of the court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. (Paras 27 and 25)

In the present case in truth and substance the essence of the offence in Crimes Nos. 353 and 354 of 1994 is the same as in Crime No. 268 of 1997. In sending information in regard to the same incident, duly enclosing a copy of the report of the Commission of Inquiry to the Inspector General of Police for appropriate action, the Additional Chief Secretary adopted the right course of action. Perhaps the endorsement of the Inspector General of Police for registration of a case misled the subordinate police officers and the said letter with regard to the incident was registered again under Section 154 CrPC which would be the second FIR and, on the facts of this case, was irregular and a fresh investigation by the investigating agency was unwarranted and illegal. On that date the investigations in the earlier cases (Crimes Nos. 353 and 354 of 1994) were pending. The correct course of action should have been to take note of the findings and the contents of the report, streamline the investigation to ascertain the true and correct facts, collect the evidence in support thereof, form an opinion under Sections 169 and 170 CrPC, as the case may be, and forward the report/reports under Section 173(2) or Section 173(8) CrPC to the Magistrate concerned. The course adopted in this case, namely, the registration of the information as the second FIR in regard to the same incident and making a fresh investigation is not permissible under the scheme of the provisions of CrPC. Therefore, the investigation undertaken and the report thereof cannot but be invalid. The same is, therefore, quashed leaving it open to the investigating agency to seek permission in Crime No. 353 or 354 of 1994 of the Magistrate to make further investigation, forward further report or reports and thus proceed in accordance with law. (Para 28)

For the aforementioned reasons, the registration of the second FIR under Section 154 CrPC on the basis of the letter of the Director General of Police as Crime No. 268 of 1997 is not valid and consequently the investigation made pursuant thereto is of no legal consequence; they are accordingly quashed. However, this does not preclude the investigating agency from seeking leave of the Court in Crimes Nos. 353 and 354 of 1994 for making further investigations and filing a further report or reports under Section 173(8) CrPC before the competent Magistrate in the said cases. In this view of the matter, it is not necessary to interfere with the judgment of the High Court under challenge insofar as it relates to quashing of Crime No. 268 of 1997. In all other aspects the impugned judgment of the High Court shall stand set aside. (Para 35)

Point No. (iv)

On this conclusion, it is unnecessary to deal with the other aspects of the case including the fourth point, namely, to direct investigation of the case by CBI. (Para 36). T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1048: AIR 2001 SC 2637.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.S.M. Quadri and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-2001]

Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479; M. Krishna v. State of Karnataka, (1999) 3 SCC 247: 1999 SCC (Cri) 397, distinguished

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, AIR 1945 PC 18: 46 Cri LJ 413, relied on

Impliedly distinguished in Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441*

[1257] — Ss. 154, 159, 190 and 482 — Two cases pertaining to the same incident — Magistrate to take action as he thinks fit in accordance with the provisions of the Code after considering the reports in respects of the two cases — High Court not justified in interfering with the investigation. Jagdish Yadav v. Ram Nandan Yadav, 1990 Supp SCC 55(2): 1990 SCC (Cri) 648.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1988]

[1258] — S. 154 — Clubbing of two FIRs in single charge-sheet — When valid — Application and scope — Charge-sheet clubbing together offences in respect of two incidents one being the fallout of the other, held, valid — Though charge under S. 188 IPC was not tenable for absence of S. 195 CrPC complaint, that would not falsify other charges clubbed with it — Legislative intent behind S. 195(1)(a)(i) CrPC is to prevent frivolous litigation — Penal Code, 1860, S. 188

There was no wrong in clubbing together of the two crimes. Keeping in view the totality of the circumstances and evidence, the second occurrence was nothing but a fallout of the first occurrence. Merely because two separate complaints had been lodged, did not mean that they could not be clubbed together and one charge-sheet could not be filed. (Paras 37, 8 and 36)

Therefore although the charges under Section 188 are quashed as no complaint in this regard had ever been filed, it would by no means have any bearing on the case of the prosecution, so far as the charges for other offences are concerned. It cannot be accepted that absence of a complaint under Section 195 CrPC falsifies the genesis of the prosecution case and is fatal to the entire prosecution case. (Paras 36 and 35)

The legislative intent behind Section 195(1)(a)(i) CrPC read with Section 188 is that an individual should not face criminal prosecution instituted upon insufficient grounds by persons actuated by malice, ill will or frivolity of disposition and to save the time of the criminal courts being wasted by endless prosecutions. This provision has been carved out as an exception to the general rule contained under Section 190 CrPC. (Para 28)

Thus, there must be a complaint by the public servant whose lawful order has not been complied with. The complaint must be in writing. The provisions of Section 195 CrPC are mandatory. Non-compliance with it would vitiate the prosecution and all other consequential orders. The court cannot assume the cognizance of the case without such complaint. In the absence of such a complaint, the trial and conviction will be void ab initio being without jurisdiction. (Para 33)

(3)(ix) Reliability and Validity of FIR - Multiple FIRs/ Cases (contd.)

The test of whether there is evasion or non-compliance with Section 195 CrPC or not, is whether the facts disclose primarily and essentially an offence for which a complaint of the court or of a public servant is required. The provisions of this section cannot be evaded by describing the offence as one being punishable under some other sections of IPC, though in truth and substance, the offence falls in a category mentioned in Section 195 CrPC. Thus, cognizance of such an offence cannot be taken by misdescribing it or by putting a wrong label on it. (Para 29). C. Muniappan v. State of T.N., (2010) 9 SCC 567: (2010) 5 CTC 794 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-8-2010]

T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1048; Govind Mehta v. State of Bihar, (1971) 3 SCC 329: 1971 SCC (Cri) 608; Patel Laljibhai Somabhai v. State of Gujarat, (1971) 2 SCC 376: 1971 SCC (Cri) 548; Surjit Singh v. Balbir Singh, (1996) 3 SCC 533: 1996 SCC (Cri) 521; State of Punjab v. Raj Singh, (1998) 2 SCC 391: 1998 SCC (Cri) 642; K. Vengadachalam v. K.C. Palanisamy, (2005) 7 SCC 352: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1673; Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101; M.S. Ahlawat v. State of Haryana, (2000) 1 SCC 278: 2000 SCC (Cri) 193; Sachida Nand Singh v. State of Bihar, (1998) 2 SCC 493: 1998 SCC (Cri) 660; Daulat Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1962 SC 1206: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 286; Basir-ul-Haq v. State of W.B., AIR 1953 SC 293: 1953 Cri LJ 1232; Durgacharan Naik v. State of Orissa, AIR 1966 SC 1775: 1966 Cri LJ 1491, relied on

[1259] — S. 154 — FIR — Two FIRs in respect of the same case — When can investigation be against both

Of course the legal position is that there cannot be two FIRs against the same accused in respect of the same case. But when there are rival versions in respect of the same episode, they would normally take the shape of two different FIRs and investigation can be carried on under both of them by the same investigating agency. Even that apart, the report submitted to the court by way of the subsequent FIR need be considered as an information submitted to the court regarding the new discovery made by the police during investigation that persons not named in the first FIR are the real culprits. To quash the said proceedings merely on the ground that final report had been laid in the first FIR is, to say the least, too technical. The ultimate object of every investigation is to find out whether the offences alleged have been committed and, if so, who have committed it. Even otherwise, the investigating agency is not precluded from further investigation in respect of an offence in spite of forwarding a report under sub-section (2) of Section 173 on a previous occasion. This is clear from Section 173(8) of the Code. (Paras 10 to 12). Kari Choudhary v. Sita Devi, (2002) 1 SCC 714: 2002 SCC (Cri) 269: AIR 2002 SC 441: 2002 Cri LJ 923: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 108.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2001]

(4) Powers, Role and Duty of police in respect of FIR

Synopsis

(i)	Generally	376
(ii)	Jurisdiction to lodge FIR	379
(iii)	Preliminary enquiry	380
(iv)	Refusal to register FIR	380

(i) Generally

See also Ss. 155 to 159, below

See also Ss. 169, 170 and 173, below

[1260] — S. 154 — FIR — Registration of — Duty of police to register FIR — Genuineness of case — Relevance of, at the time of registration of FIR — Held, provision of S. 154 is mandatory — Hence, the police officer concerned is duty-bound to register the case on receiving information disclosing cognizable offence — Genuineness or credibility of the information is not a condition precedent for registration of a case — That can only be considered after registration of the case (Paras 5 and 3). Ramesh Kumari v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2006) 2 SCC 677: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 678: AIR 2006 SC 1322: 2006 Cri LJ 1622: (2006) 127 DLT 636: (2006) 2 KLT 404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2006]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

Clarified and distinguished in Aleque Padamsee v. Union of India, (2007) 6 SCC 171*

Explained and distinguished in Rajinder Singh Katoch v. Chandigarh Admn., (2007) 10 SCC 69*

[1261] — Ss. 154, 156 and 157 — Police is duty-bound to register a case and investigate into it — Police Act, 1861, S. 12 — Punjab Police Rules, 1934. Madhu Bala v. Suresh Kumar, (1997) 8 SCC 476: AIR 1997 SC 3104: 1997 Cri LJ 3757.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-7-1997]

[1262] — Ss. 154 to 173 — Scheme of, stated — No absolute discretion to prosecute vested in police

Per Bhagwati, C.J. and Oza, J.

The police has no absolute or unfettered discretion whether to prosecute an accused or not to prosecute him. In our constitutional scheme, conferment of such absolute and uncanalised discretion would be violative of the equality clause of the Constitution. The Magistrate is therefore given the power to structure and control the discretion of the police. If the Magistrate finds from the report made by the police either on initial investigation or on further investigation directed by the Magistrate, that prima facie an offence appears to have been committed, the Magistrate is empowered to take cognizance of the offence notwithstanding the contrary opinion of the police and equally, if the Magistrate forms an opinion that on the facts set out in the report no offence prima facie appears to have been committed though the police might have come to a contrary conclusion, the Magistrate can decline to take cognizance of the offence. The discretion of the police to prosecute is thus "cabined and confined" and, subject to appeal or revision, and the Magistrate is made the final arbiter on this question. Sheonandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, (1987) 1 SCC 288: 1987 SCC (Cri) 82: AIR 1987 SC 877: 1987 Cri LJ 793.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, C.J.[1] and E.S. Venkataramiah[2], V. Khalid[3], G.L. Oza[1] and S. Natarajan[4], JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-1986]

[1263] — S. 154 — Registration of case — Duty of police under — Consideration of genuineness or credibility of information at stage of registration case — Requirement, if any — Held, S. 154 casts a statutory duty upon the police officer to register the case, as disclosed in the complaint, and then to proceed with the investigation — Genuineness or credibility of the information is not a condition precedent for registration of a case — Further held, police officer concerned cannot embark upon an enquiry as regards reliability of the information at the stage of registration of the offence — In the instant case, the cognizable offences disclosed in the complaint were under Ss. 147, 148, 149, 448, 452, 323 and 395 IPC but the police officer concerned registered the case only under Ss. 452/380/323/34 IPC — S. 395 being deliberately excluded from purview of FIR, no investigation carried on pertaining to that offence — Held, hence a grave injustice thereby resulted which was rightly corrected by the High Court directing the Magistrate concerned to proceed in accordance with law (Paras 2 and 8 to 12). Lallan Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2006) 12 SCC 229: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 684: AIR 2006 SC 3376: (2006) 47 AIC 1 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2006]

Ramesh Kumari v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2006) 2 SCC 677: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 678, followed

Clarified and distinguished in Aleque Padamsee v. Union of India, (2007) 6 SCC 171

[1264] — Ss. 154 and 41(a) & (g) — Recording FIR/Registration of case disclosing a cognizable offence — Duty of police officer in charge of a police station — Discretion, if any, available to such officer in registering a case — Position compared with that obtaining under Ss. 41(a) & (g) — Remedy against non-registration — Held, police officer concerned cannot embark upon an enquiry as to whether the information laid by the informant is reliable and genuine and refuse to register a case on the ground that the information is not reliable or credible — The officer is statutorily obliged to register a case — "Reasonableness" or "credibility" of the information is not a condition precedent for registration of a case — The condition which is sine qua non for recording FIR is that there must be information and that information must disclose a cognizable offence — If the officer refuses to register a case, the remedy lies under S. 154(3)

At the stage of registration of a crime or a case on the basis of the information disclosing a cognizable offence in compliance with the mandate of Section 154(1) CrPC, the police officer concerned cannot embark upon an enquiry as to whether the information laid by the informant is reliable and genuine or otherwise and refuse to register a case on the ground that the information is not reliable or credible. On the other hand, the officer in charge of a police station is statutorily obliged to register a case and then to proceed with the investigation if he has reason to suspect the commission of an offence which he is empowered under Section 156 CrPC to investigate, subject to the proviso to Section 157 thereof. In case an officer in charge of a police station refuses to exercise the jurisdiction vested in him and to register a case on the information of a cognizable offence reported and thereby violates the statutory duty cast upon him, the person aggrieved by such refusal can send the substance of the information in writing and by post to the Superintendent of Police concerned who if satisfied that the information forwarded to him discloses a cognizable offence, should either investigate the case himself or direct an investigation to be made by any police officer subordinate to him in the manner provided by sub-section (3) of Section 154 CrPC. (Para 66)

(4)(i) Powers, Role and Duty of police in respect of FIR - Generally (contd.)

It has to be noted that in Section 154(1) CrPC, the legislature in its collective wisdom has carefully and cautiously used the expression "information" without qualifying the same as in Sections 41(1)(a) or (g) of the Code wherein the expressions "reasonable complaint" and "credible information" are used. Evidently, the non-qualification of the word "information" in Section 154(1) unlike in Sections 41(1)(a) and (g) CrPC may be for the reason that the police officer should not refuse to record an information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence and to register a case thereon on the ground that he is not satisfied with the reasonableness or credibility of the information. "Reasonableness" or "credibility" of the said information is not a condition precedent for registration of a case. A comparison of the present Section 154 with those of the earlier Codes will indicate that the legislature had purposely thought it fit to employ only the word "information" without qualifying the said word. The condition which is sine qua non for recording a first information report is that there must be an information and that information must disclose a cognizable offence. (Para 67)

It is, therefore, manifestly clear that if any information disclosing a cognizable offence is laid before an officer in charge of a police station satisfying the requirements of Section 154(1) CrPC, the said police officer has no other option except to enter the substance thereof in the prescribed form, that is to say, to register a case on the basis of such information. (Para 68). Parkash Singh Badal v. State of Punjab, (2007) 1 SCC 1: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 193: AIR 2007 SC 1274: (2007) 51 AIC 623 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2006]

[1265] — Ss. 154 and 482 — Applicability — Registration of FIR — Duty of police (Paras 8, 11 and 12). Rajinder Singh Katoch v. Chandigarh Admn., (2007) 10 SCC 69: (2007) 4 KLT 877: (2007) 60 AIC 194 (SC): (2007) 144 DLT 241.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

Ramesh Kumari v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2006) 2 SCC 677: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 678, explained and distinguished

Shashikant v. CBI, (2007) 1 SCC 630: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 406, relied on

[1266] — S. 154 — FIR — Police officer's discretionary power, duty and right to investigate cognizable offence, clarified

The Collector in his order dated 5-6-2006 to the District Superintendent of Police referred to the meeting and instructions of the Chief Minister on 1-6-2006 and accordingly directed that if any complaint is received against a specified MLA or his family members, the said matter/complaint be placed for decision before the District Anti-Moneylending Committee and the said Committee should obtain the legal opinion of the District Government Pleader and then only take decision on the same and take appropriate legal action accordingly.

A complaint was lodged by Respondent 1 against the said MLA/family members under Sections 341, 342, 363, 392, 504 read with Section 34 IPC and Section 32-B of the Bombay Moneylenders Act, 1946. Station diary entry of the police station concerned where complaint had been lodged revealed that PS to the Chief Minister telephoned twice to the police station and directed that no action should be taken as instructed by the Chief Minister and that no offence should be registered.

The High Court after examining the provisions of the Bombay Moneylenders Act and also the materials on record held that the letter dated 5-6-2006 and the telephonic message recorded in the station diary entry exhibited gross abuse of power by the authority concerned and struck down both the communications.

Dismissing the appeal with costs of Rs 10 lakhs, Held :

Per A.K. Ganguly, J. (for Singhvi, J. and himself)

If the information lodged with the police discloses cognizable offence, the police shall record the same in accordance with and under Section 154 CrPC. The police officer's power to investigate in case of a cognizable offence without order of the Magistrate is statutorily recognised under Section 156 CrPC. The police officer in charge of a police station, on the basis of information received or otherwise, can start investigation if he has reasons to suspect the commission of any cognizable offence. This is subject to Section 157 provisos (a) and (b) CrPC which leave discretion with the police officer in charge of police station to consider if the information is not of a serious nature, he may depute a subordinate officer to investigate and if it appears to the officer-in-charge that there does not exist sufficient ground, he shall not investigate. (Paras 29 and 30). State of Maharashtra v. Sarangdharsingh Shivdassingh Chavan, (2011) 1 SCC 577.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi[2] and A.K. Ganguly[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-2010]

Lalita Kumari v. Govt. of U.P., (2008) 14 SCC 337: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 812, distinguished

[Ed.: See also Criminal Procedure Code, 1973, Ss. 155 to 159, '(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court', pp. 404 et seq. in Vol. 16; and

S. 154, '(4)(i) — Powers, Role and Duty of police in respect of FIR — Generally', pp. 367 et seq. also in Vol. 16, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn.]

[1267] — Ss. 154(1), 154(2), 154(3), 157(1), 190(1)(a) and 200 — Inaction of police to record FIRs, and in cases FIR recorded on court directions, apathy to investigate the case — Notice issued by Supreme Court on PIL in regard to — Such an instance brought to the notice of the Court — In order to curb this malady, the Court proposing to issue stringent directions pinning responsibility on police authorities to act promptly, or else to face contempt/disciplinary proceedings including suspension — Notices therefore issued to all State Govts./UTs and DGs of Police/Commissioners of Police for ascertaining their views before issuing directions — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 14 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 359 to 363 — Contempt of Courts Act, 1971, S. 2(b) (Paras 4 to 8). Lalita Kumari v. Govt. of U.P., (2008) 7 SCC 164: (2008) 2 SCC (L&S) 401: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 17: (2008) 4 KLT 130.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-7-2008]

[1268] — S. 154(3) — FIR — Refusal to register FIR — Police advising rape victim to settle the matter amicably with accused — FIR lodged only on directions issued after prosecutrix filed petition under S. 154(3) — Delay of six months therefore caused in sending prosecutrix for medical examination — Held, very valuable evidence was lost — Attitude of the police deplored (Paras 21 and 22). Zindar Ali Sheikh v. State of W.B., (2009) 3 SCC 761.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2009]

[1269] — S. 154 — FIR — Once an information is laid before a police officer in compliance with the requirements of S. 154, the police officer is obliged to enter it in prescribed form and register the case — He cannot refuse to do so on ground that it is not reasonable or credible information

If any information disclosing a cognizable offence is laid before an officer in charge of a police station satisfying the requirements of S. 154(1) of the Code, the said police officer has no other option except to enter the substance thereof in the prescribed form, that is to say, to register a case on the basis of such information. 'Reasonableness' or 'credibility' of the said information is not a condition precedent for registration of a case. The police officer should not refuse to record an information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence and to register a case thereon on the ground that he is not satisfied with the reasonableness or credibility of the information. In S. 154(1) the legislature in its collective wisdom has carefully and cautiously used the expression "information" without qualifying the same as in S. 41(1)(a) or (g) of the Code wherein the expressions, "reasonable complaint" and "credible information" are used. State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 1992 SC 604: 1992 Cri LJ 527.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

(ii) Jurisdiction to lodge FIR

See also Ss. 177 and 178, below

[1270] — Ss. 154, 156 and 162, 177, 178 — If IO finds that the crime was not committed within his territorial jurisdiction, he can forward the FIR to the police station concerned — But this would not mean that in a case which requires investigation, the police officer can refuse to record the FIR and/or investigate it. Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503: AIR 1999 SC 3596.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-1999]

[1271] — S. 154 — FIR — Refusal by police to record information about cognizable offence on ground of lack of territorial jurisdiction over the place of crime amounts to dereliction of duty — In such cases police should record the information and forward the same to police station having jurisdiction over the area. State of A.P. v. Punati Ramulu, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 590: 1994 SCC (Cri) 734: AIR 1993 SC 2644: 1993 Cri LJ 3684.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1993]

[1272] — S. 154 — FIR — Lodging of — Unnatural conduct — Plea that FIR not lodged at nearest police station — Inspector not available at nearest police station — Constable present there not competent to accept the intimation — He suggested the witness to lodge the report at another police station having jurisdiction — Hence held, contention based on the above plea had no substance (Para 6). Gubbala Venugopalaswamy v. State of A.P., (2004) 10 SCC 120: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1764: AIR 2004 SC 2477.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-2004]

(4) Powers, Role and Duty of police in respect of FIR (contd.)

(iii) Preliminary enquiry

[1273] — S. 154 — FIR — Duty of police to register case in a cognizable offence — Power to conduct preliminary enquiry prior to registering the case — Question whether upon receipt of information disclosing a cognizable offence, it is imperative for the police officer concerned to register a case or a discretion lies with him/her to make some sort of preliminary enquiry before registering the same — Considering the conflicting decisions of the Supreme Court on the said issue, matter referred to a larger Bench — Supreme Court Rules, 1966, Or. 7 R. 2 (Paras 5 and 6). Lalita Kumari v. Govt. of U.P., (2008) 14 SCC 337.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2008]

[1274] — Ss. 154, 156 and 157 — FIR — Preliminary enquiry — Permissibility and need for — Held, in an appropriate case, the police officers also have a duty to make a preliminary enquiry so as to find out as to whether allegations made have any substance or not (Paras 8, 11 and 12). Rajinder Singh Katoch v. Chandigarh Admn., (2007) 10 SCC 69: (2007) 4 KLT 877: (2007) 60 AIC 194 (SC): (2007) 144 DLT 241.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

Ramesh Kumari v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2006) 2 SCC 677: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 678, explained and distinguished

Shashikant v. CBI, (2007) 1 SCC 630: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 406, relied on

(iv) Refusal to register FIR

See also Section 154, '(5) Interference by court', and

S. 156(3) and S. 190, below

See also CONSTITUTION OF INDIA, Arts. 32, 136 and 226 in Vol. 7, Vol. 8 and Vol. 9 of Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn., respectively

[1275] — Ss. 154, 190 and 200 — Information to police relating to commission of cognizable offence — No action taken by the police — Complainant can file a complaint before the Magistrate having jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence — Complainant is not entitled to approach the High Court by filing a writ petition and seeking a direction to conduct an investigation by the CBI. All India Institute of Medical Sciences Employees' Union (Regd.) v. Union of India, (1996) 11 SCC 582.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-10-1996]

Applied in Aleque Padamsee v. Union of India, (2007) 6 SCC 171

[1276] — Ss. 154 and 174 — FIR — Refusal to register FIR — Liability of erring police officers — Police atrocities — Injuries received during police custody resulting in death — Evidence not sufficient to convict the policeman concerned under S. 302 IPC but certain important questions unfavourable to police remaining unexplained — Relief — Under-custody person taken to hospital but reasons therefor not explained — Later, he released on bail but the Magistrate granting the bail not enquiring into the reasons for taking him to hospital — Subsequently he dying and post-mortem report showing 16 injuries albeit of simple nature — Police officers although informed of the matter, not registering any FIR — After unsuccessfully approaching higher authorities, the widow of the deceased making a private complaint — In such circumstances, although due to contradictions and infirmities in evidence produced by the complainant, acquittal of the accused policeman in the murder case, upheld, in exercise of the power under Art. 142 a compensation of Rs 1,00,000 awarded to the heirs of the deceased against the State — Detailed directions for the apportionment of the said sum and the manner of utilisation thereof issued — Further directed that the award of the said compensation was only as a palliative measure which would not be a bar to any other remedy for recovering damages from the State Government and its erring officials — Moreover, an enquiry directed to be conducted by the Head of the police force under the direct control of Chief Secretary of the State to find out the persons responsible for causing injuries on the deceased's body — If the accused was found so responsible, the authorities would be at liberty to initiate proceedings against him notwithstanding his acquittal in the present case — Action also directed to be taken against the officers who had failed to register the FIR and the authorities who though requested to conduct Crime Branch enquiry failed to do anything — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 — Constitution of India — Art. 21

The appellant herein filed a private complaint alleging that her husband A was tortured while in policy custody which resulted in his death. According to the complaint the deceased was arrested on 14-10-1983. The next day about 8.30 a.m. she saw a police van parked near her house. She saw that the accused (respondent herein), who was a policeman, came out of the van along with some constables and they were dragging A. The complainant noticed that the condition of A was not very sound, and he was not even able to stand up which showed that he had been assaulted the previous night, apparently in police custody. The accused was carrying a hockey stick in his hands and continued to beat A in the presence of the complainant and other persons. The other constables were holding the hands of A and tried to make A stand. The complainant (PW 1), PW 2 and PW 5 saw that event. The assaults continued for more than an hour and when one of the hockey sticks which was being used by the accused broke, another hockey stick was brought out from the van and the assaults continued. In the evening the complainant (PW 1) and PW 2 met the ACP and the Senior Police Inspector and requested them for medical assistance but there was no cooperation and A was taken to the hospital only on 16-10-1983 around 11.00 a.m. He was produced before the Remand Magistrate and was released on bail. Thereafter he was hospitalised and ultimately, expired on 17-10-1983. PWs 1, 2 and 5 made complaint to police officials against the accused holding him responsible for the death. Their statements were recorded but no action was taken. The appellant's representation to various higher authorities went in vain. Ultimately, she made a private complaint to the Metropolitan Magistrate on 12-12-1984. The case was committed for sessions trial on 5-1-1987. Nine persons were examined as prosecution witnesses. The accused pleaded innocence and false implication. He produced three witnesses to substantiate his plea of innocence. Three witnesses were examined as court witnesses. They were the police officials attached to the police station concerned. The trial court found the accused guilty under Section 302 IPC but the judgment of conviction and sentence was set aside by the High Court, which found certain circumstances to be of great importance corroding the credibility of the complainant's version. The said circumstances were that the complaint was lodged after more than one year of the alleged date of occurrence without any plausible explanation for the delay, the allegation of merciless assault was incredible inasmuch as the doctor who conducted the post-mortem found sixteen injuries on his body and had opined the cause of death to be acute renal failure. The evidence of PWs 1, 2 and 5 when read together improbabilised the stand that they had seen the beatings alleged to have been given by the accused to the deceased as in the first report there was no mention about the assaults on 14-10-1983 and the name of the accused was not mentioned in the medical history of the deceased. Besides, there was no mention of any dying declaration and it was highly improbable that after having given a thorough beating to the deceased, the police officials would bring the deceased in a pathetic condition to a spot near his house and would continue the assaults in the presence of the people of the locality. Before adverting to the question of innocence or otherwise of the accused, the Supreme Court expressed its concern over the omission of the police officers to record an FIR. The prosecution submitted that the statements given by PWs 1, 2 and 5 were treated to be in terms of Section 174 CrPC and, therefore, no FIR was registered. CW 1 stated that he had requested the higher authorities to conduct a Crime Branch enquiry. He added that he had personally questioned the accused and two other PSI, and he perused the papers, medical certificate and station diary etc. and submitted his report through ACP.

Dismissing the appeal but granting relief to the legal heirs of the deceased and issuing necessary directions to the authorities,

Held :

The explanation for omission to register an FIR given by the prosecution is fallacious. If it was brought to the notice of the police that somebody had beaten the deceased, the FIR was to be registered. (Para 21)

CW 1 has acted as if he were deciding the guilt or otherwise of an accused. The permissible area of application of mind is limited to finding out existence of a cognizable offence, and nothing beyond that. It is well settled that even at the time of taking cognizance the court is not required to find out which particular person is the offender, and the cognizance is taken of the offence. The course adopted by the official certainly tends to make a mockery of law. Moreover, he has not shown what was the outcome of the enquiry for which he had requested the higher authorities. (Paras 21 and 22)

Though, delay per se may not affect the credibility of the complainant's version, each individual case has to be tested to see whether delay has been properly explained. If there was inaction to deal with the information lodged with the police in October 1983, there was no reason for the complainant to wait for more than one year to approach the court by making a private complaint. The High Court has, therefore, rightly held this to be a vulnerable circumstance. (Para 23)

It is the duty of the court to the separate grain from the chaff. Falsity of a particular material witness or a material particular would not ruin it from the beginning to end. The maxim "falsus in uno falsus in omnibus" has no application in India and the witnesses cannot be branded as liars. The doctrine is a dangerous one especially in India for if a whole body of the testimony were to be rejected, because the witness was evidently speaking an untruth in some aspect, it is feared that administration of criminal justice would come to a dead stop. Witnesses just cannot help in giving embroidery to a story, however true in the main. Therefore, it has to be appraised in each case as to what extent the evidence is worthy of acceptance, and merely because in some respects the court considers the same to be insufficient for placing reliance on the testimony of a witness, it does not necessarily follow as a matter of law that it must be disregarded in all respects as well. Where it is not feasible to separate the truth from falsehood, because grain and chaff are inextricably mixed up, and in the process of separation an absolutely new case has to be reconstructed by divorcing essential details presented by the prosecution completely from the context and the background against which they are made, the only available course is to discard the evidence in toto. (Paras 25 and 26)

(4)(iv) Powers, Role and Duty of police in respect of FIR - Refusal to register FIR (contd.)

The present case is one where it is really difficult to separate the grain from the chaff. If really there was merciless beating with such brutal force that a hockey stick broke and the beating was given for more than one hour, the result would not have been sixteen simple injuries with no fractures or internal rupture. Moreover, if the condition of the accused was so severe that he was not able to even stand on 15-10-1983 morning as claimed, it is not explained as to how the Magistrate who granted bail did not notice the condition or how even no grievance was made by the deceased before him while there is such a right under Section 54 CrPC. (Para 27)

As regards the evidence of PWs 1, 2 and 5, apart from the exaggerations about the assaults, the evidence shows even some doubtful features about their presence on the spot and suffers from many contradictions and infirmities. Taking the totality of the circumstances the High Court was right in directing acquittal of the accused. The judgment of acquittal does not call for interference. (Para 32)

However, there are several loose ends in the present case. Even according to the version of the accused, the deceased was taken to the hospital and was examined by DW 3. What was the occasion for this being done still remains shrouded in mystery. The post-mortem report reveals sixteen injuries, though of simple nature. If none of these injuries was sustained by the deceased in police custody, there was no necessity of bringing the deceased to the hospital on 15-10-1983 at 11.00 a.m. The court could have asked him as to what was the necessity for doing so. That admittedly has not been done. (Para 33)

The courts exist for doing justice to the persons who are affected. The trial/first appellate courts cannot get swayed by abstract technicalities and close their eyes to factors which need to be positively probed and noticed. The court is not merely to act as a tape recorder recording evidence, overlooking the object of trial i.e. to get at the truth, and oblivious to the active role to be played for which there is not only ample scope but sufficient powers conferred under CrPC. It has a greater duty and responsibility i.e. to render justice in a case where the role of the prosecuting agency itself is put in issue. (Para 34)

Courts have to ensure that accused persons are punished and if deficiency in investigation or prosecution is visible or can be perceived by lifting the veil trying to hide the realities or covering the deficiencies, deal with the same appropriately within the framework of law. Justice has no favourite, except the truth. It is as much the duty of the prosecutor as of the court to ensure that full and material facts are brought on record so that there might not be miscarriage of justice. (Para 35)

The present case is a fit one for exercise of the jurisdiction under Article 142 of the Constitution. The State Government is directed to pay compensation of Rs 1,00,000 to the mother and the children of the deceased. No compensation is being granted to the widow because she appears to have remarried. A sum of Rs 25,000 be given to the mother and balance to the children. The amounts paid are to be kept in a fixed deposit, and only the interest shall be allowed to be drawn by the mother and the children. If the children are minors, the fixed deposit shall be made in their names through a proper legal guardian till they attain majority. This amount of compensation shall be as a palliative measure and does not preclude the affected person(s) from bringing a suit to recover appropriate damages from the State Government and its erring officials if such a remedy is available in law. It is further directed that an enquiry be conducted by the Head of the police force of the State under the direct control of the Chief Secretary of the State, to find out as to who were the persons responsible for the injuries on the body of the deceased. If on further enquiry and on the basis of materials collected it appears that the accused who is being acquitted had a role to play, it shall be open to the authorities to initiate proceedings for action and the same shall be taken notwithstanding the order of acquittal passed by the High Court and affirmed herein. Action will also be taken against the officials who did not register the FIR and the authorities who were requested to conduct the Crime Branch enquiry but yet do not appear to have done anything in the matter. The awarding of compensation also shall not be considered as a factor to decide either way as to whether any particular official was responsible for custodial torture. (Para 36). Shakila Abdul Gafar Khan v. Vasant Raghunath Dhoble, (2003) 7 SCC 749: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1918: AIR 2003 SC 4567.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-2003]

Nisar Ali v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 366: 1957 Cri LJ 550; Sohrab v. State of M.P., (1972) 3 SCC 751: 1972 SCC (Cri) 819; Ugar Ahir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1965 SC 277: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 256; Zwinglee Ariel v. State of M.P., AIR 1954 SC 15: 1954 Cri LJ 230; Balaka Singh v. State of Punjab, (1975) 4 SCC 511: 1975 SCC (Cri) 601; State of Rajasthan v. Kalki, (1981) 2 SCC 752: 1981 SCC (Cri) 593, followed

[1277] — S. 154 — Refusal by police to register the case — Facts of the case indicating that police did not register the case of appellant while maintaining having conducted on investigation into the matter concerned — Under such circumstances, police directed to duly investigate into the said matter after registering the case of appellant. Mohindro v. State of Punjab, (2001) 9 SCC 581: AIR 2001 SC 2113: 2001 Cri LJ 2587.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-1-2001]

[1278] — Ss. 154, 156 & 157 and 190 & 200 to 203 — Information to police regarding commission of cognizable offence — No action taken by police — Course open to complainant — Held, in such a case, complainant is given power under S. 190 read with S. 200 CrPC to lay down the complaint before the Magistrate concerned — Then the Magistrate is required to enquire into the complaint as provided in Ch. XV CrPC — Writ petition in such a case, held, not maintainable

When the information is laid with the police, but no action in that behalf is taken, the complainant is given power under Section 190 read with Section 200 of the Criminal Procedure Code to lay the complaint before the Magistrate having jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence and the Magistrate is required to enquire into the complaint as provided in Chapter XV of the Code. In case the Magistrate after recording evidence finds a prima facie case, instead of issuing process to the accused, he is empowered to direct the police concerned to investigate into offence under Chapter XII of the Code and to submit a report. If he finds that the complaint does not disclose any offence to take further action, he is empowered to dismiss the complaint under Section 203 of the Code. In case he finds that the complaint/evidence recorded prima facie discloses an offence, he is empowered to take cognizance of the offence and would issue process to the accused. A writ petition in such cases is not to be entertained. (Para 16). Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310: AIR 2006 SC 1937: 2006 Cri LJ 2468: (2006) 2 KLT 588: (2006) 3 Guj LR 2013.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2006]

All India Institute of Medical Sciences Employees' Union (Regd.) v. Union of India, (1996) 11 SCC 582: 1997 SCC (Cri) 303; Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404, relied on

(5) Interference by court

Synopsis

(i) Transfer of FIR 383
(ii) Refusal to file FIR by police/ Direction to file FIR 384
(iii) Quashing of FIR 385
(iv) Practice and Procedure 388

(i) Transfer of FIR

See also Ss. 177 and 178, below

[1279] — Ss. 154, 156, 177 and 178 — Transfer of FIR of case and its investigation from one police station to another (in this case, from police station of one State to another) — Power of High Court — Constitution of India — Art. 226

Only in the event an investigating officer, having regard to the provisions contained in Sections 154, 162, 177 and 178 CrPC had arrived at a finding that the alleged crime was not committed within his territorial jurisdiction, could he forward the first information report to the police having jurisdiction in the matter. Stricto sensu, therefore, the High Court should not have issued such a direction (transferring FIR of case and its investigation from police station of one State to another). Assuming, however, that the High Court could mould the relief, it was not a case where on the face of the allegations made in the complaint petition, the same could be said to be mala fide. (Paras 32 and 33). Asit Bhattacharjee v. Hanuman Prasad Ojha, (2007) 5 SCC 786: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 31: AIR 2007 SC 1925: 2007 Cri LJ 3181: (2007) 104 Cut LT 488: (2007) 4 All LJ 567: (2007) 54 AIC 38 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-2007]

[1280] — Ss. 154 and 162, 177 & 178 — Transfer of investigation to police station having jurisdiction to conduct the same — Police officer, held, is entitled to transfer investigation (Para 33). Rasiklal Dalpatram Thakkar v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 1 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2009]

Satvinder Kaur v. State (NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503, relied on

(5) Interference by court (contd.)

(ii) Refusal to file FIR by police/ Direction to file FIR

See also Section 154, '(4)(iv) Refusal to register FIR', above, and

S. 156(3) and S. 190, below

See also CONSTITUTION OF INDIA, Arts. 32, 136 and 226 in Vol. 7, Vol. 8 and Vol. 9 of Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn., respectively

[1281] — S. 154 — FIR — Refusal to register FIR — Interference in writ proceedings — When warranted — On writ appeal to High Court, High Court refusing to interfere on the ground of the availability of an alternative remedy — Held, availability of alternative remedy or pendency of contempt petition in court in the matter concerned could not be a ground therefor (Para 3). Ramesh Kumari v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2006) 2 SCC 677: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 678: AIR 2006 SC 1322: 2006 Cri LJ 1622: (2006) 127 DLT 636: (2006) 2 KLT 404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2006]

[1282] — Ss. 154(3) & 36, 156(3), 200 and 482 — Interference by High Court or Supreme Court in matters of non-registration of FIR/improper investigation — Scope of — Caution and approach of High Court laid down — High Court to discourage writ petitions or petitions under S. 482 CrPC where alternative remedies under S. 154(3) r/w S. 36 or S. 156(3) or S. 200 CrPC have not been exhausted, emphasised — Constitution of India — Art. 226 (Paras 27 and 28). Sakiri Vasu v. State of U.P., (2008) 2 SCC 409: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 440: AIR 2008 SC 907: (2008) 62 AIC 236 (SC): (2008) 1 KLT 724: (2008) 2 Guj LR 1666.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-2007]

CBI v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 3 SCC 333: 2001 SCC (Cri) 524; R.P. Kapur v. Sardar Pratap Singh Kairon, AIR 1961 SC 1117, relied on

[1283] — Ss. 154, 156 & 157 and 190, 200, 203 — CBI enquiry — Writ petition seeking Court's direction to conduct enquiry by CBI into murder of petitioner's son, no action having been taken by police on FIR lodged by him — Held, cannot be entertained in view of relevant provisions of CrPC — Constitution of India — Art. 32

When the information is laid with the police, but no action in that behalf is taken, the complainant can under Section 190 read with Section 200 of the Code lay the complaint before the Magistrate having jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence and the Magistrate is required to enquire into the complaint as provided in Chapter XV of the Code. In case the Magistrate after recording evidence finds a prima facie case, instead of issuing process to the accused, he is empowered to direct the police concerned to investigate into the offence under Chapter XII of the Code and to submit a report. If he finds that the complaint does not disclose any offence to take further action, he is empowered to dismiss the complaint under Section 203 of the Code. In case he finds that the complaint/evidence recorded prima facie discloses an offence, he is empowered to take cognizance of the offence and would issue process to the accused. A writ petition in such cases is not to be entertained. It is the case of the petitioner that he is under constant threat by some persons and his life and property are in danger. If he seeks any protection, it is the duty of the police officials concerned to provide such security as is warranted in the circumstances in accordance with law. (Paras 4 to 6). Hari Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 5 SCC 733: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 63: AIR 2006 SC 2464: (2006) 130 DLT 591: (2006) 3 KLT 269: (2006) 5 All LJ 345: 2006 Cri LJ 3283.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-6-2006]

All India Institute of Medical Sciences Employees' Union (Regd.) v. Union of India, (1996) 11 SCC 582: 1997 SCC (Cri) 303; Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310, relied on

Applied in Aleque Padamsee v. Union of India, (2007) 6 SCC 171*

[1284] — Ss. 154, 190, 156 and 157 — Direction by High Court to register case and conduct investigation in offence which took place about 18 years ago — Challenge to, by aggrieved appellant — Sustainability — Writ petition filed in 2004 by Respondent 3 seeking direction for registration of case against appellant in respect of case relating to year 1986 in which Respondent 3 was attacked and had suffered injuries — Impugned direction based on enquiry report of Dy. Inspector General, CID who conducted enquiry at the instance of High Court — Considering the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, held, judgment of High Court not liable to be interfered with — Hence, upheld — Constitution of India — Art. 226

A writ petition was filed by Respondent 3 before the High Court alleging inaction on the part of the police authorities in not registering his complaint and taking action against the persons who had caused injuries to him and his sons in an incident occurring on 8-11-1986. The Single Judge of the High Court directed the Director General of Police (DGP) to appoint a senior police officer to conduct an enquiry into the matter. Pursuant to that order, the Dy. Inspector General, CID conducted the enquiry and submitted a report. The Single Judge held that once it was established that Respondent 3 had sustained injuries in the incident and injuries on his person were confirmed in the medical examination, the police authorities ought to have registered a case and taken appropriate steps in accordance with law. On the basis of the final report of the inquiry, the Single Judge directed the Superintendent of Police to register a case in the police station of competent jurisdiction and take action in accordance with law. The application filed by the appellant for recalling the said order was dismissed. Hence, the present appeal.

As per the appellant, he was tenant in the house of Respondent 3. Respondent 3 attempted to illegally evict the appellant from his rented house with the help of antisocial elements who came to his house armed with weapons on 8-11-1986. Respondent 3 along with his men started dismantling the house of the appellant without prior permission and/or notice to him. The appellant was seriously injured when he tried to obstruct them from dismantling the house. The appellant lodged a first information report under Sections 147/307 IPC against Respondent 3 and his men. Later, the said criminal case was withdrawn by the Public Prosecutor. The revision filed before the High Court against the said withdrawal was dismissed.

